THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

VOL XLV
JULY TO DECR
1864

PRINTED & PUBLISHED BY GEORGE C. LEIGHTON 198 STRAND
LONDON.

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS IN VOL. XLV.

FROM JULY 2 TO DECEMBER 31, 1864.

COLOURED PICTURES.

FRONTISPIECE—The Christmas-Tree, Dec. 24.
Kingfisher's Haunt, The, Oct. 15
Life-boat off Tynemouth Bar, Oct. 15
Rifle Contest at Wimbledon, July 16

A

Aberdeen (Holburn-street) New Free School, 584
Abergeldie, the Highland Residence of the Prince of Wales, Viewed from the Garden, 133
From the North Side, 195
Prince Consort's Cairn near, The, 200
Adelaide, South Australia, the New Townhall of, 137
African Men and Women from the Zambesi Country, 493
Implements, 494
Agricultural Exhibition at Roorkee, The—
Ass (Wild) at, 324
General View of the Exhibition, 324
Field-bullocks (Prize) at, 324
Agricultural Show at Calcutta, Animals Exhibited at the, 5
Agricultural Society (The Meeting of the Royal) at Newcastle—
Exhibition-ground, General View of the, 116-117
Machinery in Motion, 116-117
Prize Animals Exhibited at, 120
Aldershott Camp, Industrial Exhibition at, 41
Almshouses (The Sailors' Company's New) at Watford, 112
America, The Presidential Electioneering in New York—
Great M'Clellan Meeting, 245
Polling-place among the "Upper Ten," 460
Among the "Lower Twenty," 560
Street Scene, A, 389
Torchlight Procession of the M'Clellan Party, 389
America, Sketches in—
Enlisting Irish and German Emigrants on the Battery at New York, 288
Entertainment in a Lager Beer Saloon in New York, 561
Garden Wirtschaft in New York, A, 561
Sketchers (Kerbstone) in New York, 8
America, the War in—
Alabama (The) and the Kearsage, The Fight between, 9
Crew of the Alabama being rescued by the Deerhound, 1
Confederates Marching by Night through Burning Woods, 133
Howlett's Battery and the James River Engaging the Federal Monitors, 409
Kershaw's and Pitz Lee's Divisions of the Confederate Army (March off) up the Valley of Virginia, 408
"Our Special Artist," on Board the Idlian, Running the Blockade into Wilmington Harbour, 69
Petersburg, Virginia, View of, 185
And its Suburbs, View of, 236-237
Shenandoah Valley (Passage of the) at Front Royal of the Divisions sent to Reinforce General Early, 408
Tozzans of Longstreet's Corps Retaking the Outer Line of Intrenchments on the South Side of the James River, 128
Animals Exhibited at the Calcutta Agricultural Show, 5
Antwerp, Grand Festival at—
Allegorical Statue of Antwerp (Inauguration of as) Crowning the Bust of Teniers, 345
Bourse (Temporary Restoration of the Old) during the Fair, 345
Procession to the Cathedral, 348
Archery Meeting at Alexandra Park, 53
Artillery Experiments at Shoeburyness—
General View of the 168-189
Inspection of La Gloire Target after the Firing, 181
Arts and Manufactures (The Exhibition of) at Dublin, 53
Arms of—
Bristol, The Marquis of, 474
Bruce, Mr. B., 247
Cadogan, Earl, 232
Call, Sir W. E., 680
Carlisle, The Earl of, 615
Cleveland, The Duke of, 299
Coote, Sir C. H., 426
Elliott, Sir W. P., 296
Erstace, Lieutenant-General Sir J. R., 247
Fitzroth, The Hon. Mrs. G., 499
Arms (continued)—
Gurney, Mr. H., 552
Hartopp, Sir W. E. C., 447
Kennais, Mr., 179
Knightly, Sir C., 275
Lawrence, Sir A. H., 426
Lodge-Sibbritton, Lady H., 154
Maunors, Lord, 247
Miller, Sir T. C., 106
Morley, The Earl of, 275
Mynors-Baskerville, T. B., 222
Newcastle, The Duke of, 447
O'Malley, Sir S., 247
Rodney, Lord, 226
Pelly, Sir J. H., 683
Poulett, Earl, 22
Pyemtt, Sir R. H., 474
Schright, Sir T. G. S., 275
Smith-Marriott, Sir W. M., 426
Somerville, Lord, 447
Stair, The Earl of, 222
Strange, Sir J. M., 615
Wirtemberg, The King of, 22
Yea, Sir H. L., 298
Arno, (Flood of the River) at Florence, 584
Ashanter War, Introduction at Cape Coast Castle of the Troops Recalled from the, 313
Assize Courts at Manchester, The New, 536
Entrance Hall of, 537

B

Bahia (View of) from the Public Gardens, 117
Harbour, the Florida (Confederate) and the Wachusetts (Federal) Vessels in, 517
Balloon (Ascent of M. Godard's Monstre-gother) from Cremorne Gardens, 113
Balmoral, Statue of the late Prince Consort at, 216
Banquet (Farewell) to the 100th Regiment at Kurrachee, 613
Barking Creek (The) Collecting Fish from the Trawl Fleet off the Disinfecting Pier, 113
Barometric Variations from Oct. 15 to Nov. 30, 1864, 684
Bath, The British Association at, 201, 205, 208, 209
View of the City of, 209
Bedford (Statue of the late Duke of) at Tavistock, 167
Belgian Body-guard of the Empress of Mexico, 464
Berryer (Banquet given to M.) in the Middle Temple Hall, 509
Billingshay (Ruins of the Village of), Lincolnshire, after the Fire, 817
Birds (Rare) from Navigators' Islands, 45
Birmingham Show, Prize Poultry and Pigeons at the, 593
Birthplace of David Roberts, Edinburgh, 600
Bishop's Waltham, Prince Leopold Laying the Foundation-stone of a New Infirmary at, 177
Blackfriars Bridge, Demolition of, 549
Blackwall, Launch of the Turkish Iron-clad Frigate Sultan Mahmoud at, 632
"Block" (A) in Park-lane, 604
Bloomsbury Flower Show, The, 84
Bolivia, Indians of, 672
Borneo, Sketches in—
Dyaks in their War Dress, 473
Sibuay Company (The), Sarawak, 473
Bradford (The New Exchange at), Lord Palmerston Laying the Foundation-stone of, 189
Braemar, the Garden of the Queen at Invercauld Arms, 247
Braemar Castle, The Gathering of the Highland Clans at, 277
Brazilian Forests, In a: Waiting for a Shot, 576
Brean Down, Breakwater, Laying the Foundation-stone of, 521
Bridge (Laying the Foundation-stone of the Brisbane), Queensland, New South Wales, 568
Clifton Suspension, 609
Opening of the, 607
British Association (The) at Bath—
Aqueduct of the Kennet and Avon Canal, at Limpley Stoke, near Bath, 205
Bath, View of the City of, 209
Druidical Circles at Stanton Drew, near Bath, 208
Stones in an Orchard at Stanton Drew, 208
Holwell (The Village and Quarries of), near Bath, 205
Lyell (Sir C.) Delivering the Presidential Address in the Theatre, 201
Nunney Castle, near Bath, 209
Pulteney Bridge, 208
Vallis Manor House (Remains of), near Bath, 208
British Columbia, Sketches in—
Douglas, the Town and Lake of, 617
Fountain at Parsonville, Scene at, 616
Harrison Lake, 616
Indian Village, Douglas Lake, 617
Lillooet, on the Fraser River, 613
Fort Anderson, Anderson Lake, 633
Bromley College, The Chapel of, 100
Brunswick, Sketches in, 65
Bullock (Shoeing a) in India, 417
Bust of the Princess of Wales, 121

C

Calcutta, Agricultural Show, Animals Exhibited at the—Buffalo Cow, from Bangoon, 5
Bullock (Long-horned), Ondu, 5
Mutnah, a Species of Wild Cow, 5
Pony, Bob, the Burmese, 5
Kankye, Sheik Kulloo's Taz, 5
Wethere, Patna, 5
Calcutta, Effects of the Cyclone at, 561, 584
Caithness, Celtic Tools and Weapons Discovered at, 474
Canadian Military School, Toronto, Review of the Pupils of the, 280
Cannon-shot, Electro-ballistic Apparatus for Measuring the Speed of, 440
Cape Coast Castle (Embarkation at), of the Troops Recalled from the Ashanter War, 313
Cape Colonial Parliament (Opening of the), Grahamstown, 61
Cape Horn, The Great Britain among Icebergs near, 497
Cattle (Marking) at the Port of Tamatave, Madagascar, 380
On Board the Steamer, 381
Celtic Rings (Ancient) Found in the Hebrides, 474
Tools and Weapons Discovered at Keiss Castle, Caithness, 474
Ceylon, Lighthouse and Flagstaff at Colombo, 589
Mode of Capturing Wild Elephants in the Forests of, 589
Chenoweaxx (The Chateau of), formerly Inhabited by Catherine de Medicis and Mary Queen of Scots, 160
Chimneypiece, The, 552
China, Sketches in—
Gilf se Hukou, 529
Orphan Rock (The Little) on the Yang-Tse-Kiang, 529
Temple at Hukou, 529
Tomb of the Emperors of the Ming Dynasty at Nankin, 528
The Tsepting War in—
Imperial Mandarins and Soldiers, 432
Palace of Tseping Wang at Nankin, 433
Tseping Officers and Soldiers, 432
Chinese Islands, View of the, 28
Christmas Books, Pictures from—
Hacon the Dwarf: "Maud and Robert," 633
"Home Thoughts:" The Child Among the Roses, 653
"Young Yachtsman, The:" Granville and the Bear, 653
Christmas, Scenes and Incidents Connected with—
Carol-singing in Yorkshire, 640
Charade, A Pictorial Christmas, 648, 649
Ghost Story, A, 644-645
King Cheer, 652
Return, The, 652
Visit to the Old Folk on Christmas Eve, A, 637
Churches, New and Restored—
Bath, St. John's Roman Catholic, 127
Bury St. Edmunds, St. James's, 252
Clapham, St. Saviour's, 681
Dunstable, St. Giles's, 681
Edinburgh, Barclay Free, 212
Fintergrath Memorial, 521
Hemingham, Suffolk, 4
Leghorn, New Protestant, 300
Irvine (United Presbyterian), Trinity, 512
Oban, St. John's Episcopal, 452
Old Aberdeen, 584
Oundle, St. Peter, 684
St. Leonards-on-Sea, New Congregational, 568
Vauxhall, St. Peter, 160
Windsor, All Saints, Consecration of, 556
Yarmouth, St. Nicholas, 456
York, New Roman Catholic Cathedral, 441
Clifden Cup (The), won at Stamford Races, 105
Clifton Suspension Bridge, 609
Opening of the, 607
College (Bromley), Established for the Widows of Clergymen: the Chapel, 169
Colombo, Ceylon, The Custom-house and Inner Harbour of, 537
Corsica, Scenes in—
Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon I., 472
Mont St. Antoine, 472
Cotton, Press for Packing Indian, 36
Cremorne Gardens, Ascent of M. Godard's Monstgother Balloon from, 113
Cricket-match at Wimbledon, between Eton and Winchester Colleges, 32
Cronstadt, Steel Embrasure for the Fortifications of, 417
Crypt at Rochester, recently Discovered, 513
Crystal Palace at Amsterdam, Opening of the, 253
Crystal Palace (The), Dramatic Colleges Fête at, 112
London Bible Bridge, Distribution of Prizes to the, at, 565
Pneumatic Railway for Passengers, at, 176
Custom-house and Inner Harbour, Colombo, Ceylon, 537
Cyclone at Calcutta, The, 561, 584

D

Dalston, The New German Hospital at, 456
Deal, Opening of the New Pier at, 520
Denmark, Reopening of the Chapel in the Royal Palace of Frederiksborg, 297
Denmark, The War in—
Lauges Kloster in Jutland, Ruins of the, 113
Little Belt (The) and the Shore of Juland, 144
Dockland, Bermondsey, Scene of the Fire at, 93
Doctor, A Kadir Witch, 585
Doncaster Race Cup, The, 300
Donkey Show at the Islington Show, 197
Dowgate Hill, The South-Eastern Railway Works on, 661
Dramatic College Fête at the Crystal Palace, The, 112
Dublin, The Exhibition of Arts and Manufactures at, 53
Laying the Foundation-stone of the O'Connell Monument in, 201
Durbar, or Assembly of Native Princes and Nobles, Convened by Sir John Lawrence at Lahore, 628

E

Eastbourne, Working Men's Hall at, 12
East Cowes-green, Isle of Wight, 176
Edinburgh, The Birthplace of David Roberts at, 600
Laying the Foundation-stone of the Peter Lindsay Free Church at, 45
Monument in St. Giles's Church to the Officers and Men of the 93rd Highlanders Killed in India, 79
Sketches in, 477
Electro-ballistic Apparatus for Measuring the Speed of Cannon-shot, 440
Elephants, Mode of Capturing Wild—
Alarm, The, 168
Elephant Noosed, 169
Herd of Wild Elephants, 169
Kraal, An Elephant, 168
Taming a Wild Elephant, 169
Testing the Rope, 168
Emigrants (Enlisting Irish and German) on the Battery at New York, 288
Emperor's Fête at Paris, The: Moorish Pavilion on the Place de la Concorde, 525
Erith, The Gunpowder Explosion at—
Explosion, (View of the) as seen from Barrage-road, Frumstead, 365
Rayner's House, Ruins of the, 376
Sappers and Miners repairing the Embankment, 349
Scene of the Explosion, 377
Silver's House, Ruins of, 376
Site of the Powder-magazines after the Explosion, 365
Plan of the, 450
Eton and Winchester Colleges (Cricket-match between) at Winchester, 32
Exhibition Building (The Great), Blowing up the Arch of, 344
Ruins of, 440

F

Fakir, or Mussulman Saint of Central India, 664
Farnworth, Opening of the People's Park at, 621
Fashions (Paris) for July, 13
August, 121
September, 217
October, 348
Fashions, Paris (continued)—
November, 492
December, 537
January, 673
Female School of Art (Festival in aid of the) at the Horticultural Gardens, 17
Fetter College, Edinburgh, Laying the Foundation-stone of the, 45
Fine Art—
After the Battle, 461
Bourgeois Gentilhomme, Le, 553
Challenge, The: A Puritan's Struggle between Honour and Conscience, 357
City of Chinki, Miracle, 144
Comic Farce, The, 69
Dead Swan and Peacock, 38
Escape, The, 165
Fluffy, 76
Haymakers, 141
Hymnbook, The Admission of Sir Tristram to the Fellowship of the Round Table, 413-415
John Bunyan Reciting "The Pilgrim's Progress," to his Friends in Bedford Gaol, 296
Light Leaf from the Lost-reaped Field, A, 253
Light of Other Days, The, 629
Loch Erich—A Bright Night, 404
Master Slender and Anne Page, 484
Norham Castle, 384
Note and the Nosegay, The, 485
November Day in Saint-Francois, 69
Reverse of Fortune, The, 165
Romeo and Juliet, Scene from, 213
Rose, The, 293
Saved, 73
Stackyard, A, 285
Startled, 68
Sunrise on the Kinglas'ton, Berchtesgaden, Bavarian Alps, 72
Travelling in the Time of Queen Elizabeth, 629
Waefu' Heart, The, 397
Fires at—Chapel Royal, Savoy, 61
Dockhead, Bermondsey, 565
Haberdashers' Hall, 561
Pimlico Patent Steam Wheel-works, 452
Flagstaff and Lighthouse at Colombo, Ceylon, 589
Flood of the Arno, at Florence, 581
Flower Show, The Bloomsbury, 84
French Mounted Zouaves employed as Contre-Guerrillas in Mexico, 689
Fresco ("Hospitality:" The Admission of Sir Tristram to the Fellowship of the Round Table") in the Queen's Robing-room of the Palace, Westminster, 412, 413

G

Galaga, The, 177
Gallery of Illustration, Scene from German Reed's Entertainment at the, 13
Garrick Club (New Building of the), King-street, Covent-garden, 93
Garton Wirtschaft (A), in New York, 561
German Hospital (The New), Dalston, 456
German Reed's Entertainment (Scene from) at the Gallery of Illustration, 13
Glasgow, Launch of the Turkish Ironclad Steam-ram Osman Ghazy at, 293
Goodwood Races—
Chesterfield Cup, The, 153
Dollar, Winner of the Goodwood Cup, 153
Goodwood Cup, The, 149
Ladies' Lawn at Goodwood, 152
Gunsrat, View of, 209
Church (English) at, 209
Tombs of English Officers at, 209
Grey Hospital (The), King William's Town, British Kaffraria, 313
Gunpowder (The Explosion of) as Erith, 349, 365, 376, 377, 450

H

Haberdashers' Hall (Ruins of) after the Fire, 561
Hammerfest, Norway, View of, 561
Hampton Court Old Bridge, 241
Harlequin (An Indian) Playing the Tiger, 624
Harvest-home at the Philanthropic Society's Farm-school, Redhill, 273
Hasborough Sands, The Screw-steamer Ontario Aground on, 448
Helmingham, Excavations of an Ancient Cemetery at, 4
Hereford Cathedral (The Choir of) Restored, 272
Hereford, Statue of the late Sir G. C. Lewis at, 269
Palmerston (Lord) Inaugurating the Statue, 249
Highland Clans at Braemar Castle, The Gathering of the, 277
"Home that Waits for Me, The": Music, 668, 687
Hornbills, 217
Horncastle, The Annual Horse Fair at, 264
Horse Show at Islington, The—Prize-winners at, 44
Trying the Hunters at, 55
View of, 57
Horticultural Society's Gardens (Free Opening of the Royal) on the Anniversary of the late Prince Consort's Birthday, 229
Hospital (The New German) Dalston, 456
Ripley's, Lancaster, 465
Hubberston Dock, Milford Haven, Laying the Foundation-stone of the, 221

I

India, Sketches in—
Bullock, Shoeing a, 417
Cotton, Press for Packing, 36
Goat, Performing, 328
Governor-General (Arrival of the) at the Lahore Railway Station, 625
Harlequin (An Indian) Playing the Tiger, 624
Mutineers (Indian) in the Camp, 328
Rock Sculpture, 79
Indians of Peru and Bolivia, 672
Industrial Exhibition at Aldershott Camp, 41
Ingisfield (Capt. R.), R.N., Testimonial Presented to, 37

J

Japan, Sketches in—
Barber, A Japanese, 265
British Fleet (The) at Yokohama, 450-457
Drilling Japanese Soldiers, 180
Fusiyama, The Mountain, 485
Girl (Japanese) Painting her Lips, 304
Island Sea, Entrance to the, 489
Jeddo, Panorama of the City of, 456-457
Minstrels (Wandering) at Yokohama, 304
Musicians, Blind Japanese, 212
Night Guard at Jeddo, The, 488
Officer (Japanese) Travelling on the Tokaido, 145
Ounce, near Jeddo, View of, 180
Osima, The Harbour of, 504
Palace of the Dumio at Agud, 504
Party (Japanese) at Meals, 97
Simonoseki, The Strait of, 488
Town and Harbour of, The, 489
Soldiers (Japanese) Fencing, 145
Marching, 509
Whaling-boat, A Japanese, 504
Wood-engraver, A Japanese, 504
Yokohama, Marines from H.M.S. Conqueror Landing at, 312
Japan, The War in—
Simonoseki, The Action of Sept. 5 in the Strait of, 500
Lower Battery (The Assault on the), 85, 524
Battle the Lower Battery after the Conflict, 621
Naval Brigade (The) and Marines Storming the Stockade at, 977
Red Battery (The) Opening Fire on the Converted ex, 305

K

Kaffir Witch Doctor, A, 585
King's Lynn Regatta: Shovel-Race of Corn-Porters, 40
Kurrachee, Farewell Banquet to the 100th Regiment at, 613

L

Lager Beer Brewery on the Hudson River, 561
Saloon (Entertainment at a) in New York, 561
Lahore, Durbar, or Assembly of Native Princes and Nobles, convened by Sir John Lawrence at, 628
Arrival of Sir John Lawrence at the Railway Station at, 625
Launch of—
H.M.S. Lord Clyde Iron-clad Steamram in Pembroke Dockyard, 448
Royal Alfred Iron-clad Screw-Frigate at Portsmouth, 628
Turkish Iron-clad Frigate Sultan Mahmoud, The, 632
Lawrence Hall, India, Founded in Honour of Sir J. Lawrence, 673
Leaves from a Sketch-Book—
Brunswick:
Canal, On the, 65
Market-Place, The, 65
Old Houses near the Cathedral, 65
Portal of a House, 65
Bath-House, The, 65

Leaves from a Sketch-Book (continued)—
Edinburgh:
Advocates' Close, 457
Allan Ramsay's Shop, 457
Castle, The, 457
Old House in High-street, 457
Tolbooth, The, 457
Rhine, The:
Falkenburg, The, 184
Kats, The, 184
Liefelsburg, The, 184
Pfals, The, 184
Rheineck, 184
Rheinfels, The, 184
Leghorn, New Protestant Church at, 260
Leopold (Prince) Laying the Foundation-stone of a New Infirmary at Wimbledon, 177
Lifford (Viscount), Testimonial Presented to, 37
Lighthouse and Flagstaff at Colombo, Ceylon, 280
Lima, View of, 29
Limoges, Statue of the Great Fire at, 240
Firemen and Soldiers Clearing out the Ruins, 241
Public Crier (The) Announcing the Distribution of Relief, 241
Lincoln School of Art, Exhibition of Prizes, 525
Lindley (Dr.), Testimonial Presented to, 57
Lochnagar, View of, 257
London Hospital, The Prince of Wales Laying the Foundation-stone of the New Wing of the, 72

M
Madagascar, Embarking Cattle at the Port of Tamatave, 293
On their Way to, 281
Malta, Tooth of a Gigantic Fossil Beast found on the Coast of, 79
Manchester, The New Assize Courts at, 256
Entrance Hall of, 257
Margate Station of the East Kent Railway, 88
Markham Clinton, Notts, The Funeral of the Duke of Newcastle at, 469
Marriage Festivities at Quiddenham Hall, 589
Melbourne and Sandhurst Railway, Australia, The Taradale Viaduct of the, 161
Merton College, Oxford, Views of—Chapel, The, 481
General View of, 481
Library, The, 480
Undergraduates' Quadrangle, The, 480
Mexico, The Belgian Bodyguard of the Emperor, 464
French Mounted Zouaves, employed as Centre-Guerrillas in, 668
Milton's House, in Barbican, 79
Monkey-house (The) Newly in the Zoological Society's Gardens, 84
Monuments—
Chillianwalla, The Battle of, 247
French Army (The) on the Battlefield of Magenta, 568
Lerrie (The late Sir G. C.), at New Radnor, 573
52nd Highlanders (Officers and Men of the) Killed in India, 73
O'Connell (Laying the Foundation-stone of the) in Dublin, 201
Prince Consort, 77
Read, The late Dr. Andrew, 120
77th Regiment (Officers of the) Killed in the Crimea, 79
Montagu House, Whitehall, the Residence of the Duke of Buccleuch, 313
Moorish (The) at the Zoological Society's Gardens, 36
Mule (Prize) at the Islington Show, 197
Music: Chorals Composed by the late Spencer Cowper, 177
"The Rome that Waits for Me," 441, 657
Mussel (The Pearl) of Scotland, 295

N
Nassau, The Town and Port of, 592
National Rifle Association, The:
The Queen's Arms Experimental Range, Woolwich, 553
Elcho (Lady) Presenting the Prizes, 128
Targets, The, 553
Treasury, The, 553
Navigators' Islands, Rare Birds from the, 45
New Brunswick, Indian Rock Sculpture found in, 79
Newcastle, Meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society at, 116-117
Prize Animals Exhibited at, 120
Newcastle, The Funeral of the Duke of, 469
Newcastle-on-Tyne, House in which Geo. Stephenson was Born at, W. Item, near, 372
Stephenson's Locomotive Manufactory at, 392, 393
New South Wales, Laying the Foundation-stone of the Brisbane Bridge, Queensland, 568
New Zealand, Sketches in—
Auckland, The Government House, 93
Post Office (The) at: Arrival of the "Home Mails," 161
Canterbury Province, The Government House, 441
Cave Rock, Port Lyttelton, 537
Te Wheero, a Maori Chief and Native Magistrate of, 4
Timber Bridge over the River Waitau-ma, Province of Nelson, 410
Tomb of Potatau, the first Maori King at Ngaruwahia, 4
War-Canoe (Maori) at Tauranga, 137
Wellington, The Government House at, 681
Supreme Courthouse, The, 681
New Zealand, The War in—
Arms taken from the Maories at Te Ranga, 219
Orakau Pah, taken by the British on the 2nd of April, 129
Pahs Whaungi Pah, after the Conflict of April 29, 81
Surrender of the Tauranga Natives at the Te-Papa Station, 429
Tauranga (The Cemetery at), with the Graves of the Officers and Privates Killed at the Pahs Whaungi Pah, 129
Harbour, 92
Nice (Villa at) occupied by the Emperor and Empress of Russia, 464

O
Orphan Asylum, Monument to the late Dr. Andrew Reed in the Chapel of the, 120
Orphans and Destitute Children, Ripley's Hospital at Lancaster for, 461
Oundle Church, 584
Ourang-Outang, The, 552
Oxen (Prize) at the Smithfield Club Cattle Show, 608, 609
Oxford, Views of Merton College, 480, 481

P
Palmerston (Lady) Cutting the First Turf of the East and West Junction Railway at Towcester, 197
Palmerston (Lord) Distributing Prizes to the Wilts Rifle Volunteers, 325
Laying the Foundation-stone of the New Exchange at Bradford, 189
Making the Ministerial Statement on Dano-German Affairs in the House of Commons, 20
Paraguay: The Guard-house at Humaita, 677
Park-lane, A "Block" in, 604
Paul-y-Tooley-tychion Institution (The) at the Festival in Aid of the Female School of Art at the Horticultural Gardens, 17
Pearl Fishery of Panama (The)—
Baliquidster, Perthshire, Scene near the Brass of, 296
Pearl-fishing near Loch Lubnaig, Perthshire, 296
Pearl Mussel, The, 295
Perth, Statue of the late Prince Consort at, 256
Inauguration of the Statue, 260
Peru, Indians of, 672
Lima, the Capital of, 29
Petrefied Oil Works at Franklin, Pennsylvania, 190
Railway Station at, 190
Peyton Pails, Alleghany County, Virginia, 276
Pigeons (Prize) at the Birmingham Show, 593
Pig (Prize) at the Smithfield Club Cattle Show, 609
Pompeii, Recent Discoveries in the Buried City of, 257
General View of the Recent Excavations, 661
House of Cornelius Rufus, Interior of the, 665
Narcissus, Statuette of, 665
Silenus, Statuette of, 665
Porcelain Manufactory (The new Service in the Park of St. Cloud—
Bird's-eye View of the Workshops, 600
Museum of Ceramic Art, The, 601
Portraits—
Alcock (Sir R.), our Envoy Plenipotentiary in Japan, 97
Bazaine (Marshal), the French Commander-in-Chief in Mexico, 552
Brazil, The Emperor of, 672
Empress of (The), 672
Bromby (The Right Rev. Dr.), the new Bishop of Tasmania, 561
Brown (Hon. G.), President of the Council of Canada, 49
Caldcron (P. H.), A.R.A., 173
Carlyle, Thomas, 261
Cartier (Hon. J. E.), Attorney-General of Canada, 49
Cooke (H. T.), R.A., 173
Galt (Hon. A. T.), Finance Minister of Canada, 49
Hale (the Right Hon. W. B.), the new Lord Mayor of London, 469
Henley (Mr. J. C.), R.A., 677
Kapoorthalla, The Rajah of, 613
Portraits (continued)—
Landor, The late Walter Savage, 393
Leech, The late John, 608
Leighton (F.), A.R.A., 173
Llewellin (The late D. H.), Surgeon of the Alabama, 41
M'Culloch, The late Mr. J. R., 541
Mongaud, (The late M.), Private Secretary to Napoleon III., 632
Normandy (The late Dr.), Analytical Chemist, 165
Roberts, The late D., 589
Robson, The late F., 393
Stephens (E. B.), A.R.A., 173
Te Wheero, a Maori Chief and Native Magistrate of New Zealand, 4
3rd West India Regiment, A Sergeant of the, 6
Todleben, The Russian General, 685
Tuffnell, The late Major-General Sir A., 77
Watkin (E. W.), Esq., M.P. for Florida, 73
Wirtemberg, The late King of, 33
Wyatt (Mr. J.), the Winner of the Queen's Prize at the National Rifle Association Meeting at Wimbledon, 553
Portsmouth, Launch of the Royal Alfred Iron-clad Screw-frigate at, 276
Pottery, Illustrative of the French Revolution, 156
Poultry (Prize) at the Birmingham Show, 593
Press for Cotton, Indian Cotton, 36
Prince Edward Island, Providence Building, Charlotte Town, 496

Q
Quiddenham Hall, Marriage Festivities at, 589

R
Race Cup, The Doncaster, 200
Stockton, The, 200
Radnor (New), Monument to the late Sir G. C. Lewis at, 573
Rapid-School Movement (The) festival at Nutfield Priory, near Reigate, 548
Railway Bridge—
Carnarvon and Llanberis, Cutting the First Part of the, 317
Coalbrookdale (The Albert Edward Bridge of the) over the Severn, 465
East Kent, Margate Station of the, 88
Rangoate Station of the, 88
East and West Junction (Lady Palmerston Cutting the First Turf of the) at Towcester, 197
Grand Trunk of Canada (Scene of the Accident on the) near Montreal, 163
Great Eastern (Accident on the), near Bridlington, 103
Metropolitan Extension Works in Smithfield, 161
North London, Scene of the late Accident on the, 221
Rheumatic, The Passengers at the Crystal Palace, 276
South-Eastern Works on Dowgate-hill, 661
Rangoate Station of the East Kent Railway, 88
Regatta, Torbay, 252
Rio de Janeiro, Mount Corcovado and Botafogo Bay, 449
Port and City of, The, 449
Ripley's Hospital, Lancaster, 465
Roche's Point, the Jackall Tender and Boats going to Meet the American Mail Steamer at, 12
Rochester (Crypt of) recently discovered, 513
Rhine, Sketches on the, 184
Rome, Raising the Colossal Statue of Hercules found Underground in, 440
Rourkee, Agricultural Exhibition at 284
Rumeli (East) at the Opening of the North London Working-men's Exhibition, 17
Russia (the Emperor and Empress of) Villa at Nice occupied by the, 464
Ryde, The Yachting Season at: Scene on the Pier, 200

S
Sailing-barge Race on the Thames, 192
St. Leonard's-on-Sea New Congregational Church, 568
St. Paul's Cathedral (Monument in) to the Officers of the 77th Regiment killed in the Crimea, 79
Salford, Statue of Prince Albert in Peel Park, 512
Salters' Company's New Almshouses at Watford, 112
Sarawak, The Government House at, 545
Reading Fort, 545
Schools—
Aberdeen, Holburn-street New Free, 584
Bath, Daughters of Officers in the Army, 20
Haverah, St. Thomas's, 521
Sculpture—
Boy Asleep, 76
Task of Erinna, the Greek Poetess, The, 180
Savoy, Ruins of the Chapel Royal in the, 61
Sèvres Porcelain Manufactory (The New) in the Park of St. Cloud, 600, 601
Sheep (Prize) at the Smithfield Club Cattle Show, 609
Ships—
Achilles, H.M. Iron-clad Steam-frigate, 109
Alabama (The) and the Kearsarge, The Fight between, 9
Brazilian War-vessel, A, 417
Colonel Lamb (The), Blockade-runner, 544
Cuba (The), Cunard Liverpool, and New York Steam-ship, 680
Deerhound (The) Rescuing a Portion of the Crew of the Alabama, 9
Florida (The) Confederate States of America War-steamer, 517
Great Britain (The) Among Icebergs, 497
Jackall Tender (The) and Boats going to meet the American Mail-Steamer at Roche's Point, 12
Jura, The Montreal Ocean Steamship Company's Mail Steamer, 489
Kearsarge (The) and the Alabama, The Fight between, 9
Lilian (The), with "Our Special Artist" on board, Running the Blockade into Wilmington Harbour, 60
Lizzie, The New Blockade-runner, 184
London (The New Iron Screw Steam-ship), Australian Trader, 272
Lord Clyde, Iron-clad Steam-ram, H.M.S., 449
Nyanza, The Peninsular and Oriental Company's New Steamer, 441
Ontario screw-steamer, 448
Osborne (The Royal Yacht) illuminated, 445
Osmon-Gibsay, Turkish iron-clad Steam-ram, 709
Prince Imperial (The), London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company's new Steam-boat, 508
Roanoke (United States Mail-steamer), Burning off Bermuda, 541
Royal Alfred, Iron-clad Screw-frigate, The, 428
Stanley, Aberdeen Steamer, Wreck of, 509
Sultan Mahmoud, Iron-clad Frigate, Launch of the, 622
Victoria, H.M.S., 20
Wachusetta (The), Federal States of America War-steamer, 517
West Hartley No. 1 (The), Flat-bottomed Schooner for the Coal Trade of New South Wales, 173
Shootings, Artillery Experiments at, 181
Shoeing a Bullock in India, 417
Sketch-Book, Leaves from a—
Brunswick, 65
Edinburgh, 457
Rhine, The, 184
Smithfield Club Cattle Show, Prize Animals at the, 608, 609
Smithfield, the Works of the Metropolitan Extension Railway in, 661
Social Science Congress (The) at York—
Band Playing in the Grounds of the Yorkshire Philosophical Society, 181
Bishopsthorpe, the Palace of the Archbishop of York, visited by the Freedom, 272
Brougham (Lord) delivering his Address in the Festival Concertroom, 353
Concert Performed by the Inmates of the Yorkshire Asylum for the Blind, 268
Conversazione in the Assembly Room, Blake-street, 269
Reception-room in the Guildhall, 269
Southwark Bridge (Opening of), Tollfree, 312
Spain (Visit of the King of) to France—
Illumination and Fireworks at Versailles in Honour of, 589
Reception of, as the Palace of St. Cloud, 224
Review in Honour of, at the Champ de Mars, Paris, 233
Stamford Races, The Clifden Cup Won at, 105
Statues of—
Albert (Prince) in Peel Park, Salford, 513
Bedford, The late Duke of, 197
Hercules, Found Underground at Rome, 440
Lewis, The late Sir G. C., 209
Prince Consort at Balmoral, 216
Statues (continued)—
Prince Consort at the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum, 188
At Perth, 256
Stevenson (Sir W.), Governor of the Mauritius, 161
Statues (Ancient) in the British Museum, from the Farnese Palace at Rome, 437
Steel Embrasure for the Fortifications of Cronstadt, 477
Stephenson's Birthplace, 392
Locomotive Manufactory at Newcastle-on-Tyne—
Fitting-shop, 393
Lathe and Tool Shop, 393
Steam-hammer, The, 392
Stockbrokers (Kerbstone) in New York, 604
Stockton Race Cup, The, 200
Surinam, The City of Paramaribo, 636
Government House-square, 636

T
Tankard Presented to the Robin Hood Rifles, 342
Tattersall's (The New) at Knightsbridge-green, 153
Testimonials to—
Gardner (Alderman R. C.) late Mayor of Liverpool, 385
Ingleficld, Captain, 37
Lifford, Viscount, 37
Lindley, Dr., 37
Milne, Vice-Admiral Sir A., 197
Murray, Mr. R. W. 79
Tasmania, the Bishop of, 370
Thames Embankment (Laying the Foundation-stone of the), at Whitehall-stairs, 109
Works of, Viewed from King's College, 192
Theatres (The Adelphi), Scene from "The Workmen of Paris" at, 600
Tooth of a Gigantic Fossil Shark, 79
Torbay Regatta, 252
Townhall (New) of Adelaide, South Australia, 197
Tunbridge Wells, The Promenade on the Pantiles, at 312
Tunis Water-carriers, 208
Turnpike-gates in and near London just demolished—
City-road Gate, 21
Islington Gate, 21
Kensington Gate, 21
Notting-hill Gate, 21
Tynemouth, Laying the Foundation-stone of the Low-lights Docks at, 37
Bar, Wreck of the Aberdeen Steamer Stanley off, 509

V
Vancouver Island, The Boats of H.M.S. Satiuj and Devastation Attacking an Indian Village in Clayoquot Sound, 564
Indian (An) with a Flag of Truce, 564
Volunteer Movement, The—
Cheshire Volunteer Review and Sham Fight, 341
Church Service in the Camp, The Archbishop of York Performing, 125
Comington Castle, Huntingdonshire, Volunteer Fête at, 320
Festival at Grimston Park, Yorkshire, 140
Hon. Artillery Company, the Princess of Wales Presenting New Colours to the, 25
Liverpool Volunteers (Review of) at Aintree, 228
Manx Volunteer Engineers (The 1st) Exploding a Mine as Southampton, 417
Hull New Rifle Volunteer Barracks, 313
London Rifle Brigade (Distribution of Prizes to) at the Crystal Palace, 565
Leeds Volunteer Engineers, Review of the, 276
National Rifle Association (The) Meeting of Men at Wimbledon—
Club-room The, 49
Elcho (Lady) Presenting the Prizes, 128
Queen's Prize, Portrait of Mr. J. Wyatt, the Winner of the, 125
Tramway, The, 89
Volunteers at Rest, 89
Robin Hood Rifles, Tankard Presented to the, 341
Wilts Volunteers (Distribution of Prizes to the) by Lord Palmerston and Lady Herbert of Lea, 325

W
Wales (The Prince of) Laying the Foundation-stone of the New Wing of London Hospital, 72
Uncovering the Statue of Prince Albert at the Licensed Victuallers Asylum, 188
Wales (Visit of the Prince and Princess of) to Scotland—
Gathering of the Highland Clans at Braemar Castle 277
Loch Muick, 228
Wales (Visit of the Prince and Princess of) to Denmark—
Barnstorf, Arrival of their Royal Highnesses at the Castle of, 529
Concert at Christiansborg Palace in honour of their Royal Highnesses, 532
Copenhagen, Scene in the Square of Kongens Nytorv, at, 533
Dundee (Their Royal Highnesses Embarking at), for Copenhagen, 273
Elsinore, The Royal Yacht Entering the Harbour at, 521
Their Royal Highnesses Landing at, 273
Frederisborg Castle, 320
Kongen's Nytorf, Copenhagen, H.R.H. Passing through the Great Square of, 537
Prince (The) Passing through the Danish Fleet, 532-533
Rosenborg Castle, Their Royal Highnesses at the Gate of, 537
Royal Yacht Osborne (The), illuminated, 445
Thorwaldsen Museum, Copenhagen, Their Royal Highnesses at, 536
Wales (Visit of the Prince and Princess of) to Heidelberg—
Ball given to their Royal Highnesses at Drottningholm, 384
Elk-Shooting in the Forest of Högtorp, 424
Gottenburg, Embarkation of their Royal Highnesses in the Royal Yacht Osborne at, 428
Gottenburg Railway Station, Departure of their Royal Highnesses from, 429
Gripsholm (The Royal Palace of), on the Malar Lake, 405
Royal Party (The) Entering Stockholm from the Pavilion in the Mosebacke Garden, 373
Stockholm, General View of the City of, 416
Their Royal Highnesses Landing at, 380
Theatre (The Royal), The Prince and Princess at the, 361
Torchlight Procession to the Royal Palace at, 384
Uirlsbaal, the Residence of the King of Sweden, 385
Wales, The Princess of, Best of her Royal Highness, 121
Presenting New Colours to the Hon. Artillery Company, 25
Water-carriers, Tunis, 208
Waterspout seen off Worthing, 213
Watkin (Mr. E. W.), Chairman for the Supply of Paris, Progress of the, 265
Watford, The Saltiers' Company's New Almshouses at, 112
Westminster School, Athletic Sports: the Hurdle-race, 453
Weston-super-Mare, Laying the Foundation-stone of the Green Down Breakwater at, 221
Wheelwork (Ruins of the Patent Steam), Pimlico, 462
Whippensham Church, Monument to the late Prince Consort in, 77
Wimbledon-common, The Old Mill on, 556
Meeting of the National Rifle Association at, 89, 125, 128
Winchester, Cricket-match at (between Eton and Winchester College), 52
Witch Doctor, A Kaffir, 585
Working-men's Exhibition (The North London), Earl Russell at the Opening of, 448
Hall, at Eastbourne, 12
Workshop, Waterspout seen off, 262
Wrecks—
Aberdeen Steamer Stanley (The) off Tynemouth, 509
Montreal Ocean Steam-ship Company's Mail-Steamer Jura, The, 493

Y
Yacht-club Regatta, Royal Victoria; The Commodore's Cup, 197
Yachting Season at Ryde, The: Scene on the Pier, 200
Yachts (Race between the Thought and the Torpid off the Nab Light in the Solent, 189
Yacht Squadron (The Royal) Queen's Prize Cup, 176
York, The New Roman Catholic Cathedral at, 441

Z
Zoological Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, Animals, &c., in the—Bittern, Great, 37
Chimpanzee, The, 552
Cuckoo, American, 85
Duck, Whistling, 85
Galego, The, 177
Hornbill, 217
Jay, Pileated, 85
Monkey, Brazilian, 85
Monkey-house in, The New, 84
Moorish, The, 36
Opposum, American, 85
Ourang-outang, The, 552
Tanager, Blue, 85
Tronial, Black, 85
Woodpecker, American, 85

THE ILLUSTRATED
LONDON NEWS.

No. 1266.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

MEDIATION AT AN END, AND HOSTILITIES RESUMED.

THE Conference definitively closed its sittings on Saturday last, without having effected the object for which it met. The suspension of hostilities, dating from May 12, terminated the same day. Before the publication of our present Number the German Powers will have once more set upon Denmark to wrest from her what, in spite of weakness, she will not consent to surrender. This time, it is reported, the allies will try to give a legalized aspect to their work of spoliation by prevailing upon the Confederation to proclaim war against Denmark, and thereby opening the way to appropriate to Germany the fruit of their conquests. Within a short time, it may be confidently anticipated, the whole of the mainland, which has been under Danish rule for centuries, will have been torn from the little kingdom and annexed to the confederacy of German States. A flagrant robbery will have been perpetrated in defiance of international law, and the culprits will possibly get clear off with their booty, to be followed only by that moral retribution which eventually, but surely, overtakes the crimes of nations as well as of individuals.

The first question that occurs is, to what cause is the failure of the Conference to be ascribed. Mainly, to the domineering spirit of Prussia. Subordinately, to the heroic self-respect of Denmark. Virtually and indirectly, to the indifference of France and Russia. Of the great European Powers England alone has laboured with earnest assiduity to get the quarrel settled by peaceful negotiation, and no one has a right to impute it to her as a humiliation that, under such circumstances, she has failed.

To Prussia must be conceded the questionable distinction of having contributed most largely and directly to the failure of the Conference. Her home policy, under Herr von Bismarck's administration, had occasioned such a breach between the Throne and the people as to make an aggressive foreign policy indispensable as a diversion. The dispute with Denmark touching the government of the Schleswig-Holstein States, kept active by Prussian intrigue and agitation since 1851-2, and the sudden demise of the Danish King, offered just that opportunity for which the retrogressive statesman had long sighed. To the German people it presented the claims of nationality, and the semblance, at least, of an advance towards unity—objects of passionate desire. Prussia eagerly availed herself of the universal infatuation, and made it subserve her selfish ends. It was easy to drag Austria into complicity with her, for Austria was competing with her for the leadership of Germany, and could not afford to let Prussia be foremost in an undertaking so madly desired by the Teutonic race. Prussia wanted hostilities—provoked hostilities—kindled a glare of false glory by means of hostilities—grudgingly suspended hostilities at the request of the Conference—resumes hostilities with unconcealed joy. She never wished the Conference to succeed, for it would only bring her face to face with her home difficulties. She has resorted to duplicity, to rudeness, and to a show of utter recklessness of international obligations, just as she found she could do so without drawing down upon herself condign punishment. If she did not enter the Conference with a secret assurance beforehand that she could do as she liked, she had not been long there before she discovered it. Her demands were preposterous. No concession satisfied her. And even such moderation as she occasionally assumed was only assumed when it would have as effectually furthered her purpose as a show of violence. Step by step Austria hesitated, conscience-stricken and ashamed; step by step Prussia drew her onward, in spite of her scruples and fears; and so, as peace did not suit Prussia, peace has not been made.

THE DEERHOUND RESCUING A PORTION OF THE CREW OF THE ALABAMA.—FROM A SKETCH BY MR. ROBERT LANCASTER.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

In quite a subordinate sense, Denmark may be said to have assisted in defeating the object of the Conference by her peremptory rejection of the last proposition of the neutral Powers, to refer to the arbitration of a friendly Power the decision of the line of demarcation which was to have given southern Schleswig and Holstein to Germany and northern Schleswig to Denmark. The principle of division having been accepted to, and the only remaining ground of dispute being one of degree—and one involving considerations of equity towards a frontier population—it might have been supposed that Denmark would have assented to impartial arbitration. Her Government, however, had evidently given up as much as it could with decency, probably more. Her most reluctant concessions were always met by larger demands; and it is not surprising that she should prefer to lose by war what she could not, with any self-respect, sign away by negotiation.

Morally and virtually, however, this triumph of might over right will hereafter be ascribed to France and Russia. They are both Continental Powers, and, when they please, they can speak with authority on Continental questions. They are great military Powers, and they can prevent, whenever they are so minded, military aggression. But both of them have their reasons for quiescence on the present occasion. Whether their determination to stand aside inactive whilst treaties were being trampled under foot and international laws were being set at nought has been a wise one time will show. They had but to speak the word, and Prussian valour would have quailed. They, especially in conjunction with England, could have easily prevented the war or could have stopped it. The word which would have availed they have declined to utter. So far as fear of their interference could check Germany, Germany remains unchecked. Their policy may be far-seeing and justifiable; but, whether founded upon wisdom or perplexity, the effect of it undoubtedly has been to turn the Conference into a solemn farce and to give free license to military freebooting within prescribed limits. Against all these unfavourable conditions England has unsteadily and perseveringly contended, but contended in vain. She has no interests at stake save those which she possesses in common with the other Powers of Europe. She has no responsibilities but those which fall equally upon all. Her European policy has included her towards both the belligerents. Her power is principally naval. Her people are pacifically disposed. She has done her best, as far as diplomacy can avail, and has been baffled. Will she now resort to other means, or ought she?

Her Majesty's Ministers, after due deliberation, have come to the conclusion that neither does the honour of England require, nor are the circumstances of the case such as should induce, her to go to war with the German Powers. This conclusion they have formally announced to Parliament, and, unless the conflict between Germany and Denmark should assume a totally different aspect, they hold themselves prepared to abide by it. They admit that the sympathies of almost the whole British nation are on the side of the weak against the strong, the oppressed against the oppressor. They think that although Denmark gave the first offence, she had, since the accession of the new King, evinced a sincere desire to set right that which had been wrong. They believe that all through the last series of events she has been ill-used, and that might has overridden right. On these grounds, they declare, they would have been glad if they had found it possible to advise their Sovereign to take part with Denmark in the approaching struggle; but a review of the whole case has satisfied them that such counsel could not be justified.

Briefly summarised, the reasons upon which they based this important decision may be stated. The difference between the belligerents, as it stood at the close of the Conference, was too trivial to warrant the British Government in imposing large sacrifices upon the people in order to effect a settlement of it in favour of Denmark. It could not be said to involve her independence, for it related only to the slice of Schleswig, south of which she had agreed to surrender her rights, north of which Germany had assented to her retaining them. Of course, the mere insignificance of the matter in dispute could not have been pleaded in justification of our declining to lend material aid to Denmark if our Government had been prepared to support her. But neither the Treaty of 1852, nor any step we had since taken, nor advice we had offered with a view of maintaining it, had pledged us to render her armed assistance; and on three occasions Denmark had declined counsels tendered her by England which, if adopted, would either have prevented or put an end to the war.

Nor did it appear to Ministers that the high expediency of maintaining the balance of power in Europe and of enforcing international law for the protection of a weak Power against a strong one bound them, in the present instance, to confront at once the two German Powers. None would pretend that the evacuation of a little more or less of Schleswig to Germany would disturb the equilibrium of political power in Europe. As to the vindication of public law and the calling the violators of it to account, that is not the peculiar, far less the exclusive, duty of Great Britain. It devolved upon France and Russia equally as upon this country. Russia has constantly refused to join in putting Prussia and Austria under any restraint in this matter. France also, from first to last, has declared that her interests will not allow of her participation in the use of force towards Germany. But England cannot, singly and alone, undertake to see justice done upon every wrong-doing nation of Europe. She has shown her readiness to take her share, but it is not to be expected that she should be at the sole risk, and bear the whole burden, of doing police duty for Europe.

Further, her Majesty's Government have considered, as it behoved them, what service they would be likely to render either Denmark or Europe in going to war with Germany. England might sweep the seas of German commerce and effectually blockade German ports, but this would do nothing towards forcing the allies out of Jutland and Schleswig. To do this she would have to employ a military force, and a force competent to overpower the united armies of Austria and Prussia, and of the other German States which would hasten to their assistance. True, she might send a fleet into the Adriatic, let loose Italy, raise Hungary, excite Poland. But this would be to set Europe in a flame in order to enable Denmark in a matter which does not vitally concern her independent existence, and would be imitating the bad example of the very Powers of whose reckless violence she complains.

Finally, a survey of our own position and interests forbad the idea of putting the country, at present, to so great an occasion. Our commerce is ubiquitous and, of course, would be exposed to some inconvenience. The civil war in America has necessarily altered the relations of that nation with Europe, for, to make us it will, it will leave the North with a large fleet and an army of veterans at her command, but must husband our resources for a day of real danger. We have enormous interests to protect all over the globe. There is China, with its rapidly expanding trade. There is India, with its untold treasures and responsibilities. There are our colonial possessions stretching from east to west. The stake is beyond reach of computation. We cannot risk it in enterprises for comparatively trivial and doubtful objects. In justice to our own people we ought not to do so.

These are the grounds—and they appear to us incontestable—upon which her Majesty's Ministers have resolved to abstain from resorting to arms in the Dano-German struggle, and we can hardly doubt the country will ratify their wise decision.

THE FIGHT BETWEEN THE ALABAMA AND THE KEARSARGE.

We published last week an Engraving from the sketch which was taken by Mr. Lancaster, of Liverpool, from the mizen mast, representing the final scene of the combat between the Alabama and the Kearsarge, off the port of Cherbourg, on the morning of Sunday, the 19th ult. We are now enabled, by the courtesy of Mr. Robert Lancaster, of Hindley Hall, Wigan, to present our readers with another illustration of the same subject, which appears on the first page. Mr. Lancaster is the owner of the yacht Deerhound, which was present during the whole of the battle, and which was happily instrumental in saving the lives of Captain Semmes, thirteen officers, and twenty-six men of the Alabama, when they had leaped into the water as their ship went down. We think we may consider this gentleman as a public benefactor to humanity which he was thus enabled to perform, we are bound to say, entirely from motives of humanity, but he has, with his pencil, in producing a graphic record of the extraordinary spectacle which he witnessed. Mr. Lancaster says in his letter, which accompanied this drawing—

"I have endeavoured to take the sketch just at the moment the Alabama was going down. We were then about two hundred yards from the sinking vessel, and about twice that distance from the Federal ship. One of the Alabama's boats, after having been almost foundered on board the Kearsarge, returned and picked up another boatful, and then came steering for the Deerhound, where, to prevent their falling into the hands of the Federals, she was sunk by some of the Alabama's men. The sides of the Kearsarge were very much cut up, nearly all the chain-plating being exposed on the starboard side. Just as the Alabama went down, the mainmast, which had been struck by a shot, fell. The Kearsarge's boats were also lowered until after the Alabama had disappeared altogether. I shall be most happy if this sketch will be of any use to you. It is the most correct you will be able to get as to the position of the vessels and boats."

We have also received another page of this Number a drawing which has been made from the information furnished to our Artist supplied to us by Mr. George T. Fullam, an officer of the Alabama, who was one of the few who succeeded in making their escape to the Kearsarge, and then came on board the Deerhound, which brought him to Southampton. Mr. Fullam explained to our Artist that it is an incident worth noting, with regard to the danger of boarding a vessel like the Alabama, that the thread-blocks of both the main and mizen gaffs were found to be filled with powder just week the Alabama left Captain Semmes to the agent of the Confederate Government in Dundee, we have received from Captain Winslow, commander, Captain Winslow, who writes from Cherbourg as follows:—

Sir,—There have been so many nonsensical publications on the engagement which took place between the Alabama and Kearsarge, that I deem it right that a correction should be made.

In the first place, the challenge was sent by Captain Winslow; to have done so would have been to have violated the order of the Navy Department. On the contrary, Captain Winslow received a note from Captain Semmes, asking if he desired to fight the Kearsarge, and would only allow a single gun's width between the vessels. This I declined, and sent back word that I would fight him at a distance of a mile and a half. The Kearsarge's battery consists of seven guns, two 11-inch Dahlgren guns, one pivot and one broadside, and five 32-pounder guns, which is a total weight of one 100-pounder rifle, one heavy 68 dahlgren, six 32-pounders, throwing a broadside from the Kearsarge. At the beginning of the fight, when inside the Kearsarge had stopped up and down her steel chains. Those were stopped by another chain, which was passed over the vessel, fore and aft, over the bends of the Kearsarge; the whole was covered by light planks, two inches thick, which were placed for the purpose of protecting the chains. When there was no coal in the upper part of the bunkers, it was the case with the Kearsarge, only 20 tons of coal remained on the lower bunkers, which were protected. The Kearsarge went into action with a crew of 162 officers and men. The Alabama, by report of her officers, had 149.

The Kearsarge steamed to sea in order that no questions of neutrality jurisdiction should be raised, when her fuel for steaming, the short round and steered in neutrality for the Alabama for close action. The Alabama fired her first gun at the Kearsarge when at a distance of about 1,000 yards, and the Alabama firing when she was going down, and all such talk, is twaddle. The Alabama steamed at her best speed until she got away, when the Kearsarge was laid across her bows, and would have raked her had she not surrendered, which she had done, as we tried to get her in stays. The Kearsarge then passed close over the stern. The officers of the Alabama on board the Kearsarge say that she was a complete shot-trap, and was completely riddled with shot. Such is all I know of the Alabama.

Yours, &c.,
JOHN A. WINSLOW, Captain.

It may be observed that Captain Winslow does not mention the way in which the officers and crew of the Alabama were saved upon the sinking of their ship. It is clear, however, that he made no such attempt to rescue them as a generous enemy would have done; but the log kept on board the Deerhound records that, when the yacht was passing the Kearsarge, it was "requested to assist in saving the Alabama's crew." Both Captain Semmes and Mr. Lancaster have testified that the boats of the Kearsarge were not sent for that purpose until after the Alabama had disappeared, though the Alabama had not only surrendered but had sent her wounded to be received on board the Kearsarge as prisoners of war. It is therefore probable that, if it had not been for Mr. Lancaster's prompt intervention, Captain Semmes and his brave comrades would have shared the fate of Mr. Herbert Llewellyn, the surgeon (an Englishman, the son of a clergyman in Wiltshire), who perished with their sinking vessel. The Deerhound has therefore earned, in our opinion, the fairest honours of the day. She was the object of much curiosity and admiration during her stay at Southampton from the Sunday to Wednesday, when she left that port for Hull. As we have given her a conspicuous place in the Engraving on our first page, it may be stated that she is entered on the lists of the Royal Yacht Squadron of Cowes, the Royal Mersey Yacht Club of Liverpool, and the (Irish) Royal Western Yacht Club stationed at Queenstown. She was built, as it happens, upon the same model as the Alabama, in the same playground at Birkenhead, by Messrs. Laird and Co. She is a three-masted vessel, built of steel, with a screw-propeller, with a tonnage (builders' measurement) of about 190, and engines of a nominal power of seventy horse. When in which she turned five hundred knots, being about two knots beyond the speed of the Alabama, which thirteen knots. The Deerhound now proceeds from Hull to Norway. Mr. Lancaster and his yacht obtain indignantly deny the statement that an arrangement was made with the Deerhound by Captain Semmes, before the engagement, that the vessel should hover about the combatants and render assistance to the Alabama. They knew that Captain Semmes had determined to engage the Kearsarge, but no arrangement of any kind was thought of.

The famous Alabama herself, which was originally called "No. 290," came from Messrs. Laird's building-yard in July, 1862, and received her armament and crew at Terceira, in the Azores, whence she started upon a career most destructive to the maritime commerce of the United States. She is said to have captured sixty-four in less than two years, one hundred American vessels. She was a screw-rigged steam propeller, of 1040 tons register. Length of keel, 210 ft.; length over all, 220 ft.; beam, 32 ft.; depth, 17 ft. Her engines, built by same firm, were two horizontal ones, each of 300-horse power, with stowage for 350 tons of coals. Her sails, carried at all times, were as follow:—Fore, fore topmast, staysail gib, two large trysails, and usual square sails on fore and main, with the exception of the mainsail, which was a flying one; spanker and gaff-topsail. Her standing rigging was of chain, with mottle engraved thereon, "Aide toi, et Dieu t'aidera," placed just before the mizenmast. Bridge in the centre, just before the funnel. She carried five boats—viz., jolly-boat and launch amidships, the whaleboat between the main and mizen masts, and dingy astern. The main deck was protected by massive elliptic stern, bulwarks, high bulwarks; cabin accommodation first class; wardroom furnished with a handsome cabin; steerage—starboard for midshipmen; port for engineers; next came engineers' mess-room, midshipmen the berth deck, capable of accommodating 120 men; under the ward-room was store-room, shell-room, and under the steerage was provisions just forward of the firearms came the hold; next the magazines, and forward of all the engineers' and sailmakers' store-rooms; the hold being under the berth deck.

The Kearsarge, launched after a range of hills in Vermont, is a recent acquisition to the navy of the United States; in fact, she is one of the nine gun-boats completed within three months from the date of the order given. She was launched on the 7th of June, 1861, and commenced in the Solent, during the visit of the Confederate cruiser Nashville (formerly Sumter), occasioned considerable excitement some time since.

A correspondence is published between Captain Winslow and Mr. Bonfils, the French Confederate agent at Dundee, in which Captain as his prisoners those of the Alabama's crew rescued by pilot-boats, and bring under this Cherbourg. He addressed the pilot-boats to King the protection of humanity, but if the prisoners endeavour to escape from the Kearsarge, Captain they must expect to meet no mercy another time. Mr. Bonfils in reply replies that instead of hinder even a surrendered prisoner from escaping if he can, and he declines to act as a go-between between Captain Winslow and persons he does not even name; nor can he understand how Captain Winslow can claim to hold prisoners within the territory of the French empire.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

Prince Metternich, the Austrian Ambassador, with the Princess, and the Count de Goltz, the Prussian Ambassador, left Paris on Sunday for Fontainebleau, there to attend the second series of guests invited to the Imperial Palace.

The Moniteur announces several new diplomatic appointments and changes of Ministers among the representatives of Foreign Powers. Count Cunningham Gotland is appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Hanover to the Court of the King of the Belgians; Count Recolet, at the Court of the King of Portugal; Viscount Adolphe Fitzjames, at the Court of Munich; and the Marquis of Caslore at the Court of the Grand Duke of Baden.

The Japanese Ambassadors concluded its mission to Paris by signing an arrangement, according to the terms of which the Government undertakes to pay into the hands of the Emperor's Minister at Jeddo a sum of about 1,000,000f. as an indemnity for acts of piracy committed against one of the vessels of the French marine. Also a further sum of 192,000f. to the Japanese Ambassadors Gosuna, killed in Japan, and which latter sum was paid down immediately. The Ambassadors agreed to the maintenance of the late commercial treaty with France, accompanied by additional clauses.

The elections for the Councils Généraux have terminated, in an immense majority of cases, in favour of candidates supported or accepted by the Government.

M. Duruy, the Minister of Commerce, has addressed a circular to the Chambers of Commerce calling their attention to the necessity of some houses in the wine trade which ship wine to England in bottles which, from the thickness of the glass or the material in which the bottom runs up inside, contain less than they ought by ten or twenty per cent. The Minister requests that the Chambers should interpose a stop to practices which cannot fail in the end to do much injury to the wine commerce.

The Academy of Fine Arts has elected M. Verdi a Foreign Associate, in place of Meyerbeer.

A legacy of 20,000f., which has been bequeathed to the Académie des Sciences by Miss Agathe Letellier, which, under the name of "Savigny Foundation," is to encourage zoologists with the necessary means of continuing M. de Savigny's investigations in Egypt and Syria.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico arrived at Vera Cruz on the 29th of May, and immediately started for the capital. A private telegram received in London from the information of the defeat of Juarez at Matchuela, by the combined Mexican and French troops. A thousand prisoners, eighteen guns, and all the matériel were captured by the French.

SPAIN

The Queen returned to the Palace of the Escurial yesterday.

The session of the Chambers has been suspended.

The Council has met under the presidency of the Minister of the Interior, to draw up the law on the press.

Admiral Pinson has demanded a further supply of war material.

Senor Pacheco, Minister of Foreign Affairs, will address a circular note to the Powers on the Peruvian question.

ITALY.

In Monday's sitting of the Chamber of Deputies the Budget was discussed. The ordinary expenditure for 1864 is estimated at 767,486,529 lire. The extraordinary expenditure is estimated at 190,127,355 lire. The Budget of expenditure was passed by a majority of 142 to 60.

On Wednesday the Minister of Finance stated that he had been able partly to carry out his financial programme, although he had been in part unsuccessful. Respecting the defects for 1864 and 1865, he would be able to provide for them by the sale of Crown lands to the value of 200 million lire, and by the sale of the State railways, without having recourse to a loan. The Minister showed that he has effected reductions in the Budget of expenditure to the amount of forty million lire, and that, after the vote upon the new constitutional laws had been taken, the reductions would reach 160 millions. The revenue derived from the income tax was regularly increasing. The Government, he said, was far from adopting the programme of the party of action—viz., disarmament. The Ministerial programme was still that announced by the Cabinet on coming into office—viz., to hold themselves ready to take advantage of political events in Europe, in order to bring about the realisation of the decisions of Italy. Those remarks were received with great applause.

The Pope officiated at the Basilica of the Vatican on Wednesday morning, on the occasion of the fête of the Holy Father. He afterwards received the protests against the invasions and usurpations of the Pontifical provinces on the part of the Italian Court set forth in his allocutions of 1859 and 1860, and in the address to the Roman Catholic Bishops.

The Congregation of the Index has condemned thirteen works, among which are "Les Misérables," by Victor Hugo, and some seminaries of De Balzac and Scribe.

The Tuscan Maremma Railway was opened to the public from Orbetello to Corneto on the 15th inst., and the Italian Consul from Orbetello to the Nunziatella, the Papal frontier, on the 20th.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The Prussians lost no time in recommencing hostilities. At six on Sunday morning the Prussians opened fire on Alsen from several batteries; and the renewed firing was soon followed by the capture of the island. Prussian despatches announce that at daybreak on Wednesday eleven Prussian battalions succeeded in crossing the channel between the mainland and Alsen, at a point north of Sonderberg. The Danes were beaten back after some fighting, in which the Prussian loss is said to have been moderate; but the Danes are stated to have succeeded in effecting a retreat and to have marched in haste.

The Prussians are erecting batteries on the Jutland coast, opposite Fünen, and will, no doubt, in conjunction with the Austrians, presently attempt to become masters of that island also.

An engagement between the Danish and German fleets is shortly expected to take place off Heligoland.

According to a Berlin telegram, the Austrian and Prussian Governments intend to extend their military occupation over the whole of Jutland, and to keep it as a pledge, collecting the taxes. They have declared, too, in an official circular, that as peace has been concluded they are no longer bound by the concessions which they made at the London Conference.

It is probable that Schleswig and Holstein will shortly be placed, with the concurrence of the Diet, under the joint government of the two great German Powers until the question of the succession shall have been decided.

The Danish Regnaad, or common assembly of the kingdom and Schleswig, was opened on Saturday. The speech from the Throne, which was read by the Danish Minister of State, was a review of the present situation and dwelt upon the isolation in which Denmark is now placed. The speech contained, however, the assurance that in that sympathy in one quarter—we presume in England—might even yet be changed into active support. In the subsequent sitting of the Lower House, Bishop Monrad, the Prime Minister, in a speech read so far of the Conference, and accused Earl Russell of inconsistency in having changed his ground and of having given the new proposition after the line of demarcation in Schleswig, which England proposed, had been rejected by the German Powers.

INTERVIEW AT CARLSBAD.

On Wednesday week the Emperor of Austria drove to Schlackenwerth on a visit to the ex-Grand Duke of Tuscany. His Majesty subsequently received Herr von Bismarck, the Minister of the King of Prussia. The town was brilliantly illuminated in the evening. The Emperor left on Thursday morning for Prague. He conferred the grand cross of the Order of St. Stephen upon Herr von Bismarck. The King of Prussia remained with the Emperor up to the time of his departure for Prague.

WIRTEMBERG.

King William of Wirtemberg died at Rosenstein Castle on Saturday last. A memoir of the deceased Monarch will be found in our Obituary column. He is to be buried, according to the desire expressed in his will, in the simplest fashion.

The new Sovereign, King Charles, his son, has issued a proclamation to the people declaring that he will faithfully maintain the Constitution.

RUSSIA.

The Minister of Finance has instituted to the Council of State a project for the formation of a Russian Credit Foncier and Industrial Bank. The establishment of these institutions is considered one of the first London houses, among which are the International Financial Society and the London Crédit Foncier. The Bank of Meiningen will also concert in this object.

On the 4th ult. a terrible fire destroyed all the wooden buildings that had been constructed for the business of the fair at the city of Nizhi Novgorod. All the shops on the line of the Oka, a verst in length, all the theatres and shows, thirty restaurants, fifty public-houses or hotels, the public baths, and several workshops were destroyed. The Tartar mosque and three or four houses are all that were preserved.

GREECE.

The King of Greece left Corfu yesterday week. The municipality have presented a villa to his Majesty.

Four hundred Ionians have already enlisted in the Greek army.

In Tripolitza, Nauplia, Chalkis, Athens, and Zante, political prisoners have attempted to escape, led by the intrigues of the revolutionary party.

AMERICA.

By the steamer Edinburgh we have intelligence from New York to the morning of the 18th ult.

General Grant has performed an important operation—that of moving his army to the right bank of the James River. After turning Spotty beyond Cuthbone and Fenton's plantation he has now turned the lines of the Chickahominy and the northern defences of Richmond itself. It remains to be seen what he will benefit by the change. The mode in which Grant accomplished the first turning, by rail will interest when the details arrive. So far as the telegrams furnish information, it seems to have been a complete success. Three days after at White House by a cavalry demonstration on the right; then to have made a show of forcing Bottom's Bridge, by which the left wing army marched rapidly down the Chickahominy, crossed at Long Bridge, and, moving east of White Oak Swamp, struck the James in two columns, one opposite Fort Powhattan, the other at Small's Landing, opposite Bermuda Hundred. While the army was marching to the James General Sheridan with a cavalry force proceeded from White House, landed at City Point, as may be inferred, and, moving on the right bank of the Appomattox River, has carried the southern defences of Petersburg. Hancock came up, it is said, and took post on Smith's left, and moreover every line of entrench fell into the hands of the Federals the next day. Sheridan's cavalry in the meantime had been concentrated and defeated by the Confederates, but when the telegram left Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was reported to be fighting at Bottom's Bridge, where Grant crossed the Chickahominy, but what result is unknown. The development of Hunter's advance in the higher valleys of the Shenandoah must have seriously alarmed General Lee, if it be true that he had sent off a whole corps to attack Hunter and cover the line of the Virginia.

We are not informed at all of the movements of Lee himself; but it may be inferred that he has moved through Richmond and taken post on the reouth. Nor are we told how Hunter got through the Blue Ridge to Lexington and Amherst. Upon these points we must wait for information. Richmond journals discuss the military situation in a very defiant tone, and regard with derision the idea of their capital being captured.

The latest Federal accounts of General Sherman's operations in Georgia represented that, on the 12th ult., the Federal army was within 500 yards of the Confederate position, which was said to extend from Kenesaw to Lost Mountain. There had been no serious engagement, and it was reported in New York that General Sherman's troops were interchoing themselves. A body of 8000 Federals, under General Sturgis, who had been dispatched from Memphis for the purpose of frustrating any attempts to impede General Sherman's long line of communications, had been attacked at Gun Town, in Tennessee, by 10,000 Confederates, under General Forrest, and had been completely defeated. General Sturgis himself was killed, and all his guns and stores were captured by the victors, who likewise took a large number of prisoners.

General Morgan's Confederates had done much damage to the railways in Kentucky, and had taken, on the 16th ult., the town of Cynthiana, with two Federal regiments quartered there. On the 18th, however, they were attacked and defeated by General Burbridge, who made 300 or 400 prisoners and recaptured a few of the Federals taken on the previous day.

By a vote of eighty-four against fifty-eight the House of Representatives had repealed the Fugitive Slave Law.

The Senate have rejected the President's amendment of the Confiscation abolishing slavery.

A joint resolution for a final adjournment of Congress on Thursday, June 23, was adopted.

More than 10,000 emigrants arrived at the port of New York in the week ending June 4.

There has been a fall in the price of gold. At last accounts it was quoted at 204 per cent premium.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Queen has appointed the Dean of Windsor to succeed Dr. Curteis as Crown Trustee of the British Museum.

The annual banquet of the Cambridge Athenæum Club took place at the Hall of Arts yesterday week—the first of Lent in the chair.

Mr. William Miller and Mr. George Forbes have respectively been appointed chief engineer and secretary of the Bank of England.

Mr. Alderman Dakin and Mr. Alderman Besley have been elected sheriffs for the city of London for the ensuing year.

The annual meeting of the Governors of the Society of Arts was held on Wednesday afternoon at John-street, Adelphi, for the reception of the report and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Yesterday week the anniversary of Her Majesty's coronation the usual legal demonstrations were observed in London, and from an early hour in the morning the flags were flying and bells ringing in the metropolis.

The Prince of Wales has consented to lay the foundation-stone of the new wing of the London Hospital on Monday next. The ceremony will commence at half-past three o'clock precisely.

The Working Men's Club and Institute Union will hold its annual meeting on Wednesday next in St. James's Hall. Lord Lovel and Broughan will take the chair.

The Royal Dramatic College Fête will be held at the Crystal Palace on the 30th inst. Among the leading features will be the usual stalls, presided over by the most popular of the metropolitan actresses.

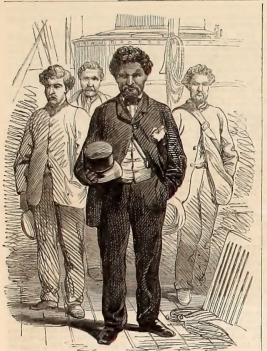
The Royal Academy of Music will hold its annual meeting at the Architect intend to give a concordance at the rooms of the Institute in Conduit-street, Hanover-square, on Thursday next.

The death of Mr. Washington Wilks, well known as a speaker at political meetings in London, took place on Monday night, in St. Pancras Workhouse, to which he was admitted a few days since by the relieving officer, conveyed to express opinions in favour of Parliamentary Reform.

The Prince of Wales has been graciously pleased to visit the Bazaar, held this day (Saturday) at the Hanover-square Rooms, in aid of the funds of the Governess Fund for Ireland. Their Royal Highnesses are expected to arrive at twelve o'clock.

On Monday afternoon 1500 visitors assembled at the Royal Horticultural Society's Gardens, South Kensington, to witness Wellington's Fête. There was a very excellent supply of the delicious fruit, and, in addition to the usual fare, there was provided a most recherché selection of cultural productions. On Wednesday there was a rose show at the gardens of the Royal Society.

Yesterday week Cardinal Wiseman opened a new Roman Catholic church in the neighbourhood of Kensington, called St. George Bowyer, Burt, M.P., in the purest Italian style of architecture, by Mr. Goldie, architect. The church is 70 ft. by 30 ft., and 60 ft. high to the apex of the ceiling, with windows of tinted glass. The pilasters are of Sicilian jasper, and the entrance is of variety of marbles. The high altar stands towards the centre of the dome, and is surmounted by a marble baldachino.



The Prince of Wales, the Captain-General of the Hon. Artillery Company, attended the annual meeting of the members, held in Finsbury. The Princess of Wales accompanied his Royal Highness, and presented to the company the new colours given by her Majesty in honour of Major Bohemia. The force, which mustered in great strength, was under the immediate command of Lord Colville. After the inspection his Royal Highness addressed the regiment, congratulating them on their fine soldierly appearance, and on the efficiency of all such corps.

The fifty-eighth anniversary of the Licensed Victuallers' Schools took place on Wednesday, when a procession, from the Crown Gardens, under the presidency of Mr. Bruce, the London manager of Messrs. Younger and Co.'s brewery at Edinburgh, started for the Asylum, which was established in 1803, and from that time to the present 1077 children have been admitted, and 437 are now on the establishment. The procession was spent on account of the schools exceeds £19,000, and the annual charge is £6000. The Duke of Cambridge, K.G., has been elected president, and Mr. Messrs. Younger and Co. of 1000 guineas towards the funds of the schools. The subscription list amounted to £2000.

Last week the births of 973 boys and 924 girls—in all 1897 children—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number numerically was 1668. The average deaths registered in London last week was 1202. The average number of deaths in the ten corresponding years 1854-63 was 1109, after correction for increase of population, 1165. Measles is still high in the epidemic class of diseases, the deaths from which last week were 98, above the average of the last ten years. Scarlet fever had occurred in considerable numbers, and the deaths from it did not exceed thirty-six in the week ending June 11, 1864. Hooping-cough was also prevalent, a fatality having been registered in Mr. Grant's district, Chelsea, on the 22nd ult. After age is stated to have been 101 years. A boy died from drowning a squantity of grass seed.

The annual meeting and children's fête of the Sailors' Orphan Girls' Asylum was held on Wednesday week, in the grounds of the home, Frognal House, Hampstead. Lord Shaftesbury presided. The report read by the secretary stated that the property was by our orphan March 31st, amounted to £5272, against £1899 in the previous year. The report of the ladies' committee stated that the number of orphans now in the home, exclusive of the school was somewhat disturbed by the breaking out of scarlet fever among the girls, but the disease had occurred in a mild form. Only one fatal case had been carried on as usual. Six children had been admitted into the establishment during the past twelve months, a further number were now in the home; five girls had been placed out in situations. The balance sheet showed that the total expenditure for the year had amounted to £1600. Votes of thanks were delivered by Lord Radstock, Hon. Captain Maude, R.N., Mr. Bruce, M.P., Lieut. Hall, R.N., and Mr. Hodgson, the latter of whom stated that he had been presented to several of the orphans, the proceedings closed.

The Society for Improving the Condition of the Labouring Classes held its twentieth annual meeting on Tuesday, at Willis's Rooms, under the presidency of Lord Ebury. The report read on the occasion by the secretary stated that the current expenses of all the lodging-houses belonging to the society during the year had amounted to £6,066 3 4d., leaving a net profit of £1,211 2s. 10d. The receipts for the year had been £7,277 2s. 2d., and the payments £6,066 3s. 4d., leaving a balance in favour of the society of £1,211 2s. 10d. The report also stated that the society had received donations and subscriptions during the year to the amount of their pottery and of their well-known querns, with heaps of oyster-shells, prove that it was not a single family, but a considerable population, that in those early times occupied the spot. Some Romans of rank and position must also have been here, for in one place a hypocaust flue tile was met with—certain indication of the vicinity of a Roman villa; and, not many yards off, a gold coin of Vespasian, in perfect preservation, was picked up by a labourer.

TE WHEORA, A MAORI CHIEF AND NATIVE MAGISTRATE OF NEW ZEALAND.—SEE PAGE 3.

But the most remarkable of the discoveries is that of a very singular ancient cemetery. Adjoining the rectory garden is a little copse, called "The Wilderness," a remnant of a larger wood which once existed there. It abounds in wild flowers, and was the favourite retreat and pleasure-ground of the children of successive rectors. Some little paths had been cut in it by or for the children, and, as these afforded facilities for excavation, in one of them a trench was first dug, and afterwards a few smaller openings made here and there in the wood. The result was the discovery of a large number of skeletons of a very early period.

They were lying side by side in very shallow cists in the natural undisturbed soil, at whatever depth that natural soil was reached. Many of them were only 18 in. from the present surface of the ground, and one only 14 in. Two, indeed, were found at a depth of more than 2 ft., but in each of these instances there had been a recent accumulation of made earth. Not one skeleton was met with in the made earth, nor was one placed above another. The interstices of the cists were filled with dark blue earth and charcoal, the remains of the fires of funeral feasts; the cists themselves being cut in the natural yellow clay and flint gravel. In the made earth, above the bodies, were many fragments of Roman pottery and querns; a bronze fibula and a pair of bronze volsellæ; but in the cists with the bodies nothing but the jawbones and teeth of animals. In several instances one of these jawbones was carefully laid at the feet of the skeleton. It being desirable to ascertain the species of the animal to which these bones belonged, they were brought to London, and pronounced at the Royal College of Surgeons and elsewhere to be chiefly those of the extinct ox, bos longifrons. There were also jawbones of the hog and other animals.

The human skeletons were in wonderful preservation—the shallow depth, the charcoal, and possibly their original strength having preserved them. They had manifestly been buried naked, no trace of coffin or covering of any kind being discernible, nor any fragment of iron or other metal found buried with them. The feet were in general to the east, the hands at the side or resting on the hips, the face sometimes turned upwards, sometimes to the north. A few of the skeletons invite special notice. One or two present unmistakable evidence of mutilation or dismemberment before death or burial, one of these having bones of unusual thickness and the severed head supported by a flint. Two of them had a child of five or six years old resting on their right arm, evidently buried at the same time; and one had lost a portion of its body by the digging of an ancient moat ages ago. The teeth of all were complete and sound, without any symptom of decay. No armour, beads, personal ornaments, or any vessel, were found with the bodies; nothing, in fact, but the animal bones before mentioned and a few curiously-shaped flints, perhaps used as amulets. An amateur artist—the Rev. T. K. Tucker, Rector of Pittaugh—has made some very interesting drawings of "The Wilderness" and its contents; and some admirable photographs have been executed by Mr. Piper, of Ipswich.

TOMB OF POTATAU, THE FIRST MAORI KING, AT NGARUWAHIA, NEW ZEALAND.—SEE PAGE 3.

It was at first thought that these bodies were the sad memorials of a massacre at some early date, but it is now apparent that the discovery is that of an ancient cemetery, in which those who had died natural as well as violent deaths were interred. Indeed, subsequent research has proved that the cemetery is not confined to the copse called The Wilderness, but extends under the rectory stable, coach-house, and garden to the east, along a portion of the churchyard to the south, and across the moat to the north; Helmingham Church having evidently been built on some sacred spot of the heathen, as was frequently the case with early Christian churches. That these ancient remains were not previously discovered or noticed is very surprising; for—to say nothing of their very shallow depth—one rector had built a summer-house in and over four of the graves, and another planted a hedge of laurels in the very midst of a row of skeletons!

A SERGEANT OF THE 3RD WEST INDIA REGIMENT OF NEGRO TROOPS EMPLOYED IN THE ASHANTEE WAR.

Although repeatedly requested by scientific men to send some of the remains for the identification of the race, Mr. Cautley has hitherto declined to displace a single bone. Most of the bodies were covered up as soon as found, and the remainder have temporary tombs placed over them until the meeting of the Archæological Association in August next. They appear as in relief in their original cists with the earth only partially removed, and at a little distance look almost like fossils. They are certainly very striking. The prevalent opinion, so far, is that they are Romano-Britons; some antiquaries, however, would assign an earlier date. Further explorations may throw more light on this question. We have engraved a view of the church, and one of the spots in the Wilderness copse, where the skeletons were found.

BRITISH WEST INDIA ZOUAVE REGIMENTS.

We have lately heard of the employment of our West India negro troops in the Ashantee war. It is at Cape Coast Castle, and other military stations on the West Coast of Africa, that they are commonly to be found, as well as in our colonies of the West Indies where they were originally raised. Five regiments of infantry and an artillery corps make up this useful portion of the British Army, a specimen of which may be seen at Chatham, where there is usually a small depôt of the "Congoes" receiving their musketry instruction. The commissioned officers are English gentlemen, like any others in her Majesty's service; but many of the non-commissioned officers are of the African race. These troops are inferior to no white regiments of the Line in some of the best qualities of the soldier. They are docile and readily trained, very much attached to their officers, and behave well in barracks or in the field. During our great war with France they took part in the expeditions which led to the capture of Dominica, Martinique, and Guadaloupe; they have since been frequently employed in our little wars on the Gold Coast, resulting from the measures we have taken to suppress the slave trade

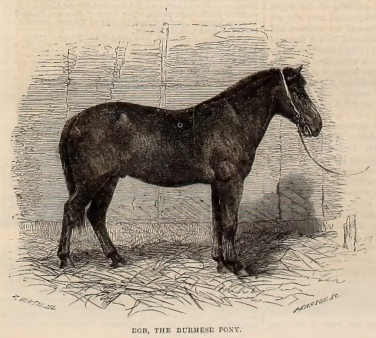
HELMINGHAM CHURCH, SUFFOLK.

EXCAVATIONS OF AN ANCIENT CEMETERY AT HELMINGHAM.

ANIMALS EXHIBITED AT THE CALCUTTA AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

BUFFALO COW, FROM RANGOON.

A MUTNAH, A SPECIES OF WILD COW



LONG-HORNED OUDE BULLOCK (ONE OF A PAIR).

PATNA WETHERS (FIRST PRIZE FOR INDIAN-BRED WETHERS).

and the disputes which will occasionally happen between the Governor of a British settlement and the King or Chief of a savage nation. One of the first difficulties in converting the black man into a British soldier when these negro corps were formed, was that of fitting him with the conventional dress of our European army; the closely buttoned coat, the tight leather stock, and especially the boots were not less unsuitable to the bodily constitution of the negro than to the tropical climate in which he was born and bred, and where he is kept to serve. As a remedy for this inconvenience a sort of Zouave uniform has been adopted for all our West Indian or African regiments. The Illustration of their present costume, which we now give, is engraved from a life-photograph of a sergeant of the 3rd West India Regiment, who last March was attached to a dépôt battalion at Chatham, awaiting embarkation from Liverpool to Sierra Leone, where the regiment is quartered. He had been sent over from head-quarters in order to qualify as Assistant-Sergeant Instructor of Musketry to the regiment, and had returned from Hythe to Chatham after going through the course of musketry instruction and receiving his certificate of efficiency. The following is a description of the full uniform:—White turban with blue tassel, shell jacket of light yellow-coloured flannel, with large round brass buttons, chevrons, and braid (yellow) round the facings and waistcoat; the waistcoat scarlet; the trousers, blue serge with yellow stripes, but of leather just above the gaiters, rubbed with yellow ochre; the gaiters and gloves pipeclayed white. He carries an Enfield rifle, with bayonet, pouch, and cartridge-belt. We are obliged to our correspondent "A. S. B." for the photograph we have copied on this occasion.

BOB, THE BURMESE PONY.

SHEIK KULLOO'S TAZ PONY KANKYE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

ANIMALS AT THE CALCUTTA AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

We have engraved half a dozen of the series of photographs taken by Messrs. G. Wyman and Co., of Hare-street, Calcutta, by order of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, during the late Agricultural Exhibition in the Belvedere Grounds. The show of horses, cattle, sheep, and goats was very interesting, as it comprised a great variety of species from different provinces within the Calcutta Presidency, including Bengal, Oude, and the north-western provinces, on the one hand, with our Burmese possessions on the other. The animals we have engraved on the preceding page are two cows, a fine buffalo cow from Rangoon, a fine long-horned Oude bullock, a Mutnah, or white cow, and a pair of Patna wethers, which seem to be creditable specimens of the native breeds they represent.

BIRTHS.

On the 23rd ult., the wife of the Rev. Richard J. Newby, Vicar of Enderby-cum-Whetstone, Leicestershire, of a son.

On the 25th ult., the wife of J. H. Sharp, Esq., of Steel Cross House, near Tunbridge Wells, of a son.

On the 28th ult., at Shortland, Auckland, New Zealand, the wife of Thomas Mitchell Peile, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 29th ult., at Harwich, Essex, the wife of Oliver John Williams, Esq., of a son.

At Hetmington Hall, Mrs. Tollemache, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 21st ult., at the Episcopal Church, Hawick, Roxburghshire, by the Rev. J. H. Jerdon, assisted by the Rev. J. R. Dakers, the Rev. Robert Charles Ripley, Curate of Brancepeth, Durham, to Amy Elizabeth, daughter of David Briggs, Esq., of Wilton Lodge.

At Pisti, near Sevenoaks, N. De Jersey Lovell, Esq., late Captain Inniskilling Dragoons, to Hester, daughter of the late Rev. F. T. Gregory, Incumbent of Pisti.

DEATHS.

On the 28th of May, at Rio Magro, St. Thomas-in-the-Vale, Jamaica, the Hon. George Goffe, member of the Honourable Legislative Council of Jamaica, formerly Captain 46th Regt., Essex, and Great Yarmouth Militia, aged 54.

On the 14th ult., at Roam, after a short illness, having survived her husband only three months, Anne, widow of the late Thomas Powell, Esq., most deeply beloved and lamented by her numerous family and friends.

On the 24th ult., at 11, Dunraven-street, Bilabarry, the wife of A. L. Tharfler, Esq., H.M. Bengal Army, and Adjutant 5th Regiment Local Horse.

On the 23rd ult., at Matlock Bath, Charlotte, wife of the late Edward Cheere, Esq., and third daughter of the late William Constant, Esq., of Hinton Grove, near Cambridge, aged 73 years.

At Wrexhill Parsonage, Bo'Ness, William H. Vale, M.A., Vicar of Tideswell and Rural Dean, in his 59th year.

At Cranford, Middlesex, Sir Robert Gardiner, G.C.B., K.C.H., Colonel Commandant of R Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, in his 84th year.

At Dalwhinnie, Francis George Alexander, Esq., of Monzievaird-square, and Petty Bog Office, aged 18.

Robert Hay, Esq., of Cherrytrad-grove, Selsey, Sussex, late Captain 42nd Regiment, aged 54.

At Glen Mudart, Inverness-shire, Lieutenant-General Hugh Rose, of the Madras Army.

At Stanfield Rectory, Norfolk, the Rev. James Royle, M.A., in his 77th year.

At Monk Hall, Essex, Susan Maria, wife of Joseph Cotton Wigram, Bishop of Rochester.

At Harrogate, Edward W. Wilmot, Esq., of Buxton, son of the late Sir Robert Wilmot, Bart., in his 56th year.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 9.

SUNDAY, July 3.—Sixth Sunday after Trinity. Hugh Capet, founder of the third race of the French Monarchs, crowned at Rheims, 987.

MONDAY.—Translation of St. Martin. Meeting of Convocation and Parliament (prorogued "Barebones," from one of the members for London), 1653. Vicksburg, on the Mississippi, surrendered by the Federals after a desperate defence, 1863. New Moon 6h. 26m. a.m.

TUESDAY.—The British, under Blake, severely defeated at Buenos Ayres, 1807. Oxford Act.

WEDNESDAY.—Battle of Naseby. Death of King Henry II., 1189. John Russ burnt as a heretic at Constance, 1415. California annexed to the United States, 1846.

THURSDAY.—Thomas à Becket (his relics mutilated, 1220). Death of Sir Thomas More, Statesman, Philosopher, and author, 1535. Battle of Prestonpans: the troops from the Crimea at Aldershott, 1856. Death of William Cobbett, 1835.

FRIDAY.—Victory of Ramillesnahe the Theban over the Spartans at Leuctra, 371 B.C. Victorious defence of Derry by Walker, 1778.

SATURDAY, 8.—General Braddock killed in his disastrous attack on Fort Duquesne, 1755. Death of Edmund Burke, the great orator, 1797. Oxford Term begins.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 9, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.	M. A. M. A.
3 34	4 21	5 9	5 58	6 49	7 42	8 36
3 51	4 39	5 28	6 18	7 10	8 4	8 59

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION

Lat. 51° 28′ 2″ N. Long. 0° 19′ 0″ W. Height above sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.		WIND.		RAIN in the twenty-four hours.
	Barometer reduced to 32°.	Dew Point.	Humidity.	Ozone. Scale of 0 to 6.	Highest in the day.	Lowest in the night.	General Direction.	Miles in the twenty-four hours.	Inches in the twenty-four hours.
June 22	29·906	50·7	87	2·8	63·6	49·4	W.W.S.S.W.	249	·000
23	29·946	55·3	83·4	2·1	65·1	49·6	S.W.	360	·015
24	29·814	54·4	83	2·3	67·1	49·8	W.S.W.	319	·178
25	30·033	52·6	82·1	2·3	64·2	48·1	W.	272	·053
26	29·975	53·1	86·3	2·3	67·3	47·5	S.W.	307	·000
27	30·181	55·5	69·2	2·4	65·8	51·3	N.W.	[illegible]	·000
28	30·134	47·7	79	2·3	67·2	43·3	N.	381	·035
29	30·071	49·6	77·3	2·3	67·1	46·3	N.W.	[illegible]	·000
30	30·111	50·2	77·3	2·3	67·1	46·3	N.W.	[illegible]	·000
July 1	30·124	50·7	77·3	2·3	67·1	46·3	N.W.	[illegible]	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches)	30·042	30·044	30·047	30·067	29·930	30·110	30·124
Temperature of Air	61·9°	58·8	59·7°	60·2°	60·2°	58·2°	56·3
Temperature of Evaporation	57·0	54·9	56·0	56·7	57·1	54·7	53·2
Direction of Wind	S.W.	W.	W.S.W.	W.	W.S.W.	S.W.	W.S.W.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—MONDAY, JULY 4, A SERIES OF SHAKSPEARIAN READINGS, by Mr. Sothern, in the Characters of "David Garrick," "Last Two Nights of "Lord Dundreary Married and Done For."—TUESDAY, "David Garrick," "Lord Dundreary Married and Done For."—WEDNESDAY, DAVID GARRICK.—THURSDAY, "Oh! by the way" and "Lord Dundreary Married and Done For;" concluding with TURNING THE TABLES.—FRIDAY, "Lord Dundreary Married and Done For," and a RECITAL.—SATURDAY, An Engagement of Special Importance.—Doors open at Seven; to commence at Eight. No Stalls can be admitted.

MR. BUCKSTONE'S ANNUAL BENEFIT and LAST NIGHT of the SEASON.—WEDNESDAY NEXT, JULY 6, will be given GOOD FOR NOTHING, by Mr. Howe, and the BOTTLE IMP, by Mr. Buckstone; GOOD FOR THE CASTLE OF ANDALUSIA.—Don Cæsar, Mr. Wigan; with the original Overture, Music, and Incidental Music, composed by Mr. Howe. DON CÆSAR DE BAZAN, Mr. Phelps; Mr. Buckstone, Mr. Compton, Mr. Chippendale, Mr. W. Farren, Miss Reilly, Miss Louise Keeley, Miss Fanny Wright, Miss Oliver, and Miss Cottrell. Box-office open Daily from Ten to Five. Private Boxes and Stalls can be secured by letter or telegram. Applications by letter must specify the numbers required. Telegrams to be addressed to the Manager.

ROYAL ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. AUGUSTUS HARRIS.—EVERY EVENING during the Week, A SHEEP IN WOLF'S CLOTHING.—Mrs. Stirling and Mr. F. Robinson. Concluding with THE FRENCH PONTIFICATE.—Mr. Charles Mathews, Mr. Compton, Mr. Frank Matthews, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Frank Matthews. To conclude with BISTOUI DIAMOND.—Mr. and Mrs. F. Matthews.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. ALFRED WIGAN.—On MONDAY, and during the Week, Sardanapalus the Second, MARCHIONESS HOOK.—Mr. J. L. Toole; JAMES PRIDE.—Mr. B. Webster and Miss Woolgar; THE THREE ARES BELLE.—Misses J. L. Toole, F. Bedford, Miss Woolgar, Conclusion as before.

MISS HELEN HOGARTH begs to announce that her MORNING MEETING will take place at the STANDISH-SQUARE ROOMS on TUESDAY, the 12th JULY, to commence at Two o'Clock. Vocalists—Misses Fanny Huddart, Miss Edith Wynne, Miss Helen Hogarth, Mrs. Lockey, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Lockey; Signor Gliardini, Signor Gardini, and Mr. Barnby (by the kind permission of J. H. Pepusch, Esq.); Signor Chiatti, Mr. Wilde, and Mr. Alan Reeves. Instrumentalists—Violoncello, Signor Piatti; Violin, Mr. Sainton and Miss Madeline Schiller; Violin, M. Sainton; Violoncello, Mr. Aylward; Pianoforte—Misses Agatha, F. Regan, Hess, and Benedict Halle, Sir G. Smart, and Mr. Charles Halle. Conductors—Mr. Benedict, Mr. Alfred Mellon, and Mr. Sims Reeves. Tickets, at the Residence of Miss Helen Hogarth, 19, Gloucester-crescent, N.W., and of Mr. J. Ayres, at the Rooms.

NOW IS THE TIME TO VISIT THE CRYSTAL PALACE. The Park, Gardens, and Grounds, refreshed by recent rains, in their beautiful beauty.

The Great Basins, with its Tons of Thousands of Roses, now in perfection.

The Fairy Bazaar, a special attraction for children, on Saturday and following days.

MONDAY.—All the Great Fountains, at Half-past Three.

WEDNESDAY.—Great Féte of the German Gymnastic Societies (Turner Verein, Olympia Green, &c. One of the most pleasing féte of the season.

THURSDAY.—Fireworks.

The new Railway Station, every day at Sixpence. Shakspere House—Tableaux. Arte Gentes—Palace open from end to end. Exhibitors' Department full of novelties. Foreign Department full of marriage of new designs and improvements. In the Grounds Fretted, Ribbon-leading, Bantling, Swings, Croquet, Archery, &c. Open till Dusk. Monday to Friday, One Shilling; Saturday, Half-a-Crown; Sunday, 6s. Gallant Season Tickets until the 1st of May, Two Guineas.

Vouchers each combined admission and road conveyance as at the Crystal Palace.

Metropolitan Railway.—THE LONDON and the Crystal Palace form all stations on the Metropolitan Railway, viâ Great Western and Kensington, thus affording more continuous railway communication between the Crystal Palace and the heart of London.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—DEUTSCHES TURNFEST. FESTIVAL OF THE GERMAN GYMNASTIC SOCIETY.—WEDNESDAY NEXT, JULY 6, will be a series of OLYMPIC GAMES and GYMNASTIC EXERCISES will be undertaken by Members of the Society residing in England. There are more than 1000 Turner Societies in Germany and Switzerland. The Band of the Coldstream Guards in attendance, as usual, ONE SHILLING.

THE RIFLE CONTEST AT WIMBLEDON.

A DOUBLE NUMBER of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be issued on SATURDAY, the 16th of JULY, consisting of Two Whole Sheets of Fine-Art and News Illustrations, and a FOUR-PAGE ENGRAVING, PRINTED IN COLOURS, illustrating the National Rifle Association's Prize Meeting at Wimbledon, which will begin on the 11th inst.

Price of the Number, Fine-Art Supplement, and Coloured Picture, Tenpence; Stamped, One Shilling.

Office, 198, Strand.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1864.

AMID the preparation for the great Opposition protest (for it is not, we understand, expected by her Conservative leaders that the vote of censure will be carried, unless present calculations of numbers should prove strangely wrong), it is creditable to the House of Commons that it could devote a considerable time to a measure of police in aid of the class to whose patient research, and to whose prompt handling of political and social questions, politicians owe so much. It is so singularly easy to make merry over a nuisance which does not affect oneself, that it would be remarkable, indeed, if small wits, and there are some very small ones in Parliament, did not air their imbecility on the street-organ question. Not to go to the age in which the late Mr. Thackeray, Mr. Charles Dickens, the Poet Laureate, Mr. Babbage, Mr. Carlyle, and all the other literary men of the day remonstrate, thinking people will speedily make up their minds. Gentlemen whose lives are passed in writing

Viscount Sydney and attended by the ladies and gentlemen in waiting, entered the hall-room soon after ten o'clock, when dancing was commenced. The quadrille band of Mr. John Weippert was in attendance. The Princess of Wales wore a dress of black silk covered with black and white tulle, handsomely trimmed with rich Brussels lace, flowers of mountain ash and lilies; tiara of diamonds, necklace, brooch, and earrings of diamonds. Princess Louis of Hesse wore a blue tulle skirt over a blue silk petticoat, with ruches of white and blue tulle; a top skirt of white tulle, with silver embroidery, and trimmed with passion-flowers. Head-dress, a set of diamonds and passion-flowers; brooch and earrings, emeralds and diamonds; necklace, pearls, with emerald and diamond ornaments. Princess Helena wore a dress of pale tulle and crape over glace silk, trimmed with pink roses and lilies of the valley. Head-dress of roses and lilies of the valley, and diamond ornaments; necklace, pearls. Duchess of Cambridge wore a dress of violet satin, with Honiton lace. Duchess of Teck and diamonds. Countess Granville, necklace, and earrings of pearls and diamonds. Princess Mary wore a blue tulle dress over blue glacé silk, trimmed with bouquets of pink roses and silver wheatears, covered with a silver tulle veil. Head-dress, a diadem of diamonds, with silver wheat-ears and pink roses. Stomacher, necklace, and earrings of diamonds.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales continue at Marlborough House.

On Thursday week their Royal Highnesses went to the theatre in aid of the Female School of Art at the Horticultural Gardens, Kensington. Later in the day the Prince, attended by Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, rode out. In the evening their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, took a drive in the Park, and was in attendance.

Yesterday week the Prince, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse, rode out. Subsequently the Prince went to Willis's Rooms and presided at the meeting of the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, and distributed the prizes awarded by the society. The Princess, accompanied by Princess Mary and attended by the Mistresses of Caernarvon and Antrim, visited Woolwich Arsenal, and honoured M. H. Mathison Hansen, the organist of Roskilde Cathedral, in Denmark, by hearing him perform on the organ. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse arrived at Marlborough House. In the evening the Prince and Princess honoured the Duke of Devonshire with their company at dinner at Devonshire House, Piccadilly. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse also honoured the Duke of Devonshire with their presence at the ball.

On Saturday last the Prince, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse and attended by Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel and Captain the Westerweller, left Marlborough House before twelve o'clock. Upon their return, in the evening, their Royal Highnesses proceeded to Windsor Castle. The Princess, with Princess Mary, Princess Louis of Hesse, Princess Louis of Hesse and attended by the Mistresses of Caernarvon and Lord Harris, left Marlborough House for Windsor Castle on a visit to the Queen.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess attended Divine service in the private chapel of Windsor Castle.

On Monday their Royal Highnesses, with Prince Albert Victor, returned to Marlborough House from Windsor Castle. The Prince, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen, drove out. The Prince and Princess went to the House of Lords, and were present during the debate on the break-up of the Conference. In the evening their Royal Highnesses went to the Philharmonic Concert at the Hanover-square Rooms. The Prince and Princess of Leiningen visited at Marlborough House.

On Tuesday the Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, rode out. The Princess, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen, took a drive. The Prince and Princess, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, visited the Museum of the Geological Survey and the Royal School of Mines in Jermyn-street. In the evening their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, honoured the Adelphi Theatre with their presence.

On Wednesday the Prince presided at a special meeting of the governors of Wellington College, in the Fine Arts Commissioners' Room at the New Palace of Westminster. Subsequently the Prince and Princess, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, went to the training-ground of the Royal and Hon. Artillery Company, where they likewise inspected the corps. The Princess presented new colours to the regiment. In the evening their Royal Highnesses were present at the state ball at Buckingham Palace.

On Thursday morn ing the Prince and Princess of Wales left London on a visit to Harrow, to listen to the speeches which are annually delivered at the celebrated school there.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

His Excellency Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne entertained a distinguished circle at dinner on Monday evening at the Prussian Embassy.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and Miss Longley had an evening party on Monday at Lambeth Palace. The reunion was numerously attended.

The Archbishop of York and Mrs. Thomson entertained the Archbishop of Canterbury and a select circle at dinner, on Wednesday evening, at their residence in Belgrave-square.

The Duke and Duchess of Wellington gave a grand dinner on Thursday evening week, at Apsley House, to the Duchess of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and a distinguished circle of the nobility, her Grace held a small reception.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge gave a banquet to the Prince and Princess of Wales and a distinguished circle on Friday evening week at Devonshire House, succeeded by a grand ball in honour of their Royal Highnesses, which was attended by the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, the Duke of Cambridge and Princess Mary, Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg, and a brilliant assemblage of the elite of the aristocracy. The ball was opened with a quadrille by the Prince of Wales and Princess Louis of Hesse, and the Princess of Wales and the Marquis of Hartington.

The Duchess of Somerset gave a ball on Monday night at the Admiralty. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a numerous and distinguished company were present.

The Duchess (Dowager) of Sutherland had a select party on Tuesday afternoon at Chiswick House.

The Duchess of Inverness entertained the Duchess of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Princess Mary, and a select circle at dinner on Friday week at Kensington Palace.

The Duchess of Buccleuch gave her second assembly on Thursday evening. The reunion was numerously and fashionably attended.

The Duchess of Argyll entertained the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and a select circle at dinner on Tuesday evening. Her Ladyship had a reception after dinner.

The Marchioness of Downshire had an afternoon musical party, on Thursday week, at the family residence in Belgrave-square. The Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and nearly 200 members of the fashionable world were present.

The Marchioness of Abercorn entertained the Duke of Cambridge, Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and a select circle at dinner on Monday evening, at their residence in St. James's-square. Later in the evening her Ladyship had an assembly, which was numerously and fashionably attended.

Earl and Countess De Grey had a dinner party, on Saturday last, at their residence in Carlton-gardens.

Countess Stanhope had an evening party, on Tuesday night, at the family mansion in Grosvenor-place, the reunion was attended by a numerous assemblage of the political and fashionable upper circles. Her Ladyship received the noble Earl and Countess entertained a select circle at dinner.

The Countess of Cowley entertained a distinguished company at dinner, on Monday evening, at their residence in Arlington-street.

The Countess of Cowley had a small party, on Thursday evening, at her residence in South Audley-street.

Viscountess Palmerston had a large party, on Saturday last, at Brocket Hall Herts.

Viscount Sydney entertained a select circle at dinner on Saturday last at his house in Cleveland-square.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster and Lady Augusta Stanley entertained a distinguished company at dinner on Saturday last. Later in the evening Lady Augusta Stanley received company.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.

On Thursday Mr. Thynne, eldest son of the Rev. Lord John Thynne, Sub-Dean of Westminster, was married, in Westminster Abbey, to Miss Edith Dean of Westminster, was married, in Westminster Abbey, to Miss Edith Dean, by the Rev. R. B. Sheridan, M.P. for Dorchester. The service was performed chiefly by the Rev. Lord John Thynne and his son, the Rev. A. C. Thynne, Rector of Kirkhampton, Cornwall, being the officiating clergyman.

A marriage is arranged between the Hon. Reginald Denison, second daughter of Lord Stanley of Alderley, and Hon. George Howard, son of the Hon. Charles Howard, and nephew of Lord Carlisle; also between Lady Muriel Campbell, daughter of Lord Cawdor, and Mr. Robert Arkwright; and also between Miss Peel, second daughter of General and Lady Alice Peel, and Mr. Michael Biddulph.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Bishop of Chichester consecrated the new church of the Holy Trinity in the parish of Hove, near Brighton, on the 15th ult.

The Church of All Saints at Milton Keynes, in Buckinghamshire, was reopened on the 18th ult. by the Bishop of Oxford, after a thorough restoration.

Steps having been taken by the inhabitants of Bolton to collect a fund to erect a parish church, a subscription list was begun at home on Tuesday, has offered to do so at an expense of £10,000.

The Rev. J. E. Kempe, M.A., Prebendary of St. Paul's Cathedral and Rector of St. James's, Westminster, has been gazetted Chaplain to the Queen, on the vacancy occasioned by the death of Dr. Dorrien.

On Wednesday the ancient parish church of St. Peter, Old Windsor, the restoration of which is approaching completion, was reopened with the usual ceremonial by the Bishop of Oxford.

The first general meeting of the South Shropshire Choral Union was held at Ludlow on Wednesday week, and a choral service given in the new Congregational Church, Broad-street.

The Lower House of Convocation of the province of Canterbury has been occupied, in a quiet way, with the consideration of the resolution of the Upper House to synodically condemn "Essays and Reviews." The principal opponents of the vote were the Dean of Westminster and Canon Blakeley.

The Bishop of Winchester, on Tuesday, consecrated the new church of St. Peter, which has been erected on the site of the old Vauxhall-gardens. A district has been assigned to the new church out of the parish of St. Mary's, Lambeth, and the Rev. John Rooke, Rector of Wonston, and Vicar of St. Mary's, Stoke-holds, has been appointed to the incumbency.

At the Judicial Committee of Privy Council, on Thursday week, there was an ex-parte hearing of a petition on the part of Bishop Gray Twelve Years' Judgment deposing the petitioner. The petition was ordered to stand over till the Court of Arches had delivered judgment.

The following are the preachers appointed by the Bishop of London to preach in St. Paul's Cathedral on Sunday mornings this month:—Sunday, July 3, Rev. Robert Gregory, Rector of St. Mary's, Bryanston-square; 10, Rev. Robert George Bather, Vicar of All Saints, Pelham; 17, Rev. Thomas Jackson, Rector of Stoke Newington; 24, Rev. Edward Smith; 31, Rev. Thomas Rooke, Rector of St. Gabriel, Fenchurch.

The following are the preachers at the Special Evening Lectures in connection with the Church Institution, at St. Bride's Temple, Head Master of Rugby; 10, the Bishop of Ripon; 17, the Rev. T. L. Claughton, Vicar of St. Mary's, Reading; 24, the Rev. Prebendary Row, of St. John's, Paddington; 31, the Rev. H. Twells, Head Master of the Godolphin School, Hammersmith, Middlesex.

In Canterbury Cathedral, on Wednesday, the Rev. Francis Jerome, D.C.L., late Dean of Lincoln, was consecrated Bishop of Aucklan the Metropolitan of New Zealand, assisted by the Bishops of Lincoln, Gloucester and Bristol, Chichester, Oxford, and Rochester, the Principal of the Training College, Cheltenham, to the Bishoprics of Grahamstown, Cape Town, and Natal respectively, and the Bishop Designate of the Niger territory. The ceremony was witnessed by a large congregation. The Rev. Dr. Jerome was presented by Archdeacon Harrison, and the Rev. Dr. Jenner was presented by Archdeacon Sandford, the St. Mary-le-Bow Church, Cheapside.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. D. Mountfield, Rector of Newport, Salop, to be surrogate for the Diocese of Lichfield, vice Lloyd, deceased.—Rev. Thomas Hutchinson, Vicar of Ellel, to be Curate to Ness 586, Manchester; Rev. A. D. Hardisty to Elsternwick Angier, Salisbury.—Rev. Thomas Jones, Chaplain of the Forces, to be Assistant to Rev. W. L. Ingram to Kirk Gorman; Rev. J. Rashcliff to Bamber's Bridge; Rev. Thomas Jones, Chaplain of the Forces, to be Assistant to Rev. J. Lord to Wandsworth, Surrey; Rev. W. King to Thaxted; Rev. G. Lea to St. George's, Hanover-square; Rev. Charles Bowdler to Rev. J. Bowdler, Shrewsbury; Rev. St Chrishtina, Norwich; Rev. W. Rennell, Prebendary of Salisbury Cathedral and Incumbent of St. Thomas, Salisbury, to be Rector of Bishop's Cannings, Wilts. Perpetual Curacies: Rev. T. S. Dalrymple to Ellel, near Lancaster; Rev. W. Tuffill to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. J. Hall to Ellel, near Lancaster; Rev. W. J. Sutton to Islington Chapel; Rev. J. S. Brisbo to St. Matthew, Walsall; Rev. J. Lord to Christ Church, Wandsworth; Rev. Thomas Nevins, St. John's, Paddington; Rev. P. A. Stapley to St. Andrew's, Wellestreet; Rev. W. H. Yeadon to be Curate to the united parishes of Bolton; Rev. Thomas Hutchinson to the curacy of St. Andrew's, King's-cross, to instruct.—Guardian.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND APPOINTMENTS.—The examination for matriculation in the University of London commenced on Monday, in addition to the metropolitan examination, provincial examinations were held at the following places:—Belfast, Queen's College; Cork, Queen's College; Manchester; Queen's College; Birmingham, Queen's College; Bristol, Clifton College; Leeds, Queen's College. The session of 1863-4 to students in the day classes of Queen's College, Belfast, and Queen's College, Cork, was brought to a close on Thursday week. There was a large attendance of visitors, including many Indian and Chinese students. The session of 1864-5 will begin on the first Monday in October.

The vice-principalship of Cuddesdon Theological College has been conferred on the Rev. John R. Wilds, M.A., Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

Last Thursday week Mr. Gladstone opened the new Free Library, Albany-road, Camberwell, in the Lecture Hall of the Camberwell Literary, Scientific, and Mechanics' Institution, Cosely Road, near Edinburgh. The ceremony took place on the 14th ult. The Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Council of Edinburgh, who founded the institution in 1710, was twice Lord Provost of Edinburgh at the beginning of the present century, and was the author of many improvements and reforms adopted in mercantile enterprise, as to endowment for the maintenance and education of youth. In the year 1864 the Council, after having been in existence about 150 years, amounts to nearly £300,000, of which about £50,000 will be expended on the new College.

On Tuesday the boys of University College School presented a handsome testimonial to Mr. Hales, who has resigned the head-mastership of that institution, after a period of service of nearly twenty years.

The Rev. Dr. Cumming presided at a meeting, in the presence of Lord Denbigh, Lord Leigh, Mr. Wise, several other trustees, and a large number of friends, held in the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, on Monday, at which the following gentlemen had gained the calculations:—Messrs. Lloyd, Hanbury, Sharp, Lovell, and Lawrence Hadden.

The principalship of St. Mark's College, Chelsea—an forest vacant by the preferment of the Rev. Derwent Coleridge to the Head-mastership—has been conferred upon the Rev. J. Cromwell, M.A., of University College, Oxford, Principal of the Diocesan Training College, Salisbury.

On Monday the Bishop of Oxford confirmed twenty of the Westminster boys in the Chapel Royal, St. James's, previously to their departure for Harrow.

On Tuesday evening the annual speech-day and distribution of prizes of St. Thomas's Charterhouse, Finsbury, took place, and was presented in the school house in Gowell-street. Sir J. S. Pakington, M.P., presided.

The new bridge erected over the Trent at Burton at a cost of £35,000, to replace the "old Burton Bridge," was opened on Saturday.

A testimonial and a purse of 200 guineas have been presented to the Rev. Dr. Lee, Rector of Lambeth, as a mathematician and scholar, of Manchester, on his retirement from the ministry.

The Rev. Dr. Cumming will preach on the Aberdeen and Inverury Canal, died at Aberdeen, on Tuesday week, aged 102 years. He was a native of Inverury, and was educated within a few miles of the town. He was for many years parish schoolmaster of Kinellar.

The Prince and Princess of Wales having kindly consented to stand sponsors for the Court, have presented him with a handsome silver cup as their christening gift.

Last week an electric cloud broke over Keith and Fife Keith, in a sulphurous rain-pour. The water-tanks gave evidence of this phenomenon by their smell, and the fowls of the air rejoice as much as a sojacco. The little pools by the wayside were all similarly covered.

Her Majesty has appointed the Earl of Fife, K.T., and Orrery to be her Majesty's Lieutenant of the county of Somerset, his Lordship, at the Council Chamber, Whitehall, on the 22nd ult., took and subscribed the oath of allegiance, and was then sworn.

The memorial which has been erected on "The Plains" at Totnes, in memory of the late Mr. Seale, who was a leading member of the Australian explorer, was made over on Wednesday week by the committee to the Mayor of Totnes, Mr. Hine, as a present to the town. It is in the form of a cross, upon which is to be placed a medallion portrait.

An extraordinary general meeting of the proprietors of the Boston, Sleaford, and Midland Counties Railway, was held on Monday, at the Euston Hotel—Mr. Thomas Parry in the chair—for the purpose of confirming a bill to enable the Great Northern Railway Company to extend their railway from Lincoln to the Boston, Sleaford, and Midland Counties Railway, and from Sleaford to the Bourne and Essendine Railway at Bourne, and to authorise the amalgamation of the said two undertakings with the Great Northern Railway." The chairman, in moving the approval of the bill, said that the directors had, after several interviews with the Great Northern, agreed to the amended terms, the latter company to guarantee the Boston, Sleaford, and Midland Company 4½ per cent in perpetuity on an expenditure of £200,000. He then formally moved that the bill be approved of, which was carried unanimously, and the meeting separated.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Yor might have "heard a pin drop," although you could hardly catch the initiatory sentences of Earl Russell, when, in the House of Lords last Monday, he gave the Ministerial explanation of the failure of the Conference. Although everyone knew beforehand that the failure had taken place, still the interest felt in the explanation was as natural as it was wide and deep. It amounted to very little; it existed no longer, but only to the peace of restraint. England, a body amongst nations, sits amidst the potsherds quietly on her own dunghill, and "refrains her tongue," though her heart bears within her. Hercules re-produced for some time between his chaise; why may not John Bull? It is unpleasant to strip and fight when we have all those sons out of our purse and another clear set-to with. Directly we begin to play the hands we shall have a great many kind friends ready to step in and help us with fine gives and donations. How about Gibraltar? We are willing that Canada should go off. How about Ireland? When will John Bull put away his scruples and allow us to live "ancient and lain, his good old plan,"

That they should keep who have the power,
And they should have who can?

France, Prussia, and Spain have given us evidence of the desire and power to take; prey let us show that at least we can keep.

No one knows yet what the nucleus of the Conference will be because they are of such a delicate nature that Mr. Disraeli fears to uncover them lest the dog should kill them. As the Royal Commission meeting in Arlington-street, the greatest which has been held for years, was voice, and let one only, we fear, be open war for the preservation of Denmark; that voice raised murmurs of opposition. To attempt to displace the present Ministry by only promising the country to do the same as they have done, is foolish, a little louder preparation of the primacy of Prussia, will be mere midsummer madness. The historian of the Crimean War will see an unsatisfactory which will entirely negative the Conservative vote of censure on next Monday, if Lord Derby can bring Louis Napoleon to his pocket he will succeed. It is certain that Mr. Kinglake, who has described the French Emperor as "a gloomy sporting man" and has endeavoured to fix him as the most sinister actor in the world, could be selected to oppose his answer shield to Mr. Disraeli's big gun. Is it not plain that Lord Palmerston's speech was a direct reply to those of French interference in this quarrel?

One more "Saturday" common-councilman of New York and correspondent of the Morning Herald, has been summoned before the Military Governor of New York and threatened with arrest. Pointing at the City Hall, he said, "I would like to see him." Well, we all do, some here to the United States than all the New York papers combined. Mr. Seward will have the pride of it when we shall no more be heard thus: "Hark, I faith; why, Manhattan, sometimes north, sometimes south, is the revolving figure of the wicker of an Indian Colossi, because he did his duty in the war; and, although we have several literary M.P.'s, we have no prize speech to show for it. Even if Lord Palmerston cares little for literature, Lord Derby cares less; and yet, surely, a clever editor or writer, who does his duty, keeps people informed, and, above all, protects, defends, when he can, the Constitution, and induces that best obedience to laws which springs only from reason in a man worth doing justice to, is a man not likely to make a fortune, for, "give him but his plaything of a pen," and he is content, and surely a man worthy of reward. One who knew human nature said that and one who physics the mind has a much greater claim. But apparently the cost of this remedy is to be kept at its lowest point—even hundred pounds, instead of £50 and £100 as in the past. All the rewards for literature voted by a Government whose Chancellor of the Exchequer is "a gentleman of twenty-two thousand a year," and who, besides, is an elaborate and "painful" critic of Homer. No wonder the Laureate sings, "Sing, heavenly Muse!" and adds, "Not yet!" No, not if any other priesthood is to be starved," and a very proper answer too.

A wise physician, skilled our wounds to heal,
Is more than armies to the public weal;

Mr. Yates, who the Reader, "with the labour of 'doing' the Royal Academy—&c. &c. &c.," has left to be done by the pencil of another by a common-sense arrangement of the pictures. When will the portraits be hung by themselves? When, indeed! When shall we see "Mayor Mullins" and "Captain Spot, R.A.," in their respective glories relegated to a room by themselves? Then will the painters of genre have the landscape and "gregoire" each passer-by with their "stony British eye."

One is glad to see that the past and present students of Charing-cross Hospital are to have a testimonial, and that Sir Benjamin Brodie, Sir Alexander, Mr. Llewellyn, who went down with that vessel whilst nobly doing his duty. Both Northern and Southern can show their sympathy with the Royal Humane Society, and let the Americans may do it in two places, by either subscribing to the memorial at Chattanooga or to that at Key West, to the little chapel at Key-place which his fellow-townsmen are about to erect.

"Both the Honourable Mr. Pakington, in a debate which was a relief to the perturbed House, "ought to be privileged; they ought not to be put down." The literary and the wooden Punch were the two heroes of the debate, and the latter, with Sir Isaac's music bill—a delate as yet unfinished, but in which it was plain to see that the opposition were in favour of the music and the house and against Mr. Hess. Mrs. Gamp expressed her feeling against music by saying of a sick patient that "she was a-listening to it," which is almost a stronger feeling in favour of the itinerant musician, and we fear that Mr. Bass will lose his bill and his pains.

Mr. Dickens, Jun., of Bedford, who has hitherto remained undistinguished amongst six hundred and fifty-eight representative gentlemen, has had the honour conferred upon whom of a box of such use. The invasion of bricks and mortar upon all sides, the breaking down of that estimable old Bedford row which with British infantry but which is not so with buildings—i.e., the formation of squares, the close packing of streets, and the want of ventilation in houses, form a state of affairs which should be scientifically and thoroughly dealt with. Mr. Dowlton proposes to bring in a bill for remedying the evil, and we hope he may succeed, and that he will do well. One of the finest streets in the world, the New-road, is every day ruined by the encroachment of the gardens or fore-courts being blocked up with shops. Could not Parliament prevent this and plant out those gardens as Bedford-row? When we can ensure health, comfort, cheerfulness, and air for two or three millions of people by an act which costs the country, or the ratepayers, only a few thousands, surely the expense will be the least part. Let Mr. Doulton preserve.

Mr. Bateman's "Idylls of the Hearth," his new poems, including those which appeared in the Cornhill and other magazines, will be published in a short time. The poems have been a long time in type, but the Laureate is, and with reason, a purist in punctuation, and likes to have his proof sheets long in hand to retouch, and, as he has himself said, "to add and alter many times till all be ripe and rotten." In his case everyone will echo the last adjective. Mr. Dickens's explanation of his title "Our Mutual Friend," in which, by-the-way, the scholarly Germans in their translations have utterly rejected the adjective, does not give, as might have been expected, satisfaction to everybody. What is our mutual friend may see for themselves.

KERSTONE STOCKBROKERS IN NEW YORK.—SEE PAGE 11.

THE KEARSARGE.

THE FIGHT BETWEEN THE ALABAMA AND THE KEARSARGE.—SEE PAGE 7.

THE ALABAMA.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

ALTHOUGH to a certain extent the minor has been merged in the major, yet the House of Commons has been contriving to keep its minor well up, in spite of the overshadowing of the major. Naturally, when a Ministerial crisis is impending, there is large interest expended on all the moves connected with it; but, as hitherto the moves have been, so to speak, single and concentrated within brief spaces of time, there has been opportunity enough for the play of legislation, or rather of legislators. For instance, after a stupendous House, which really seemed as if it were bursting with curiosity, whereas in point of fact it knew exactly what was going to happen, was told by Lord Palmerston that, on a future day, he would tell all that was technically not known about the doings of the Conference, a select audience—in the sense of few, and that only—went in for a most trifling matter like national education in Ireland from a very reactsan point of view, and "bogged" over it for about two o'clock in the morning. Then came on the next night, Mr. Morrit's bluff, manly, but by no means unpleasing talk about the repeal of the malt tax, which, it meant nothing, meant a good deal, except that, having in a set position the member for the North Riding, who has hitherto been in the seat of members.

Monday was a great day—a sort of Parliamentary Derby Day. When it is said that the excitement and the crowd inside and outside of the House of Commons was far beyond that on Derby day of the Gladstonian Budget days, some notion may be formed of the character of things by those who have witnessed the gallant struggles for harsh and crabbed Finance was to be made musical. The avenues of both houses were like a fine, fat, succulent plum-pudding for admission into the Commons were seen going, with looks of half resignation, towards the Lords in the hope at least of hearing the platitudinous epigrams of Earl Russell instead of the more serious speech of Lord Palmerston. In the Upper House, as usual, there was the advantage, such as it is, of that variegated and bright-lined row of ladies' faces which is created by the range of ladies in the galleries; and many an eager glance was shot keenly through the interstices of the screens above the canopy of the throne, behind which the Princess of Wales was ensconced, with all auricular advantages for hearing the fact that her country and her parents were given up to the tender mercies of German political bailiffs doing execution, which is not to be tossed down because it is called Federal.

In the Commons the scene was literally tremendous. When the doors were first opened, although the seats were not much occupied, yet the huge line of cordon on the backs of the benches showed the premium for attendance at prayers—that is, the securing of a seat for the evening—had been largely paid. As the members were supposed to be a recess going on which looked very like the abduction of the Sirjasenat-Arms. That functionary was seen to be in close and excited crowd of such a hundred and fifty members, making for the door into the lobby, and holding a folio volume above his head, to which the gentleman were clinging and endeavouring to get by with a game of hob-cherry. The fact was, that there were all applicants for insertion of their names in the book which contains the number of ladies who are to be admitted for the next week or so into the gilded cage in which they see and hear, and where they themselves are seen, though they are often very decidedly heard. Usually the Serjeant discharges this duty in his chair; but now the row was so great that the Speaker was obliged to leave the chair, and he regested about Lord Charles Russell out of the house; and so he was carried off as if by a whirlwind—nobody ever expecting to see him again.

All this while the crowd was swaying about on the floor, and belated individuals were moving about looking for places, and every eye, everywhere meeting with that privileged ticket which speaks so plainly of no room. Up to the gallery rushed the impetuous Mr. Whalley who had failed to secure the chairman; and when they could not get vis-à-vis to the Treasury bench over they went to the other side, compromising for it a letter of Mr. Disraeli's transmitted to Lord Derby, of whose knowledge of how Lord Palmerston looked, and obliged to be content with the contemplation of a voice when he was debarred the the cerolin sentences which anyone else might have delivered although without their factitious authority. It was curious to note how the occupants of the Ministry—the active functionaries in the subordinates of department—whose business it is to "make a House," to keep it in, and to clear it out—found all the members selves of their privilege of seating themselves on the Treasury bench, rushing to such a country cousin as present present might well have been coaxed into the belief that Lord Castlereagh was Secretary for the Colonies, Lord Bury Minister for War, and Lord Derby (if may be information to the world that the country possesses their guardians of the State) Chancellor of the Exchequer. After a special visit to a right Boodleian friend, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Cardwell had to fight for seats. Mr. Peel played "bobbin" between two mere members of the household, Mr. Conway—Kennard had to sit on the steps of the gangway, and, positively, at one time, there was no place at all for the First Minister. However, space was cleared for him by the Whips, which, with a modesty quite peculiar, he did not do until the enormous crowd had somehow or other settled itself in order, and when half the business of the evening were over. At length came a pause and a stillness that were almost painful, they were so intense; it seemed as if everyone held his breath to hear his eyes, not to lose a single syllable of the approaching in surmise." The Premier, with a firm step—wonderful under the circumstances—strode down the bar and announced that "by the command of her Majesty," regained his place, and began in a quiet, business like way to tell his tale. So far the matter was unexceptionable, stating facts and giving history in excellent sequence, and with a simplicity which made everything perfectly intelligible. It was only by the loudest observation that the demeanour of the House could then be elided over weak points and immediately put out strong ones; that ease and vigour covered a multitude of failing of purpose. When Denza, by a sneer at the Germans; and it was only when his speech, as a whole, came to be considered, that it was perceived how completely he had been narrowing down the case of Denmark to such a fine issue that the argument that it was not worth going to war for was almost irresistible. In short, up to the last paragraph the speech was admirable for its purpose; but by some sudden hallucination Lord Palmerston put the case as if he could reconsider the question of going to war actively on behalf of Denmark so oddly, not to say so abominably, that it could only be by supposing he meant to reduce the argument ad absurdum that could be tolerably accounted for. The House was thrown with the gravity of the subject, with the tone of his speech, and accordingly with the temper of the House. It was a serious proceeding, a Parliamentary blunder. It nearly brought Mr. Disraeli into speaking the speech he had been prepared for the great debate which was to be immediately promised, and perhaps if the leader of the Opposition had forced on a discussion and division then he would have stood a better chance of being able to wreak the end of next week, when the question has been talked into tawdry.

The next night there was little excitement, and nothing of an assemblage in particular, to hear Mr. Disraeli give his promised notice of a motion of censure on the Government. That gentleman walked, or rather sauntered, in at the usual hour with a tidy, quiet and unconcerned air, the only peculiarity about him being that, somehow, he had got quite over his right knee with his left, and the only defiant feature about him. There was a good Opposition cheer when the terms of his motion were heard, and then everyone turned to little matters and routine affairs. With a certain forethought, and, as it were, with a view to practising the movement, Government went into training for defeat. The first lesson was certainly a hard one; for they suffered themselves to be soundly thrashed—of all things in the world—by a metropolitan member, and he the very last accession to the ranks of that "peccaverunt" body. As a specimen of how pat a thing can be when he is speaking of what he understands, consumed us to General Peel's speech on the breeding of horses; and if anyone wished to see how thoroughly well the upper ten thousand are represented in the Commons, he should have attended the amazing ó bate on the bill to put down street music.

The 2nd Surrey Artillery Volunteer Field Brigade mustered on Tuesday in great force, in the Major-Commandant's grounds, to receive a battery of fourteen field guns, presented to the corps by Mr. William Waterman, of Shirley, near Southampton.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE CONFERENCE.—MINISTERIAL STATEMENT.

The Lord Chancellor took his seat on the woolsack at five o'clock. At that time there were a large number of Peers upon both the Ministerial and the Opposition benches, but shortly afterwards the space around the throne, and at the foot of the throne became crowded with distinguished strangers, and the seats within the bar and the side galleries were filled with Peeresses. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge occupied seats upon the first of the cross benches on the right of the throne, and the Duchess of Inverness a small private gallery at the back of the throne.

Lord Wodehouse, on the table presented several papers connected with the Conference, and made a statement substantially similar to that which the Premier made in the Commons. The noble Earl added that, at the last meeting of the Conference, Count Bernstorff, the Prussian Minister, had declared that it was not intended to carry on hostilities for the purpose of obtaining territorial aggrandisement. The Duke of Schleswig was not to belong to any other country, and the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, her Majesty's Government could not accept that declaration as one upon which they could rely, and they were not aware that circumstances had arisen since that the Powers had already committed. He did not consider that our honour in any way required that we should take part in the present quarrel. All that could have been given that we intended to give material aid to Denmark. France and Austria were of the same opinion, and if they were not, they could not do so alone our mercantile marine would be exposed to great depredations; and under no circumstances could her Majesty's Government undertake that it would be in vain. In considering the question, we had to bear in mind the position and influence of the country with all its complicated and multiplied connections in every part of the world. The civil war in America might end at any moment, and the consequences of the present unsettled state of affairs might end at any moment, and the consequences of the present unsettled state of affairs might at any time be liable to a rupture. Under these circumstances, the Government considered it to be their duty to preserve a neutral attitude, although he did not mean to imply that continental affairs might not have to render a different course necessary.

The Earl of DERBY, while deprecating premature discussion on the subject, said, he could not but regret the determination at which her Majesty's Government had arrived. From the time it commenced its sittings it had been a doomed assembly, and it was impossible that it could have had the slightest effect upon the deliberations. The Government now appeared to be earnestly desirous to avoid any responsibility with which the conduct of the war might be connected, inconsistent with that object. It would be the duty of Parliament and the country shortly to consider the whole international position of this country and of England, and whether the Continental difficulties which had arisen were such as to call upon us to take part in the present struggle.

After a few words from Earl Granville and Lord Brougham the subject dropped.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Superannuation (Clerks of the Peace, &c. Civil Courts (Ireland) Bill, the Servants' Hiring (Scotland) Bill, and the Coventry Free Grammar School Bill were read a third time.

The Army Prize Bill and the Countess of Elgin and Kincardine Bill passed through Committee.

The Beerhouses (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

THE CONFERENCE.—MINISTERIAL STATEMENT.

The Speaker took the chair at four o'clock. The House of Commons was got through amidst considerable excitement, and the presentation of petitions was unusually brief. Mr. Hennessy presented a petition from the Fenian prisoners, and the eagerness with which the Ministerial explanations were awaited, was evinced by the fact that the house, and the corridors and lobbies were occupied; the members' galleries on both sides were filled; while the Speaker's gallery was crowded with ladies, and the side galleries and the Speaker's galleries upstairs, and the further gallery allotted to strangers, were also densely crowded. Outside the House itself the lobby in front was also an immense concourse of persons anxious to obtain the first intelligence of the decision of the Conference. The protocols of Danish questions and the papers to the House of Parliament had been from an early hour of the afternoon in course of delivery to honourable members and strangers in the lobby.

Lord PALMERSTON, on entering the house shortly before five, was received with loud cheers. He said—Sir, I have to inform the House that the last of the protocols and papers of the Conference on the table, and that, in conformity with the understanding which I had with honourable gentlemen, I will now lay before the House a statement of the proceedings which have taken place at the Conference. The Conference met on the 25th of April, and the plenipotentiaries of Denmark would do her honour in all time. He did not, however, rise to express his admiration of her bravery, but to state that the Conference having come to an end, the papers which he laid upon the table would at once be placed in the hands of hon. gentlemen. The House, however, would, perhaps, consent to give an outline of the circumstances which had led to the Treaty of London, and to the proceedings which had taken place at the Conference. During that period the neutral Powers—namely, France, Russia, Great Britain, and Sweden—had been constantly acting in concert, and the same arrangement by which peace might be restored. Ultimately the line of the Eider was agreed upon as the limit between the German Confederation and Denmark. To this, however, Germany would not agree, although for obvious reasons Denmark was willing to accept it. Germany wished to have the line of the Schlei, which would have given to the inhabitants of the Danish district to ascertain their relative nationality and what were their wishes in regard to the question. Germany, however, by Denmark or by Europe, would not agree to this suggestion, but it was negatived by Denmark. The labours of the Conference were then directed to the question of the integrity of the Danish monarchy, and the arrangement to which that course they ought to adopt. They felt that, although the Duchies of Holstein and Lauenburg were German, they were not on that account overwhelmed right; and that the whole sympathy of the British nation had been given to Denmark in the struggle. Those circumstances, he thought, had been glad to have recommended the Sovereign to take part with Denmark in the Conference, and to have concluded the Treaty of London, which was originally seen in the wrong; that she had rejected a proposal which might be to the advantage of Germany, and had thereby placed herself in a position which no doubt were satisfactory to themselves, were indisposed to give any assistance to Denmark. Under these circumstances, he was not aware that it was his duty to dislodge the Germans from Schleswig and Holstein would fall upon England. Her Majesty's Government, therefore, felt that they would not be doing their duty to advise the Queen to undertake such an enterprise. He did not think that it was the interest of England to support the claims of the Government of Denmark were at stake—if Copenhagen were subjected to the horrors of an assault. The Government, however, were not without hope that the neutral Powers might be induced to reconsider the matter and submit their policy for the consideration of Parliament.

Mr. DISRAELI wished to remind the House of the exact position in which it was placed by the statement that we had heard. It was not a question of responsibility whatever on the subject. The Conference had not been called by the neutral European Powers, but by Denmark, and that one Great Britain. It had not without hope, to separate without hope; it not without hope that the Conference would be successful, and that peace would be restored, but now arrived when the House should give some opinion, and he confessed he entertained a hope that a claim to the respect of the country if it evaded that responsibility. He therefore gave notice that on the earliest possible day he should call the attention of the House to the policy pursued by the Government. He would have contented himself with this announcement but for the observations which had been made by the noble Lord at the head of the Government. He confessed he heard those words with astonishment. Was the noble Lord prepared to say that the House of Commons had only that day to meet day by day, independently of the Kingdom? If so, how came it that her Majesty's Government had declared that the question was connected with the honour of the country, and with the maintenance of the balance of power and the maintenance of public law in Europe? For his own part, he could only say that the House of Commons was the representative of the spirit and the spiritless manners which had impaired the just influence of the country in the councils of Europe. He had given notice of his motion for the purpose of obtaining peace. Such language was altogether unworthy of a great Minister. He did not wish to say more than to add that he should not be induced or even prevented by Mess. Colden and Bright, for they would not have threatened the House if they would not have told Denmark that, if she were attacked, she would not be alone. They would not have exasperated Germany and lured on Denmark by delusive counsels and delusive hopes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, and was engaged for some time in discussing the Civil Service Estimates.

The Factory Acts Extension Bill passed through Committee.

The Railway Construction Facilities Bill and the Chimney Sweepers Regulation Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Contagious Diseases Bill, the Sheriff Substitute (Scotland) Bill, the Beerhouses (No. 2) Bill, and the Mortgage Debentures Bill were severally read a second time.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Commons' amendments on the Chief Rents (Ireland) Bill were considered and agreed to.

The Brehon Bonds and Rents Bill was negatived on the second reading.

The Valuation of Rateable Property (Ireland) Bill, the Cathedral Mineral Exemption Bill, the Pilotage Order Confirmation Bill, and the Poor and Harbours Orders Confirmation Bill were read a second time.

The County Constabulary Superannuation Bill and the Coventry Free Grammar-school Bill passed through Committee.

The Army Prize (Arrears of Bounty) Bill and the Countess of Elgin's Annuity Bill were read a third time and passed.

BRAZIL AND THE SLAVE TRADE.—Lord BROUGHAM directed attention to the state of the slave trade with reference to Brazil, and congratulated the House upon the fact that the abominable traffic had entirely ceased so far as that country was concerned. As an acknowledgment of the conduct of the Government and people of Brazil, he should call the pledge that the Aberdeen Act should be repealed as soon as the Brazilian slave trade had ceased ought to be redeemed, and in the present Majesty's Government would not have the opportunity then offered of restoring friendly intercourse with Brazil.—Earl GREY said that the Aberdeen Act was a very severe measure; but as long as there was no slave trade it was inoperative. A party, however, might come into office who was ultimately to withdraw, and he could not see that the present was a favourable moment to take the course suggested by the noble Lord, inasmuch as Brazil had thought fit to suspend diplomatic relations with this country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

Mr. Bruce obtained leave to bring in a bill to place seamen, young persons, and children in the employment of hawkers, hookers, and seakeep-ing and pickers in workhouses under the Merchant Shipping Acts and Passing Weeks Act.

Sir C. O'Loghlen obtained leave to amend the Election Petition Act, 1848, in certain particulars.

The Thames Conservancy Bill, the Lunacy (Scotland) Bill, and the Administration of Trusts Bill severally passed through Committee.

QUEEN'S WESTMINSTER RIFLES.—Mr. WYNDHAM moved that the portion of Petts should be discontinued, as it no longer encouraged the breed of good horses.—The motion was withdrawn, after explanations had given rise to a discussion on British horsebeds, in which Mr. Newdegate, Sir H. Peel, General Peel, and Lord Elcho took part.

COLONIAL GOVERNORS.—Mr. R. COCKBANE moved for correspondence relating to the granting to certain colonial governors a pension, and upon an explanation from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the Government would be prepared with a statement on the subject next Session, the motion was withdrawn.

FRENCH AIR IN LONDON.—Mr. DOULTON called attention to the gradual diminution of open spaces in and around London, and moved that it was the duty of Parliament to provide for the preservation of such spaces within the limits stated in the fourteenth section of the Inclosure Act of 1845.—The motion was agreed to by 101 to 71.—The House then went into Committee on Mr. Ayrton's Bill to amend the Act 16 Victoria, and on a division was carried against the Government by 104 to 101.

VOTE OF CENSURE.

Mr. DISRAELI said,—I am about to refer to her Majesty's Government if I state that it is my intention to propose, on Monday next, the following address to the Crown:—"That this House humbly begs that, pending the correspondence on Denmark and Germany, and the protocols of the Conference recently held in London for the settlement of those questions, no steps have been taken by her Majesty's Government calculated to change the integrity of the Danish monarchy as a whole without the previous consent of Parliament, and that no engagement has been entered into by her Majesty's Government for the cession of any portion of the territories of that monarchy to any foreign Power which it may be proposed to transfer to such Power by the Treaty of Peace." The announcement was greeted with a prolonged cheering from the Conservative benches.

Mr. KINGLAKE: Sir, I beg to give notice that it is my intention to move an amendment to the motion of the right hon. gentleman opposite that part which I propose to give the words to-morrow (Cries of "Oh!") and including from the commencement to the words "Parliament" by expunging them from the Ministerial side of the house.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The report of the Customs Duties Bill (No. 2) was brought up and agreed to.

The Genoa Bill was committed pro forma.

The Weights and Measures (Ireland) Bill and the Settled Estates Amendment Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Trade Abolition (Ireland) Bill was passed through Committee without opposition; but Mr. Selwyn gave notice that on the motion for the third reading of the bill he should move that it be read that day six months.

THE OPPOSITION AND THE MINISTRY.

Mr. KINGLAKE placed upon the paper of the House of Commons a notice that, in the event of the Government failing to obtain from Austria and Prussia by the war now going on between Denmark and the German Powers."

Mr. HENNESSY moved the second reading of the Poor Law (Ireland) Acts Amendment Bill, the object of which was to give powers to guardians to relet to able-bodied paupers in Ireland, the bill being permissive only, and not compulsory, in its provisions.

Lord NAAS stated that the principle on which the bill was founded was distinctly recognised by the Act of 1862, which enacted which considered the subject some short time ago, and nothing had occurred since to justify any change in the decision then arrived at. He, on the part of the Government, opposed the poor-law system of England and Ireland. He moved the rejection of the bill.

Mr. Bagwell opposed and Mr. Pollatt-Urquhart supported the measure.

Sir R. Peel thought the House should not be asked to assent to or oppose the bill that he hoped it would not be pressed to a division. He objected to the measure if there was any desire or disposition to relieve the poor of poor relief in Ireland, but to change the whole basis of the system which had now hitherto adopted, and to which the country owed so much of the prosperity of Ireland.

After a discussion, which was carried on wholly by Irish members, the second reading was negatived by 201 to 24.

THE STREET MUSIC NUISANCE.

The Street Music (Metropolis) Bill was taken in Committee.

Mr. AYRTON took occasion to say that his measure, considering that it was one by which, in order to minister to the sensitive nerves of a few hundred persons, the street of the three millions would be deprived of a source of amusement which they liked; and the result of stopping street music would be that the poorer classes would be driven by public-house to other music. The operation of the bill should be confined to limiting the right of persons to stop street music only to the hours of 12 and 6 o'clock, and he moved an amendment accordingly. An animated and amusing debate followed, in which Mr. Ayrton, Mr. Locke, and Mr. Bramwell of Mr. Ayrton's side replied to 201 to 87.

Sir C. BRUCE moved to insert words giving discretion to the magistrate before whom a street musician shall be convicted to order that the party so convicted be imprisoned for any time not exceeding three days.—A division was taken, and the amendment was carried by 121 to 111.

Mr. AYRTON moved that the penalty upon a street musician not removing when warned be taken into custody without a warrant should be struck out.

Mr. BUTT having attempted to address the House, and not obtaining a hearing, moved to report progress, and the House did so, whereupon the motion was rejected by 176 to 94.

A division was taken upon Mr. Ayrton's amendment, which was rejected by 191 to 68.

Sir G. GREY moved to insert in the clause authorising the removal of a street musician the words "in view of the constable."—A division was taken, and the amendment was carried by 124 to 111.

The Chairman then reported progress.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The Royal Assent was given to the Commission to the following bills:—Countess of Elgin's Annuity, Fish Trends (Scotland), Vacating Seats (House of Commons), Banking (Ireland) Amendment, Chimney Sweepers' Regulation, Chief Rents (Ireland), Army Prize (Shares of Deceased), and a great number of private bills.

The Oyster Fishery Bill was discharged.

The Government Annuities Bill was read a second time.

AGRARIAN OUTRAGES IN IRELAND.—The EARL of DONOUGHMORE moved the following resolution:—"That in order to suppress the crimes and agrarian outrages prevail in certain counties in Ireland, and the difficulty which exists in obtaining convictions for those offences, it is the opinion of this House that the power of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to remit the whole or portion of the sentences of persons convicted of such offences should be limited to the greater case and circumspection; and that the House observes with regret that the Lord Lieutenant has recently authorised the release of Michael Dolgan, Patrick Dolgan, and Patrick Egan, persons under sentence for an agrarian offence, without the concurrence of Westmeath upon grounds which appear to be insufficient."—The EARL of CARLISLE said that their Lordships would not give their assent to a motion which interfered with the Royal prerogative of the exercise of mercy until the case of which it had been established, or unless it could be shown that the Lord Lieutenant had been influenced by corrupt motives. As to the cases cited by the noble Lord, it was clear that the Lord Lieutenant had acted to the best of his judgment, and had very carefully exercised the Royal prerogative.—After a few words from the Marquis of Westmeath, the Earl of Leitrim, and Lord Chelmsford, the motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart., took the oaths and his seat for North Durham, in the room of Lord A. Vane Tempest, deceased.

The Durham University Bill was read a third time and passed.

ENDOWED SCHOOLS.—Sir J. PAKINGTON rose to move the following resolution:—"That, in the opinion of this House, the mode in which it is proposed by the minute of the 11th of March, 1864, to make grants to endowed schools, and the distinction made by the same minute, between endowed schools in the country and in towns, are unsatisfactory and unjust."—The SPEAKER ruled that the resolution was substantially the same as that which had been moved by Mr. Adderley, and already negatived by the House this Session.—Sir J. PAKINGTON said he at once bowed to this opinion, but he wished to intimate to the Government that they must not consider the question to be finally disposed of.

EDUCATION VOTE.—The House then went into Committee of Supply.—Mr. BRUCE stated that the vote he placed at the disposal of the Committee of the Privy Council for Education. He was a very favorable report as to the operation of the revised code, stating that the total number of children in the schools receiving State assistance last year was 1,191,107, being an increase of 107,000 over the number of 1863. Compared with the sum granted for buildings, by which is to be understood the whole accommodation provided for 1,512,000 children. It might be interesting to know the progress effected for the subject of the Forty Council. In 1854 the number of children under the supervision of the Privy Council was 1,192,000, and the accommodation for 578,000 children; in 1861, 1,396,000; and in 1863, 1,512,000. The amount of the vote was in 1854 £100,000; in 1861 it had risen to £261,000, the highest sum ever granted; in 1863 it was £701,000, and this year it was £705,404. Last year was the first in which the examinations had been carried on under the revised code, and the results were most satisfactory, as showing that great attention was being paid to those respects in which the Royal Commissioners had pointed out such great deficiencies. The hon. member then read the accounting details with respect to the character and nature of the examinations. The result was that out of 628 schools, from which 20,000 children were presented for examination, the failures were 17 per cent. After a lengthened discussion the vote was agreed to.

The next vote, £37 800 for Science and Art, was also moved to.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

MR. CARTWRIGHT, with his Bloomer family, was quite the hero of the Hurstpierre Show Thursday. Young Rapid was mated with the bell sang for the Stockbridge Biennial, and therefore the beating which he scorned Roy Boy was inflicted on him by Cartwright's mare. Cambuscan was rather a better favourite than Ely, but he "cracked" at the stand, and the Champagne winner scored his second rich victory this year. The chestnut was once more ridden in the Scarborough colours, so, of course, he has been "re-spreadeagled." His noble owner does not evince much sympathy on his Derby disappointment, and we shall see whether Amphitheon does any better for "the confederacy." Kuruig, by-the-bye, useful colt, was only handicapped by five pounds. Trimbe, The Lambton blood pulled off six races during the week; and General Hess—so dear to Sam Rogers—broke down at last. John Osborne was as effective as ever with his two-year-olds at Waverley, where the Whitewall stable carried off three handicaps for Mr. Bowes; but the Gretna-bred black was also to the front. The Northumberland and North Derby and Queen's Plate at Newcastle. The Northumberland Plate has been signalised by the scratching of the horses, whose Avenue Swell" to the Jewish dealer in cast-off clothes, besiege the doors of the sale-rooms; and the first person who comes out is assailed with frantic shrieks of "What's Eric?" "How 's Rock Island?" and, more than all, "Where's Gold?" Those points having been ascertained, there is a furious melée of pecuniary propositions; purchases and sales are transacted between individuals who, up to that moment, have never seen each other, and who may never meet again; for the gainer in the bargain does not always succeed next day in his search for the loser. "Representative men" of all types shoulder one another, and scream themselves hoarse in eager endeavours to outbid or undersell their loud-voiced competitors. It is a frantic orgie, in which the lust of lucre reigns supreme. Our Engraving represents William-street, looking southward, from its junction with Exchange-place. On the left is the entrance to the Public Stock Exchange. Further down is seen the "fork" of South William, Beaver, and Hanover streets; and, on the right, at the junction of Beaver and Hanover streets, is the "down town" establishment of Delmonico, the great "restaurateur" of New York. The central building in the background is occupied by a firm of railway agents and a sign-painter, whose joint enterprise has rendered the edifice a wonder of lettered iridescence. Warehouses of different descriptions continue the vista, and extend to the wharves along the southern and eastern sides of the city.

THE AMERICAN MAIL STEAMER AT ROCHE'S POINT.

EVERY reader of the London morning papers is accustomed at the present time to look for some exciting news of the American war in that column of large type and short paragraphs which is headed "By Electric and International Telegraph, via Roche's Point," with the name, perhaps, of one of the Cunard line of steamers, which may be half way up St. George's Channel, on her way to Liverpool, at the moment when this intelligence meets the reader's eye. We have engraved a Sketch of the Scotia lying off Roche's Point, at the entrance of Queenstown Harbour, where she is met by one or two small boats, to bring the telegraphic despatches to land, when not a moment is lost in transmitting their message by the electric wire to London, Liverpool, and every other place concerned in obtaining the earliest American news. At the same time, a portion of the mails are taken by the Jackal tender, which is also shown in our Engraving, and conveyed up the harbour to be forwarded by railway from Cork.

OPENING OF THE WORKING MEN'S HALL AT EASTBOURNE.

WE present a View of the Workmen's Hall which has lately been built, at the expense of Mr. W. Leaf, of Streatham, on ground bestowed by the Duke of Devonshire, in the pleasant and improving town of Eastbourne. The opening ceremony took place on Thursday, the 9th inst., with a procession through the principal streets, and a large and influential meeting at the hall, where the Duke of Devonshire delivered the inaugural address; Mr. Leaf was also present. Among other gentlemen who took part in the proceedings were the Rev. Henry Solly, secretary of the Working Men's Club and Institute Union, some of whose recommendations have been adopted in the plan of the Eastbourne Hall; Mr. Samuel Bowley, of Gloucestershire, a well-known advocate of temperance and popular education; Dr. Hayman, chairman of the local committee; and Messrs. G. A. Wallis and James Dexter, active promoters of the institution. The formal opening, on Thursday morning, was succeeded by ten-meetings on the Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, with suitable addresses or speeches, and a concert on the Monday evening.

WORKING-MEN'S HALL LATELY ERECTED AT EASTBOURNE.

The new building, engraved from a photograph taken by Mr. G. W. Hale, occupies a corner plot of ground in the Seaside-road, about midway between the Anchor Hotel and Ordnance-yard, presented by the Duke of Devonshire, and has a frontage of 42 ft. by a depth of 156 ft. The style of the architecture is Continental Gothic, and the edifice is built of red, white, and black brick, with Bath stone windows and doors. The design includes a tower, which occupies the south-east angle of the building, and through which is the principal entrance. The building affords the following accommodation—viz., public coffee-room, library and reading-room, serving-bar, smoking-room, kitchen and hot closet, and the means of cooking for about 200 people, when required; large lecture-hall, capable of accommodating 300 persons, with gallery opening into it for orchestra; retiring-room for lecturer, and private staircase. This hall is lighted by windows at each end and skylights in the open-timber roof. The premises also afford a yard for a skittle-alley, a place for smoking out of doors, and lavatories. The architect was Mr. R. K. Blessley; the builder, Mr. W. H. Standing, of Eastbourne.

It may be well here to notice the completion of a great public improvement in this picturesque and salubrious town. The Esplanade has now been extended westward a further length of 700 yards, making the New Parade more than 1000 yards long, and affording with the Old Parade, a continuous paved walk of 1300 yards. Drainage works, costing above £10,000, have been commenced, and partly executed, which will carry the sewage of Eastbourne to an outfall two miles beyond the eastern end of the town. The number of handsome villas lately erected in the place shows that its advantages are appreciated; and a large mansion has just been engaged by the Sisters of Mercy of All Saints', Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, to serve as a sanitorium for the invalids under their care.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

THE caprices of the Paris fashions are becoming more and more eccentric, and there has been such a succession of cosmopolitan innovations, from English jockey caps to Russian boots, that the present summer attire is anything but Parisian. The liberty of this period of the season, when most people are departing for their château or for the fashionable watering-places, has undoubtedly something to do with these extravagant changes of costume, which are neither disagreeable nor unbecoming in young persons, but which place elderly ladies and regularity-loving dowagers in the dilemma of either following the variableness of the modes, which is not quite suitable to their years, or of remaining à l'ordinaire, a course that might also be attended with ridicule. The difficulty for such persons is especially great with respect to bonnets and head-dresses. The most elegant Parisiennes are at present satisfied with the slightest covering upon the head. If the bonnet is a real bonnet it will not find favour; it must be something between a cap and a chapeau—soft, light, small, with or without a bavolet, but, at any rate, eccentric, for the fashionable lady. Of course there are prejudiced people who still maintain the superiority of the orthodox article, and, fortunately, in these matters of taste they are allowed to do as they like. The sans-gêne caprice is hourly demonstrated in the choice of dresses; it would seem as though each lady were desirous of inventing, or at least of wearing, something entirely novel in style, so as to appear different from every one else. There are stuffs for cool weather, for rainy weather, for fine weather; and the feminine mind must exert all its ingenuity to satisfy the requirements of these varying situations. If new materials could be invented, the manufacturers' stocks on hand would certainly run the risk of being abandoned to the class of people who are totally indifferent to the laws of fashion. As matters stand, however, silks of light colour, Chambery gauzes, and double barèges, are still in vogue, especially for the costumes of a single colour now so much patronised. We may notice another matter of detail before proceeding with the explanation of our Illustrations. Bottines are now frequently superseded by boots; the Empress's cordonnier manufactures them either in yellow leather or in soft English leather, black, violet, or green, according to the colour of the gowns. It is scarcely necessary to mention that the colour of the stockings should match that of the boots.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

Fig. 1. Dress for the Seaside.—Robe of saffron-coloured taffety, ornamented on the skirt with two passementerie trimmings. The dress is worn over an alpaca jupon, vandyked, and alternating with blue and white stripes. The long vest is provided with blue cuffs and lapels, completed by buttons and brandebourgs. White waistcoat, Louis XV. Tuscan hat, decorated with eagle and ostrich feathers. Lilac bottines russes, with high heels.

THE JACKAL TENDER AND BOATS GOING TO MEET THE AMERICAN MAIL STEAMER AT ROCHE'S POINT, NEAR QUEENSTOWN.

SCENE FROM MR. GEBMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT AT THE GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION.—SEE PAGE 11.

Fig. 2. Dress for a Young Lady.—Silk robe of white spotted foulard. The skirt is trimmed with an ornamental ruching placed between two rows of fluted ribbon; and the basque and sleeves are furnished with a similar ruching. Bonnet of mauve crape, the quiet appearance of which is somewhat enlivened inside and outside by the addition of four white marguérites half buried in the crape.

Fig. 3. Walking Dress.—Dark green silk dress, ornamented with bows of corded silk and tassels; a similar but smaller bow is attached to the shoulder and falls on the sleeve. The collet is of black guipure, forming, with the rich black lace pelerine trimmed with jet, a most elegant pardessus. Black horsehair bonnet, the trimming of which is composed of rich Magenta velvet mixed with black lace and ivy-leaves; a narrow jet fringe descends from the edge of the chapeau.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JULY.

MR. and MRS. ALFRED WIGAN have the honour to announce that their BENEFIT will take place at the ADELPHI THEATRE on SATURDAY, JULY 9. The performances will commence with the new and original drama, entitled MIDGE, in which Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wigan will sustain their original characters; with other Entertainments. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wigan's Reading at Apsley House is postponed until after the above day.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—THE SEVENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is now open at their Gallery, A Pall-mall East (close to the National Gallery), from Nine till Dusk. Admission, One Shilling. Catalogue, Sixpence. JOSEPH J. JENKINS, Secretary.

MR. SIMPSON'S WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS of INDIA, THIBET, and KASHMIR, from the GERMAN GALLERY, 168, New Bond-street, Daily, from Ten till Six o'Clock. Admission One Shilling.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The Thirtieth Annual Exhibition is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 53, PALL-MALL, near St. James's Palace, Daily, from Nine till Dusk. Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.
GEORGE CHRISTIE, Assistant-Secretary.

ON VIEW, the PICTURE of the MARRIAGE of the PRINCE OF WALES, painted, by Command, from sittings, by Mr. C. G. H. THOMAS, who now presents it for the inspection of the Nobility and Gentry, at the ROYAL PANOPTICON GALLERY, 169, New Bond-street, DAILY, from Ten till Six. Admission, 1s.

EXETER HALL.—JUDAS MACCABÆUS. Last Performance this Season by NATIONAL CHORAL SOCIETY, on WEDNESDAY, JULY 6, at Eight. Conductor, Mr. W. T. Wyatt. Principal Vocalists: Mdme. Sainton, Miss Palmer, Mr. Lawler, and Mr. Weiss. Organist, Mr. John Hullah. Doors open, First at Seven. Stalls, 5s.; Second Seats, 3s.; Numbered Seats, 2s.; 3s. 6d., 2s.—24, 15, Exeter Hall.

LAST MONDAY POPULAR CONCERT OF THE SEASON.—The DIRECTOR'S BENEFIT will take place on MONDAY NEXT, JULY 4, when will be performed, for the FINALE, Rossini's—Mdme. Arabella Goddard and Mr. Charles Hallé. Violin—Herr Joachim and M. Wieniawski. Violoncello—Signor Piatti. Violin—Mr. Blagrove and Mr. Sam Reay. Violoncello—Mr. Benedict. The programme will include Mozart's Quartet in E flat, Beethoven's Quartet in C sharp minor, Haydn's Sonata, in B flat, Spohr's Duo, Beethoven's Adelaide, by Sainton or Chappell and Co.'s, 38, New Bond-street; and at Austin's, 28, Piccadilly.

MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY will APPEAR at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, in his New Entertainment, entitled PARIS, AND WHAT I SAW THERE, on MONDAY Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; and Saturday Mornings at Three. Stalls, 3s.; Second Seats, 2s.; Area, 1s. The Box-office at the Hall open between the hours of Eleven and Five daily.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S ELOPEMENT WITH ANTELOPE and RACCOON SUIT—and NEARLY NEW ENTERTAINMENT—EVERY EVENING at EIGHT (except Saturday), at the ST. GEORGE'S GALLERY, 49, Regent-street. Stalls, 1s.; Big Willow-street, Tuesday-next Stalls, 2s. 6d. Amphitheatre, 1s. Private Boxes, £1 1s. A Plan of the Stalls may be seen and seats secured at the Box-office from Ten to Five.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED and MR. CHARLES FARLEY in the TYRANNY of TOM BOWLING, THE BARD of the HOUSEHOLD, and JOHN PEEL'S new song. THE SEASIDE, or MR. Buncle and Mrs. Bond at Bognor. Village of Hermits. Original Entertainment, Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Afternoons at Three.

HORSE SHOW, AGRICULTURAL HALL, London.

HORSE SHOW.—Admission, THIS DAY, Half-a-Crown.

HORSE SHOW.—AGRICULTURAL HALL, London.—Admission, Monday, 4th, Tuesday, 5th, and Wednesday, 6th of July, One Shilling.

HORSE SHOW.—SATURDAY'S PARADE, Saddle Classes, Harness Classes, Jumping, Hack and Harness Classes, Ladies' Special Prize, Jump, 2 in 7 o'Clock—Pemberton Billing, Esq., Worcester Park, Surbiton.

HORSE SHOW.—At 4 p.m. PARADE of PRIZE HORSES.

HORSE SHOW, AGRICULTURAL HALL, LONDON.
SEATS to be had in the Orchestra to VIEW the JUDGING and DAILY PARADE, at the price of 5s.
R. SHERRY, Secretary.

THE EXHIBITION OF SCULPTURE, in Marble, Terra-cotta, &c., with various coloured illustrations, will be OPENED at THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURAL HALL, South Kensington, on WEDNESDAY, JULY 13. Admission 2s. 6d.

ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green, Great Northern Railway.—The Great Archery Meeting of the present season, THE ST. GEORGE'S, will commence on TUESDAY, the 5th instant, for 1,000 PRIZES, given by the Alexandra Park Company, on JULY 6, 7, and 8.
As this is the first time the Association has held the meeting near the metropolis, the attendance is likely to be the largest ever seen on the Archery ground.
The Meeting will be held on the new Cricket-ground at the Park, which is eight acres and a half in extent.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY. EXCURSION TICKETS for ONE MONTH are now issued from PADDINGTON, Victoria, Chelsea, Battersea, Farringdon-street, Kingsbridge, Lower-street, and Kensington-road Stations, to the COASTS of NORMOUT, DEVON, and CORNWALL—viz., Minehead, Ilfracombe, Barnstaple, Bideford, Torrington, Appledore, Clovelly, Bude, Falmouth, Penzance, &c.; to the Watering-Places and Islands, North Wales—Llangollen, Rhyl, Llandudno, Llanrwst, Bangor, Carnarvon, Holyhead, &c.; also to the Isle of Man, Liverpool, South Wales—Neath, Carmarthen, New Milford, Haverfordwest.
Tickets will also be issued for Cromlin Town to North and South Wales.
Bristol, Malvern, and the Vale of the Valley of the Wye, &c.
The English Lake District—Windermere, Ulverston, Coniston, Ambleside, Keswick, &c.
Derwent Water of Killarney, &c.
Programmes, containing fares and full particulars, may be obtained at the Company's Stations and Offices.
Paddington, June, 1864. J. GIBERNE, General Manager.

BRIGHTON and BACK for 3s.

HASTINGS and BACK for 3s. 6d.

PORTSMOUTH and BACK for 3s. 6d.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND, INCORPORATED BY ACT OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY, Empowered to transact Government Business for the Government of New Zealand, Canterbury, Otago, &c.
CAPITAL £500,000. RESERVE FUND, £60,000.

Branches and Agencies in New Zealand:
Auckland	Nicholson	Onehunga	Invercargill
New Plymouth	Lyttelton	Tokomairiro	Riverton
Napier	Akaroa	Wellington	Wanganui
Wellington	Christchurch	Waikouaiti	Nelson
Wanganui	Timaru	Hokitika	Blenheim
Patea	Oamaru	Greymouth	Picton
Hawera	Dunedin	Taviel	Motueka

"The Bank grants Drafts on any of the above-named places in New Zealand, and transacts every description of Banking business connected therewith. Approved Bills discounted, and Advances made upon the Security of Wool, Gold, and other Produce.
J. LANGWORTHY, Manager.
No. 36, Old Broad-street, City. Managing Director.

SMART'S SOLE WRITING INSTITUTION, Corner of Swallow-street, Quadrant, Regent-street. Open from Ten till Seven. Terms, Two Guineas. Lessons, Two Hours each, taught in any Hand by Writing their own examples. Lessons one hour each. No charge. No extra. Improvement guaranteed in Eight to Twelve Easy Lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which alone are admitted. Mr. Smart will attend. Correspondence, Private Lessons, and Schools attended.
N.B.—Agent to the Want of Employment Insurance Company.

NO. 7, BANK-BUILDINGS (corner of Old Jewry, London) is the Chief Office of the ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE COMPANY. J. W. GRAM, Secretary.

NEW BOOKS.
THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

MATTIE: A Stray. By the Author of "No Church," "Owen: A Waif," &c. 3 vols.
A GUARDIAN ANGEL. By the Author of "A Trap to Catch a Sunbeam." 2 vols.
NOT DEAD YET. By J. C. JEAFFRESON, Author of "Live It Down," &c. 3 vols.
ALLEYNE'S ENTANGLEMENTS. A Man of FAMILY. By Lord LINDSAY. 3 vols.
JOHN GREENWOOD. By the Author of "Paul Perrol."
THE LAST OF THE CAVALIERS. By the Author of "Sir Charles," "Barbara's History." By AMELIA B. EDWARDS.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, in 8vo, with Portrait of the Author,
REMINISCENCES OF THE OPERA. By BENJAMIN LUMLEY, 30 years Director of Her Majesty's Theatre.—Part of the contents will appear in Fraser's Magazine for July.

BENTLEY'S NOVELTIES.
Two Illustrations in each volume.
QUITS. By the Author of "Initials" and "At Odds."
EAST LYNNE. By Mrs. WOOD. 3s.
NED LOCKYER AND LITTLE STONEY. 3s.
THE CHANNINGS. By Mrs. WOOD. 6s.
MRS. HALLIBURTON'S TROUBLES. By Mrs. WOOD. 6s.
THE LAST OF THE CAVALIERS. By the Author of "THE INITIALS. By the Author of "Quits" and "At Odds." 6s.
RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street.

At all Libraries, in 3 vols. post 8vo,
NOTHING BUT MONEY WILL SAVE HIM. A Novel. By ANNIE BEALE, Author of "Gladys the Reaper."
RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street.

MR. TYLER'S GYMNASTICS.
GRIPPING and CLIMBING. Illustrated by 74 Engravings, price 1s., by post 13 stamps.
THE NEW SYSTEM OF MUSICAL INSTRUCTION, as practised in the Establishment of Dr. C. TYLER, M.A., M.C.P.—W. TWEEDIE, 337, Strand.

Early in July.
THE PRIZE POEMS receiving the 100 Guineas bestowed by the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, for the Subscription Prize for the Installation, Prize Poem, by Alfred Austin, Esq., M.A., Fellow of New College; Prize Poem, by Edmund Beckett, Esq., M.A., Student of Christ Church.
Just published, fcap 8vo, price 1s., cloth limp,
THE BABE AND THE PRINCESS. A Book of Poems for Children. By the Author of the song, "I'd choose to be a Daisy."
GRIFFITH and FARRAN, Successors to Newbery, St. Paul's-churchyard.

This Day is published, in 2 vols., 8vo, 30s.,
CAROLINE MATILDA, Queen of Denmark, and Sister-Queen of George III. From Secret Sources. By Sir CUTHBERT SHARP, Bart. "Sir Cuthbert Sharp has produced a most interesting book, which will be read with pleasure by all."—Spectator, June 25, 1864.
London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W.

SECOND EDITION.—Now ready, with Frontispiece by P. Gilbert, tinted leaf paper, cross 8vo, price 6s.,
BEAUTIES OF THE SEA: SCENERY, LEGENDS, SKETCHES, and LOVE-SONGS. With Notes. By S. N. BUSHAN.
"This is a most elegant and pleasing volume, both in its external appearance and in the matter which it contains."—Sunday Times.
London: ROBERT HARDWICKE, 192, Piccadilly.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "ELLICE."
On Friday next will be published, in 3 vols.,
THE ATHERSTONE PRIORY. By L. N. COMYN, Author of "Ellice," &c.
London: LONEMAN, GREEN, and Co., Paternoster-row.

This day, post 8vo, cloth, price 7s. 6d.,
NORWAY: THE ROAD AND THE FELL. By CHARLES RICHARDSON, of Queen's College, Oxford.—London and Oxford: JOHN HENRY and JAMES PARKER.

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS for SALE, a period Catalogue of Interesting and Valuable Autographic Books (after Emergency), and of Antiquities and Curiosities (price 20s.), Illustrated Catalogue of Autographs (price 10s. 6d.), LONDON, 1859, 1862, 1863, 1864.—JOHN GRAY, 2, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

NUMISMATIC ATLAS of the ROMAN EMPIRE, with 100 Portraits, engraved from Coins, Rare, 4to, £2. 2s., post-free. 4s. 6d. extra. Catalogue of W. S. LINCOLN and SON, 462, New Oxford-street, London.

Now ready, price 1s.
THE VICTORIA MAGAZINE FOR JULY. Contributed and Principally Edited by Unfortunate Women. EVIS and LOCK, 168, Fleet-street.

JAQUES'S NEW LAWN CROQUET (with Turning Hoops) contains: Seven Mallets, Seven Balls, Boxwood Pegs, Rules, cloth gilt, in box, 21s. "Mr. Jaques' book is a necessity."—Morning Herald.
JAQUES and SON, Hatton-garden, and Leamington, Patentees.

DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions, 6d. Designs from 1s. sheet. Every Material, especially or moulded Surfaces, Glass, Metal, Earthenware, Wood, Leather, &c. STAINED WINDOWS (DIAPHANIE): Instructions, 8d. Class of Interiors (price 1s. sheet). Sold by WILLIAM BARNARD, 10, Cromwell-terrace, London, W.

DR. YEARSLEY'S WORKS on the EAR. Price 2s. each, by post for 24 stamps. On the Artificial Tympanum; 3, On Deafness.
London: 6, New Burlington-street.

HUNT ON STAMMERING.
Just published, a NEW and REVISED EDITION, 2s. 6d., post 8vo, cloth,
ON STAMMERING AND STUTTERING: Their Nature and Treatment.
By JAMES HUNT, Ph.D., F.S.A., &c.,
Author of the "Philosophy of Voice and Speech," &c.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL and SONS, New Burlington-street. From the Author, Gee House, near Dorking.

Second Edition, corrected and revised, post-free, 2d.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.
THE TEETH: A Practical Treatise, with the best means of Rendering them Effective for Life. By A. ROWELL, Inr., Surgeon-Dentist.
"We record a better and more permanent for general use."—Mr. Rakell's treatise, which is so useful as it is unpretending."—Telegraph, June 25, 1864.
London: Longman, Green, and Co., 13, Paternoster-row.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Our thirty-seventh Volume (now in the course of publication) will be completed with the Number for JULY 9. Cases for binding the Volume, 1s. 6d. each; or, by post, 2s. 2d. each. Reading-cases, 1s. 6d. each; or, by post, 2s. 2d. each. Cases and Reading-cases can be had of any Bookseller or Newsvendor, or at the Office, 198, Strand, London, W.C.

CARTES DE VISITE, 12 for 2s. 6d. Forward by return cash in stamps and 24 stamps, with subject to the UNIQUE PHOTOGRAPHIC ASSOCIATION, 31, Southampton-street, Holborn-road, N., and you will receive 12 fine-toned Cartes de Visite, from any Negative you may select from our extensive collection or from your own. WM. H. CHARLESON.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.—The Field Purple Printing Press, price from £1 5s. to £4 4s., for Printing Cards, Circulars, Programmes, Labels, Tickets, Sketch of the Art of Printing, &c., in 11 stamps.—H. G. BERAL, Engraver and Stamp Maker to Her Majesty the Queen, 10, Bow-lane, Cheapside, London, W.C.

TO DRAPERS, MERCHANTS, DEALERS, AND STATIONERS.
C. BRANDAUER & CO., STEEL-PEN MANUFACTURERS, 82 to 86, New Canal-street, Birmingham.

JENNER and KNEWSTUB, to the Queen, and the Princes and Princess of Wales, by their Majesties' Royal Warrants, manufacture every description of Dressing and Writing Bags, Despatch Boxes and Dressing Cases, together with their unequalled assortment of Portable and Mounted Drinking Flasks and Cups for shooting, &c. 12, Jermyn-street; 66 and 67, Jermyn-street.

NEW MUSIC.
ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST of NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.—
LENNY OF THE LEAS. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves by Madame Lemmens-Sherrington. Illustrated. Words and music free. 24 stamps.
"THE SONG OF LOVE AND DEATH." Poetry by Alfred TENNYSON. Music by Miss ELIZABETH A. J. W. HILES. 3s. 6d.
THOU WERT THE FIRST OF ALL I KNEW. Sacred Song. By LOUISA GRAY. 3s. Illustrated. 4s.
LIGHTLY COME, LIGHTLY GO. By the Composer of "The bright smile haunts me still." 3s.
GOSSETTING SO. Ballad. By E. M. LOTT. Poetry by J. E. Carpenter. 3s.
THE WORDS of SERGEANT THE DUKE, and Twelve other Songs, in a Collection of Vocal Music, by the most eminent composers, in a class of Pieces very much in request. Each 2s. 6d.
ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S NEW SACRED MUSIC. For Piano. 3s.
HAMILTON'S PIANO TUTOR. 420th Edition. 4s. Well-bound.
HAMILTON'S
Practical Instructions in Singing. Small and post-free. ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S NEW CATALOGUE OF PART SONGS, GLEES, &c., post-free.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, W.
Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and H.I.M. the Emperor of the French.

NEW SONG, JESSY GRAY, sung by Mr. Sims Reeding, the Music by E. L. HIME. Sent for 15 stamps. A simple and pathetic ballad, which will be a favourite with the ROSE OF CRIMMOND. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeding, the Music by E. L. HIME. Sent for 15 stamps. A simple and pathetic ballad, which will be a favourite with the composers of "Sweet Dreams," "Lenny of the Leas," &c. Elegant and expressive.
DUFF and HODGSON, 99, Oxford-street.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for Piano. By E. L. HIME. Played by Madame Wilde Page before the Queen, and composed by E. L. HIME. Sent for 15 stamps. "Parfait Amour" is a gem."—Vide Press.—"Review. Sent for 15 stamps.—DUFF and HODGSON, 99, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, by SATURNIN GLOVER, for the Piano, one of the best of Glover's celebrated Marches. Sent for 18 stamps.
DUFF and HODGSON, 99, Oxford-street.

Just published, and to be had of COOPER, EBERY and Co., 498, Oxford-street.
MR. DEMPSTER'S MUSIC to the SONGS in the SEASON. Price 2s. 6d. each.
"Mr. Dempster's music to the songs in the season is pleasing."—Morning Post.
"Mr. Dempster's music to the songs in the season is pleasing."—Morning Herald.
"Mr. Dempster's music to the songs in the season is pleasing."—Morning Chronicle.
"Mr. Dempster's music to the songs in the season is pleasing."—Morning Advertiser.
"Mr. Dempster's music to the songs in the season is pleasing."—Morning Star

TOURISTS derive additional pleasure in their rambles when accustomed with MINERALS, ROCKS, and FOSSILS. Mr. TENNANT, Geologist, 149, Strand, Lectures on his practical INSTRUCTION to Ladies and Gentlemen; and, from his extensive museum, can supply specimens of every description. Persons are enabled, in a short or leisurely Visit to London, to identify the characteristics of Rocks and most of the Minerals and Metals used in the Arts. Mr. Tennant can strongly recommend Geological Collections at 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, to 100 guineas each.

HENRY HENDERSON, GOLDSMITH, JEWELLER, and WATCHMAKER, removed from 26 to 25, Prince's Arcade, Piccadilly, has now on Sale some very fine Gold Watches, made by workmen, and under his own care, of the highest quality. Makers' names—Mark, Mudie, Barraud, Hawkes, and Arnold.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDK. HAWLEY (successor to Thomas Hawley), many years with the late Benjamin Lewis Vulliamy, has now Shipley George Fr., Inspector by appointment to the Queen, 31, Old Bond-street. Watches of the highest quality, 45 15s. to 450. Silver Watches, 3l. 3s. to 15l. 15s. Clocks for Dining-room, Library, Bedroom, Drawing-room, and hall-lamps, 42 15s. and upwards. Clocks, Bronzes, Ormolu, and Table

NEW MUSIC.

NEW SONGS BY ROSSINI.

A GRENADE. Arietta Espagnole. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington. Composed by Rossini. With French, Italian, or Spanish words. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LA VEUVE ANDALOUSE. Chanson Espagnole. Sung by Mdlle. Adeline Patti. Composed by Rossini. With French, Italian, or Spanish words. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW ITALIAN SONGS FOR THE DRAWING-ROOM.

MARIANI'S ALBUM VOCALE. Just published,
Sic, I. Di Mia Sanie ! (Serenata.) | No. 5. Dimentigarti !
" 2. L'Addio " 6. Carosello (Stornello.)
" 3. La Ritirochenasa " 7. Il Tramonto in Paris ! "
" 4. La Desolazione " 8. Nel Sole !
Price 2s. 6d. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FOUR ROMANCES by MENDELSSOHN. Transcribed for the voice and adapted to Italian words by Signor MARIANI. Price 4s. 6d. each. No. 1, Se non sa se amarmi (Se mi sai); No. 2, E pena troppo barbara; No. 3, Oh qual fremain di gioia; No. 4, Sol per amarti, sol per penare.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

M. THALBERG'S NEW PIECES.

THALBERG'S BALLO IN MASCHERA. Just published, a charming Fantasia for the Pianoforte on favourite airs from Verdi's Opera, by M. Thalberg. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THALBERG'S RIGOLETTO. Just published, a Fantasia for the Pianoforte, on favourite airs from Verdi's popular Opera, by M. Thalberg. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS." Played by Mdme. Arabella Goddard on the Shakespeare Festival, and other Concerts, with immense success. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S TANNHAUSER.—Just out, a New and Revised Edition for the Pianoforte on favourite airs from Wagner's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBILE.—Just published, Arditi's new Bolero, sung by Mdlles. Tietjens and Vigani with great success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

M. BLUMENTHAL'S NEW PIECES.
Blumenthal's LA BRUNE. Morceau. Price 3s. 6d.
Blumenthal's LA BRUNE. Valse. Price 4s.
Blumenthal's LA BRUNE. Polka. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' "WANDERER IN SEARCH OF A TREASURE." The favourite Song from Benedict's "Richard Cœur de Lion," arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. Just out. One of the best Galops ever published, and beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Fellows, Hi and J. Grinshaw, Wells, Custance, and Challoner. From photographs by Mayoss, of Brighton. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HAPPY MOMENTS WALSE. By GUSTAVE LAMBERT. Just published. Beautifully illustrated. Price 4s. One of the best Waltzes.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE FORGET-ME-NOT WALTZ. By CHARLES D. LAMBERT. Just published. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Princess and Princess of Wales. Just published. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS, Introduced. A set of Lancers, composed on all the popular and merry tunes of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HAHUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASTLEY (Composer of the Rapacious Galop). Just published, exceedingly illustrated. Price 4s.; Duet, 3s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop, by CASTLEY (Composer of the Harum-Scarum Galop). Beautifully illustrated. Price 4s.; Duet or Duett, Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s. Solo, Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

A THOUSAND LEAGUES AWAY. New Song. Written by W. G. HENNET; composed by JOSEPH BARNBY. Price 3s. 6d. Prettily illustrated.
"The wind is blowing fresh, Kate. The white rocks there for me. One kiss and I'm away, Kate, for two long years to-me."
"For thy love, Kate, to think of thy love, I'll brave yon night and day."
To long for you across the sea, a thousand leagues away.
A thousand leagues away, Kate, a thousand leagues away.
While round the pole we toss and roll, a thousand leagues away.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S New SONG, expressly composed for him by Signor MARIO, and rapturously encored, is now ready in C, D, or E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC FOR THE HARMONIUM.
J. LEMMENS.—Sixty Harmonium Pieces for the Drawing-room. Arranged for the Harmonium by J. LEMMENS. Price 4s. Fragments, Performed by the Author, with immense success, Price 4s. each.
No. 1, DUO.—Fantasia, on "Faust," with Piano accompaniment (ad libitum).
Taught from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 26. Price 2s. 6d.
Taught from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 109. Price 2s.
Andante from Beethoven's Sonata, No. 2, op. 14. Price 2s. 6d.
Taught from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 27, No. 2. Price 2s. 6d.
L. Rogely's "Faust," Harmonium and Pianoforte. Price 4s.
L. Rogely's "Faust" (Harmonium Solo). 3s.
L. Rogely's "Le Cœur" (just published). 3s.
S. P. HERBAULT'S PEDAL MECHANICAL PIECES.
1. The Chorale, and other pieces of Church Music from Gounod's "Faust."
2. Grand March, from "Tannhäuser," and Chorus from Act 2.
3. "Virgin Maiden," from Haydn's "Seven Last Words."
4. Air, "Lachrymose," and "Benedictus" from Mozart's "Requiem."
5. "Oh! had I Jubal's Lyre," from Handel's "Joshua."
6. Chorus of Pilgrims, Romance, and March, from Wagner's "Tannhäuser."
7. Andante from Beethoven's Second Symphony.
8. Andante from Haydn's Seventh Symphony.
9. "The Soldiers' Chorus," and "Walpurgis Night," from Gounod's "Faust."
10. "I Know that my Redeemer Liveth," and "The Glory of the Lord," from Handel's "Messiah."
11. "Comfort ye my people," and "Every Valley," from "Elie in Horeb."
12. Air and Two Chorales, from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." Price 4s. each.

WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.

THE RIVER. By C. M. E. OLIVER. Price 2s. 6d. A very pleasing ballad, beautifully illustrated.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ITALIAN OPERAS.—Boxes and Stalls in the best situation for both the Operas. Tickets for every Evening and Season Tickets for the Grand Tier, Pit, and Gallery, obtained of the Agents.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, LA REINE DE SABA.
Complete Opera, for Voice and Piano, 45s.
Book of Airs, by W. H. Callcott, Sols. 3s. ; Duet, 4s.
Valse, par F. Burmuller, 3s.
Quadrilles, par Musard, Sols. 3s. ; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NICOLAI'S MERRY WIVES of WINDSOR. The only authorized edition.
Book of Vocal Pieces ... 6s. ; ... 6s.
Overture ... 6s. ; ... 6s.
Potpourri (for four hands) ... Duet, 4s.
Fantasia on Popular Airs ... F. Beyer. 3s.
Fantasia ... Kuhe. 4s.
Fantasia ... A. Leonhardt. 3s.
" ... C. Genton. 3s.
Fantaisie de Salon ... Thalberg. 4s.
The principal Vocal Pieces, with Italian Words, as sung at Her Majesty's Theatre.
The Fairies' Polka (Illustrated) ... A. Mamm ... 3s.
Set of Waltzes, ... Godfrey. 4s.
" ... C. Coote. 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BRIDE OF SONG. Written in our Air. Written by HENRY FARNIE. Composed by JULES BENEDICT. Price 3s. Duet (Violin and Violoncello), 4s. Trio (Violin, Violoncello, and Piano), 6s. 6d.
1. Duet—Night and Morning ... S. and C. 3s. 0d.
2. Song—Oh! had I a husband, original key D flat ... D flat
" ... transposed key B flat ... B flat
3. Trio—Now all is still ... S., C., and T. 3s. 0d.
4. Song—Ah! I sigh ... S. and T. 3s. 0d.
5. Trio—My Heart is breaking ... S.T. and B. 3s. 0d.
6. Song—Ah! Cupid, I can see you ... S. and T. 3s. 0d.
7. Song—Ah! Cupid, I can see you ... S. and T. 3s. 0d.
8. Song—Ah! do not take her from him ... S. and T. 3s. 0d.
9. Duet—We united take a song ... S. and T. 3s. 0d.
10. Quartet—The Betrothal ... S. C. T. and B. 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CHARLES SALAMAN'S "SPANISH CAPRICE," as Played repeatedly by the Composer, and encored at Crystal Palace.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

RÊVE FAVARGER'S STRADELLA, 3s. 6d. Arditi's Andante and Rondo di Bolero.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

RÊVE FAVARGER'S MASANIELLO, 4s. A brilliant Fantasia.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES HALÉVY'S CHAL. Zoré: Zoré! Chanson Napolitaine ... 3s. 6d.
La Reine de la Baguette: Chanson Napolitaine ... 3s. 6d.
Adagio à Trente Agnitos ... 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

ARDITI'S GARIBALDINA. BRINLEY RICHARDS' Celebrated National March for the Pianoforte, 3s.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. Just Published. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Beautifully Illustrated. 4s. Founded on four of the most favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. 3s. The most popular Song of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BOAT SONG. By VERDI. 2s. 6d. A celebrated Nocturne Air.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER. By VERDI. 3s. The celebrated Prayer in Verdi's "La Forza del Destino."—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

LITTLE GOLDEN-HAIR. A Venetian Ballad. By WILLIAM GABRIEL. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

GARIBALDI. Song. By ARDITI. Words by HENRY FARNIE. Price 3s. Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

A NITA. By the Composer of "Garibaldi." 3s. (Founded on a pathetic passage in the life of Garibaldi.)
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

ARDITI'S LA GARIBALDINA. 2s. 6d. Sung with such immense success at the Crystal Palace, Her Majesty's Theatre, and everywhere.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"ARDITI." "THE LAST WALTZ." "GIUFFA." Arditi's "Il mese dei Maggi." 3s. Valse. Introduced by Mdlle. Titiens at Her Majesty's Theatre.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THALBERG'S NEWEST FANTASIAS.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ. 4s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE. 4s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INNOCENCE VALSE. Price 4s. The most beautiful Waltz that has appeared since the rage of the season.—Review.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND.
COOTE'S PRINCE IMPERIAL GALOP. Price 3s. Redescended nightly at all the balls.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET EVER COMPOSED.
COOTE'S FAUST AND MARGUERITE QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Songs, "Isabella," "Marguerite," "Roving Song," and "Jewel Song."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED AT EVERY BALL.
COOTE'S HUMMING-BIRD VALSE. 4s. Considered the best set of Valses by the popular Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S LEICESTER LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pilgrim of Love," "My Fairy Fays," "An Echo in the Morning," and "The Merry Peasant Lad." A real merry set. No dance programme complete without them. Always redescended.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, Introducing "Kathleen O'More," "Terence's Farewell to Kathleen," "Kate Kearney," "Rosin the Beau," "Irish Jaunting Car."—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHRISTY SONG. 3s. 6d.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, Sung by Christy's.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE PRETTIEST SONG OUT.
COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. By FRED BUCKLEY. Price 3s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
VIOLETTE. I DREAM OF THEE. By BONNER DARKER. Price 4s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SONG OF THE DAY.
POLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON. Price 3s. 6d. Sung everywhere.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF MR. TOOLE'S NEW SONG.
A NORRIBLE TALE; or, The Suicidal Baby. Price 3s. Encored five times nightly in "The Area Belle."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

C. M. E. OLIVER'S NEW BALLAD.
OH! BLOW ME A KISS ON THE WIND. Price 3s. 6d. Sung with the greatest pretty success.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW OPERA, BY THE AUTHOR OF FAUST.
MIRELLA, About to be performed at Her Majesty's Theatre, and will be published immediately.
THE PRINCIPAL ITALIAN SONGS, ETC.

Non mais il core in me	Aria, sung by Mdlle. Titiens ... 2 0
Quando, sangue ...	Aria, ... 2 0
Ah! perdona al primo ...	Aria, ... 2 0
La Magliavacca, a Bella ...	Dance, sung by Mdlle. Trebelli 1 0
Ah! destati, resti, non pari ...	Serenad Melody ... 3 0
Le sue pregbi mici ...	Romance, sung by Signor Giuglini 2 6
Io! Arbie si non regina ...	Words, sung by Mr. Santley ... 2 6
Dolce mia creatura ...	Duette, sung by Mdlle. Titiens and Signor Giuglini ... 3 0
Ah! para amor ...	Duette, sung by Mdlle. Titiens and Signor Giuglini ... 3 0
Fanciun ricche, o giovinotte ...	The opening Chorus, arranged as a Song ... 2 0
Follie parisee ...	Valse, by Mdlle. Vidal ... 3 0
The Sacred Melody, with English words ...	Far from his Country ... 3 0
Lovely Zingara ...	Song, by Mr. Santley ... 2 6
The Opera complete, in Italian ...	... 16 0
Ditto ...	in English ... 16 0
Ditto ...	in Parts ... 10 0

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

The Overture ...	4 0
The favourite Airs by W. H. Callcott, in three books, each ...	5 0
Miller, Orry's Fantasia ...	4 0
Benedict's Souvenirs de Mirella (a selection of Airs) ...	5 0
Osborne's Reminiscences ...	4 0
Brinley Richards' Cœur de Magnanerie (the opening Chorus) ...	3 0
Brinley Richards' Souvenirs de Mirella ...	4 0
Kettrey's Fantasia, transcription ; a very brilliant piece ...	3 0
Lumley's Reminiscences ...	4 0
Genz's Reminiscences of Mirella ...	4 0
Favargere Fantasia ...	4 0

DANCE MUSIC.

Coote's Mirella Quadrilles ...	4 0
Coote's Mirella Waltzes ...	4 0
Victor Collins's Mirella Valse ...	4 0

EASY ARRANGEMENTS.

Nordmann's Four Favourite Airs ...	4s.
1. Serenad Melody ...	1s.
2. Barcarole ...	1s.
3. Serenad Melody ...	1s.
4. Pastorale and Rondo ...	1s.

PIANOFORTE DUETS.

The Overture ...	5 0
W. H. Callcott's Favourite Airs, in Three Books, each ...	6 0
Ditto ...	in Parts ... 3 0
Osborne Mirella Quadrilles, for String Band ...	3 0
Coote's Mirella Waltz ...	4 0
Lumley's Reminiscences of Mirella ...	7s. ; Septet, 4s.
Boosey's Selection for Military Band ...	2 0
Ole Overture, Septet, 2s. ; Duet ...	4 0

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, Sole Publishers for the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden.

CLARIBEL'S BEST SONGS.

Although the Day be Never so Long ...	3 0
Little Bird, Little Bird on the Green Tree ...	3 0
Nora's Dream ...	3 0
Blind Alice ...	3 0
Fairy Moonlight ...	3 0
Five o'Clock in the Morning. Tenth Edition ...	3 0
I Remember It ...	3 0
Jessie's Bridal. Tenth Edition ...	3 0
Jessie's Choice. Twentieth Edition ...	3 0
Maggie's Dream ...	3 0
Maggie's Secret. Tenth Edition ...	3 0
Price Poor Ellie ...	3 0
Sleep Dearie ...	3 0
Molly's Faith ...	3 0
The Broken Heart ...	3 0
The Broken Ring ...	3 0
The Brook ...	3 0
The Nurse's Darling ...	3 0
The Two Nests ...	3 0
The Old Pilot ...	3 0
The Old Fish Store ...	3 0
Through the Jasmine ...	3 0
Won't you tell me why, Rebie? Eighth Edition ...	3 0
You and I. Ninth Edition ...	3 0

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

Brinley Richards's Claribel's Choice ...	3 0
Coote's Claribel Waltz ...	4 0
Dumas—Jessie's Choice ...	3 0
Dumas—Maggie's Secret ...	3 0
Victor Collins's Claribel Choice Waltzes, on Four Favourite Songs. Illustrated ...	4 0
Richards's Claribel Quadrille, on Claribel's popular Songs. Illustrated ...	4 0

BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

FORBES' CAPRERA. Chanson Napolitaine. Sung with immense success at Drury Lane. By the Author of "Rappelle Toi." Price 3s. To be had everywhere.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS HAWLEY'S IVANHOE. New and fanciful arrangement of "Auld Robin Gray." By the Author of "Ivanhoe Quadrilles."—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BEHOLD MY LOVE! SHE SLUMBERS. New Serenade, by WALTER CHARLES LEVEY, Composer of "Sing, Sweet Bird," "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer," &c. Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' LIBRARY.—Two-Guinea Subscribers have the use of twelve pieces of Music in town, or twenty-four in the country, from the extensive Library of Music at one time or another. Prospectus and Catalogue sent free.—BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

PIANOFORTES.—The best 20-Guinea Piano in PRINCE'S PATENT, with all the latest improvements and handsome cottage cases (walnut or rosewood). A large selection of Pianofortes by other eminent makers.
BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUME'S New Pianette is acknowledged the best and cheapest in Europe, being the only one that has all the much advertised French pianos. Can be had for twenty months on trial. One in the window marked with price. 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in fine walnut cases, 85 to 28 guineas. 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.—Manufactory, Hanover Road.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUME'S GRAND COTTAGE, seven octaves, new registered check action, 3 unison and 2 octave stops, trichord throughout, full rich tone, quality of tone, and check to touch unequalled. Warranted.—24, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S INDIAN PIANOFORTES, made expressly to resist damp, heat, and climate. 27, Baker-street.
Shipped in limited cases, for 28 guineas.—151, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES AND HARMONIUMS. Messrs. OETZMANN and PLUME have purchased of Mr. Hayes will find at 151, Regent-street, all they can desire as to quality, variety, and cheapness. Mr. Hayes's Pianettes, 25 guineas. Harmoniums, 15 guineas. Drawing-room Pianofortes by eminent makers.—151, Regent-street, the only address.

BOOSEY and SONS' 17-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in handsome cheap Rosewood case with registered check action. It has the full compass, is in walnut, and possesses an excellent touch and quality of tone.

BOOSEY and SONS' 26-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in handsome Rosewood case with registered check action, elegant cape, suitable for any drawing-room, the workmanship is of the very highest quality, and the tone is equal to that of that pure, rich quality that especially distinguishes first-class English pianofortes.

BOOSEY and SONS' 35-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in handsome Rosewood case, with trichord throughout, 7 octaves, higher than the 84-guinea piano, and the tone is consequently more powerful. The touch is of the most perfect mechanical construction, and has the registered key board as well as the new grand compass of 7 octaves. Every piano is warranted for five years.
BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street, W.

THE 6-GUINEA HARMONIUM (Cottage) is the most wonderful instrument for the price.
BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street, W.

THE 10-GUINEA HARMONIUM (for Schools, a full-toned, rich, and fascinating tone obtaining 6-C.—BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' CHURCH HARMONIUMS, 16, 20, 25, and 40 guineas. Very powerful, and elaborately shaped for places of worship.—24, Holles-street.

BOOSEY and SONS' HARMONIUMS (English), by EVANS and other makers. An immense variety. New and Secondhand, at greatly reduced prices, including Instruments with two rows of keys and pedals.—24, Holles-street, W.

CHAPPELL and SONS' (from Broadwood) TRICHORD COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, in handsome walnut wood cases, 7 octaves, check action, Patent Frame, in solid cases, 30 guineas.—50, Conduit-street, W.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c. For Sale or Hire, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO is a very elegant Pianino in which the Prize Medal was awarded.—In Rosewood, 7 octaves, trichord throughout, repetition check action, and most perfect touch, admirably adapted for Schools, Parsonages, Vestries, &c. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be unequalled. Recommended Pianofortes, with check action and all improvements.
Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 25 and 28 guineas. A great variety under 50 guineas.
Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in mahogany and rosewood, the pure English tone of the Broadwood or Collard quality, the English check action, and all the most important improvements. Price 35 guineas. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street. In one of the same simple description of cases, but with the trichord throughout, and the repetition check action, the full compass, and the most perfect touch, admirably adapted for the tuneless. In elegant rosewood case, with full fret, similar in every respect to the 35-guinea pianoforte, price 30 guineas; in walnut, 28 guineas.
Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in rosewood or walnut, 25 guineas. This instrument has Three Strings and the Check Action throughout. It is strengthened by every possible means to endure the greatest amount of wear and to stand perfectly in tune in the most trying climates. It is the best Piano for the money in the world, and is recommended as the best to take out to India. Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL GRAND PIANOFORTE, 33 guineas, in rosewood case, with the best check action, 3 strings, the great compass of seven octaves, and the most perfect touch. Also in walnut or ebonized. This model is a lower price than any of the cottage pianofortes. The same instrument with two strings, at 36 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROO HOBBY HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 20 guineas; Class A, 25 guineas; Class B, 30 guineas; Class C, 35 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues and Harmoniums upon application to
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with five octaves, two footboards, and in oak or mahogany case. Also a Model Harmonium, with all the cheap Exeter Hall stops, complete line or open diapason.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECOND HAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, PEDAL and other MAKERS, at greatly-reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION MODEL HARMONIUM, for the Drawing-room, in rosewood, with two rows of vibrators, and Venetian swell, worked by the keel of the right foot, in oak case, price 45 guineas. A large assortment of every size at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECOND HAND PIANOFORTES. CHAPPELL and CO. have always a large assortment of SECOND HAND PIANOFORTES, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., that have been hired for the season. In very small cases, also. New Instruments of every description.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, BEALE, and WOOD, the only special arrangement which enables purchasers to pay for a PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be known on application at 201, Regent-street, W.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, 25-GUINEA-DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE, Price 25 guineas in Rosewood wood case, with Trichord throughout, Repetition Check Action, and all the most modern improvements. It is impossible to observe that it is alike remarkable as regards power and quality of tone, elasticity and sensitiveness of touch, facility of tuning, and the capacity to develop in resonance. The tone may be described as combining the purity of the Cottage with the fullness of the semi-grand. In the application of the trichord principle to the sounding-board, and in the other in charmingly vocal qualities some with the Model Pianoforte, which has received such high commendation, being somewhat similar in its principle of construction to this new Model. Cramer, Beale, and Wood, 201, Regent-street. Purchasers are invited to visit the Pianoforte and Co. guarantee these instruments for any reasonable length of time, and forward them to all parts of the country without fail, carriage paid, and at a very trifling cost.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 201, Regent-street, corner of Argyll-place.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE. 25 guineas. Cramer and Co. submit that this cabinet small instrument is at once all that is desirable in the Pianoforte for solidity, solid touch, and equality of tone, and is well adapted for Schools or couple. In practising on this Pianoforte the fingers of the player will be strengthened to such a degree that when on any other instrument in the key and wave in the manner. In rosewood, 25 guineas; in walnut, 27 guineas.
Purchasers may rely upon the perfect quality of this instrument has not the common or single action, but the double or check action; and that Cramer and Co. were the original introducers of it.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE. A superior COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in solid Mahogany, with Trichord Tone and all other approved principles, to resist the effect of extreme climate. Nothing has been left safety to the Piano, which will be found to possess a rich quality of tone, and has been secured throughout by screws. Unusual skill and attention have been bestowed on the touch, which is remarkably even and responsive. Highly recommended for their extreme lightness and durability.
Cramer, Wood, and Co. deliver these Instruments, f.o.b., packed in cases lined with zinc, at any home port, for 28 guineas. Size—Height, 3 ft. 10 in.; width, 4 ft. 2 in.; depth, 2 ft. 2 in. Manufacturer's Office, 201, Regent-street, corner of Argyll-place.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANETTE, in solid Mahogany, for warm climates. The most portable Pianoforte yet made. Price 20 guineas.
201 and 209, Regent-street, London.

PIANOFORTE RENOVATION.—CRAMER and Co. undertake the Renovation of Pianofortes entrusted to them by years of constant practice. Cramer and Co. guarantee that, if their system be adopted, every Pianoforte will be found in perfect order of tone, and in other respects entirely satisfactory. Cramer and Co., free estimates of cost.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 201, Regent-street.

PIANO MECANIQUE.—CRAMER and Co. supply Debain's Piano Mecanique, an instrument which requires no knowledge of music, and is capable of the most harmonious effects. Cramer and Co. also supply the Celeste. Price 50 guineas. If with a keyboard, enabling it to be used by a pianiste like an ordinary Pianoforte, 60 guineas. Pianoforte Gallery (largest in world), 201, Regent-street, corner of Argyll-place.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for HIRE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for SALE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO'S ARTIST'S CONCERTINA.
(The Original Model.)
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA.
The best Cheap Instrument ever produced.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO. SECONDHAND CONCERTINAS.—201, Regent-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by CHACHELL. Full Compass, with all the latest improvements, warranted for best climates, and to keep well in tune, from Two guineas. Chappell, 50, New Bond-street.

THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ALEXANDER TULLOCH, K.C.B.

We have engraved a Portrait of this distinguished officer, who died at Winchester on the 16th of May. He was born at Newry, in Ireland, in 1801, but received his early education at Perth or Edinburgh. He was at first intended for the legal profession, and placed in a solicitor's chambers, but soon preferred a military career. He entered the Army as Ensign, in the 45th Regiment, in 1826; and, as Lieutenant in India, proved himself of great value in several important administrative offices in service in several important administrative offices in the War Department. He was for some time in charge of the statistical branch of the War Office, and was lately Assistant Military Superintendent of Pensioners. He obtained the honour of a K.C.B. in 1857, for the important civil services he rendered, in conjunction with Sir John M'Neil, G.C.B., in conducting the Commission sent out to the Crimea by the Government, in 1855, to report on the management of the British Army during the campaign in the East. The care and diligence of Sir A. Tulloch were displayed in drawing up the joint report exposing the errors which then brought our military organisation into disrepute. It is acknowledged that Sir Alexander's career was highly beneficial to the public service. He had been made a Lieutenant-Colonel in 1844, a Colonel in 1854, and a Major-General, Sept. 9, 1859. Sir Alexander Tulloch married, in 1844, Emma Louisa, youngest daughter of the late Sir William Hyde Pearson, M.D. He leaves no children, and is succeeded in his estate by his only brother Colonel James Tulloch, late of the 90th Regiment.

THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ALEXANDER TULLOCH, K.C.B.

FESTIVAL IN THE HORTICULTURAL GARDENS, SOUTH KENSINGTON, IN AID OF THE FEMALE SCHOOL OF ART.

THE festival which took place on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last week, in the arcades of the Horticultural Gardens and in the refreshment-rooms of the Great Exhibition building, was a very brilliant affair. Its object was to raise funds for building the studios and class-rooms required by the Bloomsbury Female School of Art, conducted by Miss Louisa Gann. There was a grand fancy bazaar, in which the Countess of Tankerville, Comtess Teleki, Viscountess Strathford de Redcliffe, Lady Stanley of Alderley, and other ladies of distinction, kept the stalls. There were two theatres, besides "the Paul-y-Toole-y-technic Institution," where a pair of our most popular comedians diverted the audience with a travesty of scientific lectures. Mr. Toole and Mr Paul Bedford, in this novel part, which they performed at the mock Polytechnic Institution, with the assembly who listened and laughed, are represented in our Engraving. In each of the theatres an amateur company acted a ridiculous burlesque; in the one case it was the "Blazing Burger; or, the Scarlet Rover," a "Nautical Mellow-drama," by Mr. T. G. Bowles; in the other, "Mumbo-Jumbo; or, The Mountains of the Moon," a piece which defies criticism, and which we must not attempt to describe. Among the other entertainments was an International Dog Show, consisting of a great variety of those wooden, pasteboard, or plaster images of the canine race which are sold to children in the Lowther Arcade. The nigger minstrels, who called themselves "White Lilies of the Prairie," with peep-shows, puppet-shows, and the usual diversions of a fair, contributed to the general glee. The Prince and Princess of Wales came at twelve o'clock, and were received by a hundred young ladies of the school, dressed in the Danish national colours, with Miss Gann and the members of the committee. They took their seats on a dais in the refreshment-room up stairs, where every lady who had collected £5 in subscriptions to the fund was presented to her Royal Highness and allowed to deposit the purse on a table before her. About a hundred ladies thus passed before the Princess, who smiled graciously upon all. Their Royal Highnesses then walked through the bazaar, bought some photographs from Lady Hawarden, and a picture from Lady Combermere. Lady Stratford de Redcliffe was next honoured by the Royal custom. At Lady Tankerville's stall, which was furnished almost entirely with Steinbergen's Bohemian glass, the Princess made several purchases, while the Prince was similarly engaged with Lady Louisa Moncreiffe at the opposite stall. At the Baroness Marochetti's stall the Prince purchased a life-like bust of her Majesty, modelled in clay by the Baron and presented by him to the bazaar. Mrs Gotschen and Mrs. Milner Gibson also came in for a large share of the Royal custom. Mrs. Henry Cole made a most beautiful display of Elkin's leather-work. These articles, which are at present so much in demand, are made in two colours—a delicate pea green and a light turquoise blue. These particular tints have hitherto baffled the efforts of the most celebrated scientific chemists, but Mr. Elkin has been the fortunate discoverer of the secret of producing these splendid hues. The Prince seemed greatly struck with Miss Cole's collection, and soon loaded one of his attendants with as many portfolios, purses, and cigar-cases as he could conveniently carry. The Royal party then passed out of the building, stopping on their way at Miss Gann's stall and making several purchases. They also inspected the wood-engraving stall, at which several blocks designed, drawn, and cut by the pupils of Mr. Godfrey Syke's wood-engraving class were struck off, and the proofs presented to the Prince and Princess. On Friday, the bazaar was visited by Princesses Helena and Louise. They stopped at every stall, and made numerous purchases. They then visited the dog show and all other entertainments, and left the building much pleased with their visit. The amount taken at the stalls and at the different shows was very large.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE SOCIETY OF ARTS.—The distribution of prizes to the successful candidates for the honours awarded by the Society of Arts took place yesterday week, at Willis's Rooms. The Prince of Wales presided. The prize for a design for a labourer's cottage, £25, and the society's silver medal, were awarded to Mr. John Birch, architect. The Swinny prize, a silver cup of the value of £100, with gold coin in it to the same amount, was awarded to Mr. Henry Somer Maine, LL.D. The society's silver medals were awarded to Mr. William Walker for bringing under the notice of the society the first imported specimens of the "Balata," a gum from the Sapota Mulleri, as a substitute for gutta percha; to Sir William Holmes, of British Guiana, for the introduction into the commerce of this country of the "balata;" and to Mr. John Chalmers Morton, for his paper read before the society on "Agricultural Progress: its Helps and its Hindrances." The Albert gold medal was presented to Sir Rowland Hill, for eminent services to all classes of the community in the creation of the penny-postage system and other postal reforms. Lord Henry Lennox proposed a vote of thanks to the Prince of Wales for presiding. His Royal Highness, in responding, said:—"I thank you all most sincerely for having allowed me on this occasion to present these medals and rewards. When I was first asked to accept the office of president of this society I felt great demur in doing so, from the circumstance that, on account of my age, I must be an unworthy successor of one whose great object, as you all know, was to promote the encouragement of arts, manufactures, and commerce. Still, after the kind manner in which I have been received here to-day, I can only say it has afforded me very great gratification to be present on this occasion, as it will on all other occasions where I may be of service to the country or to the people. So many gentlemen have ably addressed you to-day that it is quite unnecessary for me to say more; and I can now only wish prosperity to all those to whom I have had the pleasure of presenting these rewards.

THE FESTIVAL IN AID OF THE FEMALE SCHOOL OF ART IN THE HORTICULTURAL GARDENS, SOUTH KENSINGTON: THE "PAUL-Y-TOOLE-Y-TECHNIC INSTITUTION."

FINE ARTS.

BRITISH INSTITUTION.

DECEASED BRITISH ARTISTS.

THE English pictures, like those by Continental masters reviewed in our Number for June 19, are not of high average excellence. Our principal portrait-painters—Reynolds, Romney, Gainsborough, and Lawrence—are, however, sufficiently represented to afford materials for useful comparison; and there are good examples of Old Cuyp and Stark, two landscape-painters, who, till quite recently, have been very little appreciated.

The portraits by Sir Joshua Reynolds belong chiefly to his earlier time, and the best of them are unfortunately in bad condition, from the fading or blackening of the glazings, or from the employment of discordant media. The earliest portrait is probably the full-length of Commodore Keppel, one of the first friends and patrons of the painter, with whose family he had, a few years before this portrait was painted, been conveyed to Italy. Reynolds's handsome friend, Admiral Keppel is represented in a commanding attitude walking rapidly on a seashore in a storm. Allusion is thereby made to the wreck of the Maidstone frigate on the French coast, when Keppel, by his skill and active exertions saved the lives of his crew. The spirit and novelty of the representation brought Reynolds into general notice. The picture is now, however, so heavy and black that it is difficult to understand how it could have been so much admired. The portrait of Mrs Matthews fully portraits (68 and 71) date some five years later. Here also we are a full-length of "Thomas Methuen when a Boy" (171), standing beside a large mastiff, with the sea-shore in the distance, introduced also on many of his pictures, near them—a rather unfortunate composition; and a group (177) of two of the Methuen children, in which little Paul Methuen is seen full of delight at the fortunate glee at the tricks of a great shaggy pug dog, while his elder sister, afterwards Lady Beaton, is squat down, with her clothes and hands filled with flowers, and, in the immense, quaintly-trimmed hat overlooking the very personification of infantine happiness. Gainsborough's contrasted, is rather scattered, and the warm lakes and other fugitive colours Reynolds and Romney have employed have disappeared, leaving the comparatively hard and pretty cold picture in black and white of the pictures in this gallery. Gainsborough, as a painter of child-character and momentary expression, is, perhaps, more naturalistic than universal reputation. Another charming child-group—that of the Penn family (141), including the mother—is more admirable in composition; but the colouring is brown and cold. Sir Joshua is best represented in three profiles—"Mrs. Woodley" (122), "A Lady Drawing" (90), and "Mrs. Collyer" (148). The two latter are in his more mature, broader style. The third is rare quality of effect, but also in every master's early manner. That is this which renders the handling of Reynolds (and in a still more extreme degree that of Romney) superior in style and manliness to the conventional and often uncertain, though light and airy, execution of Gainsborough. A "Landscape" (155), by Reynolds, is a fine, "old-masterish" study (72) is likewise valuable as affording a comparison with a portrait of same nobleman (19) by Lawrence.

Of late years Gainsborough has been placed by many by the side of Reynolds, if not on a higher pedestal. Whether this estimate is not an expression of popular caprice, rather than of sound connoisseurship, we will not discuss. Certain it is that a large debt of general recognition is yet due to another great painter—Romney. Besides

MUSIC

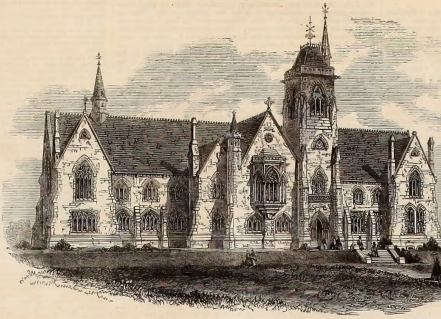
There are now signs of the approaching end of the "Musical Season." The two great Italian theatres are announcing their "last nights," and it seems that the season, at both houses, will terminate before the end of this month, though we believe that there will be an additional series of cheap performances at Her Majesty's. At each house, however, there will be an interesting novelty before it closes; at Her Majesty's Theatre Gounod's new opera, "Mireille," to be produced this evening in an Italian version under the title of "Mirella," and at the Royal Italian Opera, Meyerbeer's "Etoile du Nord," the run of which, it will be remembered, was checked when the Covent Garden, was disastrously brought to an end, after a few performances, by the destruction of the theatre.

The oratorios of the Sacred Harmonic Society at Exeter Hall, the concerts of the Philharmonic Society, the Musical Society of London, the New Philharmonic concerts, those of the Beethoven Union, and of Leslie's Choir, are over for this year; and there only remain the Monday Popular Concerts, the Saturday concerts at the Crystal Palace, and a few benefit concerts of greater or less interest.

The eighth concert of the Philharmonic Society took place on Monday last, and was the most brilliant as well as the last of the season. It was distinguished by two remarkable novelties—a new new violin concerto composed and new performed for the first time by Joachim—a composition of the highest genius, and executed with unrivalled power; and a symphony written expressly for the Philharmonic Concerts by Dr. Sterndale Bennett, and performed for the first time under the greatest orchestral productions of Beethoven and Mendelssohn. Both the concerto and the symphony were received with every mark of distinguished admiration. There was another novelty of a very remarkable kind—a great vocal composition of Mozart, never before heard in England. It was an air originally written in 1783 for Adamberger, a celebrated tenor of that day, and only recently rescued from oblivion and printed at Leipsic. The manuscript came into the hands of Sir George Smart, and made a present to Miss Louisa Pyne, who sang Mozart's "Ascanio ch' io pinsi" and her favourite air, "Deh vieni, non tardar," from "Nozze di Figaro." She sang as charmingly and was received as warmly as ever.

The last Monday Popular Concert was for the benefit of Mr. Sims Reeves. The hall was full to overflowing, and the great English tenor was received with unbounded enthusiasm. He sang Handel's "Total Eclipse," Beethoven's "Adelaida," Schubert's ballad "Thekla" by Arabella Goddard, and the air "Salve Dimora," from Faust, accompanied on the violin by Joachim. The other vocal performer was Madame Lemaens-Sherrington, who sang Mr. Balfe's ballad "Cherubini's "Ave Maria," and a song, "A Grenade," newly composed by Rossini. There was the usual selection of instrumental music, in which the principal parts were taken by Arabella Goddard and Joachim.

On Friday morning, the 24th of June, an interesting concert was given at Her Majesty's Theatre in aid of the funds of the Royal Academy of Music, the theatre having been kindly lent for the most eminent members of the company having been generously given by Mr. Mapleson for the benefit of our national conservatoire, an institution which, by its liberal constitution and admirable system of tuition, has greatly contributed to the progress of music in this country during the last forty years. The first part of the concert consisted of portions of Nicolai's opera "Falstaff," and a selection of miscellaneous pieces performed by the members of the company. Then followed a series of performances by pupils of the Academy, beginning with Beethoven's "Choral Fantasia," of which the pianoforte part was admirably played by Miss Kate Steinberg, one of the most talented pupils of the institution. This young lady holds what is called a "King's Scholarship," and has given evidence of very distinguished merit, and entitling them to an education wholly or partially free. Mozart's fine air, "Deh, per questo istante," from the "Clemenza di Tito," was beautifully sung by Miss Annie Armytage, of whose successful appearance at a Philharmonic Concert we lately had occasion to speak. Mendelssohn's lovely song and chorus from "Athalie" was exceedingly well sung by Miss Neighbour and Miss Pitt; and it was gratifying to recognise their pure, natural, and unaffected style of singing. Sterndale Bennett's lively song and chorus from the "May Queen" were sung by Miss Edith Wynne and a chorus consisting principally of pupils of the Academy. Miss Wynne, a young lady of great merit, also holds one of the King's scholarships. The remainder of the concert was made up of selections selected with the last act of the "Sonnambula," in which the "artistes" of the theatre exerted themselves zealously and effectively.



Signor Calzatta's morning concert was given at St. James's Hall on Saturday last. He is one of our most eminent and successful vocal instructors. His taste and judgment enabled him to give an excellent and attractive concert, and his real position in the profession filled the hall to overflowing with elegant and fashionable company. A most interesting feature of the concert was the reappearance of Grisi before the public of whom she has been the idol during the whole period of her long career, when she first appeared in London, some thirty years ago, she was just beginning a course of triumphs longer and more brilliant than have ever been achieved by any of her successors on the London open stage. On Saturday, when she presented herself before the public, she was spontaneously received for several minutes elapsed before the enthusiasm of the audience enabled her to begin her air. It was the famous "Qui la voce," from the "Puritani," the opera in which she made her earliest success. Time does not seem to have had their usual effect; for her beautiful voice was as rich and mellow as ever, and the execution of her air was as easy and really "refreshing." The air was loudly encored, and she obeyed the call, after the Ribercini fashion, by singing "Di tu se fedele il flutto Sommer," the Irish melody to which Flotow's "Martha" owes much of its popularity. There was a host of favourite performers, and the selection of music was ample and well-chosen, including the most of pleasing pieces, the following were eminently successful:—An unpublished solo for the pianoforte, "La Tarantella," composed by Rossini, and played with his special permission by Mdme. Arcona, an Italian pianiste of great merit; the Scottish ballad, "Auld Robin Gray," which Mdme. Salomon-Dolby sang; "Il Bellaglio" la Danza di gioia," an air of Ascher's, sung by Carlotta Patti; the trio from "Norma," sung by Signor La Grua, Signor Vizzani, Signor Grisi, Parepa, and Gardoni, and vehemently encored; a solo on the piano, on themes from "Lucrezia Borgia," played with immense applause by the favourite young pianist Mdlle. Marie Krebs; the duet from the "Turco in Italia," sung by Grisi and Calzatta; Gounod's pretty romance, "Quand tu chantes," sung by Parepa; and Moore's Irish melody, "The Minstrel Boy," sung by Grisi in English, and most loudly encored. The very meritorious prima donna has returned with so much ardat to the concert-room, are we to have the enjoyment of seeing and hearing her once more upon the stage?

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS'.—The success of the tragedy of Louis XI., aided by the superb acting of Mr. Charles Kean in the character, has brought prominently forward M. Casimir Delavigne, a dramatic author whose works were worth consulting as an available repertoire of pieces well adapted for stage representation. It has been generally supposed that this author as a mere theatrical playwright more dependent on the name than on his own merits. The tragedy of Louis XI., albeit is much it may offend historical accuracy, deserves more estimation than it has been held in; and, though the character as drawn of that malignant monarch be more of a caricature than an historical personage, yet it does provide opportunities for the actor which are due to the author's inventive talents. Some four years after the performance of his great tragedy, Delavigne composed another, upon similar principles, and affording occasion for displaying his political hatred of bigots and despots, which he founded, not upon the events in the life, but upon his notion of the character, of Don Juan d'Autriche, the hero of Lepanto, whose name gave the title to the drama. The heroine of the piece, Donna Florinda de Sandoval, has been acted at Paris by Mlle. Stella Colas with much credit to herself and pleasure to her audience; and it was natural, therefore, that she should wish to act it also on the English stage and try her fortune with it here. Mr. John Gosford was, accordingly, appealed to that he might furnish an acceptable adaptation of it for the British public. This he has done under the title of "The Monastery of St. Just," and it was produced on Saturday with success. The monastery which gives title to the piece was the retreat of the Emperor Charles V., after his abdication. Don Juan of Austria was his natural son, brought up in ignorance of his parentage, by Don Quexada, an old counsellor in the Conference of the Empire. This legitimate son was Philip II., King of Spain. The action of the drama arises from that bold being in love with Donna Florinda and the fact that the lady is a Jewess. Philip II. finding that Florinda is determined not to become a nun or enter a monastery; and, when he finds that the young man is too much in love with his mistress and that despite his military profession he is not wholly unfitted for civil affairs, he proposes to make her his wife. But, as he omits to name in his warrant the particular monastery, Quexada (Mr. J. W. Ray) fills in the blank with that of St. Just, and thither the young man puts into the custody of his father. Charles, under the name of Brother Laurence (Mr. C. Kean), is much interested in the young nobleman's welfare, and soon resolves to defeat the intentions of the arbitrary Philip. First he endeavours to interest the Prior of St. Just (Mr. H. Robins) in his favour, when he wishes to consent to the escape; but the Prior stands on the dignity of his position, and the late Emperor as Brother Laurence is overwhelmed by his reproaches for the sorrow of his superior. But he will not be baffled, and therefore takes advantage of the circumstance that the election of the Abbot of the Monastery then proceeding to assert his own claim to that office. In prosecuting this design he resorts to his old habits of business, and addresses letters at the same time to Florinda and Pelbo, a young novice, and addresses them to the parties who can accept the invitations. The letters are delivered by Mdlle. Stella Colas), is anxious for liberty, and willing to effect his own escape and that of Florinda, in whom

SCHOOL FOR OFFICERS' DAUGHTERS.

We have engraved a View of Lansdowne College, Bath, recently purchased for the accommodation of the School for Daughters of Officers in the Army, whose claims were advocated at a public meeting in Willis's Rooms, the Duke of Cambridge presiding, on the 7th of April last. Generals Sir William Gomm, Sir R. Dacres, Sir R. Airey, and Sir Edward Cust, the Rev. the Chaplain General, and others, took part in the proceedings on that occasion. His Royal Highness then stated that the committee had already begun its work, and that a building had been obtained in the neighbourhood of Bath. A small sum would be needed to render it serviceable for the purposes intended, and an income of £2000 or £3000 a year would, for the present, be sufficient to set it going. We may add that the edifice here represented is that which was formerly known as the Lansdowne Training College. This building, which originally cost £14,000, was bought by the committee for less than a quarter of that sum, and can, at an outlay of about £1000, be rendered serviceable for the accommodation of about 120 inmates. It has eight acres of ground attached to it, and its situation is healthy.

SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS OF OFFICERS OF THE ARMY, LANSDOWNE COLLEGE, BATH.

THE FOURTH ANNUAL MILITARY RIFLE-MATCH open to all officers and men of the British Army, took place at Aldershott, at the butts beneath Caesar's Camp, last week, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The prizes were—the Army Stakes, for non-commissioned officers and men; the Champion's Prize, for the six best shots at the Army Stakes; the Ladies' Purse, for officers; the Marksmen's Prize, for non-commissioned officers and men qualified as marksmen during the present annual course and marksmen of last year of companies not yet exercised; the Veteran Stakes, for non-commissioned officers and men of not less than fifteen years' service; the Carbine Stakes; the Challenge Prize Cup (presented by the South-Western Railway Company); the File-Firing Stakes, the Volley Stakes, the Non-Commissioned Officers' Prizes, and the Rifle Derby. There were also pool targets, open to all comers. The shooting exhibited a marked improvement on that of former years.

PRINCE ALFRED'S DEPARTURE FOR NORWAY.—The Racoon sailed from Spithead on her northern cruise on Saturday last, Lieutenant Prince Alfred rejoining from leave previous to the corvette weighing anchor. The Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Prince Louis of Hesse, arrived at the Queen's private station in the Royal Clarence Yard, Gosport, from Windsor, at 10.45 a.m., and immediately embarked on board the Fire Queen steam-yacht, which conveyed them out to Spithead, and transferred them to the Racoon. Soon afterwards a signal was made from the Racoon to the Edgar, flag-ship of the Admiral commanding the Channel Squadron, that "the Prince of Wales would be glad to see Admiral Dacres on board the Racoon." The Admiral at once went on board the corvette. At three p.m. the Racoon weighed anchor, and, after steaming about the Channel Fleet for some little time, stood out to sea by the eastern channel, with the Fire Queen in attendance. Off the Warner light-ship the engines were stopped, and the Prince of Wales and Prince Louis of Hesse, taking leave of Prince Alfred, left her to re-embark on board the Fire Queen, and returned to Portsmouth Harbour. In accordance with the wish expressed by the Prince of Wales, no public honours of any kind were paid him beyond the attendance of the chief military and naval authorities at the Royal Clarence Yard. The inhabitants of Portsmouth, however, considering themselves free from any official trammels or etiquette, decked out their Victoria Pier, at the entrance to the harbour, gaily with flags, and cheered most lustily as the Fire Queen steamed in and out of the harbour, the Prince of Wales lifting his hat repeatedly in answer to the crowd assembled on the pier.

INSPECTION OF WOOLWICH GARRISON.—Major-General E. C. Warde, C.B., the newly-appointed Commandant of this garrison, held his first inspection on Monday. The troops assembled in review order at ten o'clock a.m., on the common, in the following order:—Three troops of Royal Horse Artillery and two field batteries, in command of Colonel W. Middleton, C.B.; the 19th Brigade Royal Artillery and the Woolwich Division of Marine Light Infantry, in command of Colonel Mitchell; and two batteries of 40-pounder guns, in command of Colonel A. G Austen. General Warde was attended by Brigadier-Major Hay Captain Nangle, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General of the garrison; Captain Williams, A.D.C., and other officers composing the Staff, who, after going through a careful inspection of the line, retired to the front, when the troops marched past in open columns of batteries. After this they were put through sundry field movements, of which the General was pleased to express his repeated approbation. The inspection terminated at one o'clock.

PROFESSIONAL REPORTING IN THE LAW COURTS.—The report of the committee appointed in December last to prepare a plan for the amendment of the present system of editing and publishing reports of judicial decisions will be presented to a meeting of the Bar, to be held on the 1st of July. The committee, in their report, give a detailed statement of the proceedings at their different meetings, together with the various proposals for amendment brought under their consideration. In the scheme of reporting finally adopted the committee recommend that the reports shall be placed under the general management and control of a council composed of members to be appointed by the Inns of Court and the LORD PALMERSTON MAKING THE MINISTERIAL STATEMENT ON DANO-GERMAN AFFAIRS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON MONDAY.—SEE PAGE 19.

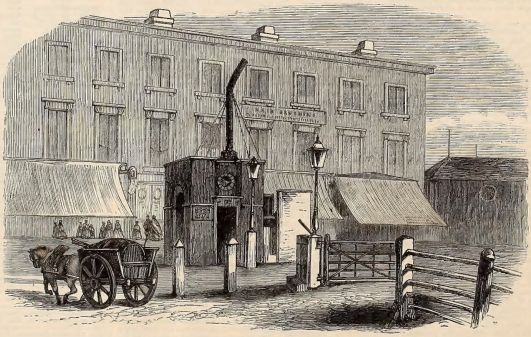
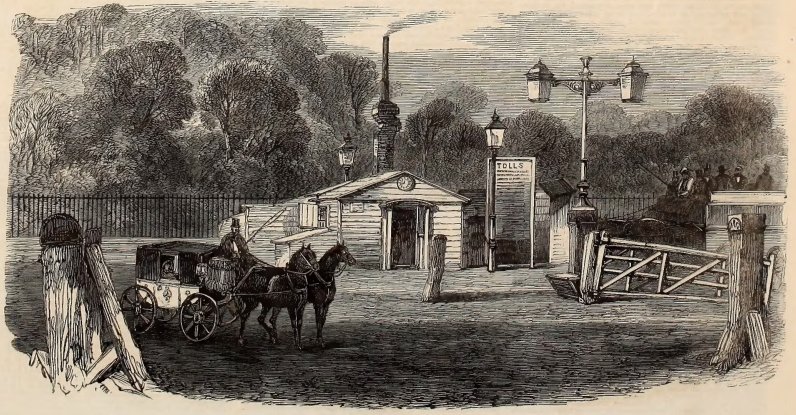
TURNPIKE-GATES IN AND NEAR LONDON JUST DEMOLISHED.



NOTTING-HILL GATE

ISLINGTON GATE.



Incorporated Law Society. The committee consider it desirable that the council should be incorporated by Act of Parliament and have the assistance of a paid secretary. The reports, the committee state, shall be divided into three series — appellate, equity (including bankruptcy and lunacy cases), and common law (including probate, matrimonial, Admiralty, and ecclesiastical cases). A staff of editors and reporters, both being barristers, is to be appointed, removable by the council, by whom their particular duties in the various law courts are to be prescribed. The profession will be invited to subscribe to the reports at a fixed scale of prices; and it is considered essential for carrying out the scheme that the aggregate amount of subscriptions, inclusive of any advance from the Consolidated or Suitors' Fund, shall reach £10,000. The recommendations of the committee are thirty-two in number, most of which refer to the minor details for carrying out the scheme, with the various functions and duties of those who may be officially connected with it. The report was signed by R. Paul Amphlett (chairman), Robert Phillimore, Fitzroy Kelly, W. T. S. Daniel, C. Jasper Selwyn, H. M. Cairns, Alexander Pulling, James Dickinson, George Druce, G. W. Hastings, N. Lindley, J. R. Quain, Alfred Wills, John Werlake, F. Vaughan Hawkins,

CITY-ROAD GATE.

DEMOLITION OF LONDON TURNPIKE GATES.

THIS week has witnessed the abolition of turnpike toll obstructions upon fifty miles of road in and about London on the Middlesex side of the Thames. It was many years ago that the agitation for their removal commenced, and the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS then took the lead in advocating this important matter of social and economical reform. We have therefore thought it worth while to engrave Sketches of some of the tollgates which have been so familiar to every Londoner's eye, and which, having partly disappeared in the last few weeks, are henceforward to be utterly demolished. The City-road gate and the Islington gate, which were situated amidst a dense population, with the gates of Kensington and Notting-hill, which barred free communication with the western suburbs and villages beyond, have been selected for these Illustrations. Under the "Metropolis Turnpike Road Act Amendment" (which takes effect from the 1st of July), twenty-five toll-gates and fifty-six side bars are done away with. At Pulham, including Walham-green and Earl's Court, all the gates and side bars are removed; also at Kensington, Hammersmith, Notting-hill, Harrow-road, Kilburn, and Camden Town, the latter comprising the King's-road gate, High-street,

KENSINGTON GATE.

Chalk Farm, and the Brecknock gate, as well as the gate in the road at Kentish Town. Further removals take place at Holloway, Islington, Ball's Pond, Kingsland-road, Cambridge-heath, Hackney, Twickenham, and Teddington. All the gates and side bars of the City-road are included. We congratulate the whole metropolis upon the abatement of this nuisance, and hope soon to record its total extirpation on the Surrey as well as the Middlesex side of the river.

THE FARM.

AGRICULTURAL writers seem puzzled which to dilate on—the state of the crops or the aspect of politics—the changeable temperature as affecting the hay harvest or what produce may be allowed to pass the Baltic. In Mark-lane peace ruled higher than war, and more done for some weeks, but the large demands of factors checked business. The weather seems to differ in nearly every district. In Lincolnshire it has been very stormy, and if it does not alter soon it will make the crops very late. Stock, as might have been expected, "has done very middling."

Nothing daunted, Mr. Morritt has felt the pulse of the House again on the malt tax. His success was not great, but it was enough for the approval with which his efforts are regarded by the Central Anti-Malt-Tax agitators. When they do not express regret that he met action he gets counted out; when they frown on him and think it worth while to publish their disavowal, he carries 116 members with him into the lobby. Lord John Manners argued that Scotland and Ireland only drink whisky because their beer is rendered bad and expensive by the malt tax; but considering that Parliament was open plenty of facilities for being supplied with beer if they really wanted it, they have declined their enviable duties in rather a leisurely way.

There was a famous show of riding-horses at Lynn, and a bad one at Bristol; one as superior as the other was inferior; but in the class for blood sires both were beaten by Mr. Bullock's pony sire of the model; whereas at Bristol hardly any were shown, and certainly not a good one. At Lynn also the hunters were up to the mark, though some new-sawn deal hurdles, without furze, on a bed of deep tan, and given the exhibitors no previous notice of their intention. The consequence was that by far the most valuable animal—a bay—weight-carrying and nearly thoroughbred mare by Marcon, and ridden in a sharp gag-cheek bridle by a helper who had never been over a hurdle in his life—refused the hurdle every time, and was only placed second last instead of getting the prize, which she fully deserved. She will suit the young Norfolk farmers to lack over their sheepfolds; but it is no test of a hunter (as in this case both first and second are from the same hunt, and the second is known to be a far more brilliant hunter than the first); still less is it fair to subject animals to such trials without previous practice and training by their owners, so that they may be sent properly equipped and mounted. Luckily, this show-yard jumping is going quite out of fashion at all well-conducted meetings.

The parade was a grand success, but a little overdone in the gallopping, considering that the hacknevs have to work in harness for some hours in draughty sheds. The roadster sire class was a great revival, and reminded us of other days. Mr. Bowly's celebrated horse goes to Islington, as does Mr. Booth's Beechwood, and lucky will be the men who have better than either. Chester Emperor, the hero of a hundred fields, vanquished all the others; Sir E. Lamb's grandson of the Southdown rams of all ages with one purchased for 130gs. at Babraham; Lord Walsingham's pair of "last in" at 129. His lordship carried all before him with his shearling rams, and T. Brown in shearling Leicester or long-wool rams; while in ditto of any age Hugh Aylmer won easily. In the Scotch shorthorn cow class Mr. Clay separated Sir E. Kerrison and Lord Walsingham, and Lady Pigot full-filled the pledge "which brought her to the front" in the memorable sale speech by getting the first prize both for in-calf and yeuling heifers. The Scotch and Norfolk breed up well, but the Scotch are generally doing best with her cows, and the latter with her in-calf heifers. With the exception of three prizes to Messrs. Wainman and Hugh Aylmer, the pig board was carried by the Craig and Cumberland. The number of horses at the Essex show exhibited no decay, but Harwich is in such a corner of the county that it is hard to get the useful, hardy-looking horse, Weatherden by Weatherbit, and lately purchased by Captain Barnett from John Dobbyns, was shown there.

There was no unpopular rule to compel the Colwoldo to be shorn before shearing, and therefore there was a great show of Leicester sheep at their meeting at Cheltenham. Mr. Stratton was in great shorthorn force; but Mr. Woodward had the best male, and Mr. R. Bowly the best female of his breed in the yard. Hereford bullocks were good in one class, and Messrs. J. A. Hollings and J. Craddock beat everything with their well-fed old bullock now in calf and calf. The Earl of Ducie, Hole, Beale Brown, and E. Handy were the champions of the long-wools; Earl Radnor, the Duke of Beaufort, and Mr. R. Holford, M.P., of the short; and Mr. Benning and G. Wallis of the Oxford Downs. In pigs, A. Stewart, of Gloucester, came out well, and so did W. Hewer and the Rev. H. Hyett, of Stanway, the Rev. Mr. Symonds, College, Cirencester, gave practical proof of its feeding prowess. Sir Peter Laurie was in his element with the Suffolk pigs at Ipswich, and there was a curious £5 prize for "the best horse, cart, and harness." Joel Ellenborough made some curious remarks from the chair, at the dinner, on the value which was once entertained for pedigree among men going out of fashion and being transferred to cows, stating that the intrinsic value of the animal was nothing more on their pedigrees than their quality. Mr. Holland, however, could not refrain from a few very innocuous "guesses at truth" (for we can call them nothing more), and pointed out that in former days farmers were obliged to wait for six or eight years before their cows could attain their maximum power, but, through the attention which had been paid to the breed and the family from which they came, they had now got animals which enabled them to compete with the foreigner. There has been a good meeting at Banbury, and the Champion prize for the best horned animal was awarded to Lord Carnarvon, the property of the late S. Treadwell, beating Royal Councillor, late of the Sarsden herd. Mr. Garne had the three first-class shorthorns, and the same under fifteen months were so good that everything behind Mr. Druce's was highly commended.

The public judging at the Islington horse show took place on Friday (July 1), and the exhibition continues open till Wednesday night. Owing to there not being accommodation for more than three hundred horses, the day-horse classes have been struck out of the list, and nearly one hundred and fifty have been returned as too late. The thoroughbred sires number forty-four, the hunters seventy (three-sevenths of them heavy weights), the weight-carrying cobs thirty, hacks and ponies will be there galore, and a choice class of "Cobs, as per Sporting Life states that Carsetaeus, Nutbourne, Neville, Newcastle, Girtleton, Amsterdam, Morton, Sir Joseph Paxton, Lord Derby, Buckenham, Longspaw, and Old Calabar are part and parcel of the forty-four.

Mr. Logan's sale stands for Thursday next, and can be reached by a mile walk from Newport, a first-class station on the South Wales line. There are thirty-two stallions and heifer and bull lots are given the Duke of Knowlmere (19,623), Prince of the Empire (20,578), and Cherry Jacket (19,634), have been principally used. All the bulls are under fourteen months. Mr. Douglas's red prize cow, Queen of Athelstane, has had a mate found, which has been named Prince of Athelstane; and Mr. Eastwood's white bull The Hero, first in the yearling class at Worcester, is, we hear, to be let, and to be succeeded at Thornbury Castle by the Duke of Beaufort's Duke. We hear that Mr. M'Combie sends seven of his Aigneas to Newcastle, and that Scotland will be well represented in nearly all the classes.

The proceedings of the inquest at Egham were resumed and concluded yesterday week. It was stated that every effort had been made to procure the attendance of the under-guard, Dunleavy, but he could not be found. A witness, who was in the guard's van before and during the accident, declared that the guard was sober and attending to his duties, and that he applied the break just before the accident took place. The jury, in their verdict, found Lee, the driver of the second train, and Tredver, the fireman, guilty of manslaughter; and they censured the South-Western Railway Company for not having a turntable at Ascot, for starting the five minutes' after each other, and for not telegraphing trains from station to station.

SPORTS OF THE MONTH.—JULY.

DESPITE certain drawbacks that exist in the nature of our climate, we are prepared, if necessary, to prove that there is no country in the world in which out-door amusements can be so thoroughly enjoyed as in England. The scorching sun, the extreme coldness of the atmosphere, the rapid torrents which nearly inundate other lands, the burning volcano, the avalanche of snow, are all unknown in our native land, and though occasionally the foggy air of the metropolis confines us to the house, it is merely for a few hours, instead of for weeks, as is the case in foreign parts. Our fogs may be the best of the dog days, there are few things more delightful to the inhabitants of this favoured isle than the pleasure of fishing, and July is peculiarly adapted to that pursuit. How wonderful is the contemplation that in the waters of the boundless sea a benefactor Creator has ordained that fish should be the staple production, and that, although what a profusion of food, do we receive from this element! Let any person endeavour to realise the Market at all seasons of the year, and myriads of the inhabitants of the deep; and he him remember that this is but a drop in the ocean among numerous others. What magnificent salmon will greet his view—cod, turbot, soles, plaice, whiting, lobsters, soles, plaice, whitings, lobsters, smelts, and prawns! Every season furnishes us with varied delicacies, and each month has its peculiarity, here preys, oysters, and crabs, tending to show the vast variety of fish. We have in a former article referred to many species of the finny tribe, and we now proceed to complete our remarks upon fish and deep-sea fishing.

The dory, or john-dory, is tolerably abundant on the coast of Britain, especially on the Cornish and Devonian shores, and sometimes on the Irish shores. In the eastern parts of England, and throughout Scotland, this fish is almost unknown. In London alone, English names drove have arisen from its golden colour; in Sicily, Spain, and Sardinia it is called gallo, the cock, from the crest on its back; and in the western provinces of France, where the dory is also common on the Mediterranean it is denominated St. Peter's fish—the legend running that it was taken from the mouth of a fish by that apostle, and hence obtained the coin to pay the tribute money; and that the imprint of the thumb and finger on each shoulder was made by St. Peter, when he was said of the haddock. Next to the salmon we should pronounce the dory as the most epicurean luxury that comes to table in the fish course; and when we have heard a gourmand in ecstasies over a dish of dory, we have generally found that he was a native of one of the coasts of France. According to the above-quoted authority, Pennant, some old writers enumerate on our coasts the whole year. Naturalists, like doctors, often disagree. Dr. Leach, Yarrell, and Couch are sceptical as to this northern migration, from the fact that Arctic voyagers and whalers have never met with it, which is natural of consequence in Greenland and Iceland. They conceive that the herring inhabits the deep waters of the ocean all the year, and approaches the shores at certain seasons for the deposition of its spawn, in a manner analogous to many others of the finny tribe. An additional reason is given by the latter for the dory's migration, is the consideration that the pilchard, which is so closely related to the herring, also visits the coasts of Devon and Cornwall to the North, is now known never to leave the British seas. The herring appear in the Firth of Forth towards the end of December and be coming of January in June, and then, even in the month, go to the Dunbar and Berwick coasts. The drift-nets used in fishing for them are similar to those employed for the mackerel, and are managed according to wind and tide and the situation of their food. It has been found that the herring migrates in shoals, the largest and most greater numbers in the dark night, and when the sea is ruffled by a breeze; beams of light are supposed to attract them. The herring lives in a smaller fish than the herring, and is not nearly so plentiful, except on the coast of Cornwall, where it is found at all seasons of the year, and where a most extensive fishery is carried on. The principal stations where the pilchards congregate may be divided into three—one in the north of Ireland, the second in the Channel, the latter and the Land's End, the third on the north coast of the county, near the Scilly Isles. The fishery commences with the autumn voyage, and the lurker, with a crew of eighteen men and one or two boys, are employed on what is termed the scan-fishery, which is a sort of pilchard-hunting. The lurker is a fast sailer, and when a shoal of lurker proceeds to reconnoitre, to ascertain its size and the direction it is in. The boat then returns to the scan, and the net is got out. The scan is handed to the vulger, and the net thrown into the sea, forming a curved line on the outer side of the fish. The two large boats warp the ends together, and the lurker takes its station in the centre. The crew lashing the water to keep the fish within the inclosed space. The quantity of pilchards taken by a single boat is often very large, and from five to ten thousand fish have been taken in one night by a single boat. The Cornish fishermen are very superstitious; they three thousand hogsheads of pilchard have been taken in one scan—three thousand five hundred fish being allowed for a hogshead.

Before we conclude, we must notice a curious case of illegal fishing that was tried at the Kent Assizes a few months or years ago. Regular fishermen and bargee landed bodies of poachers swept the river night and day of all the white fish, the roach of the coarse tribes. These were sold for manufacturing Jamaica rum, imitation of pearls. Roach scales were sold at twenty-one shillings a pound, since an immense quantity of fish were required to make a guart was the market price in Duke's-place. The scales were torn off from them as soon as they were caught, and thus, dreadfully mangled, the fish were thrown back into the water to linger and die in torture. From the above account it is quite clear that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was not then in force.

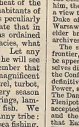
THE CONFERENCE.

The protocols of conferences relative to the affairs of Denmark held in London from the 28th of January, 1852, to the 2nd of August, 1864, presented to both Houses of Parliament on Monday night, comprise in fifty-two pages of printed matter the whole of the proceedings of the late conference. On page 36, 17, is a summary of the Danish case, which we have been trying to the break-up of the Conference, written by one of the chief ministers.

This summary is followed by the brief protocols which record the opening of the Conference.

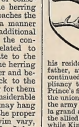
On page 41 we find the first detail the assumed discordance which resulted in the conclusion of an armistice for four weeks. When the discussion on the preliminaries of peace commenced, on the 12th of May, the proposition given by the Plenipotentiaries of the German Courts, which brought to light a complete divergence of opinion existing between the members of the Conference with regard to the validity of the engagements resulting from the Treaty of London of 1852. The Austrian Plenipotentiary maintained the ground of discussion so entirely free from any restriction resulting from engagements which might have existed before the war between their Governments and Denmark. But this was not the feeling of the Plenipotentiaries of the Courts of London and Paris. The Protocol 14 on page 44 shows that the German Plenipotentiaries considered adopted to bring about a durable peace. It consisted in the idea of the Union of Vienna, which was to make the duchies entirely independent in political and administrative matters, to allow a dynastic tie to subsist between the duchies and the Danish monarchy, but to make that tie dependent on the decision which the Frankfort Diet might give as to the validity of the titles of King Christian IX. in his quality of Duke of Holstein. The Plenipotentiary of the German Confederation would not join in this, and the Danish Plenipotentiaries thought it inadmissible.

On the 28th of May the Plenipotentiaries of Austria and Prussia brought forward a plan still more unexpected than the first, and which had for its object to demand a complete separation of the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein from the kingdom of Denmark, and their union in a single State under the hereditary rule of the Representative of the House of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Augustenburg. Protocol No. 6 gives the reasons which determined the Ambassador of Russia to express his dissent with regard to the proposition of the Plenipotentiaries of the German Courts to detach from the Danish monarchy the whole of Holstein and Schleswig, and to place that State under a new dynasty. Of course the Danish representatives would not listen to this; and the period for the suspension of arms was approaching its termination when Earl Russell brought forward a project of a division of Schleswig and the sacrifice of Holstein, which is described on Monday night in the House of Lords. This plan, which had been previously communicated to the representatives of the neutral Powers, received their most cordial support in the Conference. The protocol of June 2 contains the declaration by which the Ambassador of Russia announced to the Conference that the Emperor, desiring to facilitate, as far as depended on him, the arrangements to be concluded between Denmark and Germany with a view to the re-establishment of peace, has ceded to Germany that the Grand Duke of Oldenburg the eventual rights which section 3 of the protocol of London of May 8, 1852, had reserved to his Majesty and to those of the elder branch of Holstein-Gottorp. The said protocol was appended in the archives of the Conference to the declaration signed on the same day.



The succeeding protocols record the discussions on the vital question of armistice, during which the representative of England that a friendly mediation be appealed to to trace the line. Austria and Prussia, "while showing themselves disposed to accept the mediation of a neutral Power," demonstrated in the Conference, were not willing to engage beforehand to consider themselves bound by the decision which might be given, but might be expected to adopt it "as circumstances did not allow them to accept an arbitrative decision." The Danish Plenipotentiaries declared their willingness to accept it. The Austrian Plenipotentiary insisted that the boundary proposed by Earl Russell and accepted by Denmark was beyond the line that Lord Clarendon would not allow the Plenipotentiaries of Russia, France, and Sweden also affirmed that Earl Russell's proposition was beyond the line to an ultimatum. Then came a proposition from the French Plenipotentiary that a vote should be taken, and the majority, numerically speaking, of the electors of Schleswig. Lord Russell, in making the opinion of the Danish Plenipotentiaries on this subject, declared that he could not even consider the proposition. The Austrian and Prussian Plenipotentiaries declared that they thought proper to give their adhesion. M. de Quade replied that he was, of course, without instructions on the subject, and that he could not even consent to accept it ad referendum. Lord Russell, in his declaration of the 2nd of June, in which he said that the Government would make great sacrifices in order to obtain the restoration of peace, but that there were limits which they could not pass, declared that his instructions forbade him to consent to any other line than that proposed by the Conference on the occasion of the armistice of the 28th of May, and accepted by Denmark.

"This declaration," says the summary writer, "ended the debate. It proved, at the same time, the impossibility of reaching the most perseverng efforts of the neutral Powers have not been able to overcome. It is difficult to foresee the lamentable difficulty that the labours of the Conference of London have come to an end."



OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE KING OF WIRTEMBERG.

William I. (Frederic Charles), King of Wirtemberg, was the elder son of Frederic I., King of Wirtemberg, by his first consort, Augusta (Princess Royal), Augusta Caroline, Princess Louise, daughter of Charles William Frederick, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. The King William's mother had been a favourite of Catherine II. of Russia, who eventually married her to Paul, passing her off as dead; and, on her actual death, Paul married Charlotte Augusta Matilda, daughter of George III. of England, who became Queen of Wirtemberg. Princess died his widow and Queen Dowager of Wirtemberg, at Stuttgart, on Sept. 27, 1781, and left a son and daughter. In the youth of the King the political agitation of the period and partly to the harsh and despotic character of the Duke of Wirtemberg, Frederic II., who had married Princess Augusta, a Prussian Princess, and had been made Count of Montbéliard, in Switzerland, and in the House of Peers, Napoleon. On the fall of Wirtemberg by French armies, in 1796 and 1799, he was an involuntary ally of France, and in 1805 he assisted away, in consequence of his disgraceful conduct at Austerlitz, despotic control over his residence in Paris, where he completed his education. When his father, at the visit of Napoleon, became King of Wirtemberg, the Prince continued to live a very retired life, being strongly adverse to that system of French aggression. In 1806, nevertheless, he married the Prince's first marriage, in 1808, with the Princess Augusta of Bavaria; but the union was dissolved by mutual consent in 1814. He served in the war of 1813, and in 1812 he commanded the Wirtemberg contingent of a grand army. Subsequently he was commander of the cavalry corps of the allied army, and distinguished himself at Bochitre and Montmirail. He while King, was proprietor-in-chief of the Wirtemberg Dragoons, and chief of the 8th Regiment of Russian Infantry. The Prince succeeded his father, as Duke of Wirtemberg, on Oct. 30, 1816, and, after the decease of Frederic I., was cordially welcomed to the throne. Nor did he disappoint the hopes and expectations of his people. He was a liberal ruler, a wise and efficient Monarch. He, on succeeding, set himself vigorously to reduce the expenditure, and, by curtailing the expenses of the court, in other matters he also made valuable reforms, and throughout his reign was ever ready to carry out any measure calculated to promote good, as were required of him, when the innovation was not forced on him by revolt not endured of necessity. In the course of time, Wirtemberg was one of the most venerated monarchs in Europe, being looked on as a liberal, honest Prince, who loyally kept his word in a manner unknown, unfortunately, most, whose happiness was the well-being of his people. On one of the public buildings at Stuttgart is the following inscription in his honour: "Happy the land where love is the subject, and love is the test." In this honourable, agreeable, and prosperous way, King Of Wirtemberg died in the seventy-eighth year. His Majesty, who was a Knight of the Garter, married, secondly, Jan. 24, 1816, Catherine Paulowna, Grand Duchess, Emperor of Russia, widow of Prince Peter of Holstein-Oldenburg, and by her (who died Jan. 9, 1819) he had two daughters—Frederica Charlotte Catherine Sophia, married, 1st, Prince Carl de Nassau; and Sophia Frederica Matilda, consort of the present King of Holland. His Majesty, who died April 25, 1850, his cousin, Pauline Theresa Louisa, daughter of Louis Frederic Alexander, Duke of Wirtemberg, and by her had a son, Alexander Paul Frederic Louis, Prince, Frederica Charlotte Frederica Charlotte, married to Frederic Prince of Wirtemberg, her cousin; and Princess Augusta Wilhelmina Henrietta, married to Hermann Charles George, Prince of Saxe-Weimar, Colonel Commandant of the 2nd Regiment of Wirtemberg Cavalry. The King of Wirtemberg died at the Royal Wirtemberg Castle, and is succeeded by his only son, Charles Frederic Alexander, now Charles I., King of Wirtemberg, who was born March 6, 1823, and is a Lieutenant-General in the army and Colonel of the 3rd (Ist-Norfgorod Regiment of Russian Dragoons. His Majesty married, July 13, 1846, Princess Catherine Olga Nicolajewna, daughter of Nicholas I., Emperor of Russia, and sister of Alexander II., his present Imperial Majesty of Russia.

EARL POULETT.

The Right Hon. John Poulett, fifth Earl Poulett, Viscount Hinton of Hinton St. George, in the county of Somerset, and Baron Poulett, of Hinton St. George, in the Peerage of England, was the eldest son of the late fourth Earl, by his wife, Sophia, second daughter of Admiral Sir George Cockburn, G.C.B., and was born in 1810. He succeeded his father as Earl on the death of Lady Charles Somerset, on Feb. 15, 1863, and succeeded to the Viscounty of Hinton and the Barony of his father, Jan. 14, 1819. He married, May 26, 1836, Charlotte Fanny, only child of the late Rev. Henry Berkeley Portman, Esq., and first cousin of the present Lord Portman, by whom, who survives him, he had a family of three sons and a daughter, all of whom died unmarried before him. The three sons were drowned in a boating accident, and the eldest was the only survivor of them. The second Viscount Hinton, died Aug. 29, 1857. Earl Poulett was Colonel of the 1st Somerset Militia from 1819 to 1852, and Lieutenant-Colonel of very retiring disposition and habits, had been in an infirm state of health for a long time past. He was a Knight of the Most Ancient Order of St. Patrick. His seat, George Crewkerne, Somersetshire.

William Henry, the second son of the late Sir William Fowell Pakenham, the Hon. George Pouletl, R.N., by his wife, Catherine Sophia, eldest daughter of Sir George Dallas, Bart., William Henry, now sixth Earl Poulett, is a Captain in the Army; he was born Sept. 22, 1827, and is married and has issue. This noble house of Poulett, or Paulett, is of very ancient origin. It springs immediately from Sir Thomas Paulet, Knight, whose younger brother, William Paulet, Serjeant-at-Law, was the ancestor of the present Marquis of Winchester. Sir Thomas Paulet's grandson, Sir Amias Paulett, was knighted for his valour at the battle of Nieuport-on-Yvest, June 10, 1487. His grandson, another Sir Amias Paulet, was one of the principal keepers of Queen Mary Stuart during her unjustifiable captivity in England. The second Sir Amias's grandson, John Poulett, a staunch Cavalier and an active commander in the Civil War, was created, on Oct. 14, 1627, by Charles I., Baron Poulett. His lordship's great grandson, John, fourth Lord Poulett, K.G., a Commissioner for the Scottish Union, was created Viscount Hinton and Earl Poulett in 1706. His direct descendants are the Earl just dead and the present Earl.

THE HON. FREDERICK CRAVEN.

The Hon. Frederick Craven, brother of William, second and present Earl Craven, and of the late Hon. Augustus Craven, died on the 21st ult. at his town house, 14, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, after a very brief illness. He was the youngest son of William, first Earl Craven, a Major-General in the Army, by his wife, Louisa Brunton, a celebrated actress, the fifth daughter of John Brunton, Esq., of Norwich. He was born April 11, 1812, and was educated at Eton. He was never married.

THE REV. CANON CURETON.

The Rev. William Cureton, D.D., F.R.S., a Canon of Westminster, Rector of St. Margaret's, Chaplain to Convocation, and Clerk of the Closet to the Queen, died at his residence, Westminster Abbey, on the 17th ult. at his country seat, Westbury, near Shrewsbury. He had received a check view of the battle-field of Solferino, Shrewsbury. He had received a check view of the battle-field of Solferino, Strenthan, about a year ago, and not more than three days before his death had obtained from the company a temporary large absence of attendance leave (£4170) for himself and his little daughter, who had sustained some injuries. The Canon's son and heir is now in his twenty-first year. He is the eldest son of William Cureton, Esq., by his wife, Mary, daughter of Thomas Newcombe, Esq., of Wardsbrook, Cork. He was born in 1808, and inherited from his father a small income, which might have enabled him to enter as a Commoner at the University; but his bent was entirely to the study of theology. He was not left very well provided for, and he matriculated in the humble position of servitor of Christ Church. In Michaelmas Term, 1830, he graduated as double third class. He became M.A. in 1833, and D.D. in 1838. In 1834, shortly after his ordination, he was appointed Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts in the library of the Bodleian Library at Oxford. In 1837 he removed to London, on his appointment as Assistant Keeper of the MSS. in the British Museum, at which post he remained, working diligently, till 1849, when he received a censure at Westminster, to which an Act of Parliament had attached a stipend of the parish of St. Margaret. Two years previously he had been appointed Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. Cureton's works are numerous, and show profoundly erudite. He edited the "Book of Religious and Philosophical Sects," from the Arabic of Shaharstani (1842-4); an Arabic manuscript of the "Lamentations" (1843); and, in the same year, "The Pillar of the Creed of the Stumbler." These were followed by his famous edition and translation of a Syriac version of the Epistles of St. Ignatius. Amongst other great and valuable discoveries was the edition of his "Palimpsest" fragments of the Syriac convent of Maria Deipara, in the Valley of Ascetics or the Desert of Nitria, and obtained with that object by the Syriac collection made by Dr. Augustus Pacho, in Egypt, and transferred to the trustees of the British Museum. He also added to the parts of Syriac literature which had been procured through the exertions of Archdeacon Pattam. Dr. Cureton married, in 1840, Harriet, eldest daughter of Henry Mayo, Esq., the eminent solicitor, by whom he leaves a youthful family. Two of his sons are at Westminster School. To his wife, Miss Mayo, he was married in Marylebone Church, the MSS. on the authority of which the Syriac text of the Epistles of St. Ignatius is based.

PROFESSOR JAMES MILLER.

This eminent surgeon and medical author died on the 17th ult., was the son of the Rev. Mr. Miller, a minister of the Kirk. He was born in 1812, and received his education at his father's native town, and at the University of St. Andrews. He studied medicine at Edinburgh as pupil of the great Liston, whose assistant he became, and whose life he subsequently wrote; his practice when Liston came to settle in London. Miller became M.D. and Licentiate of the College of Surgeons, and, in 1841, was elected Professor of Surgery in the University of Edinburgh. He was also Professor of Anatomy in the Royal Academy, Surgeon in Ordinary to the Queen for Scotland, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and he held a long list of appointments in connection with the hospitals and public institutions of Edinburgh. His literary works are highly esteemed. The principal are "A System of Surgery" and "Surgical Experience of Chloroform." He was the author also of the article on surgery in the new edition of "The Encyclopedia Britannica."

MR. GEORGE LANCE.

George Lance, who died on the 18th ult., a prolonged illness, which incapacitated him from the practice of his profession, was one of the most distinguished still-life painters of his age. Born in 1802, at Lichfield, near Colchester, he studied in the schools of the Royal Academy, and was for some time a pupil of Haydon. In the "Autobiography" of the latter there are several references to Lance which illustrate the character of both master and pupil, though, in many such references to Haydon, we should be on our guard against the strong personal prejudices of the writer. Lance first exhibited in 1826, at the Academy, as a landscape-painter. For several years later he became known more especially as a painter of fruit, flowers, and game, frequently painted on and around richly-embossed vessels of silver plate; occasionally a member or a known figure was introduced, and sometimes a glimpse of landscape background. Of these latter compositions, however, particularly during the first half of his career, several figure-subjects. Among the most important of these are "Melancholy," "The Child Samuel," "A Microscope," "The Village Coquette," "The Grandmother's Blessing," "The Art Enriched in the Lap of the Doc de Beauty." It must be confessed that in those Lance was seen to much less advantage than in his many perfectly unpretentious rest of fruit and flowers, several of which are worthy of the best Dutch painters for colour and closeness of imitation, while some of his best works have a richness of impasto and force of effect especially to himself. The painter was brought somewhat capriciously before the public in 1844, when the Parliamentary Committee investigated the grants to the National Gallery; and Lance stated in evidence that he had restored and even repainted portions of the celebrated picture, "Philip of Spain Hunting the Wild Boar." The artist's imitative skill had certainly deceived some keen connoisseurs—but of by it anyone was humiliated it was assuredly others rather than himself. Our readers will remember that we have been indebted to the deceased painter for one of the engravings from his works, and also for more than one of our most popular chromotypes. Mr. Lance was elected thirty-three years ago a member of the Belgian Society of Artists.

SAMUEL BROOKS, ESQ.

Samuel Brooks, Esq., the senior partner in the great banking establishment known as Messrs. Brooks and Co., 61, Lombard-street, and Messrs. Samuel Brooks, and Co., Blackburn Old Bank, Altrincham and Manchester, who died at Manchester on the 7th ult., in the seventy-second year of his age, entered his father's share in the Blackburn Old Bank and also founded (fifty-three years ago) the Manchester Bank, which has been his main establishment. He was not only eminently successful as a banker but he was also an able agriculturist, and as an employer of labour in the improvement of land he has been a great benefactor to the neighbourhood of Manchester. Large tracts, which before were comparatively unproductive, were by his judicious outlay in planting and in making roads and drains, been converted into favourite sites now covered with mansions. Among these may be named the estate in Cheshire Mr. Brooks constructed, at a cost of more than £40,000, a deep drainage cutting of great magnitude, more than five miles long, which entirely changed the climate of that district—banishing the fogs, as may be judged from the fact that whereas wheat used to be found it is now rarely grown, and is now a perfectly dry bed of gravel more than 16 ft. deep. Mr. Brooks has left two sons and five daughters. He had retired from any active participation in the business, which has for some years been carried on by his eldest son, William Cunliffe Brooks, Esq.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the Hon. Charlotte Shore, of Hove, Sussex, was proved in the London Court on the 8th ult. the executors being the Right Honorable Lord Overstone, the Right Hon. Charles John, Baron Teignmouth, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., and the Rev. Henry Venn Elliott, Vicar of Brighton, under whose ministry she had attended for many years, and left the sum of £13,000. Lincoln in trust for two of her nieces and two of her nephews; £5000 to a few other relatives or other of her relatives; a like sum of £5000 to her niece, the eldest daughter of her brother Lord Teignmouth, appointing her Lordship residuary legatee. There is a legacy of £100 to her own servant, free of duty.

The will of Frederick Richard Magenis, Esq., of Grosvenor-square, was proved in London by the executors Sophia Selina Anne Dashwood Magenis, K.C.B.; Thomas F. Wallace, Esq., of St. James-street, Westminster; and William Carlisle, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn—personal property sworn under £140,000. The will and first codicil are dated February, 1861. There are three subsequent codicils, the last dated the 20th of May, 1859, and proved on the 11th of the following month. After making some liberal bequests to relatives and friends, £50,000, the legacies of £5000 each to the children of nine legacies to his servants—to one man-servant, £500; to his housekeeper, £300; to another woman, each £200; to his gamekeeper, coachman, and valet, £100 to his groom, each £50; also many charitable bequests—he leaves the residue of his property to his daughter, Elizabeth Florence, wife of Admiral William Baillie, R.N., and to her issue. The yacht, the Mine, to leaves to the Captain. The following are among the charitable bequests:—Middlesex Hospital; Royal Free Hospital, Gray's-inn-road; the Jerusalem; Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Society; Royal Sea-Bathing Infirmary, Margate, each £200; and £100 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The will of Roger Cunliffe, Esq., of Bucklernbury, banker, and of Highbury-place, was proved in London by his sons, Roger Cunliffe, and Edward Shrubsole Cunliffe, Esqrs., the executors and trustees. The personalty was sworn under £120,000. The will bears date Sept. 8, 1865, and a codicil in the February following, and he died on the 16th of May last. He has devised his real property principally amongst his sons and daughters, bequeathing to his two sons immediate legacies of £6000, and an equal share in the residue of his estate real and personal. To each of his five daughters £10,000; and there are legacies to other members of his family. He denies that no money be taken from his share in the business but what may be absolutely necessary, and to bear an interest of £5 per cent, and that three months' notice be given to the partnership firm of any sums required exceeding £1000. There is one clause in the will we quote in his own words:—"And here I wish to explain that there are no legacies given to religious or charitable institutions in this my last will, because I have always thought it far more proper to make such gifts in the lifetime, and this I have been in the habit of doing consistently during a period of more than forty years."

The will of Samuel Brooks, Esq., banker, of Manchester, was proved on the 27th ult., by his eldest son, W. Cunliffe Brooks, Thomas Harrop Slidebottom, and William Norris, the executors and trustees of the will, the personalty being sworn under £140,000. Mr. Brooks has left two sons and five daughters, to each of whom he made settlements and deeds of gift in his lifetime. By his will, dated the 20th of March, 1858, and proved, with after other gifts and dispositions, the testator leaves to each of his five daughters property of the annual value of £1000 for each respectively. Estates to the value of nearly £200,000 are entailed on John Brooks, the son of testator's deceased son, Samuel Brooks, Rector of Wellington, Rector of Walker-le-Dale; and, after devising considerable estates specifically to his surviving sons, Mr. Cunliffe Brooks and Major Brooks, the testator ins gives to them the very large residue of his estates and other property.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G. S., Melbourne.—1. The last three moves by White, in your withdrawal end-game, are undoubtedly the best he could make. Can as much be said for the two previous moves? 2. Your MS. is in hand, but it appears to us to be rather too long. 3. We will look at it as soon as we can, but it appears to us to—3. Your former welcome communication has been replied to by post.

A. Z.—The key-move to the solution of your problem is as you state, and the solution is the set away of B to Q 8th.

J. Trischbiansky.—They are very acceptable, and shall have immediate attention.

J. F. Moorsom.—Received with thanks. The appearance of Le Nouvelle Aspersée is, no doubt, annoying to subscribers. Application should be made to the Editor of the Chess Player's Chronicle.

LAVERLOCK.—There is a copy, we believe, in the fine collection of Chess works belonging to Mr. Staunton, of Kensington.

R. H. P. Kinnear.—Your letter, and the problem it contained, have been transferred to "Indian Problems." Try to compose with originality, and with as few pieces on the chessboard as possible. Your present problem is not original, and is far too easy for the King's side any withdrawal.

J. Hunnex.—Your last solution appears sent was probably set up wrongly. That now forwarded is correct. Your problem shall have attention in due time.

M. P.—It may well be that there is a substantial retrocation in other and more important free games besides those you have mentioned in your letter. They are the only ones, however, in which we remember to have noted that playing the game was obligatory.

J. Trischbiansky.—We are very sorry to say that we have not, as yet, received the solution of the problem you sent. We should start with fifty numbers of the game you mention. The games you have been good enough to send us will be examined and returned at the earliest opportunity.

HERR KLIEN.—Received, with thanks.

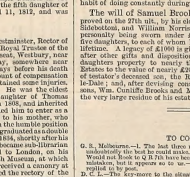
W. H. K. Pierce.—Your solution is correct at a glance, without setting up the men.

F. F. T. Bayley.—The letter, now before us, is unsigned.

C. BENHAM.—If admits of a second move, beginning. 1. Kt to Q 8th.

MATHO DE KAMMEN.—Both the solutions of No. 1,061 are incomplete—that of solution by another route, and are therefore inadmissible.

No. 1,062.—The number you require is found to be out of print.—2. Try the following :—1. B to K 8th. 1. Q takes B (ch). 3. Kt to K 5th. The rest may be left to your own sagacity.



* Our customers, if there will be any given moment, can have the answers to very many questions, are deferred from want of room.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1061.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Q B 3rd	P takes Q (best)
2. P to K 3rd	Any move
	3. R, Kt, or Pawn mates.

PROBLEM NO. 1062.
By HERR KLIEN.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and give mate in four moves.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

An agreeable little Game played by the Brooklyn Chess Club, between Mr. ELDER and Mr. MARACHE.—(Day Legret' Defence.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. E.)	WHITE (Mr. M.)
1. P to K 4th	10. Q takes Q P (ch)	20. K to Kt 3rd
2. Kt to K B 3rd	11. Q takes K Kt	21. Q to K B 3rd
3. B to Q B 4th	12. Q to K 3rd	22. Q to Q 3rd
(This defence has been laboriously examined, and is considered sound. Its object is to partially unlock the game by the sacrifice of the centre of moves which they give as the best.)	13. Q to K 5th	23. Q to Q 2nd
4. P to Q 4th	14. Q to K 6th (ch)	24. Q to Q 3rd
5. P to Q B 3rd	15. Q to K 5th	25. Q to K 3rd
6. P to Q 5th	16. P to Q B 3rd	26. Q to K B 2nd
7. P to Q B 4th	17. Kt to Q 2nd	27. Q to K 3rd
8. B to Q 3rd	18. B to Q Kt 2nd	28. Q to K 2nd
9. Kt to K 2nd	19. Q to K 4th	29. Q to K 3rd
10. P takes P	20. Kt to K B 3rd	B takes B
11. Q to Q 4th	21. Kt to K 5th	B to Q 3rd
12. B to K 4th	22. K to Q sq	Q to Q 2nd
13. Kt to K 5th	23. K to Q 2nd	Q to K B 2nd
14. Q to K 3rd	24. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
15. Q to Q 4th	25. Kt to K 5th	Q to K 2nd
16. Q to Q B 2nd	26. Kt to K B 3rd	B takes B
17. Kt to Q 2nd	27. Kt to Q 2nd	Q to Q 2nd
18. Kt to K B 3rd	28. K to Q B sq	Q to K B 2nd
19. Kt to K 5th	29. K to Q Kt sq	Q to K 3rd
20. Kt to K B 3rd	30. K to Q B 2nd	Q to K 2nd
21. Kt to K 5th	31. Kt to Q 2nd	Q to K B 2nd
22. K to Q sq	32. K to Q Kt sq	Q to K 3rd
23. K to Q 2nd	33. K to Q B 2nd	Q to K 2nd
24. Q to K 3rd	34. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
25. Kt to K 5th	35. Kt to K 6th (ch)	Q to K 3rd
26. Kt to K B 3rd	36. Kt to K 5th	Q to K 2nd
27. Kt to K 5th	37. Kt to Q 2nd	Q to K B 2nd
28. Kt takes B	38. B to Q 3rd	Q to K 3rd
29. Kt to K 5th	39. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
30. Kt to K B 3rd	40. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
31. Kt to K 5th	41. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
32. Kt to K B 3rd	42. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
33. Kt to K 5th	43. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
34. Kt to K B 3rd	44. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
35. Kt to K 5th	45. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
36. Kt to K B 3rd	46. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
37. Kt to K 5th	47. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
38. Kt to K B 3rd	48. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
39. Kt to K 5th	49. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
40. Kt to K B 3rd	50. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
41. Kt to K 5th	51. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
42. Kt to K B 3rd	52. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
43. Kt to K 5th	53. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
44. Kt to K B 3rd	54. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
45. Kt to K 5th	55. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
46. Kt to K B 3rd	56. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
47. Kt to K 5th	57. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
48. Kt to K B 3rd	58. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
49. Kt to K 5th	59. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
50. Kt to K B 3rd	60. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
51. Kt to K 5th	61. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
52. Kt to K B 3rd	62. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
53. Kt to K 5th	63. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
54. Kt to K B 3rd	64. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
55. Kt to K 5th	65. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
56. Kt to K B 3rd	66. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
57. Kt to K 5th	67. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
58. Kt to K B 3rd	68. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
59. Kt to K 5th	69. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
60. Kt to K B 3rd	70. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
61. Kt to K 5th	71. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
62. Kt to K B 3rd	72. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
63. Kt to K 5th	73. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
64. Kt to K B 3rd	74. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
65. Kt to K 5th	75. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
66. Kt to K B 3rd	76. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
67. Kt to K 5th	77. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
68. Kt to K B 3rd	78. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
69. Kt to K 5th	79. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
70. Kt to K B 3rd	80. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
71. Kt to K 5th	81. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
72. Kt to K B 3rd	82. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
73. Kt to K 5th	83. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
74. Kt to K B 3rd	84. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
75. Kt to K 5th	85. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
76. Kt to K B 3rd	86. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
77. Kt to K 5th	87. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
78. Kt to K B 3rd	88. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
79. Kt to K 5th	89. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
80. Kt to K B 3rd	90. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
81. Kt to K 5th	91. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
82. Kt to K B 3rd	92. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
83. Kt to K 5th	93. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
84. Kt to K B 3rd	94. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
85. Kt to K 5th	95. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
86. Kt to K B 3rd	96. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
87. Kt to K 5th	97. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
88. Kt to K B 3rd	98. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
89. Kt to K 5th	99. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
90. Kt to K B 3rd	100. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
91. Kt to K 5th	101. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
92. Kt to K B 3rd	102. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
93. Kt to K 5th	103. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
94. Kt to K B 3rd	104. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
95. Kt to K 5th	105. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
96. Kt to K B 3rd	106. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
97. Kt to K 5th	107. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
98. Kt to K B 3rd	108. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
99. Kt to K 5th	109. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
100. Kt to K B 3rd	110. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
101. Kt to K 5th	111. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
102. Kt to K B 3rd	112. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
103. Kt to K 5th	113. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
104. Kt to K B 3rd	114. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
105. Kt to K 5th	115. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
106. Kt to K B 3rd	116. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
107. Kt to K 5th	117. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
108. Kt to K B 3rd	118. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
109. Kt to K 5th	119. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
110. Kt to K B 3rd	120. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
111. Kt to K 5th	121. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
112. Kt to K B 3rd	122. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
113. Kt to K 5th	123. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
114. Kt to K B 3rd	124. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
115. Kt to K 5th	125. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
116. Kt to K B 3rd	126. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
117. Kt to K 5th	127. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
118. Kt to K B 3rd	128. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
119. Kt to K 5th	129. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
120. Kt to K B 3rd	130. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
121. Kt to K 5th	131. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
122. Kt to K B 3rd	132. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
123. Kt to K 5th	133. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
124. Kt to K B 3rd	134. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
125. Kt to K 5th	135. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
126. Kt to K B 3rd	136. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
127. Kt to K 5th	137. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
128. Kt to K B 3rd	138. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
129. Kt to K 5th	139. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
130. Kt to K B 3rd	140. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
131. Kt to K 5th	141. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
132. Kt to K B 3rd	142. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
133. Kt to K 5th	143. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
134. Kt to K B 3rd	144. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
135. Kt to K 5th	145. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
136. Kt to K B 3rd	146. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
137. Kt to K 5th	147. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
138. Kt to K B 3rd	148. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
139. Kt to K 5th	149. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
140. Kt to K B 3rd	150. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
141. Kt to K 5th	151. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
142. Kt to K B 3rd	152. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
143. Kt to K 5th	153. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
144. Kt to K B 3rd	154. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
145. Kt to K 5th	155. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
146. Kt to K B 3rd	156. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
147. Kt to K 5th	157. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
148. Kt to K B 3rd	158. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
149. Kt to K 5th	159. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
150. Kt to K B 3rd	160. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
151. Kt to K 5th	161. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
152. Kt to K B 3rd	162. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
153. Kt to K 5th	163. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
154. Kt to K B 3rd	164. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
155. Kt to K 5th	165. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
156. Kt to K B 3rd	166. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
157. Kt to K 5th	167. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
158. Kt to K B 3rd	168. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
159. Kt to K 5th	169. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
160. Kt to K B 3rd	170. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
161. Kt to K 5th	171. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
162. Kt to K B 3rd	172. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
163. Kt to K 5th	173. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
164. Kt to K B 3rd	174. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
165. Kt to K 5th	175. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
166. Kt to K B 3rd	176. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
167. Kt to K 5th	177. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
168. Kt to K B 3rd	178. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
169. Kt to K 5th	179. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
170. Kt to K B 3rd	180. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
171. Kt to K 5th	181. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
172. Kt to K B 3rd	182. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
173. Kt to K 5th	183. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
174. Kt to K B 3rd	184. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
175. Kt to K 5th	185. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
176. Kt to K B 3rd	186. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
177. Kt to K 5th	187. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
178. Kt to K B 3rd	188. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
179. Kt to K 5th	189. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
180. Kt to K B 3rd	190. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
181. Kt to K 5th	191. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
182. Kt to K B 3rd	192. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
183. Kt to K 5th	193. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
184. Kt to K B 3rd	194. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
185. Kt to K 5th	195. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
186. Kt to K B 3rd	196. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
187. Kt to K 5th	197. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
188. Kt to K B 3rd	198. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
189. Kt to K 5th	199. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
190. Kt to K B 3rd	200. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
191. Kt to K 5th	201. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
192. Kt to K B 3rd	202. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
193. Kt to K 5th	203. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
194. Kt to K B 3rd	204. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
195. Kt to K 5th	205. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
196. Kt to K B 3rd	206. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
197. Kt to K 5th	207. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
198. Kt to K B 3rd	208. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
199. Kt to K 5th	209. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
200. Kt to K B 3rd	210. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
201. Kt to K 5th	211. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
202. Kt to K B 3rd	212. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
203. Kt to K 5th	213. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
204. Kt to K B 3rd	214. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
205. Kt to K 5th	215. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
206. Kt to K B 3rd	216. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
207. Kt to K 5th	217. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
208. Kt to K B 3rd	218. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
209. Kt to K 5th	219. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
210. Kt to K B 3rd	220. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
211. Kt to K 5th	221. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
212. Kt to K B 3rd	222. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
213. Kt to K 5th	223. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
214. Kt to K B 3rd	224. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
215. Kt to K 5th	225. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
216. Kt to K B 3rd	226. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
217. Kt to K 5th	227. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
218. Kt to K B 3rd	228. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
219. Kt to K 5th	229. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
220. Kt to K B 3rd	230. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
221. Kt to K 5th	231. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
222. Kt to K B 3rd	232. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
223. Kt to K 5th	233. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
224. Kt to K B 3rd	234. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
225. Kt to K 5th	235. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
226. Kt to K B 3rd	236. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
227. Kt to K 5th	237. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
228. Kt to K B 3rd	238. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
229. Kt to K 5th	239. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
230. Kt to K B 3rd	240. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
231. Kt to K 5th	241. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
232. Kt to K B 3rd	242. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
233. Kt to K 5th	243. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
234. Kt to K B 3rd	244. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
235. Kt to K 5th	245. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
236. Kt to K B 3rd	246. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
237. Kt to K 5th	247. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
238. Kt to K B 3rd	248. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
239. Kt to K 5th	249. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
240. Kt to K B 3rd	250. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
241. Kt to K 5th	251. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
242. Kt to K B 3rd	252. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
243. Kt to K 5th	253. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
244. Kt to K B 3rd	254. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
245. Kt to K 5th	255. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
246. Kt to K B 3rd	256. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
247. Kt to K 5th	257. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
248. Kt to K B 3rd	258. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
249. Kt to K 5th	259. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
250. Kt to K B 3rd	260. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
251. Kt to K 5th	261. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
252. Kt to K B 3rd	262. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
253. Kt to K 5th	263. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
254. Kt to K B 3rd	264. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
255. Kt to K 5th	265. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
256. Kt to K B 3rd	266. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
257. Kt to K 5th	267. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
258. Kt to K B 3rd	268. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
259. Kt to K 5th	269. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
260. Kt to K B 3rd	270. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
261. Kt to K 5th	271. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
262. Kt to K B 3rd	272. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
263. Kt to K 5th	273. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
264. Kt to K B 3rd	274. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
265. Kt to K 5th	275. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
266. Kt to K B 3rd	276. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
267. Kt to K 5th	277. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
268. Kt to K B 3rd	278. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
269. Kt to K 5th	279. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
270. Kt to K B 3rd	280. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
271. Kt to K 5th	281. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
272. Kt to K B 3rd	282. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
273. Kt to K 5th	283. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
274. Kt to K B 3rd	284. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
275. Kt to K 5th	285. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
276. Kt to K B 3rd	286. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
277. Kt to K 5th	287. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd
278. Kt to K B 3rd	288. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
279. Kt to K 5th	289. Q to K 4th	Q to K B 2nd
280. Kt to K B 3rd	290. Q to K 3rd	Q to K 3rd
281. Kt to K 5th	291. Q to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
282. Kt to K B 3rd	292. Q to K 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
283. Kt to K 5th	293. Q to K 4th	Q to K 3rd

NEW MUSIC.

AVE MARIS STELLA.—Prayer in "Grisella," for Soprano. Composed by VIRGINIA GABRIEL. Price 3s. net. The words by words by
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FAREWELL, MY BARK.—Contralto Song in "Grisella." Song by Miss. Julian Bailey. Composed by VIRGINIA GABRIEL. Price 3s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SUNG BY MDME LEMMES-SHERRINGTON.

SWEET NIGHTINGALE. By F. BOSCOVITCH. In three keys—key 1, for E flat to E flat; key 2, for F to F; key 3, for G to G. Price 3s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SUNG BY MDME. SAINTON-DOLBY.

IRENE. Italian Romance. Composed by LOUIS ENGEL. Price 3s. In B for Contralto or Baritone, in C for Mezzo-Soprano.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE REPROACH. A Song. By Mdme. SAINTON-DOLBY. In three keys. Price 3s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MDME. OURY'S ROBERT LE DIABLE. Fantasia for Pianoforte. Played by the Composer at her Concerts. Price 4s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

H. W. GOODBAN'S PRINCE OF WALES BRIDAL MARCH, as played at the State Concert and Ball at the Guards. Plate Solo, 3s. (illustrated). For Military or Brass Bands, 1s. 6d. net.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 39, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GASTON DE LILLE'S NINA. A charming Pianoforte Piece. Price 3s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GASTON DE LILLE'S SUMMER'S NIGHT POLKA-MAZURKA. A companion to his popular "Winter's Night Polka-Mazurka." Price 3s. net.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SWING SONG. By Ch. FONTAINE. A novel and striking ballad. Price 3s.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

T. BROWNE'S LOCOMOTIVE GALOP. A Grand Waltz. Solo, 3s. Duet, 4s. Effective Military Band Arrangement. Solo, Septet, 2s.; and full Orchestra, 3s. 6d.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BANTING.—The New Comic Song.—To convey a complete cure this sketch is purchased. With a portrait of Banting, 3s. net.
MUTTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SWEET SMITH'S LES HUGUENOTS. Grand Brilliant Fantasia. Decidedly the best that has been written on Meyerbeer's magnificent opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GOLDEN BELLS. A charming, expressive, elegant, and melodious Fantasia, destined to become as popular as "La Reine Bohemie." Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PAS REDOUBLE. A bold, spirited and lightly effective martial piece. Played by the military bands with great success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE NUIT ÉTOILÉE. A melodious and charming cavatina. One of the most successful of the numerous pieces which this composer has written. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MARTHA. A new and most admirable piece on the best airs in Flotow's melodious and pleasing opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. Played by the composer nightly at his concerts at the Royal Illustrated London Rooms. Price 3s. Post-free, 24 stamps.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA VIVACITÉ. Polka de Concert. Composed by the composer of all the popular polkas of the time with immense success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING.—GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdme. Parepa with unparalleled success. For Soprano or Tenor. Price 3s.
EUDES'S Arrangements for Pianoforte Solo. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

Just published.

MY HEART IS EVER SHINE. New Song. Words and Music by C. M. S. OLIVER. Price 3s. 6d.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

THE PICNIC WALTZES. By Miss C. M. E. OLIVER. With an excellent Lithographic Illustration. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

STRADELLA. By FLOTOW. Pianoforte Arrangements.

THE SERENADE. Transcribed by Ernst Pauer. 4s.
THE DUET. Transcribed by Arthur O'Leary. 3s.
FANTASIA on the Principal Airs. By the same. 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.
EWER and Co., 390, Strand.

STRADELLA. By FLOTOW. The Vocal Music.—HYMN, 4s. 6d. SERENADE, 2s. BRIDKING SONG, 2s. Post-free for half the price in stamps.
LONDON: EWER and Co., 97, Regent-street.

NEW SONG, by Miss C. M. E. OLIVER. "When Sailed I out in the Good Ship." Tune under the old boat-song.
"Sweet Dreams, form a Bridge." Price 3s. net.
Sung by her pupils, and to be had forwith of the Composer.
To be had of all Musicsellers in town and country. Price 6d. net.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by BROADWOOD, CLARK, and other eminent makers, to be had at very reduced prices. These Pianofortes have been hired by the Middlesex and Surrey Rifle Association during the present season, which is a guarantee of their soundness.—COCK, HUTCHINGS, and CO., 63 and 64, New Bond-street.

KIRKMAN'S 7-octave Trichord SEMI-GRAND and DRAWING-ROOM GRAND PIANOFORTES, with the latest improvements. These Pianofortes, manufactured from 30 guineas and upwards, for variety of tone, perfection of touch, and durability, their instruments are unrivalled.—COCK, HUTCHINGS, and SONS, 63 and 64, New Bond-street, and 9, New Road-street, London, W.

KIRKMAN'S Celebrated 7-octave Trichord Pianofortes, of every description for SALE or HIRE.—COCK, HUTCHINGS, and CO.'s Pianoforte Warehouse, 63 and 64, New Bond-street, London.

FLOWER-STANDS and BASKETS for the Dinner Table, Drawing-room, or elegant morning-room. Gold and Silvered at Messrs. HAMMOND, Importers, 12, Bishopsgate-street Without. VIDE "London Illustrated News."

THOMAS'S PATENT SEWING-MACHINES, for Private Family use, Dressmaking, &c. They will Hem, Bind, Braid, Gather, Tuck, Quilt, Embroider, and Work Ornamental designs of the most elegant description by hand or application to W. F. THOMAS and Co., 1, Cheapside; and Regent-circus, Oxford-street.

GROVER and BAKER'S SEWING-MACHINES, for hand, foot, combined, plain, twist, lock-stitch, and chain-stitch, with equal facility.

GROVER and BAKER, 150, Regent-street, W.—Celebrated ELASTIC-STITCH SEWING-MACHINES, with recent improvements, adapted to all descriptions of work, and unrivalled for general use.

GROVER and BAKER'S SEWING-MACHINES are simple, durable, easily managed, not liable to get out of order, and require no re-winding of thread.

PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE,
No. 50, Regent-street, Lovers, W.
Established 1806.
Invested Capital, £1,650,333.
Annual Income, £370,126.
Bonuses added, £1,250,000.
Claims Paid since the Establishment of the Office, £3,078,343.
PRESIDENT.—The Right Honourable Earl Grey.
CHAIRMAN OF DIRECTORS.—Frederick Squire, Esq.
DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.—Richard Downes, Esq.
MEDICAL OFFICER.—Thomas Hawkins, M.D.
The Profits, subject to a triennial division, are divided among the Insured.
EXAMPLES OF BONUSES ON POLICIES ISSUED BY THE PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE.

Number of Policy.	Date of Policy.	Premium.	Amount with Bonus Additions.
		£ s. d.	£ s. d.
4718	1833	104 15 10	5000 10,628 14 9
3994	1831	102 1 8	5000 10,161 17 6
4537	1848	205 13 4	4000 9,657 3 3
4541	1848	102 6 8	2000 4,828 11 7
5780	1856	77 0 0	2000 3,017 0 0
5787	1856	122 13 4	4000 5,576 11 9
3944	1831	52 0 0	1000 2,588 7 6
798	1809	23 18 4	1000 2,767 13 5

JOHN HENRIOTT, Secretary.

MALVERN PROPRIETARY COLLEGE COMPANY (LIMITED).
PRESIDENT AND VISITOR—The Right Hon. the LORD BISHOP of WORCESTER.
HEAD MASTER—The Rev. ARTHUR FABER, M.A., Fellow and late Tutor of Queen's College, Oxford.
The Council hereby give Notice that the Malvern College will be opened for the reception of pupils on WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1864, with an efficient staff of Masters.
The Buildings now erected for the College will be under the sole Government and Head Mastership of the gentleman whose appointment to that duty is detailed by addressing him at New College, Oxford.
Applications for Shares to be made to the Secretary, HENRY ALDRICH, Esq., Orwell Lodge, Malvern, from whom also any further information may be obtained.
Malvern, 30th June, 1864.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS, adjoining the Packet Office. Board, lodging, and attendance, 7s. per day. Incluse a stamp for an interesting Sketch of the Island and Map.

MONEY.—Mr. W. F. MORRIS'S Offices are NOW OPEN, and Noblemen, Baronets, Members of Parliament, and gentlemen, heirs to estates, and others can have immediate advances according to their requirements, on their reversionary interests, bequests, Chancery degrees, or annuities, by way of mortgage, at 5 per cent. No preliminary fee. Letters only attended to, or bring or send.
W. F. MORRIS, 3, Bedford-row, Holborn.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send Name and County to GUILLOCHE and CO., 39, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, who will search the Heralds' College for authentic information. Arms painted and quartered, plain sketch, 5s.; in heraldic colours, 12s. Crests on Seals or Rings, beautifully painted in heraldic colours, large size, 12s.; Family Pedigrees traced. Boundary Maps of Parishes, Estates, &c., and when granted, 20s. per 2, Collection, 3l. 3s. Cruikshank-street (Four doors from Holborn).

MONOGRAMS DESIGNED, Pencil Sketch, 2s. 6d.
CULLETON'S SOLID GOLD RINGS, 18-carat, Hall-marked, Engraved with Crest, 42s.
EMBOSSING PRESS for stamping paper with Crest or Address, 18s.
CULLETON'S GOLD PENS, with Gold Pencil-case, 10s. 6d., 21s., 31s. 6d., 42s., 52s. 6d., 63s., 84s., Post-free.
CULLETON'S CRESTS ENGRAVED, and 50 best cards, 7s. Post-free.
CULLETON'S GOLD SEALS engraved with any Crest, 30s.
BOOK-PLATES engraved with Arms and Crest, for 1 Volt-plate and 100 Impressions, 21s.
CULLETON'S ARMORIAL WAFERS, in packets, 1s. Cent., 10s. LIVERY BUTTONS, with Crest, 3s. per dozen.
CULLETON'S SEAL PRESS, 21s.
The PROPER COLOURS for Servants' Liveries, how the Carriage is to be Painted, and Harness to be Mounted, 2s. 6d.
CULLETON'S ARMS, 25, CRANBOURN-STREET, for marking Cheques, Bank Notes, Books, &c., 5s. 6d.
ARMS ENGRAVED ON SEALS, 10s.
CREST ENGRAVED ON SEALS, 7s.
25, CRANBOURN-STREET, LEICESTER-SQUARE.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX OF STATIONERY. No charge for Stamping Name, Initials, or Crest with Monogram, or Address if an order is given for a Ream of the best Paper and 100 Envelopes, 21s. Sent Post-free.
CULLETON'S, 25, CRANBOURN-STREET, LEICESTER-SQUARE.

MONOGRAMS and CRESTS for ALBUMS, stamped in relief, various colours, 6d. per sheet.

STENCIL PLATES for marking Drawings, Linen, Books, Seals, Wood, &c., 6d. each, and upwards.

CULLETON'S MANUAL OF HERALDRY, 400 Engravings, a full description of the science, 3s. 6d., post-free. CULLETON, HERALD and ENGRAVER, 25, Cranbourn-street, and all the Royal Family; also Director to the Board of Trade, 20, Cockspur-street corner of St. Martin's-lane.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE—send name and county. Arms painted and pedigrees traced. Fee, Plain Sketch, 5s. Proper Colours of Families, 2s.—PUGH BROTHERS, successors to H. Sadd.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. The Correct Heraldic Engraving for Seals, Dies, Rings, Plate, Arms, Crests, &c., authoritatively. The Manorial Rolls Attended to. Sketch, 3s. or stamped—PUGH BROTHERS, 61, Chancery-lane.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. Seals and Dies, 10s. 6d.—Arms, Crests, &c., Emblazoned in Proper Colours, 5s. 6d.—Arms Quarterly, 10s. 6d.—Solid Gold Signet Rings and Crests, 21s.—Illuminated Addresses.—PUGH BROTHERS, 61, Chancery-lane.

NOTICE.—New Stock.—PRINTS, for albums and scrap-books, in immense variety, at the undersigned's new premises—Catalogues, 6d. each, containing 1,000 to 12 comic scraps, 1s.; 12 photographic scraps, 1s.; 12 drawing scraps, 1s.; 12 sheets of scraps, 1s.; 12 sheets of flowers, 1s.; 12 sheets of butterflies, animals, or figures, 1s.; 12 sheets of birds, 1s.; 12 sheets of children, 1s.; 12 sheets of ladies, 1s.—ADDIS, JOHN JERRARD, 178, Fleet-street, London, E.C. Established 1820. Wholesale and Retail.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS. REDUCTION IN PRICE to ONE SHILLING from the set of TWELVE. CARTES DE VISITE of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public Characters of the day, from the Photographs of Mr. LEVITZKY, 2, Regent-street, Waterloo-place. Specimens may be seen at the Establishment, and Lists of Prices can be had on application. Copies of Pictures, Paintings, Engravings, &c., by the Photographic Process, at the reduced price of 1s. each (double portraits, 2s. 6d.), post-free. Lists sent post-free on application. Established 1851, on receipt of references. The trade supplied on favourable terms.
2, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, London.

MAYALL'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAIT GALLERIES, 224, Regent-street, and 10, Royal Exchange. CARTES DE VISITE and highly-finished PHOTOGRAPHS up to Life-size, by the Patent Process. List of prices free.

LOCK and WHITFIELD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC MINIATURES on PORCELAIN, MARBLE, and IVORY. Portraits taken daily.—Photographic Miniatures already arranged at Messrs. Lock and Whitfield's Establishment, 182, Regent-street, may be had on application. Miniatures on Porcelain, Marble, and Ivory. The softness and delicacy of these pictures cannot easily be surpassed. Messrs. Lock and Whitfield will feel much pleased in showing them to all who may favour them with a visit.—182, Regent-street, W.

CREST, MONOGRAM, or ADDRESS, Stamped in Perfection by RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly. Sold by HENRY KEAS, Stationer and Heraldic Engraver, 2, Sidney-place, New Cross-road, Deptford.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, with silver or plated fittings, in great variety. Mounted and Ornamental Dressing Bags, bendole, tablette, and writing-cases, and a choice selection of elegant articles suitable for presents.—RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, W.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and TRAVELLING WRITING CASES, in russia, or morocco, of the best manufacture, fitted with every requisite for travelling, and for use in the office or counting-house.—RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, W.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS. In splendid binding, from 4s. to 2l. 2s. gilt-edges. Albums for Photographs and Autographs. Portraits of Celebrities, 6d. each, at H. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly. W. Catalogues post-free.

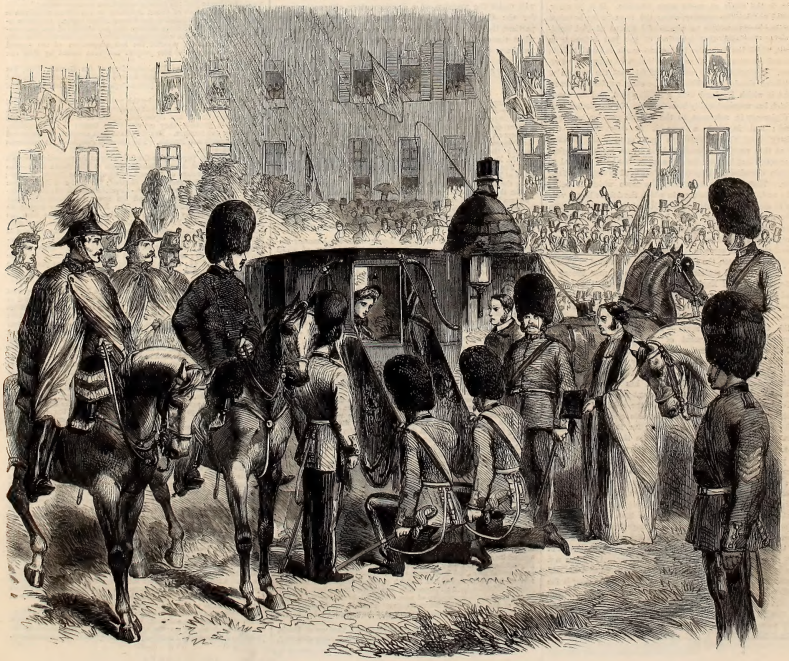
NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Plain.—Rodrigues' Cream-laid Note, 4s. per ream; 100 Thread-lined Envelopes, 5s.—RODRIGUES, Stationer, 42, Piccadilly.

A VISITING CARD-PLATE ENGRAVED, and 100 CARDS printed, for 4s. 6d. Wedding Cards and Envelopes, Hall Programmes, and Bills of Fare printed and stamped with Crest or Address at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE. — MAPPIN, and WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers to the Queen, beg to be at sterling quality, and exchange any article if not approved:—

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread Pattern.	Ornamental Patterns.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Table spoons, or forks, per doz.	1 1 0	1 10 0	2 0 0
Dessert spoons	0 15 0	1 0 0	1 10 0
Tea spoons	0 10 0	0 14 0	1 0 0
Side dishes and covers, per set	3 10 0	5 10 0	10 0 0
Cruet frames, with glasses	1 5 0	1 10 0	2 0 0
Fish carvers and forks, in case	1 10 0	2 0 0	3 0 0
12 pairs dessert knives and forks	3 10 0	5 0 0	9 10 0
12 pairs table knives and forks	3 0 0	4 10 0	8 0 0
Tea and coffee services, per set	4 15 0	7 10 0	20 0 0
Bread baskets, from 1l. 10s. to	3 0 0	5 0 0	10 0 0
Waiters, per inch	0 2 6	0 3 6	0 5 0
Toast-racks, each	0 11 0	0 14 0	1 0 0
Cruets in all shapes, each	0 12 6	0 15 0	1 0 0
Butter coolers, every variety	1 0 0	1 12 0	2 0 0

Tea and Coffee Sets, Dish Covers, Corner Dishes, Cake and Cake Baskets, Candlesticks, Candelabra, Tea Trays, Urns, and Kettles, Tea Chests, Desks, Dressing Bags, Portfolios, Envelope Cases, Inkstands, Dinner Bells, Waiters, Card Trays, Cabinet Goods, Table Cutlery, Razors, Scissors, Penknives, Dressing Cases, Writing Cases, Work Boxes, Tea Caddies, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, Kettles, Lamps, Candlesticks, Candelabra, Dish Covers, Hot-water Dishes, Corner Dishes, Cake Baskets, Bread Baskets, Cruet Frames, Liqueur Frames, Biscuit Boxes, Knife Trays, Fish Carvers, Fish Knives and Forks, Dessert Knives and Forks, Table Knives and Forks, Fish Knives and Forks, Fish Carvers, Fish Slices, Fish Eaters, Fish Servers, Fish Trowels, Fish Forks, Fish Knives



THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1267.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE VOTE OF CENSURE.

THE constitutional system of this country is a machine which, like all other machines, finds its vitality in friction. Out of the resistance obtained by the rubbing together of opposing bodies are elicited the light and heat and all the elements essential to vigour and usefulness. Even in the much-sneered-at vestries of a locally self-governed land this principle is always in active and valuable operation; it pervades our municipal institutions, and it culminates in the great council of the nation, which we familiarly call Parliament. An Opposition is as necessary to the proper government of the country as a Ministry, and if the latter has its rights as well its duties, the former is equally well endowed in these respects, and is not spared its share of abstract responsibility. It fares ill for the political welfare of the people when an Opposition grows supine, for in proportion a Ministry grows despotic or careless; and legislation, as understood in a constitutional sense, becomes little better than a collection of decrees by the grace of the Government. During the later existence of the present Parliament there has been,—so far, at least, as broad questions and large interests are concerned—something approaching to this state of things. The Opposition has been led by statesmen not unambitious, but who have been twice tried as conductors of the affairs of the nation and have been deliberately rejected by two Parliaments, one of them chosen under their own auspices. A Minister has been at the head of the Government whose traditionary claims to authority, as a diplomatist and an administrator, were unimpeachable, and whose personal popularity and whose skill as a member of Parliament were admitted to be second to none. By an adroit fusion of politicians in his Cabinet he had neutralised such antagonism of degree as might have lurked in the ranks of the Liberal party, and on great emergencies might have reckoned on a stern and steadfast closing of the whole body against aggression from their opponents. The consequence of this combination of circumstances has been the approach of that listlessness on the part of Parliament, and that jaunty indifference on the part of Ministers, which we have above indicated; and the outside world had begun to think that the Sessions of the Legislature were intended to serve the purpose only of passing the Estimates and producing first-rate Budgets. As it happened, Ministers were admitted ungrudgingly to be strong and worthy of all trust in foreign politics; and therefore, while it was believed that the character and influence of England abroad were preserved, and while taxation was dealt with from a popular point of view, there was a fair chance of the Government being left pretty nearly to its own devices in other matters, whatever they might be. Always, of late years, in the month of February, speculation has been rife as to how, with any decent show of business-doing, Parliament was to get through the six months which are devoted by custom to legislation; and this was especially the case in the present year, when the Queen's Speech was, for all the work that it indicated, a blank, and there was no hope that the most sanguine efforts would be successful in preventing a very humdrum Session. Nevertheless, ere long there arose circumstances which an Opposition, eager in its aspirations for power, fearless of responsibility, and strong in the consciousness of a policy of its own, might long ago have turned to political and Parliamentary profit for itself and its party. By a series of mishaps, the strong point of the Government was transformed into its weak one, and it was on the question of its foreign policy that it was found to be assailable, if anyone was desirous and capable of assailing it. Long ago it was within the means of the Opposition to have impeached that policy and brought it to a direct issue before the proper tribunal; but a sense of inherent debility caused the leaders of that body, who knew enough of the mysteries of Ministers to render them timid, to acquiesce in all the stereotyped pleas for delay in treating by open discussion the delicate secrecies of foreign policy; and, as usual, the Parliament and the people were compelled to wait until diplomatic action on the affairs of Denmark was over, when all that could be said could avail nothing to alter what had been done, and when the matter for consideration had ceased to be national or international and had become merely personal—that is, one which concerned the conduct of Ministers merely. The moment of this negative ripeness having arrived, the Opposition, after much hesitation and no little travail, screwed its courage to the sticking place and contrived to produce that half-hearted motion of censure which is galvanising Parliament in these its expiring days in the month of July.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES PRESENTING NEW COLOURS TO THE HON. ARTILLERY COMPANY.—SEE PAGE 31.

It has been written and said that the country takes deep interest in this question of Denmark, and perhaps it is the fact, so far as the country ever does take interest in any matter of foreign policy which does not bring England into such participation in the affair as resets upon taxation. It is, however, doubtful whether the country, using the term in its broadest sense, has been conscious in any real degree of that basis of limitation of England, that lowering of her just influence in Europe, which has been the text of so much inflated talk in clubs and coteries and of so many indignant essays in newspapers. Nevertheless, it was but right that the opinion of Parliament should have been asked on the conduct of transactions in which England took a leading part, and the result of which has unquestionably been failure. No one denies that our diplomacy in reference to the Danish question has been baffled; and in such a case it is only due to the Ministry that they should be put upon their defence. But, at this particular juncture, it is by no means a logical consequence that because the Government has been unequal to a certain occasion the Opposition is entitled to step into their places. That however is, in fact, the issue which is being tried; and, looking to the tone in which the debate has been early to assume, it is fortunate for Ministers that the question has been accepted in that way. In a certain sense, Denmark has become a secondary consideration in the discussion; and the real contest turns on the point whether the time has arrive to go out and the outs to come in. Notwithstanding this narrowing of the subject matter, the opportunity has been used to advantage, and in several statesmanlike speeches a new theory of the foreign policy of England has been enunciated and illustrated with much force; and, whatever may be the issue of a Parliamentary contention, whatever may be its motives and its objects—be they personal in the sense of party, or patriotic in the truest abstract sense—it has had the effect of presenting to the judgment of the country a question of the greatest importance, and this is whether England is hereafter to adhere to the traditionary system of foreign policy which she has hitherto upheld in common with the Continental Powers with whom she has nothing else in common, or whether she has to strike out for herself an independent course more consonant with the spirit of her institutions. It is probable that ere long this question will come on for consideration and settlement; for it is evident that a strong feeling on this subject pervades the mind of Parliament. In the debate now in hand every speaker who was in a position to utter his sentiments without fear of committing himself expressed or implied an adherence to the principle of strict non-intervention on the part of the British Government in the domestic politics of foreign nations, and an abjuration of all the liabilities and entanglements of treaties, negotiations, and alliances; and for the first time we had demonstrated the differences and incongruities which exist between the motives, the conduct, and the means of carrying out the foreign policy of despotic Continental Powers and those of a Constitutional and insular country. If it has not already been observed, it will soon be discovered that the real question now brought before Parliament and the country is the decision of what is to be the future conduct of our foreign relations—the principles, the methods, and the course of action of our foreign policy. In this regard, that which was a mere party move will have been the unconscious cause of a great national benefit.

Looking at the debate from any other point of view its interest is considerably dwarfed. It dwindles into an exhibition of mere personal cleverness, and invites only a comparison of the relative vigour of the two parties in Parliament in attack and defence. The immediate deduction from the discovery is tolerably clear. It is quite evident that at the time when the Danish question had reached the critical point, when it became the duty of the signitaries of the Treaty of 1852 to interfere, the Government of this country believed that they could rely on the co-operation of the other Powers parties to that arrangement; that they were justified in supposing that the joint voice of England, Russia, and France raised against aggression in Denmark would suffice to settle the matter; and it was in that sense, and not in the narrower meaning which has been put upon it, that Lord Palmerston used the words, that in any crisis which might arise Denmark would not be found alone. It is a fair inference from the circumstances, as they then existed, that these words did not necessarily imply war with Germany, and, still less, war on that Power by England single-handed. For reasons which to most persons are palpable enough, and which may be traced without difficulty in the voluminous literature of the Foreign Office, since that time France and Russia have been alienated from England on this question, and, as a result, on this country solely was left the responsibility of carrying out the Treaty of 1852. Hastily, this was no treaty of guarantee, and the question for the Government to decide was, whether they should plunge the nation into war for the maintenance of an engagement which France and Russia repudiated. It was a difficult, a delicate position; but we believe that the opinion of the country will eventually endorse the course taken by Ministers. It must be admitted that they have been unsuccessful in a great diplomatic contest; but it will, perhaps, be felt that they had to encounter adverse influences of no common force; that they were not so much outwitted as betrayed; and that, after all, their real fault has been an adherence to a system of foreign policy which has now received merited condemnation, and totters to its fall. The matter for the consideration of the country, the real judges and arbiters between the contending parties, is very simple. As we have already intimated, assuming that her Majesty's Ministers have managed the Dano-German affair ill, that the result is unsatisfactory, inasmuch as it shown that England does not hold the balance of power in Europe in her own hands, the acceptance of the proposition that the Opposition can serve done better is not a necessary consequence. This is the legitimate course for those members who, having relieved their feelings by hearty abuse of both parties, will, under the pressure of a Parliamentary alternative, vote for the Government. To every one who is not a mere partisan the choice, though not wholly satisfactory, is obvious when the crucial test of a division is applied to individual members.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Emperor and Empress were to leave Fontainebleau on Thursday—the Emperor proceeding to Vichy, and the Empress, with the Prince Imperial, to St. Cloud.

Baron de Benst, Plenipotentiary of the Germanic Diet at the London Conference, arrived in Paris yesterday week. By the invitation of the Emperor he proceeded to Fontainebleau on Saturday and breakfasted at the palace. In the evening he returned to Paris and dined with M. Drouyn de Lhuys, the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

M. Rouhl, the Minister of Finance, has returned to Paris from the south of France.

On the 1st inst. the day for giving full liberty of representation to the Parisian theatres according to Vichy, and the Empress, with the Prince Imperial, to St. Cloud.

The railroad from Rennes to St. Malo was opened on the 27th ult., completing railway communication between the latter place and Paris.

A cricket club has been formed at Lyons, under the honorary presidency of M. Rambuteau. It numbers forty members, of whom forty-two are English, ninety-two French, and six German.

The treaty of commerce between France and Switzerland, arranged on the 30th of June, was signed yesterday week by MM. Drouyn de Lhuys and Rouher, on the part of France, and by M. Kern, as representative of the Helvetic Confederation. The treaty contains a clause for the mutual guarantee of property in works of literature and art, in accordance with the international considerations.

The Moniteur publishes despatches from Algiers which represent that the tribes on the left of the Chelif river in revolt have all surrendered unconditionally, and that 4000 prisoners are retained by the French commander as a guarantee for their submission.

A Paris paper says that the French Government has made arrangements to receive 25,000 Circassian emigrants in Algeria.

SPAIN.

A Royal decree has been issued authorising the expenditure of two millions of reals for the purchase of the house in which Francia I. was confined previous to the Battle of Pavia.

The Spanish journals mention the outbreak of a dangerous malady in the city of Murcia from the following cause:—In constructing the railroad pipes have passed through that place a large mass of bones, excavated from the neighbourhood of the city for the purpose of being used in manufacture. At the spot where they were found such a quantity of stagnant water has since collected, the malaria from which has produced a pernicious fever, with all the characteristics of a plague. More than 1500 persons in Murcia and the environs have been attacked, and a large number of deaths have taken place. A manifestation against the railway company by the population took place a few days back, and serious disturbances are feared.

ITALY.

The debate in the Chamber of Deputies on the financial policy of the Government was concluded on Tuesday. Signor Mordini reviewed the financial measures of the Left. Signor Lanza defended the financial system of the Government. He contested the accuracy of the Marquis Pepoli on the condition of the Treasury and proposed economy in several departments. He declared that Italy desired peace and good understanding with France, in order to render the frontiers secure against invasion by brigands, stating that brigandage cost the country fifty million lire annually. The President of the Council stated that no financial plan had been proposed in opposition to that brought forward by the Ministry, and that no political programme had been clearly laid down by their opponents, except that of the Left demanding an immediate declaration of war. The Minister objected to any order of the day which did not express absolute confidence in the Government. A vote of confidence was then passed by 182 to 126 votes.

Garibaldi is just now being as much beset with admirers at Ischia, where he is taking the baths, as he was in England. Day after day says a letter from that island, the crowds have been pouring in from Naples, and from morning till eight o'clock in the evening, when the General goes to bed, he has been kissed and embraced as never mortal man was before. A frenzy of affection and adoration has manifested itself.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The loss of Alsen to the Danes has been followed by a lull in warlike operations. Some slight affairs, however, are announced. A reconnaissance made by the Danish men-of-war off the Island of Rügen drew out the fire of the German batteries there. Several shells struck the ships, which thereupon shoved off. A party of Danes who landed at Lauftorf, in Rügen, on Monday, were driven back with a loss of fifty taken prisoners. There was an encounter, on the 2nd inst., off Eckernförde between the Prussian gun-boats and a Danish brigantine and paddle-wheel steamer, which ended, seemingly, in little more than smoke.

The Dano-German war is being waged in the Eastern seas as well as in the Baltic. From Hong-Kong we learn that two Danish merchant vessels have been captured by Prussian corvette cruising in those seas.

According to Danish accounts the fighting at the capture of Alsen was the most desperate of any during the war. A Copenhagen paper states that several battalions on both sides neither gave nor took quarter, such was the dire animosity that inspired them. The Danish loss in the retreat from Alsen is officially stated at 1500 men from 2500 to 3000 killed, wounded, and missing, including eighty-one officers. A private letter from Sonderburg reports the interment of a number of Swedish volunteers, found on the battle-field; but the horrible theory is probably untrue.

A telegram from Copenhagen states that the Prussians, now in undisputed position of Alsen, are erecting batteries on the coast opposite Fünen; and this appears to confirm intelligence received from other quarters that the occupation of the full designs of the two great German Powers against Denmark is still tenacious. A Berlin journal—the North German Gazette—repeats in positive language the statement that Prussia and Austria no longer consider themselves bound by the "concessions" which they agreed to during the Conference.

Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia is now Commander-in-Chief of the German army. In an address issued to the troops he speaks of the crossing of Alsen as the most daring passage of an arm of the sea unique in the history of war—a storm by water, well-concluded interchanges.

The Prussians have taken Jutland entirely into their own hands. The Danish officials have been put under the orders of Prussian functionaries, by whom the revenues is collected; and in relation to this, it is affirmed in a telegram from Copenhagen that very considerable contributions have been imposed upon the inhabitants.

It is announced that a Swedo-Norwegian squadron is again about to concentrate in the waters of Gothenburg, where it will take up a position of observation.

The journey of Prince John of Glucksburg, youngest brother of King Christian IX., to Berlin has given rise to much speculation, and has caused the revival of the story that the Danish Government, finding itself abandoned by the neutral Powers, has determined to seek admission into the German Confederation.

A letter has been made public from the Emperor of Russia to the Grand Duke of Oldenburg announcing the cession of the rights of succession to the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein to the Duke. The terms of the cession have been sufficiently stated in the protocols of the Conference already published.

The Duke of Augustenburg received an address, on Saturday, from "the Committee of the Schleswig-Holstein Association," in which he reply his Highness expressed "a hope that the claims put forward by the Grand Duke of Oldenburg would not defer the time when he would be able to lead the duchies against the common enemy."

A circular despatch of Count Rechberg to the Austrian diplomatic agents abroad is published in the Austrian official journal. In this document the Austrian Minister reviews the proceedings of the late Conference, and thinks that Austria was responsible for the failure. Denmark, she having, he says, rejected the last proposition of the neutral Powers. A despatch of like purport has been issued by Herr von Bismarck.

Baron von Benst, as Plenipotentiary of the German Diet, has addressed a long letter to Earl Russell alleging various events and omissions in the summary of proceedings read at the last meeting of the defunct Conference.

Curiosity has been excited by the publication in the Morning Post of what purports to be a series of secret despatches recently exchanged between the Courts and diplomatic agents of Austria, Prussia, and France. If genuine, they convict those Courts of dissimulation, selfishness, and intrigue. They have been pronounced spurious both by Austria and Prussia. The Morning Post, however, maintains their genuineness.

The Hamburg papers give the following as the respective strength of the French and Austro-Prussian fleets in the North Sea:—The Austrian force consists of the screw-ship of the line Kaiser, 91 guns; the screw-frigate Schwarzenberg, 53 guns; the iron-clad frigate Don Juan d'Austria, 16 guns; the screw-corvette Novara, 28 guns; the paddle-wheel steamer Elisabeth, 6; and the screw gun-boats Wall and Seehund, each carrying 4 guns. The Berlin, screw-frigate, 30 guns, was at Borkum upon the 26th ult. The Prussian force is the paddle-wheel steamer Preussischer Adler, 4 guns; and the screw gunboats Blitz and Basilisk, carrying 2 guns each. The Danish force is believed to consist of the screw-frigate Niels Juel, 42 guns; the screw-corvette Fylland, 44; the screw-corvette Heimdal, 14; the screw-sloop of the line Skiold, 64; and the iron-clad corvette Dannebrog, 15. The frigate Speidbred, 50, and the corvette Tordenskiold, 35, will also probably be sent to the North Sea, with other small craft.

AMERICA.

We have intelligence from New York to the 25th ult. The reported capture of Petersburg, referred to in our last Number and stated to require confirmation, is so far from having been confirmed that (as we were able to state by the Cunard Steam last week) it has arisen from it with terrible loss. What, doubtless, gave rise to the statement was the capture by the Federals, under General Kautz, of the railroad line of defences of Petersburg, which were then thought so be its main line. Fuller details are to hand from New York. On the 17th, General Grant's whole army was before Petersburg, and on the 18th very severe fighting was reported; on the 18th a general assault on the town was three times made and repulsed with a loss of the Federals stated at not less than from 6000 to 8000 men.

The Confederate works were arranged in a semicircle south of Petersburg, the flanks resting on the Appomattox River. The Federal army advanced against them on the 18th in three divisions, the Second Army Corps on the right, the Ninth in the centre, the Fifth on the left. Hancock, being wounded, was unable to lead his men, and General Gibbon commanded the Second right. The assault was directed towards the line of the City Point Railroad. The troops pushed forward to the certainty of defeat or death. After getting over a fence they had to cross a wide field exposed to a cross fire from the Confederate breastworks. As soon as they were seen they were met with deadly volleys of musketry, grape, and canister from the Southern defences. Hundreds fell, many were taken prisoners, the rest retreated in disorder. Reinforcements having been obtained, the Second Corps formed another storming column. This time it got within the works, but was driven back with more than the other. Infantry and artillery met them with a terrific fire, and the heads of the columns were "lost in clouds of smoke." It was a forlorn hope. Those who, in front, were mown down, scattered; the remainder broke and fled. While this was the fate of the Second Corps, the Fifth, on the Federal left, fought with equal obstinacy, but found the earthworks in front of it impregnable. The ground over which these troops advanced had evidently long prepared, for it was strewed thickly with an abbattis of felled timber. The Ninth Corps, in the centre, was utterly routed by a fierce attack of the Confederates, who rushed into the enemy through a terrible artillery fire, fought the Michigan sharpshooters hand to hand, and drove them from all their positions. The Southern troops were again withdrawn during the night to their own impregnable defences.

After these unsuccessful attempts to force the Confederate position, Grant appears for some days to have done little or nothing. With his right flank resting on the Appomattox River, and his left on the plank-road connecting Petersburg with Grayville, he seems to have gushed forward his outposts as near as he conceived prudent to the Confederate intrenchments. On the 19th and 20th there was some slight skirmishing, in which the pickets and their supports were alone engaged; and it was not until the night of the 21st that Grant resumed active operations. Intending, apparently, to seek a weaker point in the Confederate lines than that against which the assaults of the 17th and 18th were directed, the two corps which formed the right of the Federal army were moved on the night of the 21st across the front of the Federal left, in the direction of the Petersburg and Norfolk Railway. The ostensible motive was to cover this line of railway and more completely invest the city of Petersburg, but the ultimate object was to enable the Federal army to attack the Confederate position at a point almost due south of the town of Petersburg. For this manœuvre, however, the difficulties were very great. The Confederate leader under Hill intercepted the advancing columns of the Federal right wing and engaged them with heavy loss both of men and artillery. The following day, inspirited by this success, General Hill again resumed the offensive, and, having managed to separate the Second from the Sixth Army Corps, attacked the former in the rear and drove it in confusion to its intrenchments, with an estimated loss of three thousand men. On the 23rd Grant drew up his entire army in order of battle, and on that day a general engagement was expected. Heavy firing in the direction of the position of the rival armies was heard at City Point on that day, but the results of the battle are not known, or not published.

President Lincoln visited General Hooker's camp a few days since.

General Hunter is said to have been repulsed in an attack upon Lynchburg, but there is as yet very definite news respecting his movements.

General Sheridan has been defeated during his raid with heavy loss. He claims, however, to have seriously injured the Virginia Central Railroad, south of Gordonsville, and to have defeated the Confederates at Trevilian Station.

The attitude of General Sherman was not materially changed.

New Orleans advices say that the State of Arkansas is overrun with guerrillas. The Federals, however, still hold Little Rock and Pine Bluffs. General Banks was at New Orleans.

The Federal papers state that General Scott has just attained his seventy-eighth year, and has also just completed the memoirs of his life.

The bill repealing the Fugitive Slave Law was passed in the Federal Senate by a vote of 24 against 7. The bill, having passed both Houses, now simply awaits the President's signature.

In the House of Representatives the Loan Bill was passed. This bill authorises Secretary Chase to issue 400,000,000 dollars in bonds at a time upon six per cent bonds redeemable in five to forty years. The interest payable in coin semi-annually.

A resolution had been offered in the Federal Senate requesting the President to issue a proclamation authorising the recruiting in Ireland and Canada for the Federal army was authorised.

The Constitutional Convention of Maryland has abolished slavery in that State by a large majority. The New York Times in a leader of the 22nd announces the fact in the following terms:

Slavery has wheeled into line, and our unlimited star shines out in the constellation of Free States. Her constitutional Convention, in Session at Annapolis, yesterday passed the second article of her Bill of Rights: "Hereafter in this State there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except in punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted; and all persons held to service or labour as slaves are hereby declared free. In every church in the land there ought to be offered and offered solemn prayers of thanksgiving to God that to the people of that State He has given, at length, to obey His mandate to "break every yoke and let the oppressed go free." A new prosperity will, in due season, follow that obedience, and her children reclaim the waste that has rested so long upon her labour and hindered her growth is removed for ever.

Since the passing of the Gold Bill gold had gone up to 220, but had declined again to 210, it stood at 212½ on the evening of the 24th ult.

CANADA.

Canada is again in the throes of a political crisis. It is not long ago that the Ministry resigned in consequence of its being unable to command a majority in the Assembly, and now a Ministry, formed from the other side of the House, has been defeated by a majority of fifty-eight against sixty, on a vote which amounts to a censure of some of the measures promised by the Ministers, condemning, as it does, a financial transaction in which they were concerned as members of a former Ministry. A dissolution was expected at the date of the departure of the last mail.

NEW ZEALAND.

Another disaster has befallen our arms in New Zealand. On April 29 Major-General Cameron attacked the rebels, who had a very strong position near Tauranga. The assault was unsuccessful. Our loss, amounts to seven officers killed, seven wounded; twenty-one men killed, seventy-seven wounded. The officers killed were—Captain Hamilton, H.M.S. Esk; Lieutenant Hill, H.M.S. Curaçoa; Captain R. G. Glover, 68th Regiment; Lieutenant Mayne, 68th Regiment; Captain R. T. F. Hamilton, 43rd Regiment; Captain E. Utterton, 43rd Regiment; Lieutenant Langhorne, 43rd Regiment. The officers wounded are Commander Hay, H.M.S. Harrier (since dead, on April 30); Lieutenant Duff, H.M.S. Esk, very severely; Lieutenant Hammick, H.M.S. Miranda, (? Curaçoa), very severely; Lieutenant Colonel Booth, 43rd Regiment (since dead, on April 30); Lieutenant F. G. E. Glover, 43rd Regiment (since dead, on May 1); Major Clarke, 43rd Regiment, severely; Ensign Nicholl, 43rd Regiment, slightly.

The advices received at the War Office, with reference to this disaster, state that, although the English attack was repulsed with each separate loss, the enemy's camp had suffered severely, abandoned the position under cover of the night.

EDUCATION.

The eleventh report of the Science and Art Department of the Committee of Council on Education for the year 1861 was issued on Saturday. It appears that, in respect to instruction given to the industrial classes in the branches which have a direct bearing on their occupation, many important results are formed in various parts of the country, at which 3111 pupils attended. This is a very large increase upon former years. The examinations in the principles of apparatus and examples have been small. During the past year they numbered 51 at 8*l*., amounting to 408*l*. 237 in the 52*l*. 10*s*. and 40*l*. 10*s*. and 1 at 60*l*. in the two previous years.

As regards the National Art Training-School, at South Kensington, it has been attended by a total, exclusive of the training and free classes, of 286 students in the ordinary session, and 382 students in the autumn session, and the total sum received in fees was 4164*l* 9*s*. The class of students in training for schoolmasters has numbered forty-one, and that of students in training for Training-School certificates have been taken in the school. The training-school for female teachers has been established in connection with the Training-School for the Science and Art Department of the School of Design in 1857. Somerset House, Marlborough House, and Kensington Museum have been occupied. Besides, the new buildings are in all respects suitable, although of the plainest construction. The number of pupils in schools in connection with, or taught through the agency of the training-school, and the total number of all the pupils in schools examined by inspectors, have been 9106, the total number of the schools of art throughout the United Kingdom is ninety, and 16,469 persons have received instruction in the art classes. Through whose agency 29,135 persons have been taught. The number is 7982 more than were so taught in 1857. The progress of the schools of design is given in the succeeding pages.

The report gives an account of the changes which have been made in the South Kensington Museum during the year. One paragraph states that it is considered the time has arrived when some system must be actively established of interchanging reproductions of the most valuable objects between this museum and the museums abroad; and preliminary steps have been taken, by correspondence through the Foreign Office, to carry out a plan. The total number of visitors during 1861 was 726,91; on Sundays, 91,211; on admission days, but on increase payment, 229,425 persons visited the museum during the seventeen days the wedding presents of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales were exhibited; 42,124 were admitted for admission to non-students on those days, and the sum has been divided to form the scholarship to the Female School of Art, to be called the Princess of Wales Scholarship. The total expenditure of the Science and Art Department for the year amounted to 212,97*l*.

Advices from Persia state that the Shah had resolved upon dispatching 20,000 men against the Turcomans in Astrabad.

The Emperor of Russia and his son are, after leaving Copenhagen, to pay a visit of some days' duration to the King of Holland at the Hague.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The annual conversazione of the Royal Institute of British Architects was held on Tuesday at the rooms of the institute, Conduit-street.

The annual fish dinner of the Pox Club takes place to-day (Saturday), at the Trafalgar, Greenwich.

On Wednesday the whole of the officers and men of the A division of the Metropolitan Police force, as well as Peers and Members of Parliament, Buckingham Palace, and the Government offices, appeared in the new regulation helmet and coat.

The last show of the Royal Botanic Society was held in the Botanical Gardens in the Regent's Park on Saturday. Amongst those present was the Princess Mary of Cambridge. The gardens were crowded, and the roses and orchids were magnificent.

The Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Dimmersmith and City Railway, running from the main line near Shepherd's-bush into the West Londo Railway, a distance of about a mile, was opened for traffic yesterday week. This extension completes a direct railway from the City to Paddington.

The Grand National Archery Meeting of 1864 began on Monday at Ashridge Park, Hertfordshire, and ended on the 25th, prize by the company, continued up to yesterday (Friday). Nearly 200 archers, from all parts of the Kingdom—ladies and gentlemen—contended for the prizes.

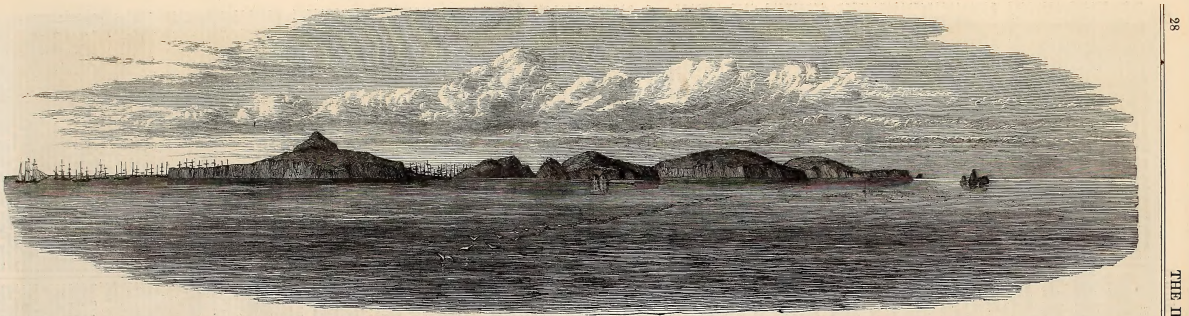
The annual gathering of the children of the Clerkenwell Church and Ragged Schools took place on Tuesday week. As on former occasions, the children, numbering about 300, sat down to a substantial dinner, and took tea at half-past five o'clock.

The annual meeting of the Working Men's Club and Institute Union was held on Wednesday in Store-street, Bedford-square, presided, and there was an influential gathering, including several members of Parliament. The report was most gratifying, and was adopted unanimously.

The Bishop of London made, on Thursday, the annual distribution of the prizes and certificates in religious knowledge gained by the pupils in the Metropolitan Mechanics' Institutions. The Men's Sewing Working Men's Clubs, and Evening Classes, in union with the Metropolitan Adult Education Association.

The Mansion House Committee of the Distress in Lancashire Fund held another meeting on Thursday, at which a number of applications for other grants:—Ashton-under-Lyne, £500; Wigan, £200; Dukinfield, £100; Glossop and Hadfield, £100. The total sum received up to Monday evening was, including interest, £624,755.

A large meeting of Conservative peers was held at the Marquis of Salisbury's house, in Arlington-street, on Wednesday, at which a resolution should be moved in the House of Lords on Friday conclemnatory of the Ministerial policy in the Italian affairs. It is said that Lord Derby will be the identical with that now being discussed in the House of Commons.

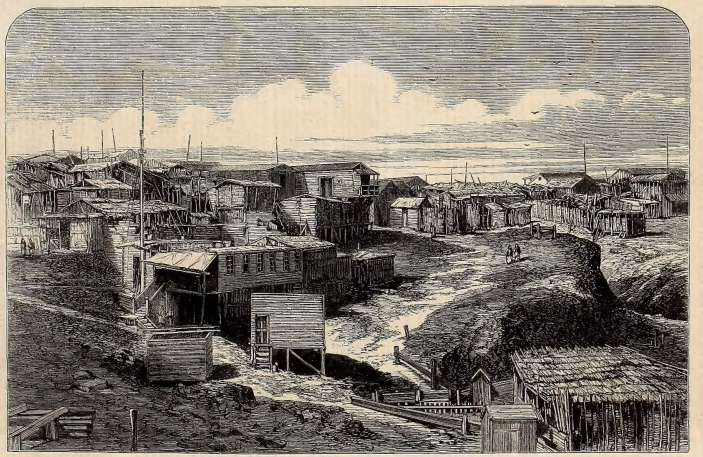


The Lord Mayor presided at the splendid dinner of English coins in gold, silver, and copper, formed by Captain R. M. Murchison, comprising many of the rarest and most beautiful examples in Central specimens ranging from the Conquest to Queen Victoria, has just been sold by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge, for the handsome sum of £1,200.

On Thursday afternoon the beautiful Chapel Royal, Savoy, was destroyed by fire. The historical chapel registers and the communion plate were saved, but the whole of the interior is completely gutted. It is believed that the fire was occasioned by an explosion of gas, a man named Hodgson, employed by Messrs. Bramah, having charge of the building.

At an early hour yesterday week the Prince of Wales made a general inspection of the Royal Horse Artillery and Household Cavalry. His Royal Highness was attended by the Duke of Sutherland, Prince Leiningen, and Colonel Bouverie, Equerries in Waiting. The review was the last occasion of the establishment in Watling-street by Captain Shaw, and they rode on to Wormwood-scrubbs in marching order.

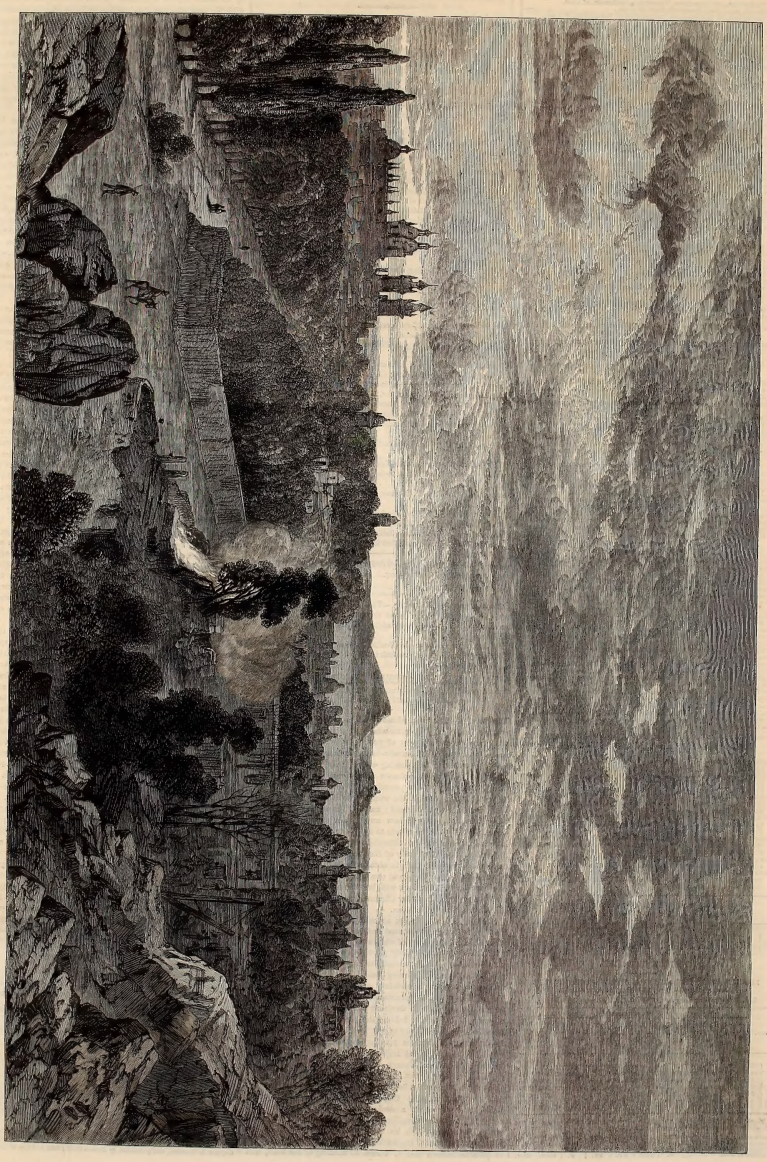
Last week the births of 1999 children—1051 boys and 948 girls—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1851-60 the average number was 1,857. During the week 1,264 deaths of deaths in London last week was 1279. The average number of deaths in the twenty-six weeks of the year 1851-60 was 1,181, and the deaths are increasing in population, 1942. Two girls, aged five years, were poisoned by sucking lucifer matches.



At a meeting in the large hall of St. Bartholomew's Hospital on Wednesday, Mr. T. S. Cooper, F.R.S., one of the governors, with a superb expense, for which nearly £600 had been subscribed by some of his colleagues and friends, presented to Mr. Paget, the surgeon to the hospital, his character, and sincere regret at his retirement after long and faithful services he

GENERAL VIEW OF THE CHINCHA ISLANDS, LATELY SEIZED BY THE SPANIARDS.

We publish three illustrations of the scene of the late outrageous proceedings of the agents of the Spanish Government in the independent Republic of Peru. Lima, the capital of that State, is a city of 70,000 people. This place, the "Ciudad de los Reyes," as it was styled by the old chroniclers, is in appearance the most characteristic city of South America. It is situated at the foot of a spur of the Andes, about ten miles from Callao, its port, with which it is connected by a railway. The sketch we have engraved is by Mr. David Powell, jun., of St. Helen's-place, Bishopsgate. It was taken from the foot of the hill, San Cristoval, at the end of the old Alameda, or public promenade. The principal buildings seen in this view are the cathedral—the reputed burial-place of Pizarro—and the church of San Francisco, which is by far the finest building of its kind in the New World. In the distance we see the high ground of the Island of San Lorenzo, protecting the anchorage at Callao. The Alameda, which runs along the river and constitutes the foreground of our View, is, unfortunately, a place to be avoided on account of the rascals who frequent it. The outline of the buildings in Lima is very picturesque; but the detail is very coarse, and nearly all the ornament made of the commonest plaster. In the foreground is an iron-foundry, which we may remark as an instance of the European inventions which are coming into general use in these new countries of South America.



Our General View of the Chincha Islands, and our View of the quarter inhabited by Chinese labourers employed there, are from sketches by Mr. Oswald Younghusband, of Callao. The Chincha Islands, which contain the richest deposits of guano on those coasts, are situated about 120 miles south of Lima. It has been stated that they bring in a revenue of about 16,000,000 dols. to the State. The payment of the interest of the English and French loans has been secured on the profit of the guano, and the income has been so large as materially to alleviate the burdens of the Republic. It is the seizure of these valuable islands by the Spanish Rear-Admiral Pinzon, on the 14th of April last, which has excited so much indignation. There had been some outstanding disputes between the two Governments with regard to certain compensation claims of Spanish subjects residing in Peru. In March of this year Don Eusebio Salazar y Mazaredo, an Envoy from the Queen of Spain, arrived at Lima and presented his credentials. In these he was styled "Special Commissioner Extraordinary from her Catholic Majesty." This title, recalling the day of colonial dependence, was calculated to give offence to the Peruvians, especially as their Government had at various times previously endeavoured, without success, to open diplomatic communication with Spain. But as this was declared to be a special mission, and not a beginning of regular diplomatic relations, the Peruvian Government waived its objection to the title, and Senor Ribeyro, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, wrote to Senor Salazar informing him that he might, whenever it was convenient, open his mission, confident of finding on the part of Peru and its Administration the happiest disposition to come to an understanding with the illustrious Spanish nation. Senor Salazar replied, on the 12th of April, in a very peremptory tone, charging the Peruvian Government with raising a loan of 70,000,000 dol., which, he asserted, could only be for the purpose of opposing the legitimate demands of Spain; demanding that, whatever took place, Spanish subjects should be unmolested; and declaring that the moderation of the Peruvian Government would give the Cabinet of Madrid the standard for the conduct it would have to observe hereafter. "If, unfortunately," adds the Commissioner, "excesses should be committed, the reprisals of Spain will be prompt, energetic, and decisive; for modern Spain is firmly resolved not to allow her sons to be trampled upon, nor her flag to be blemished." No sooner was this answer returned than a strong Spanish squadron, which had come to Callao some time previously and been hospitably received by the population, set sail for the Chincha Islands, where Admiral Pinzon ordered the Peruvian Governor to haul down his national flag and hoist the Spanish, threatening to open fire if not obeyed. The Governor submitted, under protest; the islands were occupied, the Peruvian vessel Iquique was seized, and all the Government officials on the island were made prisoners, to be detained as hostages. The Peruvians resented this outrage, and the two States are now at war.

CHINESE QUARTER OF THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

PRESENTATION TO LORD LIFFORD FROM THE COUNTY OF DONEGAL.

THE merits of Viscount Lifford, in originating and promoting the Finn Valley line of railway—the first to penetrate the county of Donegal—lately received a graceful recognition from the people of that district. From the time the project of opening Donegal by railway was first mooted, in 1859, until this line was opened under the auspices of the Viceroy, Lord Carlisle, in September, 1863, Lord Lifford had preserved in his efforts, which are crowned with success. Since the opening the line has been progressing most favourably, and promises to be one of the best railway speculations started in Ireland. In order to mark the sense of the people of the district towards Lord Lifford for his patriotic exertions in this respect a committee was formed, the Rev. Thomas Fullerton, Rector of Stranorlar, acting as chairman, and Mr. John Gunning, of Stranorlar, honorary secretary and treasurer. The result was most successful, and, on the 19th ult., a numerous deputation waited upon Lord and Lady Lifford at Meenglas House, and presented a lifelike portrait of his Lordship by Mr. Catterson Smith, with a beautiful gold dessert service, manufactured by Messrs. Webb and Son, of 18, College-green, Dublin. We have engraved one piece of the plate, which is, as Lord Lifford remarked, "an exquisite specimen of Irish art."

VIEW OF ATAK, THE CAPITAL OF PERU.

BIRTHS.

On the 3rd inst., at Yaton-place, Viscountess Castlerosse, of a son.
On the 4th inst., Lady Georgiana Field, of a son.
On the 1st inst., at Roton-square, the Countess of Macclesfield, of a son.
On the 28th ult., at Moray-place, Edinburgh, the Countess of Seafield, of a daughter.
On the 2nd inst., at Grosvenor-street, W., the Countess of Carnarvon, of a daughter.
In Chester-square, the Hon. Lady Biddulph, of a daughter.
On the 1st inst., at Montagu-street, Portman-square, Lady Mary Powys, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 30th ult., at Montrose, by the Rev. George S. Burns, Dr. Alexander S. Bosman, London, to Mary Helen, youngest daughter of James Adams, Esq., shipowner, Montrose. Cards omitted.
On the 29th ult., by special license, at Ballykilleen House, in the county of Down, by the Very Rev. the Dean of Down, Sir Arthur Graham Brooke, Bart., to Thomasina Isabella, youngest daughter of the late John Ford Johnston, Esq., Ballykilleen House, in the county of Down. No cards.
On the 30th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Rev. Henry Haweis, B.D., Rector, Donald Horsburgh Watson, Esq., of Bengal Civil Service, and Kilburn, to Lydia Maria Pemberton, elder daughter of the late Thomas Kitchin, Esq., of the Grange, Kilburn, Middlesex. No cards.
At Rumbalem, the Rev. Walter Hook, son of the Very Rev. the Dean of Chichester, to Mary Dyke Goodeve, daughter of, and at the same time, Leonard Harper, Esq., son of the Right Rev. the Bishop of Christchurch, N.Z., to Edward, the youngest daughter of the late Arthur Trevor, Esq., and to Miss Thomas Dyke Acland, Bart.
In Upper Grosvenor-street, Sir Cuttis Lindsay, Bart., to Caroline Blanche, daughter of the late Right Hon. Henry Fitzroy.
On the 30th inst., at Christ's Church, Bray, in the county of Wicklow, by the Rev. Lord Adam Loftus (brother of the bridegroom), assisted by the Rev. J. G. Scott, Rector of Bray, the Lord Henry Loftus, brother to the late Marquis of Ely, to Louisa, Countess of Suffield.

DEATHS.

On the 27th ult., at Fulham, Charlotte Bush, fourth daughter of the late Edward Chandler Weedon, Esq., of Pimlico, in her 81st year.
At Edinburgh, Margaret, daughter of the late Sir Henry Moncrieffe, Bart., of Abercorn.
On the 29th ult., at Froyle, Hants, the Rev. Sir Thomas C. Miller, Bart., in the 85th year of his age.
At Nether Court, Faversham, Kent, Marianne, wife of the Right Hon. S. R. Lushington.
At Wentworth House, Malvern, Lady Catherine Mannsell, daughter of William Earl of Listowel, and widow of Richard Mannsell, Esq., Q.C., of Rushlake-square.

* * The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR C. W. R. CODRINGTON.

Sir Christopher William Bethell Codrington, M.P. for East Gloucestershire, C.B., and K.C.B. for the same country, and Captain of the Dalrymple squadron of Yeomanry, was the eldest son of the late Sir Bethell Codrington by his wife, Georgiana Georgiana Harriet, daughter of Thomas, second Lord Rivers, and was nephew of the gallant Sir Edward Codrington, G.C.B., the commander of the British fleet at the famous naval battle of Navarino, after the close of which he was created a Knight of the Bath. He was born in 1804, and was educated at Harrow and Christ Church, Oxford. He married, in 1836, Lady Georgiana Charlotte Anne Somerset, second daughter of Sir Henry Somerset, K.G., seventh Duke of Beaufort, by his wife, Georgiana Frederica Fitzroy, niece of the great Duke of Wellington. By this marriage Sir Codrington leaves two sons and three daughters. Sir Christopher was, in 1841, elected M.P. for the eastern division of the county of Gloucester, and continued to represent it until his death. In politics he was always a consistent supporter of the Conservative party. As a landlord he was much beloved, and he enjoyed great popularity among his tenants and the peasantry of the squadron he commanded. He was distinguished for the benevolence of his disposition and the uprightness and integrity of his conduct, and his loss will be deeply felt by a large circle of friends.

THE REV. DR. WHITESIDE.

The Rev. John William Whiteside, D.C.L. (Surrogate), Vicar of Scarborough, Yorkshire, died on the 30th ult. This amiable and talented clergyman had been in failing health for several months. A recent severe illness, continued with grief for the death of a beloved wife and daughter, and other domestic troubles, aggravated a disease of the heart and caused his deeply-lamented decease. The rev. gentleman stated that his father, Whiteside had not been much at home, preferring, in the company of one of his surviving daughters, to visit his friends chiefly in Ireland, where, at Whiteside Bay, near Belfast, the Rev. Dr. Porter, Desertcreat, Tullyhogue, his death occurred. The Rev. Dr. Whiteside was son of the Rev. Dr. Whiteside, brother of the eminent orator, lawyer, and statesman, the Right Hon. James Whiteside, M.P. Whiteside was born in 1811, and was a scholar of Trinity College, Dublin; and afterwards took the degrees of B.A. and M.A. at the same University, and more recently that of D.C.L. The last degree was also conferred upon him at Cambridge. Having taken holy orders, he formerly held the living of Keswick, Cumberland, where he enjoyed the intimate acquaintance of the poet Southey. He was afterwards Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Ripon, and during the last seven years has been Vicar of Scarborough, where he was much respected. Dr. Whiteside leaves issue by his late wife. His eldest son, William Hamilton, B.A., Oxon, B.C.L., married, Jan. 7, 1857, Maria Charlotte Exmouth, only daughter of Richard Wellesley Barlow, Esq., and grandniece of the late Admiral Sir Robert Barlow, Bart., G.C.B.; and this lady's only brother, Richard Wellesley Barlow, Esq., Barrister, her presumptive to the Barlow baronetcy, married, Jan. 14, 1863, Anne Catherine, Dr. Whiteside's daughter.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 16, 1864.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
6	5	7	6	8	7	9	8	10	9	11	10	11	11
6	5	7	6	8	7	9	8	10	9	10	10	11	11

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 29′ N.; Long. 0° 19′ 45″ W.; Height above the sea, feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF							THERMOMETER.		WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours.
	Barometer reduced to 32° Fah.	Temperature of Air.	Dew Point.	Humidity of Saturation.	Elastic Force of Vapour.	Weight of Vapour in a Cubic Foot.	Amount of Cloud.	Highest.	Lowest.	General Direction.	Velocity in Miles per Hour.	Inches in Depth.
July	Inches	°	°		Inch.	Grains.		°	°		Miles.	Inches
1	29·967	57·0	47·2	·71	0·403	5·3	68·6	W. WSW.			213	·000
2	29·776	57·8	44·7	·62	0·374	4·9	69·2	WNW. SW. W.			263	·045
3	29·946	56·2	39·5	·56	0·329	4·3	69·4	SW. WNW. WSW.			203	·000
4	29·719	60·1	47·8	·65	0·417	5·4	69·9	S. SSW. SW.			252	·000
5	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	0·397	5·2	61·9	[illegible]			292	·130
6	29·845	56·5	44·1	·65	0·377	4·9	66·4	WSW. W.			241	·720
7	30·068	60·7	39·9	·49	0·362	4·5	70·9	WSW. SW. N.			208	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine A.M.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	30·032	29·954	29·923	29·971	29·964	29·971	30·018
Temperature of Air	52·0°	52·0	56·0	54·0	52·0	52·0°	52·0
Temperature of Evaporation	52·0°	52·0	53·0°	49·0°	51·0°	51·0°	51·0°
Direction of Wind	W.	WSW.	SW.	W.	SW.	W.	WSW.

THE RIFLE CONTEST AT WIMBLEDON.

A DOUBLE NUMBER

OF THE

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

will be issued on SATURDAY next, the 16th of JULY, consisting of Two Whole Sheets of Fine-Art and News Illustrations, and a FOUR-PAGE ENGRAVING, PRINTED IN COLOURS, illustrating the National Rifle Association's Prize Meeting at Wimbledon, which will begin on the 11th inst.

FINE-ART ILLUSTRATIONS.

Leaves from a Sketch Book: Brunswick.
"The Coombe Farm," by G. Chester, in the Exhibition of the Royal Academy.
"A Blackcock," by Harrison Weir, in the Exhibition of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours.
"A November Day in Saint-Francon," by J. C. Reed, in the Exhibition of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours.
"Sunrise on the Mountains in Bavaria," by W. C. Smith, in the Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours.
"Saved," by Mr. Topham, in the Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours.
"Boy Asleep" (Sculpture), by A. Munro, in the Exhibition of the Royal Academy.
"Fluffy," by J. M. Jopling, in the Exhibition of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours.
Monuments to the late Prince Consort in Whippingham Church, Isle of Wight, by W. Theed.

NEWS ILLUSTRATIONS.

"Our Own Correspondent" on board the Lalla Rookh Running the Blockade into Wilmington Harbour.
The Prince of Wales Laying the Foundation-stone of the New Wing of the London Hospital.
Interior of the Exhibition of Arts and Manufactures at Dublin.
The New Building of the Garrick Club, King-street, Covent-garden.
General View of the Horse Show in the Agricultural Hall, Islington.
Trying Hunters at the Horse Show.
King's Lynn Regatta: Shovel Race of the Corn Porters.
Great Archery Meeting at the Alexandra Park.
The New Monkey House at the Zoological Society's Gardens, Regent's Park.
Opening of the Cape Colonial Parliament at Graham's Town, Cape of Good Hope.
Colossal Indian Rock Sculpture found in New Brunswick.
Tooth of Gigantic Fossil Shark found in Malta.
Miami's Dance at Barbican.
Testimonial to Mr. R. W. Murray, from the Cape of Good Hope Agricultural Society.
Monument in the Parish Cathedral of the Officers of the 77th (East Middlesex) Regiment killed in the Crimea.
Monument in St. Giles's Church, Edinburgh, to the Officers and Soldiers of the 93rd Highlanders killed in India.

Price of the Number, Fine-Art Supplement, and Coloured Picture, Tenpence; Stamped, One Shilling.

Office, 198, Strand.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—The Terms for Advertisements not exceeding four lines (about thirty-four words) in this Double Number will be Ten, and every additional line (averaging ten words) will be charged 3s.

No Advertisements for the Double Number can be received after Wednesday Evening next, the 13th inst.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1864.

THE Rev. Mr. Maurice, whose religion is as far removed as possible from that of persons who "keep it for Sunday," and whose zealous enforcement of practical Christianity must command the respect of those who have doctrinal differences with him, has improved the opportunity occasion by issuing an urgent appeal to the influential classes against every kind of election bribery, social as well as pecuniary. We need hardly say that he writes like a man of the world, who knows perfectly well how such bribery is managed; and not like a sensation novelist, who seizes upon the same theme as a matter of business is conducted in the world he affects to delineate. We commend Mr. Maurice's paper to the attention of our readers. It is in Macmillan; but the Purity of Election Society, or whatever it calls itself, would do well to obtain leave to reprint it for circulation. It is the most practical thing that, amid the excitement of a contest, Mr. Maurice's will, because it is addressed to men and women, and not to Sir Charles Grandison and Clarissa, or other impossible perfections.

Strange, too, that after so many years of constitutional liberty the most intellectual nation in the world should be without any sure means of obtaining the expression of its own will. Strange that not only should this be the case, but that we should be looking gratefully to any volunteer who will suggest a plan by which we may defeat the devices of those who force upon us what is certainly anything but such expression. Yet at this moment persons who design to be public benefactors are engaged in devising schemes for preventing sovereigns and beer from taking the place of political opinion. Lord Brougham, reformer to the last, has begged the House of Lords to pass a measure making imprisonment the penalty of bribery; and it was not impossible that the Peers might have passed such a bill, though it would have had no chance in the Commons. But he has withdrawn it with a plaintive wish that members might be asked to declare, on their honour, that they had not bribed? Who would refuse to make such a declaration? Then we have had a repetition of the annual presentation of the so-called secret voting machine, which its admirers believe would ensure a faithful expression of the nation's opinion. A large majority of persons believe that it would do nothing of the kind, and that it would only protect those whose characters render them by no means objects of interest, for we have no great sympathy with the man who can play the hypocrite so well as to make it impossible to say which way he votes. Then, again, comes a high-minded clergyman, Mr. Maurice, who does not ask for a penal law or a dark chamber, but who appeals to men and women of honour to show themselves ladies and gentlemen and not stoop to aid in dishonesty and demoralisation. There is most sense in Mr. Maurice's appeal, but we fear that he will cry out in the streets, and be but little regarded on the day when frantic agents rush into the presence of excited committees and declare that "the enemy is gaining on us."

It is, of course, exceedingly discreditable, and yet not altogether unnatural, that a certain class of minds should have looked for a defence of the evil which it seems hopeless to try to avert. They ask themselves, though not aloud—for vice pays virtue the homage of saying nothing of this kind in public—whether the evils of bribery are not in some degree counterbalanced by the kind of representatives which it produces. It is perfectly true that the sordid wretch who will sell himself for sovereigns and beer is worthy of all contempt and some punishment; but he is certainly paid and drenched in the interest of some member of the class in whose hands we desire to see the representation. There are enormous constituencies—say several of those of the metropolis—where bribery to any extent is impossible. But what is the consequence? The educated class is virtually disfranchised in London, and nearly all the representatives are Conservatives. Suppose all England represented by such persons. The machinery of bribery is very odious, but it seats better men than the unbribed constituencies choose. Such is the sophistry by which idle persons, of loose morality, seek to persuade themselves that the sovereign and beer system is not without its advantages.

Such arguments, of course, cannot be tolerated. But when we have swept them away, and again look the facts in the face, it is very difficult to say what is to be done. There can be no early dissolution: there must come in the course of the next few months. Just as certainly as our agriculturists are looking forward to harvest, is a trained and skilful army of agents, lawyers, and others, looking out for a splendid outpouring of money, to be used somehow, of course not illegally, but by means of which many fierce contests will be waged, and a new House of Commons will be chosen. Certain seats have their ascertained price, like Mr. Gye's opera-stalls when bought at the theatre; others have a fluctuating price, like the same stalls when they have passed into the hands of speculators; and we may illustrate by saying that the unlucky purchaser, in a third case, often finds himself without any seat at all, like the buyer of a stall sold by the unauthorised venders around the opera house. But the representation of the country is a business to be worked out by the agency of money, and everybody knows it. "What are his virtues and talents?" ought to be the question of a constituency, when they hear that a new man is coming to solicit suffrages. It would be affectation to pretend a belief that the question is aught else than "Will he spend money?"

We shall assuredly not have time to alter this state of things by the next election, even if it be postponed until the spring. We confess to some doubt whether we shall ever be able to alter it altogether. And it is a dangerous matter to try experiments on. Everyone knows that in France the suffrage is universal, and its possible defects are balanced by the zeal of mayors and the sunsion of the gendarme. Everybody is free to vote in secret as he pleases, but he had better please to vote in the piece of paper supplied in the interest of the State. And if by any accident—we speak only of the provinces, for Paris is allowed its own wicked way—a mistake should arise, and a wrong man be elected, the prefects are far too paternal to allow their children, the people, to wound the heart of the ruler of the country by any wish that are rectified. It is very Arcadian; but, on the whole, we would almost sooner have our own system, with all its coarseness and dishonesty. An honest and courageous man votes as he pleases in England, and his vote is recorded for all the world to see, and, though it may be neutralised by the beer-bought vote of his neighbour, there is no juggle, and the rascal's act is not mixed up with the act of the patriot. There is much deplorable humiliation at an English election; but anyone who has really taken part in one knows that it abounds in evidences of good sturdy English feeling and independence. Any consolation for its evils should be found in this fact, and not in the idea that one evil balances another. But we are compelled, after all, to allow that there are thousands of people preparing to do thousands of very wrong things, and we wish that they would listen to the appeal of Mr. Maurice, who is chivalrously alive to the sentiment Noblesse oblige.

THE REVENUE.

	The Year ended June 30, 1864.			Quarter ended June 30, 1864.
	Net Revenue.	Increase	Decrease	Net Revenue.	Increase	Decrease
	£	£	£	£	£	£
Customs	22,801,000		1,279,000	5,446,000		411,000
Excise	18,666,000	1,392,000	..	4,864,000	493,000	..
Stamps	8,462,000	327,000	..	2,538,000	145,000	..
Taxes	3,966,000	77,000	..	1,432,000	42,000	..
Property Tax	8,225,000	..	2,075,000	2,462,000	..	413,000
Post Office ..	3,820,000	70,000	..	960,000	10,000	..
Crown Lands ..	360,000	9,000	..	83,000	500	..
Miscellaneous ..	3,923,459	195,998	..	630,300	..	12,594
Totals	69,992,959	2,566,998	3,357,000	18,374,300	656,500	837,594
	£690,502 Net Decrease.			£181,094 Net Decrease.

The Illustrations of the cattle show at Calcutta which appeared in our last were from a set of photographs taken by an assistant, Captain L. Rowney, and published by Messrs. G. Wyman and Co., of that city.

THE COURT.

The Queen continues at Windsor Castle, in the enjoyment of good health.

Yesterday week her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Helena, drove out. Princess Helena and Princess Louisa afterwards rode out. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, attended by Mdlle. de Grancy and Captain von Westerweller, left the castle for Marlborough House.

On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and attended by the Marchioness of Ely, Major-General Seymour, and Colonel the Hon. A. Hardinge, went to London and visited the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House and returned to luncheon. Her Majesty drove from Marlborough House to Carlton House-terrace and honoured the Duke of Newcastle with a visit, and afterwards honoured Mr. Foley and Mr. Durham Mr. Foley with the memorials of the Prince Consort now in execution by them at their studios. The Queen next went to Buckingham Palace, where the Duchess of Inverness had the honour of being received by her Majesty. The Queen, accompanied by Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and Princess Beatrice, left the palace at six o'clock and drove in an open carriage and four to the Great Western Railway station and proceeded by special train to Windsor. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse returned to Buckingham Palace. Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce and Colonel the Hon. A. Liddell, went to Canterbury. The Dean of Westminster, Lady Augusta Stanley, and Archdeacon Harrison, conducted their Royal Highnesses over the Cathedral, St. Augustine's College, St. Martin's Church, &c. Archdeacon and Mrs. Harrison had the honour of entertaining the Princesses at luncheon. Their Royal Highnesses returned to Windsor at seven o'clock. The Earl of Chesterton arrived at the castle and had the honour of dining with her Majesty.

On Sunday the Queen, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service in the private chapel of the castle. The Rev. E. W. Benson, Head Master of Wellington College, officiated. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, attended by Mdlle. De Grancy and Capt. von Westerweller, arrived at the castle from Buckingham Palace.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, drove out. Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, and Prince Louis of Hesse rode out. In the evening Prince Louis of Hesse left the castle and Princess Helena left the castle for Buckingham Palace. The Marchioness Dowager of Waterford had the honour of being received by the Queen. The Earl of Chesterton left the castle.

On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and attended by the Marchioness of Ely, Major-General Seymour, and Colonel the Hon. A. Hardinge, went to London and visited the Horticultural Gardens at Kensington. Her Majesty was received by the Earl Granville, Sir W. Dilke, &c. The Queen returned to Windsor at one o'clock. Princess Helena, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington and Colonel the Hon. C. Keyser, C.B., arrived at the castle from Buckingham Palace. Prince Leopold drove out. The Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary visited the Queen and remained to luncheon.

On Wednesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louisa, walked and drove in the castle grounds. Prince Leopold, Princess Beatrice, and Princess Victoria of Hesse, rode out. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse arrived at the castle from Buckingham Palace. The Earl and Countess of Hardwicke also arrived at the castle to visit her Majesty in honour of dining with the Queen.

The following orders were issued by the Lord Chamberlain for the Court going into mourning on Tuesday, the 5th inst., for his late Majesty the King of Wirtemberg, viz:—The ladies to wear black dresses, white gloves, black or white fans, feathers, and shoes, and diamonds, or plain gold or silver ornaments. The gentlemen to wear full Court dress, with black waistcoats, and black gloves. To change the mourning on Tuesday, the 19th inst., viz:—The ladies to wear black dresses, with coloured ribbons, flowers, feathers, and ornaments; or white dresses, with black ribbons, flowers, feathers, and ornaments. The gentlemen to continue the same mourning. And on Tuesday, the 26th inst., the Court to go out of mourning.

Mr. Frith has had the honour of sittings from the Royal family at Windsor Castle for his picture of the marriage of the Prince of Wales.

The Countess of Caledon has succeeded the Marchioness of Ely as Lady in Waiting. Lord Cremorne and Colonel F. Seymour, C.B., have succeeded Lord Shaftesbury and Colonel the Hon. C. Liddell as Lord and Groom in Waiting. Major-General Seymour and Colonel the Hon. A. Hardinge have succeeded Lord Charles Fitzroy and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. D. De Ros as Equerries in Waiting to the Queen.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales continue at Marlborough House.

Yesterday week the Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, the Duke of Sutherland, and Lord Richard Grosvenor, inspected the various arrangements of the London Rifle Brigade. Subsequently the Prince and Princess went to the Wellington College and were present at the proceedings of the "speech day" at the college. The Prince and Princess partook of luncheon with the Head Master, and afterwards returned to town. Later in the day the Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, left town for Windsor Castle. The Princess, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, honoured the Duchess of Sutherland with their presence at a ball at Apsley House.

On Saturday last the Prince and Princess went to the bazaar in aid of the Earl-wood Idiot Asylum, at the Hanover-square Rooms. The Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, afterwards rode out. The Princess, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen, drove out. In the evening the Prince dined with the Corporation of the Trinity House at the Trinity House. The Princess, accompanied by the Princess of Leiningen and attended by the Marchioness of Carmarthen and Lord Harris, honoured Her Majesty's Theatre with their presence.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen attended Divine service at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The Lord Bishop of London, the Rev. the Sub-Dean, and the Rev. R. Harvey officiated.

On Monday the Prince and Princess were present at a review of troops in Hyde Park. Their Royal Highnesses afterwards went to the London Hospital, where the Prince laid the foundation-stone of the new wing of the hospital. Their Royal Highnesses subsequently visited several wards of the hospital, and afterwards partook of luncheon with the president and governors of the hospital. The Prince and Princess, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, rode out. In the evening the Prince and Princess gave a dance at Marlborough House. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, Princess Helena, the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, the Duke of Saxe-Weimar, Princess Margaretta d'Orleans, the Duke and Duchess de Chartres, the Count d'Eu, the Duke de Penthièvre, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar and the Countess Dorchester, and a distinguished circle were present.

On Tuesday the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, went to the horse show at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. Later in the day the Prince, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse and the Prince of Leiningen, took a drive. In the evening the Prince and Princess and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen dined with the Duke of Cambridge at Gloucester House.

On Wednesday the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, visited the flower show at the Horticultural Gardens, South Kensington. The Prince afterwards rode out. The Princess drove out. In the evening their Royal Highnesses honoured the Duke and Duchess of Manchester with their company at dinner at their residence in Great Stanhope-street. The Prince and Princess of Leiningen took leave of the Prince and Princess, and left Marlborough House for the Isle of Wight.

Captain Grey has succeeded Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel as Equerry to the Prince.

PRINCE ALFRED.

On Thursday week Prince Alfred inspected the Edinburgh or Queen's Regiment of Light Infantry Militia in Dalkeith Park. The Prince, attended by Major Cowell, and Lieutenant Monagan, R.N., arrived on the ground at eleven o'clock, and was received with a Royal salute. His Royal Highness expressed his gratification at the manœuvres he had witnessed. The Prince afterwards drove to Saltoun Hall to visit Mr. and Lady Charlotte Fletcher. His Royal Highness was the guest of the Duke of Buccleuch at Dalkeith Palace, and left on Friday to join the Racoon lying in Leith Roads.

On Saturday last the Prince went ashore, and proceeded to the Douglas Hotel. In the evening his Royal Highness drove to the Queen's Park, and was present at a volunteer review.

On Sunday the Prince attended Divine service at St. John's Episcopal Church.

On Tuesday the Prince received General Burgoyne, Major-General Walker, C.B., and Mr. Burgoyne at dinner at the Douglas Hotel.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke de Nemours, Princess Marguerite d'Orleans, the Count d'Eu, and the Duke de Penthièvre arrived at Clarendon House from Cannes yesterday.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and Miss Longley have left Lambeth Palace for Addington Park for the season.

The Archbishop of York and Mrs. Thomson left Belgrave-square on Tuesday for Bishopthorpe, York.

The Earl and Countess of Albemarle have left London for Quidnam Hall, Norfolk.

The Earl and Countess of Tankerville have left town for Chillingham Castle, Northumberland.

The Earl and Countess of Cork left town yesterday for Marston House, Somersetshire, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Zetland left town on Wednesday for Yorkshire, for the season.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster and Lady Augusta Stanley arrived at their residence, the Cloisters, Westminster Abbey, on Saturday last, from Canterbury.

Lord and Lady Londesborough left town on Monday for their seat, Grimston Park, Yorkshire.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland gave a dinner party on Tuesday evening at his residence, Cumberland Lodge. Princess of Wales and a few distinguished company were present.

The Duke of Wellington gave a grand ball on Friday evening week at Apsley House. The Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, and the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, and a distinguished circle were present.

The Duke and Duchess of Manchester gave an elegant entertainment on Wednesday evening at their family residence in Great Stanhope-street, Mayfair, in honour of the Prince and Princess of Wales (accompanied by their princess of Leiningen), and a distinguished circle were present.

The Duchess of Buccleuch had a dancing party on Tuesday evening at Selden House, Dover.

The Earl of Derby had a dinner party on Saturday last, at the family mansion in St. James's-square.

Viscount and Viscountess Hill gave their fortnightly dance on Saturday last. The reunion was attended by nearly 400 members of the aristocracy.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.

The marriage of Sir Colquhoun Grant Campbell, K.F.G., of Blythswood, to the Hon. Augusta Clementina Coningham, eldest unmarried daughter of Lord Carrington, will be celebrated at Wrotham Park, Barnet, on Tuesday next.

Marriages are arranged between Lady Theresa Pepys, sister of the Earl of Cottenham, and the Hon. Charles Duncombe, fifth son of Lord Feversham; Lady Ellen M'Donnell, daughter of the Countess of Antrim, and Sir Malcolm Macgregor, Bart., R.N.; Lieutenant Wilson, eldest nephew of Sir Hamilton and Lady Seymour, and Colonel Stuart, eldest son of Lord James Stuart; between Lieut. Reade Reade, Grenadier Guards, and Miss Mary Reade, youngest daughter of F.M. Viscount Combermere, and Miss Fletcher, the ward of Lord Kenyon, and Captain Gage of the Grenadier Guards; between the Hon. Sir Alan E. Bruce, Grenadier Guards, son of Lady Catherine Ricardo, and Miss Campbell, eldest daughter of the late Sir Colin Campbell, K.C.B.; and Mr. Robert Burnaby, of the Grenadier Guards, and Miss Bloxo, second daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Bloxo, Rector of Hanwell Park, Leicestershire, and Lady Caroline Conolly, V.C., of the Coldstream Guards, and Miss Burnaby, youngest daughter of Mr. Burnaby, of Baggrave, Leicestershire.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The installation and enthronement of the Bishop of Peterborough took place on Thursday in his cathedral church.

The Bishop of London's annual garden party at Fulham Palace to all the clergy of London is fixed for the same place to-day (Saturday), from three to seven o'clock.

On Saturday the foundation-stone of St. Jude's new church, Anerley, was laid by the Rev. Prebendary Sinker of Kirby-street on ground bought by Mr. William Atkinson, of Ashton Hayes.

The Rev. James Prince Lee, Ph.D., has been gazetted Dean of Lincoln in the place of Doctor Francis Jeune, late Dean thereof, promoted to the See of Peterborough.

The following preferments and appointments have recently been made:—The Rev. J. W. Carter to be Perpetual Curate of Christ Church, Hoxton; the Rev. J. Cooper to be Vicar of Ashton-under-Lyne; the Rev. C. E. Holmes to be Minister of St. Michael and All Angels, Bromley, Middlesex; the Rev. J. Wilson to be Warden of Sydney College, Bath.

A meeting was held in Marylebone last Saturday in support of the Bishop of London's fund for providing additional churches and ten years, to provide for the spiritual destitution of the metropolis. The Archbishop of Canterbury, in urging organisation as the remedy, he stated that £150,000 had already been raised from the contributions of only a few individuals. Lord Shaftesbury and Lord Ebury, M.P., and a host of other gentlemen, addressed the meeting, and a committee of noblemen and gentlemen was formed to carry the purposes of the meeting into effect.

The following testimonials have recently been presented to clergymen:—The Rev. H. C. Day, on leaving the curacy of Ullington, Worcestershire, a purse containing £50 sovereigns; the Rev. Thomas W. C. Statham, by the congregation of St. George-the-Martyr, Queen's-square, upon his leaving the curacy of that parish; a silver tea and coffee service to the Rev. W. F. Reynolds, M.A., on leaving the curacy of Hilchin—a handsome gold watch to the Rev. Charles Hall, on the choir leaving the school in a body, a silver inkstand, and a purse containing £20 sovereigns, by the choir of St. Andrew's Mission School Church. The Rev. F. Gell, M.A.—a purse containing £50 sovereigns, by the choir of his parish School, as a small token of the love and respect which they bear him. The Rev. J. Hall, on leaving the curacy of Bolsover, a handsome gold watch, handsome tea and coffee service and a pocket communion service, from the parishioners. The Rev. Alfred Hall, on leaving the curacy of Hull after sixty guineas, by the congregation of St. Mark's Church, Sheffield.

The Rev. Frederick Temple, D.D., Head Master of Rugby, has been appointed to the vacant Professorship of Moral Philosophy at Oxford, in the place of Dr. Fraser, Bishop of Manchester, who resigned the office on his elevation to the Episcopal Bench. The appointment is one entirely in the gift of the Crown, and is worth £500 per annum. Dr. Temple is a graduate of Oxford, and was formerly a Fellow of Exeter College. He is the author of several works on the part of the Warden and Fellows. The Archbishop deferred his decision, until important changes had been carried out.

The Tomline Mathematical Prize at Eton has been awarded to Russell, major.

The annual distribution of prizes and certificates to the students of the Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester, took place on Thursday week. The Prince of Wales, K.G., presided, and was supported on his right by H. R. Hoad, R.C.M., in the presence of Lord Broughton (the president of the college), Lord Belper, Lord Elcho, M.P., Sir Thomas Fremantle, Bart., Robinson, a large number of ladies and gentlemen interested in the college. Professor Malden and the students occupied the body of the theatre, and the whole of the seats, which number 129 were new students. The usual good order and discipline had been maintained by the students without any interference on the part of the police.

The annual distribution of prizes to the students of King's College, in the departments of medicine, general literature, and applied sciences took place on Wednesday last at the theatre of the college. The chair was taken by the fashionable attendance. Lord Stanley, the President of the college, opened the proceedings, and Professor Bentley spoke in high terms of the success and progress of the students during the past year.

The distribution of the prizes to the pupils of Marlborough College was held at Dean's-yard, Westminster, on Thursday week—the Right Hon. S. J. Stanley, M.P., in the chair. The report of the council for the past year was read, and much satisfaction expressed at the growing prosperity and usefulness of the college. The meeting took place on Friday last week.

The first stone of the third or lower middle school, in connection with St. Nicolas College, Lancing, Sussex, of which the Lord Bishop of Chichester is visitor, intended for 1000 boys, sons of small farmers, tradesmen, and superior artisans, will be laid by Earl Granville, on Tuesday next.

Thursday week was the Harrow Speech-Day, and was of more than usual interest, from the fact of the Prince and Princess of Wales being present to hear the speeches and witness the distribution of the prizes.

A grammar-school for middle classes has been founded at Enfield by the Head Master of Forest School, Walthamstow, at the request of several resident clergy and gentry.

The Old Pauline dinner, which has been long discontinued, was revived yesterday week at the Albion Tavern—the Lord Chief Baron, the Right Hon. Sir Frederick Pollock, in the chair. Seventy old Paulines sat down to dinner.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The annual general meeting of the Sussex Archæological Society will be held at Seaford on the 11th of August next.

There were serious disturbances in Limerick on Tuesday and Wednesday, last week, between the military and some of the inhabitants.

Mr. W. N. Welsby, for many years Recorder of Chester and Member for that city in the Parliament, died yesterday week, in his sixty-second year.

On Wednesday there was an explosion at Messrs. Curtis and Harvey's powder-mill, Tonbridge, by which four lives were lost.

The crews of Bude, St. Ives, and Portreath, Cornwall, have been constituted a port under a collector, to be stationed at Hayle.

The Hon. Edward Chandos Leigh is appointed Recorder of Stockport, in the room of Mr. Powers, appointed a metropolitan police-magistrate.

Mr. Robinson Fowler, of the Northern Circuit, has been appointed the new stipendiary magistrate of Manchester, in the room of Mr. Cuthbert Ellison, appointed one of the police magistrates at Worship-street.

The sum of £2,000 was granted at the County Court Sessions last week, for the purpose of providing additional accommodation at Lancaster Castle.

At a meeting of the council of the Royal Scottish Academy on Monday, Mr. George Harvey, the eminent Scottish landscape and historical painter, was elected president, in room of the late Sir John Watson Gordon.

Mr. Alfred Hill, son of Mr. M. D. Hill, Recorder of Birmingham and Commissioner of the Local District Court of Bankruptcy, has been appointed Registrar of the Birmingham Bankruptcy Court, vice Mr. Wilson, resigned.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland held the third and last reception of the season on Saturday afternoon at the Viceregal lodge, Phœnix Park. Notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather—more like January than July—the attendance was very numerous.

The Manchester City Council have established a "Cabmen's order of merit," to serve as a good-conduct badge dose in the Army. The Council has hopes that this badge will be obtained by good conduct, coupled with length of service, and to be withdrawn as a punishment if any offence be proved against the wearer.

A report by Mr. Maclure, the hon. secretary of the committee for the relief of the manufacturing distress, mentions the gratifying fact that since the year began upwards of 1,000 persons have been taken off the unemployed list, and that out of 170 districts there are now only forty-three where it is still necessary to continue relief to distressed operatives.

Eight colliers were being lowered down a shaft at the Blackley Hurst Colliery, near Wigan, yesterday week, when, owing to some mishap, the cage in descending to the pit's mouth was "lifted out." She were thrown to the bottom of the shaft and killed, while the other two clung to the side of the cage until assistance arrived and they were saved.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland opened on Monday evening at Belfast. The moderator, or assembly's chaplain, the Rev. John Rogers, was re-elected. The re-election was opposed by Dr. Cooke, the Rev. John M'Neill, and others, but the motion was subsequently put, and Mr. Rogers was chosen by a majority of 187 to 39.

At the termination of the business at the Somerset Quarter Sessions on Tuesday week the chairman, Captain Speke, the hero of the Nile, was presented at the Shirehall, Taunton, in the presence of a large number of ladies and gentlemen, with a handsome silver shield, each one being covered by a pair of finely-chased Egyptian vases, in silver-gilt, the form being taken from the Egyptian bronze vases in the Alexandria museum, presented by Lord Cork, the newly-appointed Lord Lieutenant of the county.

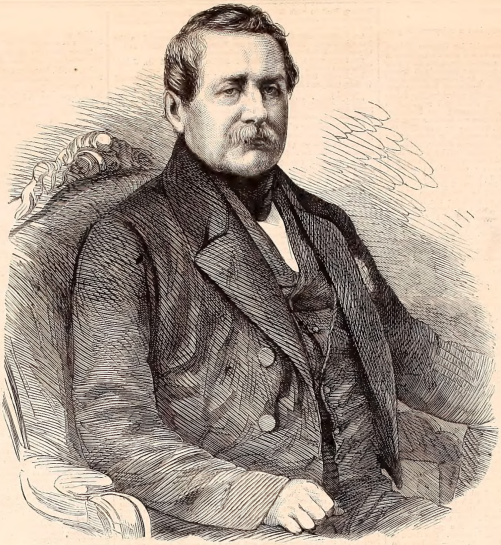
The sittings of the eighteenth annual conference of the Evangelical Alliance were commenced on Tuesday, in Queen-street Hall, Edinburgh. There was a numerous attendance of the clergy. After devotional exercises, under the presidency of the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Noel, who delivered the opening address on the Christian union, the formal business of the alliance was transacted. The Rev. Dr. Stewart, of Targhorn, gave an account of the spread of Evangelical truth in the north of Scotland during the year. In the evening a meeting took place in the Assembly Hall, Lord Belhaven presiding. The speakers addressed themselves chiefly to the growth of Romanism on the Continent.

The president and members of the Royal Hibernian Academy, whose exhibition of paintings was opened a short time ago, gave their annual conversazione yesterday week at the Academy House, Lower Abbey-street, Dublin. The entire suite of rooms was thrown open, and presented a decided improvement on those of former years.

At the Liverpool Assizes Court, on Thursday week, Edward Campbell, a sailors' boarding-house keeper, in Regent-street, was charged with kidnapping the Foreign Enlistment Act by engaging for the Confederate Government in December and May last, for service on board the Georgia and the Rappahannock, the crew of the latter vessel stated that he was engaged for the Georgia in December last by the defendant, and proceeded to join her at Queenstown. He received no wages and never saw the vessel returned with her to Liverpool, where the crew were paid off, and her career as a Confederate cruiser terminated. The witness was asked to get more join the Rappahannock. He did induce several men, and about eighteen or nineteen, including ten firemen, were engaged with the defendant. They went from Liverpool to Dover, and thence to Calais. At Calais it appeared that the Rappahannock being ready for sea, required no firemen. They were, therefore, deposed to these facts. The prisoner was committed for trial.

The 1st Lancashire Volunteers, who have spent several weeks under canvas during the present month of June, in the park at Knowsley, have again pitched their tents this year on the grounds attached to Priory House, the residence of their commanding officer, Colonel Chadwick. The encampment is always a source of attraction to civilians, and is exceedingly beneficial to the volunteers themselves, as the most rigid discipline is enforced. Several Chambers lives under canvas with his men, though his house is only a few yards distant.—The 1st Cheshire Rifle Volunteers have had their encampment during the past three weeks in the picturesque neighborhood of Kingsley. About one hundred and fifty men were under the command of Colonel King. The commanding officer, residing in the camp, was brought to whether his men been so favourable during the whole time of the encampment, the time was passed most pleasantly, and all the men appeared to enjoy the regular duties involved by the encampment. The review took place on Tuesday. The event was celebrated by a monster bonfire on the ground, which illuminated the neighbourhood for miles.

Some frogs, the first imported into New Zealand, have arrived at Lyttelton in the Chrysolite. They were shipped in the condition of tadpoles, but arrived at maturity during the voyage.



THE HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY.

The review of this ancient civic force by its Captain-General and Colonel, the Prince of Wales, and the presentation of new colours by the Princess of Wales to the Light Infantry Band, took place on Saturday, in Finsbury, on Wednesday week. There were about 500 men under arms, consisting of one troop of horse artillery, with two field-pieces, under the command of Captain Jary; a troop of light cavalry, under the command of Lieutenant Kearns; a battalion of infantry, in eight companies, commanded by Major Robinson and Major Snell; and a field-battery of four guns, under the command of Captain Brackley, the whole being under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Colville. As there were some heavy showers of rain, the Prince and Princess arrived, attended by General Knollys and Colonel Keppel, in close carriages, before the review had proceeded far from rain ceased. Besides the people admitted by tickets, thousands saw the ceremony from the surrounding windows and housetops. Their Royal Highnesses on arriving were escorted to a spot in front of the saluting-dais, where the troops, lighted and mounted at the word, the men in the uniform of Captain-General of the corps. Behind the Royal party were a number of mounted officers, who had been invited as visitors. The regiment, drawn up in line, with the cavalry and horse artillery on the flanks and the field battery in the rear, received the Prince with a Royal salute. His Royal Highness, attended by the officers of his Staff, then rode slowly along the line, front and rear, inspecting the men and their accoutrements, and, this over, he returned to the saluting-point. There an interesting ceremony took place, though a sharp shower of rain deprived it of much of its effect. A set of handsome new colours, the gift of the wife of Major Robinson, was formally presented to the regiment by the Princess of Wales, having first been consecrated by the Rev. Thomas Hugo, the Chaplain of the force. The battalion having shouldered arms, Major Robinson and Secil dismounted, and, raising the colours which had been piled over the drum, bore them to the carriage of the Princess. Her Royal Highness, laying her hand upon them, expressed the pleasure she felt in presenting them to the regiment, adding that she trusted they would always serve as the emblems of honour, and never be unfurled except in defence of their Queen and country. The colours were then placed in the belts of Ensigns Webb and Fairlie, who received them kneeling, as represented in the Sketch we have engraved. Lord Colville, addressing her Royal Highness, said they were intrusted to a regiment of brave men, who would defend them with their lives, if need were. The regiment having presented arms, the colours were borne high in air to the front, with a slow and stately march, under an escort, the band playing the National Anthem; and the time-worn banners which they supplanted, and which were some fifty years old, were carried to the rear to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." This ceremony having concluded, the battalion broke into open column of companies and marched past the saluting-point, first at slow and then at quick time, followed by the artillery and cavalry, which had been massed in column in the mean time. The battalion then formed three sides of a square, and the Prince with his Staff rode into the centre. His Royal Highness, addressing Lord Colville, said it had afforded him very sincere gratification to see the efficiency which the regiment had attained in all its branches, and the Princess of Wales took a deep interest in the Hon. Artillery Company, as he himself did, remembering that his father before him had commanded the regiment.

THE LATE KING OF WIRTEMBERG.

A BRIEF memoir of the deceased King of Wirtemberg, whose name was Frederick Charles, but who reigned by the title of William I., appeared among our obituary notices last week. We have engraved his Portrait for this Number. He deserved to be remembered as a just, faithful, and benevolent Prince, who ruled his small dominions in peace, and studied the welfare of his people, during the long period of forty-eight years. His death has caused a vacancy in the most noble Order of the Garter. In the present condition of Germany, it is probable that his son and successor, King Charles I., who is brother-in-law to the Russian Czar, will scarcely enjoy so tranquil and easy a reign.

THE LATE KING OF WIRTEMBERG.

CRICKET MATCH AT WINCHESTER

WE have engraved an Illustration of that great annual public school "event"—the match between the picked cricketing "eleven" selected from the colleges of Eton and Winchester. It took place last week in the grounds of Winchester College. This season the friends and scholars of both foundations had looked forward with great interest to the result of the match, which was exceedingly well played by the members of both elevens. The proceedings attracted a large and distinguished company, which included the officials and many of the masters of both colleges, Dr. Goodford, the Provost of Eton, being likewise present. The game was commenced on the Tuesday by Winchester, who first undertook the batting, and retired at the close of their first innings with a score of seventy-six runs, of which twenty-two were made by Mr. L. S. Howell, and sixteen by by Mr. J. N. Pyke, the Eton bowling being exceedingly good. The Etonians then went in for their first innings and made a score of 116 runs, thirty-five of which were made by Mr. E. Lubbock, and sixteen by Mr. W. S. Prideaux. The rain interfering slightly with the game, the stumps were drawn about six o'clock. On the Wednesday play was again resumed, the attendance of Etonians, Winchester scholars, and spectators being greater than on the previous day. Winchester again went in first for their second innings and did some splendid batting, finally retiring with the heavy score of 210 runs, fifty-two of which were made by Mr. J. J. Tuck, forty-five by Mr. C. Awdry, and thirty-three by Mr. L. S. Howell. Eton then took possession of their wickets for their second innings, and soon ran up a score of 171 runs, ninety-six of which were made by the Hon. S. G. Lyttelton, and fifty-four by Mr. W. S. Prideaux. At the conclusion of the play Eton had still nine wickets to go down, and, having made a total of 287 against 286, the total scores of the two innings of their opponents, were declared the winners.

CRICKET-MATCH AT WINCHESTER BETWEEN ETON AND WINCHESTER COLLEGES.

"DEAD GAME AND PEACOCK," BY THE LATE W. DUFFIELD; THE LANDSCAPE BY JOHN GILBERT.—SEE PAGE 47.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

[The following abstract of the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 1st inst., appeared in our Town Edition last week.]

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, JULY 1.

The report of the County Constabulary Superannuation Bill was agreed to.

The Public and Refreshment Houses (Metropolis, &c.) Bill was read a second time.

JAPAN.—Earl GREY moved a series of resolutions in reference to Japan; in effect, that the relations between this country and Japan appear to be in a highly unsatisfactory state; that the experience of the past leaves little hope for the future; and that, although it is desirable to avoid any breach of Majesty's friendship with the Japanese; that such collisions must sooner or later lead to war, possibly involving in that destruction of the Japanese fleet and commercial ruin and drag anarchy throughout the country; that the true interests of this country demand that such calamitous results should not be risked; that the treaties with Japan should be carried out and modified, so as to place the future intercourse on a more intimate and better footing; that Her Majesty's Ministers should enter into friendly relations with the Government of Japan, and with other powers having interests in Japan similar to our own, and to see what changes should be made in the provisions of those treaties; and that no further steps should be permitted to be taken which may not have been seriously take these matters into her consideration. The noble Earl said that, in making these observations, he did not wish to censure her Majesty's Government; not that he approved of their policy, far otherwise; but what had been done could not be undone; and what he desired to do was to put the Government in possession of their opinion upon the subject, in the hope that the spirit of his motion might pervade all future dealings with Japan.—Earl DERBY opposed the resolutions, and entered into a defence of the Government policy towards the Japanese authorities. A letter had been received from Yeddo which he could obtain redress for the murders and outrages committed upon British subjects, however appropriate they were, being justified by the circumstances which called them forth.—The Bishop of OXFORD denounced the policy of the Government in Japan as beneath that of any Christian or civilised nation. Every step of our intercourse with Japan was sealed with the blood of its Princes, who were compelled by us to submit to the feelings of what was the dearest prejudice of their own subjects; and in the end, instead of finding our trade and commerce extended, we found that the Japanese Government had never failed to attend those who departed from the principles of right and justice.—The Earl of CLARENDON, after briefly defending the policy of the present, preface.—The Earl of CARNARVON having addressed the House in support of the resolutions, their Lordships divided, when Earl Grey's resolutions were negatived by a majority of 30 to 14.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, JULY 1.

The Dramatic and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Bill and the Cranbourne-street Bill passed through Committee.

The Forest and Extention Bill, the Tithe Endowment (No. 2) Bill, and the Railways (Ireland) Acts Amendment Bill were read the third time and passed.

The House went into Committee on the Public Health and Local Government Service Estimates, and subsequently the Report of the Committee of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

THAMES EMBANKMENT.—In a Committee of the whole House on the Thames Embankment and Metropolitan Improvements Bill, a motion by Mr. Ayrton that all the EXCHEQUER moved resolutions authorising the Commissioners of the Treasury to advance out of any money that may be in the hands of or paid under the Thames Embankment and Metropolis Improvement Acts, with the interest thereon, and to cause advances to be made out of the Consolidated Fund of such sums as may be necessary for the repayment of such principal and interest; and that the Metropolitan Board of Works and the Local Government Act Office be authorised to advance the money which the Metropolitan Board of Works is authorised to borrow. He explained that the object of the Bill was simple. A discussion followed. The resolutions were ultimately agreed to.

THE METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.—Lord C. PAGET, in reply to Sir J. Elphinstone, stated that the opinion of Vice-Admiral Fitzroy, President of the Meteorological Department of the Board of Trade, had been taken in reference to the winds and currents which prevail in the mid-Atlantic in the months of July, August, and September. The facts set forth in the Queen's Trade-wind chart were not opposed to the information which he (Lord C. Paget) had given to the House on the authority of the same gentleman.—Mr. SAY—Sir J. ELPHINSTONE asked if the Government would procure information from Admiral Fitzroy had it on the table.—Lord C. PAGET replied in the negative.

THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY.—On the order of the day for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. A. MILLS called attention to the present condition of the territories claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company, and moved for the production of copies of all correspondence which had taken place between the Imperial and Canadian Governments respecting the said territories, and also copies of any of any memorials forwarded to the Colonial Office from the inhabitants of the Red River territory. The hon. gentleman considered that a large and fertile district was at present monopolised, owing to the alleged rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, and that the vacuum which would be created by the withdrawal of the question were readily resolved by Canada, that colony being prepared to undertake the duties of government. Mr. Berkeley Fane, who had come from part of the territory in question, thought that it should be dealt with. He had not been on a principle that provision should be made for the due administration of justice, and by the time the Bill was passed into Canada the refusal of the colonisation of the territory; and it remained to be seen whether it would become necessary to place the Bill on the table of the Government.—The motion was then withdrawn.

IRISH LUNATIC ASYLUMS.—Mr. BLAKE called attention to the necessity which exists for amending the laws relating to the administration of lunatic asylums in Ireland, and for making such provision for the care of the insane as is confined in the Irish workhouses. He asked if the Chief Secretary for Ireland would introduce a Bill next Session for the purpose.—Mr. CHICHESTER FORTESCUE, R. PEEL expressed a strong opinion that there was no necessity for further legislation upon the subject.—After a short discussion the matter was allowed to drop.

THE IONS OF CUPH.—Mr. GRANT DUFF called attention to the report of the Commissioners on the Law of Copyright, and inquired if papers on the subject would be presented to the House.—Mr. SOLICITOR-GENERAL said that the Government proposed to introduce a measure to amend the law of copyright in the course of next Session, and that the report of the Commissioners would be laid upon the table.

THE INDIA COMPANY.—On the order of the day for going into Committee of Supply, Mr. A. MILLS called attention to the present condition of the territories claimed by the Hudson's Bay Company, and moved for the production of all correspondence which had taken place between the Imperial and Canadian Governments respecting the said territories, and also copies time had arrived when England must play the game of brag no longer. But the question in coming to a conclusion was upon the Government whether the House had confidence in the Opposition, and that he was not prepared to concede.

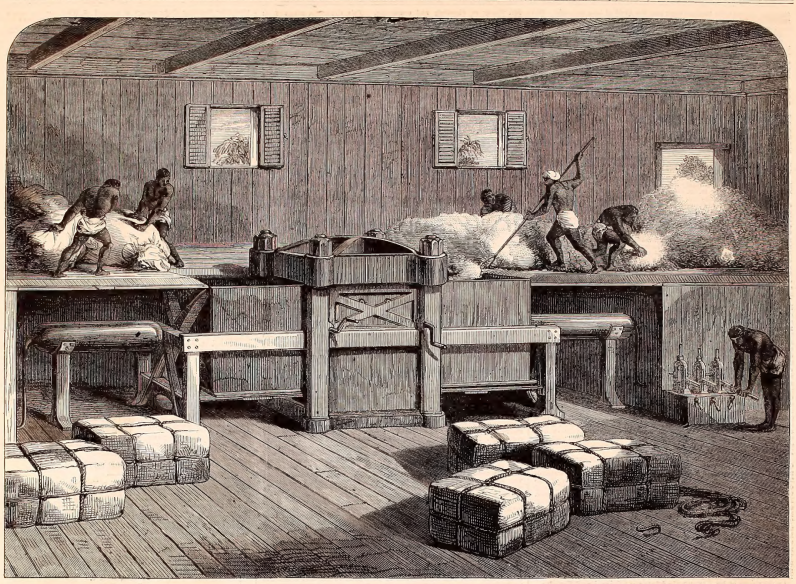
MR. BUTLER JOHNSTONE said the foreign policy of the Government for the last eighteen months had been a perfect farce. To go to war now, however, for Denmark would be to pursue a useless and suicidal policy, but he was of opinion that the House of Commons ought not any longer to leave the foreign policy of the country in the hands of statesmen who had made such a miserable exercise of blunders.

LORD H. VANE felt great sympathy for Denmark, but could see no means by the war resign-hooked for her independence. Was there no change of Government that would help the Danes; and as he could not join in the present vote of the Government, he would vote for the previous question.

MR. LINDSAY deprecated the constant spirit of interference which characterised the foreign policy of the Government; and, in supporting the resolution, said he would be prepared, by-and-by, to take such steps as would place a sufficient force afloat to save the Danes. The party with whom he acted were proud of sufficiently severe attacks given, they regretted to find, by the present vote they were about to give, that the Government at the sacrifice of the honour of this country.



LORD R. MONTAGU supported the resolution, explaining that he would not do so at any account of a disposition to quarrel with those would lead to war.

MR. WYLDE spoke in opposition to the motion, and, by some curious process of reasoning, apparently unintelligible to the House, attributed the failure of our diplomacy to the over-zeal and aggressive spirit of the Opposition.

MR. ROEBUCK stigmatised the conduct of the German Powers as cruel and cowardly. The facts of the case appeared to him to be as follows:—The small States of Germany had gone mad on the subject of nationality; the Danes, with the King at their head, had endeavoured to maintain the doctrine of Empire; Prussia wanted a port in the Baltic, and also wished to divert the attention of sovereigns at home. Accordingly, Austria and Prussia mad and silly, and Earl Russell had aggravated her by repeated lectures. The noble Earl had mistaken his position; he was independent of Austria and Prussia, but Fortune made him a statesman. He believed that if the foreign policy of this country had been placed in the hands of Lord Palmerston we should not be reduced to our present condition; and that, if we had taken a bold stand at the first, the European and minister of Germany would have been effectually checked. He would, however, vote against the resolution, because he considered the present Government better than the thousand better ones that should Ministers be placed in a minority.

MR. HORSMAN described, in terms of severest censure, the madness and hypocrisy of the German Powers, and predicted that a day of reckoning would arrive when the whole of civilised Europe would abhor the heretical enormity which could descend upon Austria and Prussia would be but a righteous retribution for the blood and misgovernment they had shed in Poland by vengeance. With regard to the first resolution of Mr. Disraeli, he appreciated the House would give it the condemnation it deserved, but as to the charge the Government with having failed to maintain the integrity and independence of Denmark that it deserved none. Then, as to the policy that the right honourable gentleman was inviting the House to adopt a continuation that the facts did not justify. Why, the Danes had, for more than two years the House of Commons had acquiesced in the policy that they were now called upon to condemn. Then, the country was unanimous, which was not by her Majesty's Ministers, but by Parliament. The Government had, no doubt, mistaken, but the Opposition had committed a greater error. Parliamentation was very bad, but the manner in which the Opposition proposed to mend it was a combination of treason and unveiling of the secrets of office. He object was to condemn the Government as much as possible and to compromise the opposition as little as possible. Under these circumstances he could not give a vote which would assist to place in power a party which had shown more weakness and less courage than the Government—a party which had submitted the high functions of a constitutional Opposition and had stifled the voice of Parliament.

MR. S. FITZGERALD, having replied to the attack of Mr. Horsman upon the Opposition, commented upon the inconsistencies that had in a single Conservative member of the official party and said a word in defence of the Government. There had been from all who had taken part in the debate a strong feeling of condemnation, and each seemed endeavouring to compete in the use of strong terms against the Government, and many of them had voted for it against it. He submitted that the object of the resolution was intended to censure the Government for having committed a blunder, and that was the reason why he hoped the House of Commons had sufficient spirit to refuse to do so. The Government might declare that they were prepared to go to the country upon their peace policy; but he could not imagine any greater misfortune than "Palmerston and no Peace" cries. The Government admissions they had invited foreign countries to join in a joint conference of this country and Russia, and Earl Russell had declared in the House of Lords that they were still willing to get to war. If they could not succeed in doing so, they would be willing to go to war. He did not wish to indicate a policy, but if they should be invited to vote by which he proposed to vindicate the country, he should be invited to vote by which he proposed to vindicate the country, he should be invited to vote by which he proposed to vindicate the country, he

PRESS FOR PACKING INDIAN COTTON.

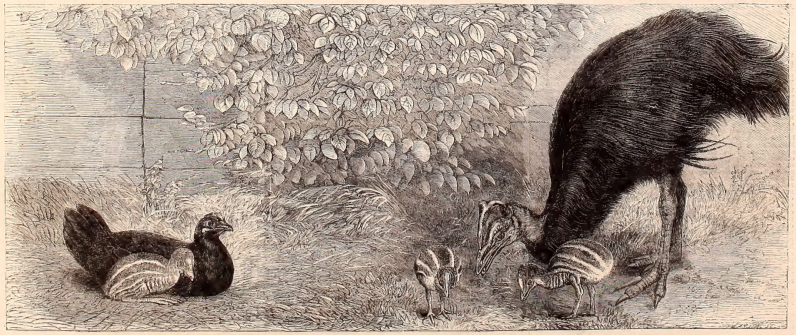


Illustration last year, that the male takes the entire responsibility of providing the nest, hatching the young, and rearing them. He repels any approach of the idle, curious, and meddlesome female; and in this case the paternal mooruk could only be quieted by her being taken out of his sight. The female mooruk, like the rhea, lays her eggs anywhere about the inclosure; and the male, with his beak and neck, carefully rolls them into the ample nest he has contrived of straw and other materials. When he thinks the number completed he begins to sit, a model of patience and care. The mooruks are at all times pugnacious birds. The present one and his wife would fight desperately if they were not separated. Their inner claws are armed with an extremely long nail, and by the help of their muscular thigh they can inflict serious wounds.

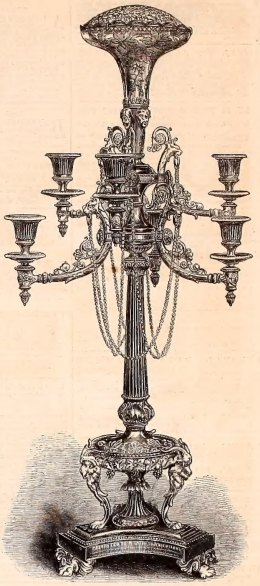
PATENT COTTON-PRESS FOR INDIA.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the 19th of December last we engraved a sketch of a cotton convoy on its way from Rewat to the Ganges, and one also of a cotton fleet descending that river. The subject of cotton planting in India has become one of such vital importance to English manufacturers that anything which tends to illustrate its growth, preparation, and transport in that vast empire will scarcely fail to interest some of our readers. We now give an Illustration of Mr. David Wilson's new patent cotton-press, which, from the simplicity and strength of its structure and its power and speed of action, is likely to be serviceable to all occupied with the collection and shipment of cotton. The quantity turned out by the old cumbrous cotton-screws (of first and second pressure) is reckoned in India at fifty bales per day, with an expenditure of coolie labour of from eighty to ninety men, whereas the estimate of what may be done by this new press, with a proper arrangement for working the pumps, is at least 100 bales, with eight or ten coolies to press them. As coolie labour is daily rising in price, and becoming more difficult to obtain even at the advanced cost, this saving is a matter of importance. The new press possesses other advantages, in its moderate cost, great strength, quick action, and the small space occupied in fixing it. We shall briefly describe its working. The cotton is received in loose bags, and, after being carefully inspected and weighed, is carried to the top of the press. The door for taking out the bales (shown in our Illustration by the strengthening cross-bars) slides down, or may be arranged to open up in a line with the top of the press; but, in either case, balance-weights must be properly adjusted to make the door open without trouble. The ends of the upright trunk move back to a distance of about three feet, and slide between the front sides and bottom of the press, while these are extended and the top slides back as the cotton, of sufficient weight to form a bale, is thrown into the open space. The door is then closed and the two ends of the press are affixed to hydraulic rams of six inches diameter, which drive the ends forward in less than a moment (the whole force of the pumps being applied to the rams) till they arrive at the main trunk of the upright press, where they are both fixed at once by simple but powerful clamps. The whole power of the pumps is then applied to the larger ram (of 16½ in. or 18 in. diameter, and acting perpendicularly, the cylinders being below the ground-line), which has only to rise about 2½ ft. to complete the bale. The clamps are then removed, and the ends thrown back, which at once releases the bale and prepares the press for a fresh supply of cotton.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. LINDLEY FROM THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the anniversary meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society for 1863 it was resolved that a subscription should be opened for the purpose of presenting Dr. Lindley—whose resignation of the office of secretary was then announced—with a testimonial expressive of the sense entertained of his long and laborious services to the society and to the cause of science generally. Dr. Lindley's official connection with the society had lasted forty years. By his literary labours, moreover, in producing those admirable books on systematic botany and vegetable physiology, which are indispensable to the English student of these branches of science, as well as by his efficient services as a professor of University College, Dr. Lindley has earned a high degree of public esteem. This token of regard from the Fellows of the Royal Horticultural Society is, therefore, a matter of interest beyond their own circle, and we now publish an Illustration of it. The committee had arranged with Messrs. Williams and Co., silversmiths, of 223, Oxford-street, for designing and manufacturing a piece of plate which should have in the character of its ornamention a peculiar significance as an offering to Dr. Lindley, who has made certain tribes of plants the special study of his life. It is an épergne of solid silver, with an oval base, ornamented by scrolls of foliage and flowers, having on one side a shield with Dr. Lindley's crest, and on the other a suitable inscription; both surmounted by a wreath of roses. The stem—a pillar surmounting the base—is ornamented with leaves of Hibiscus Lindleyi, Lindleya mespiloides, &c., and bears four branches of tendril form, to support four dishes, in the centre of which rises a large vase for flowers. Round this, as a sort of corona, a circle of the insect-like blossoms of Oncidium papilio are arranged with admirable effect, while in other portions of the design, the flowers of Sophronitis grandiflora, and others, are tastefully introduced. It will thus be seen that the families of Orchidæ and Rosaceæ—on which Dr. Lindley has expended so much time and labour—have largely contributed to the decoration of the testimonial presented to him.

THE MOORUK AT THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS, REGENT'S PARK.



TESTIMONIAL TO CAPT. INGLEFIELD, R.N., FROM THE MERCANTILE MARINE SERVICE ASSOCIATION OF LIVERPOOL.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. LINDLEY, FROM THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

TESTIMONIAL TO VISCOUNT LIFFORD FROM THE COUNTY OF DONEGAL.—SEE PAGE 28.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE LOW-LIGHTS DOCK AT TYNEMOUTH.—SEE PAGE 49.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—Great hit at the reproduction of JANET PRIDE.—Richard Pride (his original character), Mr. Benjamin Webster.—On MONDAY, and during the week, 39 PACKTHREADS HOUSE. Mr. J. L. Toole; JANET PRIDE, Miss Woolgar; and (by permission of Miss Braddon) HELEN, Mrs. Stirling. Concludes with BRISTOL DIAMONDS.—Mr. and Mrs. F. Matthews.

JULY IS THE MONTH TO VISIT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

"The ROSERY, with 5 Thousand of Roses, a sight almost worthy a visit."

The Park, Gardens, and Grounds, with the flower-beds and shrubberies in full bloom, in perfection.

Collection of Sculpture, Crystal Palace, the new Picture Gallery, the Handel Orchestra, the Classified Courts, the Natural Department, and objects of special interest.

In the Grounds Boats, Cricket, Ring-shooting, Swings, Croquet, Archery, Rifle Practice, and Grand Illuminated Performances by a large military band in the Handel Orchestra.

Monday is Friday. One Shilling; Children, Sixpence. Saturday, Dramatic College Fête, Half-a-Crown. Railway Season Tickets free up to the 1st of May, 1863.

The WEST—Great national railway facilities this month.

Thirty-three trains daily between London Bridge and Crystal Palace Station.

Every hour	Victoria	ditto	ditto
Twenty-two	ditto	Kensington	ditto
Thirty-two	ditto	Hammersmith and Sydenham	ditto
Thirty-two	ditto	Clapham Junction	ditto

Half-hour trains from all stations of Metropolitan to Kensington, Liverpool Street Train from North London to ditto ditto

Every hour	London and North-Western	to	ditto
Ditto	Great Northern	ditto	ditto

Omnibuses from Hammersmith to Clapham Junction and thence to the Palace. See Time Bills.

Several trains daily between Brighton, Bromley, and Sydenham, &c., direct to Crystal Palace Station.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—DRAMATIC COLLEGE.—Saturday, July 16, Half-a-Crown. Monday, July 18, One Shilling. On the ladies' day various excursions.

For particulars of these great fêtes see special bills and advertisements.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GREAT CRICKET-MATCH on THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY. Crystal Palace Club v. Gentlemen of Kent.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—SUMMER ARRANGEMENTS.—The increasing number of Excursions of large Schools, Associations, and Societies makes it requisite further arrangements whereby those proceedings should be carried out upon days may be allotted to them.

Applications for these particulars may be had on application to the GEO. GROVE, Secretary.

Crystal Palace, July, 1864.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—The Independent Order of ODD FELLOWS, LONDON UNITY, hold their Excursion on NEXT FRIDAY, July 15.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—All the GREAT FOUNTAINS on MONDAY NEXT, July 11, at Four.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—The GREAT DAY of the FORESTERS will be held, as usual, on TUESDAY, AUG. 23.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—The GREAT DAY of the ANCIENT ORDER OF ODD FELLOWS will be held, as usual, on TUESDAY, AUG. 2.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The Thirteenth Annual Exhibition is NOW OPEN, at their GALLERY, 5A, PALL MALL EAST, from Nine till Dusk. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d.

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

ON VIEW, the PICTURE of the MARRIAGE of the PRINCESS of WALES, PALACE, from actual sittings, by Mr. G. H. THOMAS, who was present at the ceremony. By permission of Her Majesty the Queen, at the GERMAN GALLERY, 168, New Bond-street, DAILY, from Ten till Six. Admission, 1s.

MR. SIMPSON'S WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS of INDIA, THIBET, and CASHMERE, at the GERMAN GALLERY, 168, New Bond-street, Daily, from Ten till Six o'Clock. Admission One Shilling.

MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY will APPEAR at the ADELPHI THEATRE, Tuesday, in his New Entertainment, mainly entitled PARIS, and MRS. BROWN AT THE PLAY. Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; Saturday and Saturday Afternoon at Three. Stalls, 3s.; Second Circle, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. The Box-office at the Hall open between the hours of Eleven and Five daily.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED and MR. ALFRED REED will perform, To-Day (Saturday), at Three and Eight o'Clock, their New Entertainment, to be followed by THE BARD AND HIS BIRTHDAY by W. Brough, Esq.; and MR. John Parry's new song, THE SEASIDE; or, Mrs. Scudder's Day out of Town.—Royal Gallery of Illustration, 14, Regent-street. Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; Saturday and Saturday Afternoon at Three.

THE EXHIBITION OF SCULPTURE, in connection with the ROYAL ACADEMY, will (unless delayed) be opened on THURSDAY, JULY 14, at Eleven o'Clock, and will remain open daily, from Ten till Dusk, until the 31st of July. Admission by Ticket, which may be obtained of Members of the Royal Academy, or of the Secretary, at the Royal Academy, Trafalgar-square.

By order of the Council,
HENRY WYATT, R.A., Secretary.

ALEXANDRA PARK, GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.

THE FORESTERS' GRAND FETE, MONDAY, JULY 11. Admission, Single Ticket, Half-a-Crown.

ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green, Great Northern Railway.

A GRAND FAIR will be held in the ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green (Great Northern Railway), THIS DAY, and remain open until Dusk. The Park and Grounds have been laid out, and have been considered by the Directors as suitable for the purpose of the fair. In the immediate neighbourhood of the shops space will be let for the amusements of all kinds.

Applications for space to be made immediately to the Ground Manager, at the Alexandra Park Station, where a model shop can be seen and terms of rent ascertained.

ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green, Great Northern Railway.

Chairmen and Trustees of Charities, in connection with the General Manager for Terms for the Admission of Sunday Schools to the Alexandra Park.

ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green, Great Northern Railway.

Picnic and Pleasure Parties will find the beautiful Grounds of the above a most delightful place. The Restaurant is now open.

ALEXANDRA PARK, Wood-green, Great Northern Railway, to which a 5-minutes train from the Metropolitan Station, Farringdon-street, at 10 minutes to Ten and 10 minutes to Eleven o'clock, Every Sunday.

MR. WILLIAM STRANGE, of the Firm of MESSRS. Strange and Wood, sole Contractors for the Refreshment Department, Alexandra Park, Muswell-hill, begs to intimate that he is IN NO WAY CONNECTED WITH or related to Mr. Frederick Strange, the Contractor at the Crystal Palace, by Sydenham.

ALEXANDRA PARK, MUSWELL-HILL.—STRAWBERRIES, Strawberries, Strawberries, in the highest state of perfection, at MESSRS. STRANGE and WOOD'S, Refreshment Contractors, for the Refreshment Department. Intimate to the public generally that, having purchased from the General nearly twenty acres of the choicest fruit, they are prepared to supply the same to the Nobility and Gentry, also to Clubs, Hotels, Taverns, Schools, Pic-nic Parties, &c., at Wholesale Prices. Wood, Refreshment Contractor, The Alexandra Park, Muswell-hill, N. Agents—Messrs. Fullum and Son, Covent-garden, London, W.

SMART'S SOLE WRITING INSTITUTION, corner of Swallow-street, Quadrant, Regent-street. Open from 9 till 5 daily. Pupils may enter at any time. Terms moderate. Private lessons at any hour. Gentlemen's and ladies' writing, Lithotypic large hand, &c. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in Eight or Twelve Easy Lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which department (if preferred) Mrs. Smart will attend. For prospectuses, and testimonials, apply or address to Mr. Smart.

P.S.—Agent to the West of England Insurance Company.

NEW BOOKS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

A GUARDIAN ANGEL. By the Author of "A Step to Catch a Husband," 3 vols.

MATTHEW'S NIECE. By the Author of "No Church," "Gwen: a Small," &c., 3 vols.

NOT DEAD YET. By J. C. JEAFFRESON, Author of "Live it Down," &c., 3 vols.

ADVENTURES OF A MAN OF FAMILY. By Lord WILLIAM PITT LENNOX. 3 vols.

A MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE. By NOEL RADCLIFFE. Author of "Lucy Dillon," 3 vols.

JOHN GRESWOLD. By the Author of "Paul Ferroll."

JANITA'S CROSS. By the Author of "Ida, Ottawa,"

BARBARA'S HISTORY. By AMELIA B. EDWARDS.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, in one vol., with Portrait,

REMINISCENCES OF THE OPERA. By JOHN ULRIC LAMOTTE, Formerly Director of His Majesty's Theatre.

HURST and BLACKETT, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

SECOND EDITION.—Now ready, with Frontispiece by F. Gilbert, bound and gilt, price 10s. 6d.

BEAUTIES of TROPICAL SCENERY, SOCIAL SKETCHES, and LOVE-SONGS. With Notes. By R. St. JOHNS.

"This is a book of many merits. Poetry by Alfred Tennyson, Music by Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. F. Duncan)."—Brighton Herald.

London: ROBERT MASHFORD, 109, Piccadilly.

Just published, price 1s. post-free, 24.

THE NEW SYSTEM of MUSICAL GYMNASTICS as an INSTRUMENT in EDUCATION; By M. C. TITLEY, M.A. London: J. W. PARKER, 377, Strand.

At all the Libraries, in 2 vols., 8vo, 28s.

LIFE AND TIMES OF CAROLINE the QUEEN. By the Author of "Memoirs of Queen Hortense." With Portrait. Price 3s.

"Miss Pardoe has published a delightful book, which will be found a welcome companion for a leisure hour."—Spectator, June 25, 1864.

London: J. W. PARKER and SON, West Strand.

Just published,

REVISED GRAMMAR-SCHOOL-BOOKS.

Edited or adapted to the Standards of the Revised Code.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD I. ... 8d.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD II. ... 8d.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD III. ... 8d.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD IV. ... 8d.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD V. ... 8d.

REVISED LESSON-BOOKS FOR STANDARD VI. ... 8d.

Eminently suitable either for Schools or Families.

Each book may be had separately, price 8d.

London: SIMPKIN and CO.; Hamilton and Co.

YOUNG ENGLAND.—Instruction and Amusement for Children, with Healthful Exercise and recreation for elder persons. Intercommunication between Intelligent children of both sexes. Subscription, 1s. per thirty-four letters. Apply to the Secretary.

CONTENTS OF THE NUMBER FOR JULY.—Full-size Illustration.—Mr. Asse-Bestiole's Menagerie.—Mr. Bonbon's Workshop of Chemistry (Illustrated).—The Printing Press—Lead and Wood Engraving (Illustrated).—The Wonders of Science.—Mr. Bonbon's Museum of Natural History (Illustrated).—Full-size Illustration.—Sketch of Egypt.—Geology.—Insect Transformations.—Summary of the Month.—Mr. Bonbon's Photographic Photography.—Working in Wood, with numerous Illustrations of Objects to be Executed.

Specimen Number sent for Two Postage Stamps.

London: W. TWEEDIE, 337, Strand.

Price 1s., with 12 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 1s. 3d.,

DESIGNS for HIGH-CLASS CABINET STYLES to be executed in DIAPERWORK, with full instructions.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Eighth Edition, with 25 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 8d.,

STAINED WINDOWS: the Improved Transfer Process of DIAPHANIE, or Perforated, as usual in Diaperwork, and Directions for Working.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

DECALCOMANIE.—Boxes containing Tracing Materials, Instructions, and Designs, post-free 18s. 6d., sent on receipt Post Office order.—J. BARNARD and SON, Agents for the Sale of Decalcomanie, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 3d., with 14 Lithographic Plates,

ALPHABETS and DESIGNS of different Styles, Sizes, and Proportions, for Draughtsmen, &c.

C. WOOD.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339 Oxford-street, W.

Fifth Edition, enlarged, price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 3d.,

HINTS on ILLUMINATING, and ORNAMENTING in GOLD and METALS. By HENRY NOEL HUMPHREYS.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

Second Edition, price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d. Illustrated with Drawings printed in Colours, Wood Engravings, &c.

LANDSCAPE PAINTING and SEPIA DRAWING FROM NATURE. By JOHN CHASE. M.W.C.S. Edited by JAMES HARRIS, Author of "Rudiments of Water Colour," "Rudiments of Oil Painting," &c.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Third Edition, price 6d., with 48 Diagrams, printed in Colours,

MIXED TINTS, with an ESSAY on LIGHT and SHADE. By EDWARD DUNCAN.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

PRIZES for SCHOOLS and HOME.—Nos. 1 and 2 of the Series of Prize Books for the Year, price 1s. each, post-free, 1s. 3d. each. Specimen pages sent free on application. The requirements and conditions may be had by sending an addressed envelope and stamps for the Editor, St. Michael's Vicarage, Derby.

COAT FOR LADIES.—The paper shapes for the cutting and arranging will be given in the QUEEN, the Lady's Newspaper, and Court Journal, of SATURDAY, JULY 9, with Fashion Plate, and the "Queen" of the week, price 1d. Order one; 4, a copy for eight stamps.—Office, 346, Strand, W.C.

DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions, 6d. each, post-free, 7d. each. Specimen pages free. Complete, in Boxes, 18s. 6d.; White Wood Box, extra fittings, 6s. and 6s. 6d. each. Post Office Order.—J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W. Agents for the Sale of Decalcomanie.

WILLIAM BERNARD, 99, Cavendish-terrace, London, W.

HUNT ON STAMMERING.

Just published, a New and Enlarged Edition, 8s. 6d., post 8vo cloth,

ON STAMMERING AND STUTTERING. Their nature and treatment.

By JAMES HUNT, Ph.D., F.S.A., F.R.S.L., &c.,

Author of the "Philosophy of Voice and Speech," "Anthropological Review," &c. London: LONGMAN and CO., Paternoster-row.

DR. YEARSLEY'S WORKS on the EAR. Price in each, 1s. On Diseased Drainage. 2. On the Artificial Tympanum. 3. On Obstruction.

CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

Fifth Edition, 9th Thousand, price 6s. 6d., post-free, 32 stamps,

DEAFNESS: its Causes and Cure. A Guide to their Treatment and Prevention. Illustrated by Cases. By THOS. HUNT, F.R.C.S., Surgeon to the Metropolitan Hospital for Diseases of the Skin, &c., Cherrick-street, Pimlico-square.

"Mr. Hunt's treatise is the best we have met with on the subject."—Medical Times and Gazette, June 27, 1863. "A most valuable work."—Lancet.

Second Edition, corrected and revised, post-free, 54 stamps, in cloth, 9s. 6d.,

THE TEETH: a Practical Treatise, with the best means of Restoring and Preserving Them Sound and Useful. By ALFRED, Esq., Surgeon-Dentist.

"The author of this book can recommend to the general public Mr. Fabell's treatise, which is as useful as it is unpretending."—Tobacco Trade Review.

Sold by the Author, 110, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—For the quarterly Volumes bound in the publication-cloven, with gilt edges, 2s. 6d. each. If sent monthly, with Cover, 3s. each. Cases for BINDING, 1s. 6d. each. Orders to be given to any Bookseller, or LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 13, Bloo-bury, London. The only Binders authorized by the Proprietors.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.—The Penny Printing Press, price from £1 5s. to £4 4s., for Marking Linen, Cards, and Circulars, Printing Sketch of the Art of Printing, 3d., or 14 postage-stamps.—D. G. BURR, Engraver and Stamp Maker to her Majesty's Post Office, 26, High Holborn, London, W.C.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW SONG, JESSY GRAY, sung by Mr. Fleming; the Music by E. L. HIME. Sent for 18 stamps. A simple and pathetic ballad, in the style of Balfe and Wallace. The composer of "Something to love me." It cannot fail impressive.

DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for Piano. By E. L. HIME. Played by Master Willie Pape before the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House. "One of the most exquisite romances we have heard."—Review. Sent for 18 stamps.—DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, by STEPHEN GLOVER, for Piano, one of the best of Glover's coloured marches. Sent for 18 stamps.

DUFF and HODGSON, 26, Oxford-street.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST of NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

JENNY OF THE MILL. Song; in G. Illustrated. In An Edition in A, as sung by Madame Sainton-Dolby, Mesdames Sherrington, &c., for Piano, 3s.

THE LAND OF THE LEAL. Sacred song, and, from its easy compass (D to F or E to F), an universal request for the drawing-room, 3s.

THE GIPSY'S WARNING. Song; the words by Miss Mary Mark. Four-part Song. 3d. AWAY TO THE FOREST. Four-part Song. 3d.

THE MAID OF ORLEANS. Poetry by Alfred Tennyson. Music by Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. F. Duncan), 3s.

THEY WENT THE FIRST DAY OF ALL I KNEW. Sacred Song. By Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. F. Duncan), 3s. 6d.

A WREATH OF SONG. By the Composer of "Her bright smile haunts me still," 3s.

HAMILTON'S PIANO TUTOR. 422th Edition. 4s. All Music-sellers.

PIANOFORTES FOR SALE OR HIRE, upon easy terms. Full Illustrated Lists forwarded on application.—Cramer, Beale, and Chappell, 201, Regent-street; Robert Cocks and Co.'s Depôt of Part-Songs, Anthems, &c., gratis and post-free.

London: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street, W. Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. Where may be had, Catalogues of Messrs. Novello and Co., Catholic Music.

POPULAR SONGS OF THE SEASON.

Great Nightingale. Song by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington 3s. 6d. (May be had in three keys, A, F, and G.

Bruce. Ballad. Sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby 3s. 6d.

The Sergeant's Song. Sung by Herr Reichardt 3s. 6d.

I Will Be True to Thee. Sung by Mr. Santley 3s. 6d.

The Maid's Wish. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington 3s. 6d.

Farewell, my Bark. Cantonlla Song in "Guy Mannering" 3s. 6d.

Ruler, and Reign Over Me. Sacred Song by Mdme. Weiss 3s. 6d.

METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FRANCOLITETA. Italian Bolero. Sung by Mlle. Titiens. Illustrated with coloured portrait. Price 3s. Portrait. Price 3s.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

GASTON DE LILLE. "NINA." Serenade for Pianoforte. The most successful piece of the season. 3s.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC BY

GASTON DE LILLE.

A Summer's Day Polka	...	...	3s.
Under the Trees. Valse	...	...	3s.
Punch and Judy. Polka	...	...	3s.
Spirit of Fun. Polka	...	...	3s.
Bright Eyes. Polka	...	...	3s.

All Illustrated in coloured style.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

PLAYED AT THE STATE BALLS.

THE ROYAL GALOP, by T. BROWNE, will equal in popularity the same Composer's "Victoria Regia" Galop. With or without Cornet. 3s. each.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

BANTING! BANTING! BANTING! The Great Song of the Day. By HOWARD PAUL. With a most amusing adaptation Illustration. Price 3s. 6d.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LES HUGUENOTS. Grand Brilliant Fantasia. Decidedly the best that has been published on this popular subject. Price 4s. net.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GOLDEN BELLS. A most striking, showy, and effective piece, destined to become as popular as "Le Bijou Enchanteur." Price 4s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PAS REDOUBLE. A very spirited and effective martial piece. Played by the military bands with great success. Price 4s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE NUIT ÉTOILÉE. A melodious and charming cavatina. One of the most successful pieces published by this popular composer. Price 4s. net.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MARTHA. A new and most admirable piece on the last airs in Flotow's melodious and pleasing opera. Price 4s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. By GANZ. Illustrated with coloured portrait. Price 3s. Illustrated London News. 18th Edition. Price 4s. Duet, 5s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA VIVACITÉ. Polka de Concert. By GANZ. Illustrated with coloured portrait. Encore of the season with immense success. Price 4s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE SING.—GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Miss Poole, with unparalleled success. For Voice, Violin, and Pianoforte. 4s.

BUTLER'S BRILLIANT Pianoforte Solo. Price 3s.

ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

Just published.

MY HEART IS AT THE PIANINE. New Song. Words and Music by C. M. C. OLIVER. Price 2s. 6d.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE PICNIC WALTZES. By Miss C. M. E OLIVER. With an excellent Lithographic Illustration. Price 3s.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MENDELSSOHN'S ATHALIE Overture.

A new cheap Edition for Voice and Piano. 4s.

METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S New Pianette is acknowledged the best and cheapest Pianoforte, having a rich and powerful tone, and elegant appearance. Pianettes, 25 guineas; Cottage Pianofortes, 30 guineas; Cabinet Pianofortes, 35 guineas; Drawing-room Pianofortes, 42 guineas; Semi-Grand Pianofortes, 50 guineas; Grand Pianofortes, 60 guineas.—OETZMANN and PLUMB, 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in fine walnut case, 25 to 32 guineas, full compass.—OETZMANN and PLUMB, 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S GRAND COTTAGE, seven octaves, new registered Action, 30 to 35 guineas. These instruments are beautiful in touch, quality of tone, and elastic in finish. Warranted.—31, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S PIANOFORTES, in solid mahogany, full compass, handsomely carved and panelled back, 30 guineas.—31, Regent-street.

Shipped to all parts of the world.

PIANOFORTES AND HARMONIUMS. OETZMANN and PLUMB have all descriptions for Hire. Purchase will find at 31, Regent-street, all they can desire in good Pianofortes, Harmoniums, and Musical Boxes, at moderate prices. Pianofortes, 2 guineas per month. Harmoniums, 1 guinea per month. Illustrated Lists of Second-hand Pianofortes by the best makers, from 10 guineas to 100 guineas. Pianofortes by all the eminent makers, Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman, Erard, &c. Every description of instrument or volume. Many are quite equal to new. Price ranges from £10 to £100.

PIANOS FOR HIRE.—CARRIAGE-FREE, with option of Purchase. Convenient terms may period. The largest assortment of Pianofortes by all the eminent makers, PLEYEL, PEACHEY (Maker to the Queen), D. Herz, Lipp, Brinsmead, Wornum, &c. Lists free.—CRAMER, BEALE, and CHAPPELL, 201, Regent-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, ERARD, KIRKMAN, and others, but at very reduced prices. These Pianofortes are by the above makers, and are warranted in every respect, which is a guarantee of their soundness.—COX, HUTCHINGS, and CO., 65 and 66, New Bond-street.

KIRKMAN'S 7-octave Trichord SEMI-GRAND and DRAWING-ROOM GRAND PIANOFORTES, with the Patent Check Repeater Action, and other improvements, for sweetness of tone, facility of touch, and durability. These instruments are universally admired.—COX, HUTCHINGS, and CO., Manufacturers and Pianoforte Warehouse, 65 and 66, New Bond-street, London, W.

KIRKMAN'S Celebrated 7-octave Trichord SEMI-GRAND PIANOFORTE, 70 guineas.—COX, HUTCHINGS, and CO.'s Pianoforte Warehouse, 65 and 66, New Bond-street, London.

CHISSHOLME and SONS' (from Stodmarsh) TRICHORD COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, in Rosewood case, 7 octaves, 70 guineas. Every description of Pianoforte for Sale, to suit any purchaser.—65, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPÔTS.—56, Cheapside, and 26, Leicester-street, Soho-square. Large Assortment of Musical Boxes, from 2s. 6d. to 100 guineas. Catalogues gratis and post-free on application to WALES and CO., as above. The Trade supplied with Musical Boxes and Musical Instruments.

TOURISTS derive additional pleasure in their rambles when acquainted with MINERALS, ROCKS, and FOSSILS. Specimens, Cabinets, Hammers, &c. Instructive practical INSTRUCTION to Ladies and Gentlemen; and, from his extensive Collections, amongst the many thousand specimens now on exhibition, in a dozen or twenty Private Lessons, he identifies the Specimens of the Student, and gives him a Duplicate Collection. Address, with stamp, for Prospectus, to Mr. Tennant, Mineralogical Collections at 8, 9, 10, 36, 39, 98, to 100 principal coach.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price £5 5s. Packed and sent to any Railway.

St. Cornhill, E.C. (late 6, Coleman-street).

Catalogues forwarded on receipt of six postage-stamps.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S two-guinea BINOCULAR FIELD or OPERA GLASS, greatly improved by the substitution of achromatic object glasses. This extraordinary glass is now constructed with twelve lenses, at the same price, giving to it wonderful power and clearness. The tube is covered with the brilliant fabrikoid for wear or theatre observation. It will show a distant object with the same clearness as the naked eye, and with beauty, symmetry, and distinctness, surprises, and delights the tourists' eye. May be had of opticians and jewellers throughout the United Kingdom, and of the Manufacturers, 22, Hatton-garden, and Rocket Beach, Wholesale Opticians, 96, High Holborn, London.

RECONNOITERER GLASS, invented by Mr. Rose, Optician, to the Queen. Answers where landscape distinctly at thirty miles, small windows ten miles off, ships' signals, &c., at sea, and is the most powerful glass ever made from ordinary size, and is the best for military purposes. "Such a glass is very good."—Marquis of Carmarthen. "Most useful."—Lord Elcho. "Remarkable performance."—Lord Ward. "Is a perfect and complete satisfaction, and is wonderfully good."—Sir Digby Cayley. "Is very good."—Sir Charles Lemon. "Is very good."—Admiral Sir Sidney Dacres. "Is very good."—Admiral Bowles. "I never before met with an article so completely answering the recommendation of its maker, nor, although I have purchased many, have I ever found a glass of the size, with so much clearness."—P. H. Fawkes, of Farnley, Otley. "Is very good."—Admiral Sir Thomas Pasley. "Is very good."—Oliver which has a much larger field than those in general use."—Oliver. "What interesting tourists will now start without such an indispensable companion as a Reconnoiterer and Quadrant."—The Sylphs "Give three bullet marks at 1000 yards, and man at 33 yards."—Lieut.-Col. Hay. "Is very good."—Lieut.-Col. Cameron. SALOM and Co., 78, Princes-street, Edinburgh. No agents.

YACHTING—GOOD GLASSES. BURROWS (Mariners) are the BEST.

SUMMER GAMES.

An Illustrated Catalogue post-free on application.

ARCHERY, CROQUET, Lawn Tennis, and Quoits.

ASSER & SHERWIN'S SUMMER GAMES. CROQUET.

81, Strand, W.C., London.

ASSER & SHERWIN'S SUMMER GAMES. ARCHERY.

81, Strand, W.C., London.

ASSER & SHERWIN'S SUMMER GAMES. CRICKET.

81, Strand, W.C., London.

WEDDING PRESENTS.—A large stock of Electro-plated Goods, Dessert Knives, Forks, &c., from 4s. to £50, at ASSER and SHERWIN'S, 81, Strand, W.C., London.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. DENT, HAVILAND and CO.'s Patent Watch, and Watch-maker by special appointment to his late Majesty George IV., to the Queen and the Prince Consort, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange. W. Elegant Gold Watches, 12 Gs. to £20; Silver Watches, 2l. 2s. to 10l. 10s.; Gold Chronometer Watches, 20 Gs. to 50 Gs.; Silver ditto, 5l. 5s. to 10l. 10s.; Gold Keyless Watches, by Dent, Watch-maker, 18, Regent-street, W. (from the Strand and Coventry-street). Established nearly a century. Manufactory, Clerkenwell, London.

GOLD CHAINS and FINE JEWELLERY.—A very elegant STOCK of GOLD CHAINS, 10 to 20 inches, Fancy Albert Chain, 3l. to 20 Gs.; Gold Bracelets, 2l. to 12 Gs.; Gold Bracelets, 5s. to 12 Gs.; Gold Brooches, 5s. to 10 Gs.; Gold Earrings, 5s. to 10 Gs.; Gold Lockets, 10s. 6d. to 10 Gs.; Gold Seal Keys, 5s. to 20 Gs.—FREDC. HAWLEY, Goldsmith, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange. Gold Chains, Lockets, and other Precious Stones purchased or taken in exchange. Jewellery repaired and Diamonds reset. Country Orders by Post-free. Country customers waited upon.

DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, and Maker of the Great Clock for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand (adjoining Coutts's Bank), and 34 and 35, Royal Exchange.

ICE for TOWN or COUNTRY.—Refrigerators, Ice-cream Machines, Freezing Powders, and everything connected with the Ice Trade. Ice delivered in any part of London or the suburbs. Apply to the Manager, at the Wenham Lake Ice Company, 109, Strand, London.

THE BEST SHOW of IRON BEDSTEADS in the KINGDOM is at HEAL and SON'S. The Heavy Plate Furniture Bedsteads covered in the exclusive show of Iron and Brass Bedsteads at Heal and Son's Bedding Warehouse, Tottenham-court-road and Sub-baptists. Portable Folding Bedsteads, from 16s.; Patent Iron Bedsteads, from 30s.;

BRIGHTON and BACK for 2s. EVERY SUNDAY and MONDAY, from London Bridge, Victoria, and Kensington, at 8.0 a.m. No luggage allowed. Children under Twelve years of age half price.

HASTINGS and BACK for 3s. 6d., by the BRIGHTON RAILWAY DIRECT ROUTE, EVERY SUNDAY, from London Bridge and Victoria, at 8.5 a.m. Three Trains call at St. Leonards, Bexhill-new, Battle, and Lewes. No luggage allowed. Children under Twelve years of age half price.

PORTSMOUTH and BACK for 3s. 6d., by the BRIGHTON RAILWAY NEW DIRECT ROUTE, EVERY SUNDAY, from London Bridge and Victoria, at 8 a.m. Three trains only stop at Havant, Chichester, Bognor, and Arundel. No luggage allowed. Children under Twelve years of age half price.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY. TOURIST TICKETS for ONE MONTH are now issued from PADDINGTON, Victoria, Chelsea, Kensington, Farringdon-st., Kingston, Gloucester, and Portishead, to the following places:—SOUTH WALES, Milford, Tenby, Pembroke, Carmarthen, Swansea, Merthyr, Neath, Tintern, Penarth, &c.; Monmouth, Tenby, Pembroke, Swansea, Falmouth, Penzance, &c. Also Weymouth and the Channel Islands, Malvern, Wells—Llandudno, Bangor, Carnarvon, Conway, Bangor, Carnarvon, Holyhead, &c. Also to the Isle of Man, by Steamers from Fleetwood. Wells—Ilfracombe, Barnstaple, Bude, Newquay, &c.

Tickets will also be issued for Circular Tours in North and South Wales.

Bristol, Malvern, and the Vale of the Valley of the Wye, &c.

Tours in Devon, Cornwall—Weymouth—Swansea, Llandudno, Carnarvon, Conway, Bangor, Holyhead, &c.

Ireland—Lakes of Killarney, &c.

Programmes, containing fares and full particulars, may be obtained at all the Company's Stations and the following Offices:—

Paddington, Paris, 1864. JAMES THOMSON, General Manager.

CRAMER AND CO. (Limited).

Capital, £100,000, in 20,000 Shares of £10 each.

Deposit, £2 per Share, and £2 on allotment.

Calls not to exceed £2 per share, and at intervals of not less than three months.

Guaranteed minimum dividend of ten per cent. per annum for five years.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed, as its name implies, for the purpose of combining the business of Messrs. Cramer, Wood, and Co., well-known music publishers in Regent-street.

The arrangement has been entered into with Mr. Wood, his partners being perfect and present owners of the property, subject to the company, as from the 31st of December last, of the entire business, profits from all liabilities of the present partnership, and the whole stock-in-trade, and the Company will take over during the present year, 1864, the lease of 201, Regent-street, 67, Conduit-street, and 16, King-street, at a price the Directors believe to be considerably to advantageous to the company.

Messrs. Brown, Bagshaw, and Westcott, public accountants, have investigated the accounts of the business, and are satisfied of the correctness of the statements.

Prospectuses, with forms of application for shares, may be obtained at 201, Regent-street; and at the Offices of the Company, 16, Pall-mall.

THE NEW CLUB.

COMMITTEE.

The Right Hon. Lord Wrottesley, Penkridge Castle, and 2, Upper Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square.

Vice-Admiral the Honourable Arthur Duncombe, Bart., Shenton Hall, Capital, Salisbury, and Cavendish-square, and Admiralty and Naval Service Club.

The Right Hon. Lord George Beauclerk, 12, Piccadilly, and Army and Navy Club.

Sir Benjamin Brodie, Bart., M.D., 41, Porchester-terrace, Hyde Park, Major-General Browning, 30, Gloucester-street, Regent's Park.

Captain Cavendish Browne, Esq. (of Auborrysike), 71, St. George's-square, Pimlico.

The Right Hon. Lord Viscount Melgund, Minto House, Pelham-crescent, Brompton, W. Knyvitt, Brooke's Club.

The Right Hon. Viscount Maidstone, 19, Lowndes-street, and White's Club.

The Thomas George Augustus Parkyns, Bart., 9, Gloucester-square, Hyde Park.

Temporary Secretary—Captain Pall-mall, S.W.

This Club is to be erected on the site of the Pantheon and Reform Club, in Pall-mall; a temporary clubhouse will meanwhile be opened. The Committee of the Club will be re-elected by the first general meeting of members.

Any gentleman, desirous to be the comfort on t accommodation of the new club, will be introduced, including a subscription of one guinea, an extensive suite of sleeping-apartments.

Terms of application for membership may be obtained of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Club; or at the Union Bank, 4, Pall-mall East.

THE PATENT CARRIAGE COMPANY, LIMITED.

Capital, £100,000, in Shares of £10 each.

FIRST ISSUE, 20,000 SHARES.

10s. per Share to be paid on application, and £1 on allotment.

No further call will be made thereon for Three Months.

CHAIRMAN.

G. P. Lascelles, Esq., Director of the National Financial Company (Limited), Winchester House, Old Broad-street, E.C.

DIRECTORS.

Thomas Alcock, Esq., Director of the Metropolitan Iron and Steel Company (Limited), Bow, and Cheapside.

Archibald Anderson, Esq., Director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Leadenhall-street.

J. Augustus Erskine, Esq., Assistant Commissary-General, Elgin-crescent, Kensington Park.

Sir Robert Nicholson, Bart., Twickenham.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Thomas Troubridge, of the "Albert Imperium Company," Chester-street, Grosvenor-square, S.W.

Bankers—Metropolitan and Provincial Bank (Limited), 79, Cornhill, E.C., and Branches.

Solicitors—Messrs. G. & A. Hill, Bucklersbury, Essex-street, Strand.

Manager—Messrs. Cramer and Co., Patentees, Conduit-street, Corner Maddox House, E.C.

Messrs. Johnson, Lucy, Cramer, and Co., Public Accountants, Lothbury.

SECRETARY PRO TEM.—D. A. L. Durnin, Esq.

OFFICES.

Harvey Chambers, Brokenbridge-street, Strand, W.C.

PROSPECTUS.

The object of this company is to transform (not to throw) new and improved Cabs and Carriages of superior construction, combining safety for owner confidentially, comfortable for driver, cheapness, and more elegant than any hitherto invented.

The Patent Rights for the Cabs and Carriages have been purchased from Messrs. Cramer, Makers for Royalty, and Inventors and Patentees. The vendors have accepted the whole of the purchase-money in shares of the company.

No promotion money has been sanctioned by the Board.

The Directors, in bringing this novel system of Cabs and Carriages, but merely to add to it the element of good character, which the Directors, giving a preference to those who may be Shareholders for the Cabs and Carriages. Vendors will also be granted the preference in obtaining the numerous orders already received, the Directors confidently anticipate that these Cabs and Carriages will completely supersede all others now in use.

From careful estimates made, the Directors have the greatest faith in the success of this undertaking, and large dividends may be confidently expected from the profits of the first year.

The following is an estimate of the profits realised by one carriage to be realised:—

Cost of building 1000 Cabs, of angle iron and wooden } £40,000 panels, at £40 each in the Company's MANUFACTORY.

Working Expenses, Wages, Horses, Keep, &c.

25 per cent. net profit on 1000 Cabs ... £10,000

Offices, Yard, and Premises ... 1,500

Expenses of Management, including Wages ... 4,500

Insurance, &c. ... 500

£16,500

ANNUAL INCOME.

1000 Cabs let out at a minimum of 6s. per week ... £26,000

Deduct Annual Expenses as per estimate ... 16,500

Net Annual Profit on every 1000 Cabs ... £9,750

Showing a profit of 24 per cent. per unit upon the entire investment of £40,000 for 1000 Cabs.

More than 5000 Shares having been already subscribed for, less than 2000 remain available for allotment.

Applications for Shares to be forwarded to the Bankers, Solicitors, or to the Offices of the Company, where prospectuses and forms may be obtained.

TO INVENTORS.—All persons desirous of protecting their inventions should procure the HANDBOOK presented gratis by the PATENT AGENCY (Limited), 6, Chancery-lane. Consultations daily. Patents obtained at moderate charges, and special facilities afforded for inventions.

CARTES DE VISITE, 12 for 2s. 6d. Forward your name in white and 12 stamps, with address, to the LONDON PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPANY, 54, Ludgate-hill, E.C., and you will receive by return of post 12 Cartes de Visite, which will be sent to you size and copy of original, which will be returned. A cartes sent to any gentleman on receipt of four stamps. Address WM. CHARLESTON, Manager.

MONOGRAMS DESIGNED AND ENGRAVED by DANIEL BAKER, 4, Old Cavendish-street, W.—D. B. has been the principal Heraldic Designer and Artist to the chief engravers, jewellers, and stationers of the World-end. Arms, Crests, Monograms, Addresses, Dies, Steels, and engraved. Wedding-cards and Stationery supplied.

ARMORIAL BEARINGS.—For FAMILY ARMS, Seal Name and Crests. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; or, by Heraldic Genius, 5s.—Mr. BAKER'S many years' connection with Heralds' College guarantees correctness and excellence of execution. 314, High Holborn, opposite Chancery-lane.

HERALDIC STUDIO, 6, Old Cavendish-street, W.

TO PARENTS and GUARDIANS.—An ARCHITECT and SURVEYOR, having extensive building operations on hand, REQUIRES an ARTICLED PUPIL. Premium—either, £50 at once, or £100 at intervals. Reference exchanged and time allowed. Address, Architect, care of Mr. Bonhnett, 71, Lower Coombe-street, W.

GROOM.—Wanted a Young Man to take charge of several horses: must be about 20 years of age, sober, and steady. None need apply who have not been several years in a thoroughly busting-stable. Apply by letter, stating all particulars, to A. B., care of Messrs. J. and J. W. DYER, Finsbury-pavement.

NO. 7, BANK-BUILDINGS (corner of Old Jewry, London) is the Chief Office of the ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE COMPANY (Limited).

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.—The OCTOBER BREWINGS of the above Ales are now SUPPLIED in Hogsheads, Barrels, Kilderkins, and Bottles, by ALLSOPP and MARSH, and Co., 33, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

SAUCE.

LEA and PERRINS'

WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,

pronounced by Connoisseurs

"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."

None genuine without name on wrapper, label, bottle, and stopper. Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to the Queen, and Grocers and Oilmen universally.

FRY'S SOLUBLE CHOCOLATE, in Quarter-pound Cakes.

A most convenient article, and strong in quality.

J. S. FRY and SONS,

Bristol and London.

Sold by Grocers, &c.

FRY'S PEARL COCOA, in Packets.

Superior and economical. Observe the name on each Label.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE defies all competition as to purity, delicacy, and most delicious taste. Manufactured by MENIER, Chocolate-maker to the Emperor, Paris. Chancery-lane, Fleet-street; and sold retail by all respectable houses.

228 AGENTS—Chemists, Confectioners, and Grocers WANTED to SELL MENIER'S PURE TEA, in Packets. Its choice and strong, moderate in price, and wholesome. These advantages secure for this tea general preference.

OSWEGO

PREPARED INDIAN CORN

Pudding and Delicious Mush, Hasty Hominy, Muffins, Cakes, &c.

Manufactured and Patented by

T. KINGSFORD and SON, of Oswego, State of New York.

It is the original preparation of the Indian meal, established 1848, consumed in the highest state from the trade, and offers the best article to the public.

It is strongly recommended by the faculty, as the Indian meal is more delicate.

Directions for the natural golden tinge, and not the chalk white produced by other manufacturers.

KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD, sold in ½ lb. and 1 lb. Canisters, at 1s. and 2s. each.

We guarantee this Mustard to be pure and genuine.

KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,

Manufacturers,

London.

LETTERS PATENT 1823. PRIZE MEDAL 1862.

ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most valuable preparation of Oats for making Gruel and Porridge. Modern chemistry has shown that this food is easy of digestion and highly nutritious.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY is the finest for making pearl pudding, distinction for which have been given by Mons. C. E. Soyer, Author of "The Modern Housewife," and other high authorities, but for mailbox training, and has long been used with great success in the Royal Nursery.

KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

BROWN and POLSON'S

PATENT CORN FLOUR

for light suppers, and excellent for Children's Diet.

TAYLOR BROTHERS' MUSTARD, PURE AND GENUINE.

Mr. Hassall, having subjected this Mustard to a rigorous microscopic examination, certifies that it contains nothing but the substance in the three essential properties of good mustard-viz., FLOUR, FLAVOUR, and COLOUR. Sold by all Grocers, &c., and See that each Package bears Mr. Hassall's Report.

TAYLOR BROTHERS, Wine and Spirit Merchants, Duke-st., and Tayler Brothers, Brick-lane and Wentworth-street, London, N.E.

PURITY AND EXCELLENCE OF QUALITY.

COLMAN'S PRIZE MEDAL MUSTARD

bears their trade mark, the Bull's Head, on each package.

Sold by all Grocers and Oilmen throughout the World. Great Exhibition, 1862.

Prize Medal.—"It appears nothing finer can be produced. Truly pure, and of excellent quality."—Dr. Hassall. Highly satisfactory recommended.

Retailed by every town throughout the United Kingdom.

J. and J. Colman, 26, Cannon-street, London.

COLMAN'S STARCH obtained

International Exhibition, 1862.

Reports:—"Excellent, and of very large Production."

STARCH MANUFACTURERS

TO HER MAJESTY AND THE ROYAL FAMILY.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH.

GOLD MEDAL.

GANDLES.—Prize Medal.—Paraffine.

Adopted by her Majesty's Government for the Military Stations, the Royal Navy, and Royal Establishments; and awarded the 1st Class Prize Medal, contains the public against any spurious imitations. Their label is on the wrapper of each box. Sold by dealers throughout the kingdom. Wholesale and for exportation at the Works, Upper Marsh, Lambeth, S., where also may be obtained the Prize Medal Stearine Candles.

YIELDS' CELEBRATED UNITED SERVICE SOAP TABLETS, 6d. and 6d. each, and by all Chandlers and Grocers throughout the Kingdom; but the public should ask for Yields', and see that the name of J. C. and J. Field is on each wrapper, box, or label. Manufactory, 71, Lambeth Terrace, at the Works, Upper Marsh, Lambeth, S., where also may be obtained the Prize Medal Stearine Candles.

CARSON'S ORIGINAL ANTI-CORROSION PAINT, specially adapted for Iron Work, Roofs, Railings, Gates, Palisades, Bridges, &c. Can be applied by any person. Dries very fast. Does not wear away or flake off. Keeps out rust and stops odours. No pot rust; oak, teak, chestnut, and colour, brown, green, stone, and white. Sold in casks of 5 gallons and upwards, at 4s. per gallon, upon application at the Works (Carson's), Old Ford, Wanchester-street, London, E.C.; and 31, St. James-street, S.W.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL, described as the most effectual remedy for CONSUMPTION, RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, and all STRUMOUS WEAKNESS.

Pronounced by the Profession the purest and most palatable to be TASTELESS, FREE FROM SMELL, and EASY OF DIGESTION.

Invariable pure, uniformly excellent.

Sold ONLY in capsuled IMPERIAL HALF PINTS, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; Pints, 18s.; and Gallons, 36s. each.

ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

DYSPEPSIA.—MORSONS' PEPSINE WINE is the most convenient form for administering this popular remedy. Manufactured by T. MORSON and SON, 31 and 43, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W.C., and 123, Newgate-st., E.C., etc. each. Pepsine Lozenges, in boxes, at 2s. 6d. and 6s. each.

TEETH AND PAINLESS DENTISTRY.

Messrs. LEWIS, MORLEY, and SONS, 30, Berners-street, Oxford-street, London, Sole Address (opposite Charing-cross Railway Gates), established 1828. Those Teeth are cheaper, more durable, and more natural than any yet produced. Consultation Free. For the efficacy, utility, and success of this system, vide "Lancet."

No connection with any one of the same name.

TO MOTHERS and INVALIDS.—ELAM'S ARROWROOT SUPPORYERS, for Debility, Pregnancy, &c., already highly recommended, are retailed at 1s. per box. Directions for self-assistance by post, free.—10, Castle-street, Leicester-square.

NEW CHÊNÉ SILKS, £2 9s. 6d. the Dress, 14 yards. Patterns free.

PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW FOULARDS, this season's patterns only.

Chiné, Checked, and Striped, from 9s. 6d. the Full Dress.

Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

GROS DE SUEZ,

In many new shades of this season's manufacture,

Wide-width, 22 inches, at 2s. 11d. per yard.

PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

MOIRE ANTIQUES,

Black, White, and Coloured.

A large purchase made upon most favourable terms.

Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

A PURCHASE OF

20,750 METRES OF FRENCH GRENADINES

Last 1—1000 Metres (all Silk) 19s. 6d. Full Dress.

Last 2—1000 " (all Silk) 19s. 6d. "

Last 3—1000 " (Silk and Wool) 10s. 6d. "

The above are the whole season's manufacture, are perfect novelties, and will be found unequalled for quality and cheapness; purchased in the Paris Market, and now selling at their sales. A large assortment of patterns sent and can be returned free.

PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

MOZAMBIQUE BAREGE,

9s. 6d. to 15s. 6d. the Extra Full Dress.

Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

ALL LAST YEAR'S FRENCH ORGANDIE MUSLINS, French Cloth, and many of the patterns equal to new, now selling at reduced prices.

Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

DURING JULY

PETER ROBINSON will offer for Sale the Stock of about 1000 PIECES of a Paris manufacturer, consisting of White Ground Tarnes with Gold Lines, and White Ground Tarnes with Coloured Lines, Checks, Stripes, and Figures, in Silk and Wool Mixtures, usually priced at 2s. to 3s. 6d. Guineas, will be sold at One Guinea each. Patterns sent free, with illustrations of Models in use in fashionable wear.

Peter Robinson's,

103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

WASHING GRENADINES (Pure White), from 7s. 6d. to 10s. 9d. the Full Dress.

Also, Black Grenadines, from 10s. 6d. to 21s. 6d. the Full Dress.

Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

FAMILY MOURNING.

Families about to adopt Mourning Apparel will find

PETER ROBINSON'S

Court and Family Mourning Warehouses

the most convenient and economical.

The largest and best variety of articles are always ready made-up, and the material is kept in stock by the yard, so that any length of dress or shape of bonnet can be completed at a few hours' notice.

Dressmakers and French Milliners of known reputation are employed in the warehouses.

Orders by letter receive from any part, however distant, will at all times receive the most prompt attention. Patterns and prices sent free. Goods forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, accompanied by a Dressmaker if necessary. Address

PETER ROBINSON'S,

General Mourning Warehouse,

103 and 108, Oxford-street, London.

SCOTT ADIE, by special Appointment to her Majesty and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, has on view the largest choice of Tartans, Shawls, and Plaids in the trade, the most fashionable and useful shape, suited for all seasons and climates; Scotch Tweeds, Cheviots, Estate and Fancy Trouserings, Plain Irish Poplins, &c.; Rope Highland Suits in all the clans made to order. Patterns and self-measurement sent free by post.

115, Regent-street, W.

MESSRS. SWAN and EDGAR beg to announce that their ANNUAL SUMMER SALE, so relished by the Public, will COMMENCE on MONDAY NEXT, when Novel Materials, but now remunerative, Quality and Reputation.

NOTICE.

PROFESSOR BROWNE, of 47, Fenchurch-street, respectfully invites Ladies and Gentlemen to an inspection of his extensive STOCK of SPECTACLES, Telescopes, and Compound Microscopes, which for Quality, Workmanship, Material and workmanship guaranteed to be of the first quality. Established 1819. 47, Fenchurch-street, London. Testimonial free.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS!

ANOTHER IMPORTANT PURCHASE of FOREIGN and BRITISH SILKS.

Several Lots of Rich Silks, at Extraordinary Reduction.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, 2s. 6d. per yard.

36 in. wide, per yard, both sides alike.

Wide-width Glacé Silks, in every shade, in newest shades, 1s. 10½d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., and upwards per yard.

Wide-width Black Glacé Silks, at very low prices, from 2s. 6d.

Wide-width FIGURED GLACÉS (very bright), in the New Colours, at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., and upwards.

MILLINERY SILKS in the Newest Colours, SATINS, TERRY VELVETS, &c.

Patterns free.

Patterns post-free.

JAMES SPENCE and CO., Manufacturers, Regent-street, W., 77 and 78, St. Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

REDMAYNE and CO. respectfully solicit the attention to entirely Remodel their Cowshill-street Premises, and lay on a large portion of their at 25 per cent. below present prices.

FANCY STOCK

19 and 20, West Smithfield, London, E.C.

MANTLES AND JACKETS at FORDS, 62, Oxford-street.

SILK JACKETS, 21s.; Cashmere or Cloth Jackets, 10s. 6d.

SEASIDE JACKETS, Waterproof, 10s. 6d.

SILK MANTLES, 28s. 6d. to 6 Guineas, just reduced.

RIDING HABITS, 3 to 8 Guineas, Cloth and Waterproof Jackets, 10s. 6d.

THOS. FORD, 62, Oxford-street, London, W.

SILKS HALF PRICE.

Fancy Silks, originally 2 guineas, now 19s. 6d.

500 Black Glacé Silks, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

Rich Glacé Silks, 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d. per yard.

Rich Glacé Silks, all Silk, 2 guineas.

Rich Black Glacé Silks, 2 guineas.

originally 5s., reduced to 19s. 6d.

Rich Black Glacé Silks, 2 guineas, 19s. 6d.

Hundreds of tight-fitting Silk Dresses, 2 to 3 guineas, at 20s. the Full Dress. Patterns free.

ANCIENT and CURIOUS Warehouses

(late Amott and Nicholson),

61 and 62, Oxford-street, London.

APPROACHING CLOSE of the SEASON.

MOORE, JAY, in anticipation of the event, are preparing for the Autumn Season,

by selling off their Summer Goods and Patterns,

by which they hope that they have no single Selection of Goods to be carried over to the next season.

to their numerous and influential patrons.

The Silks are marked at a Reduction of Rich French Dresses, 40

Checked Silks, 30

Fancy Silks, 25

Satin Cord, 20

Terry Velvet, 15

per cent.

The London General Mourning Warehouse,

247, 249, and 251, Regent-street.

EXTRAORDINARY RISE IN SILKS.

The price of Silks in the raw material has already risen 15 per cent, and it will soon reach a far greater percentage. Messrs. J. and J. therefore have by their numerous patrons to take advantage of the stock they have on hand, which is very large, and will be sold at considerably less than present quotations. Rich Glacé Silks, usually sold at 3 guineas, now 2 guineas.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 2 guineas, now 1 guinea.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 1 guinea, now 10s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 10s. 6d., now 7s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 7s. 6d., now 5s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 5s. 6d., now 3s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 3s. 6d., now 2s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 2s. 6d., now 1s. 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 1s. 6d., now 1s.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 1s., now 6d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 6d., now 3d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 3d., now 2d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 2d., now 1d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 1d., now ½d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at ½d., now ¼d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at ¼d., now ⅛d.

Rich Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at ⅛

NEW MUSIC.

NEW PIECES ON GOUNOD'S FAUST.

ASCHER'S PENSÉE DRAMATIQUE sur FAUST. Opera by CH. GOUNOD. Price 3s. Piano. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S FAUST.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia on favourite melodies from Gounod's celebrated and popular Opera. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIG. GIULIANI'S NEW SONG.

FIGLIA DERNA. Romanza. Composed by Benedict, and sung by Sig. Giuliani with the greatest possible success at the Ancient Concerts. Price 2s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SONGS BY ROMIZI.

GRETCHEN. Esprit Etincelle. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington. Composed by Romizi. With French, Italian, or Spanish words. Price 2s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LA VEUVE ANDALOUSE. Chanson Espagnole. Sung by Mdlle. Adelina Patti. Composed by Romizi. With French, Italian, or Spanish words. Price 2s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE VALLEY (LE VALLON). New Song. Composed by Gounod and sung by Mdme. Sainton Goldy and Mr. Santley. Price, with English and French words, 2s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW ITALIAN SONGS FOR THE DRAWING-ROOM.

MARIANI'S ALBUM VOCALE. Just published.
No. 1. Il Mio Sacco! (Sterzello.) | No. 3. Dimmelquest!
" 2. Ho Sete! (Sterzello.) | " 4. Ho Sete! (Sterzello.)
" 3. Se Saro Fortunato | " 7. Fortuna la Paolo!
" 4. La Desolazione | " 8. Let Isis!
Price 6s. ed. each. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FOUR ROMANCES by MENDELSSOHN. Transcribed for the voice and adapted to Italian words by Count MUSELLI. Price 4s. each. Book 1. Is there no more to say? | No. 3. Is it gone (regno burlato) | No. 3. Oh quel Fiamma di gioia | No. 4. Ah! Rimembranza. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THOUSAND LEAGUES AWAY. New Song. Words by F. C. BURNAND. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Price 2s. 6d. "The words are good, the music is better, and the best ranks there for me. Jim Mac and I will be content, for two long years, to see no more. For two long years, to think of you, dreaming of you night and day.
"So long for you across the sea, a thousand leagues away.
"So long for you across the sea, a thousand leagues away.
While round the cabin-door we lean and roll, a thousand leagues away."
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S New Song, composed by Balfe, expressly for him by Oscar Antoli, and rapturously encored, is now ready, in C, D or E flat. Price 2s. 6d. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

M. THALBERG'S NEW PIECES.

THALBERG'S BALLO IN MASCHERA. Just published, a charming Fantasia for the Pianoforte on favourite airs from Verdi's Opera. By M. Thalberg. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50 New Bond-street.

THALBERG'S RIGOLETTO. Just published, a Fantasia for the Pianoforte, on favourite airs from Verdi's popular Opera. By M. Thalberg. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS." Played by Mdme. Arabella Goddard at the Shakespeare Tercentenary Concert, with immense success. Price 3s. 6d.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S TANNHAUSER.—Just out, a New Arrangement of the Overture, for the Pianoforte on favourite Airs from Wagner's Opera. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGIERO INVISIBILE.—Just published, a New Bolero, sung by Mdlles. Titiens and Volpini with great success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

M. BLUMENTHAL'S NEW PIECES.

M. Blumenthal's LA BLONDE. Morceau. Price 3s. 6d.
Blumenthal's LA BRUNETTE. Morceau. Price 3s. 6d.
Blumenthal's FRÜHLINGS MARGUERITE. Prelude. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' "I WANDER IN THE PRESENCE." Sung by Mdme. Lemmens Sherrington. New Song from Sandell's Cantata, "Richard Cœur de Lion." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. Just out. One of the best Galops now published, and beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Fordham, H. and J. Grinshaw, Wells, Custance, and Challoner. From photographs by Mayall, Watkins, and Cundall. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HAPPY MOMENTS WALSE. By GUSTAVE LAMBERT. Just published, beautifully illustrated. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE FORGET-ME-NOT WALTZ. By C. GODFREY. Just published. Price 4s. Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Just published, and given to the Prince and Princess of Wales. Just published. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published, a new set of Lancers, composed on all the popular and merry tunes of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FOREST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera, Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera, Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 4s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Orchestra, 5s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC FOR THE HARMONIUM.

Six Pieces in Harmonium Form for the Drawing-room. No. 1, Invocation; No. 2, Fanfare; No. 3, Nocturne; No. 4, Fugarella; No. 5, Pastoral Prelude; and No. 6, Introduction and Fugue. By J. BOSLAM.—Fantasia, on "Faust," with Piano accompaniment ad lib. Price 4s.
Adagio from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 28. Price 2s. 6d.
Andante from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 14, No. 2. Price 2s.
Andante from Mozart's Sonata, No. 10. Price 2s. 6d.
Minuet from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 31. Price 2s. 6d.
Adagio from Beethoven's Sonata, op. 2. Price 2s. 6d.
2. Engel's "Faust," Harmonium and Pianoforte, 4s.
3. Engel's "Faust," Harmonium, 3s.
4. Engel's "Faust," pianoforte accompaniment, 3s.
E. F. RIMBAULT'S TWELVE CLASSICAL PIECES.
No. 1. Trumpet- and other pieces of Church Music from Mozart's "Requiem."
" 2. Oh! had I Jubal's Lyre," "from Handel's "Joshua."
" 3. Chorus of Pilgrims, Recitative, and March, from Wagner's "Tannhäuser."
" 4. Andante from Beethoven's First Symphony.
" 5. Chorus from Handel's Seventh Symphony.
" 6. The Velox, Velox, and Trio Finale, from Gounod's "Faust."
" 7. "Hear my prayer, O Lord," and "The glory of the Lord," from Mendelssohn's "Elijah."
" 8. "Comfort ye my people," and "Every Valley," from "The Messiah."
" 9. Air and Two Chorales, from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." Price 2s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASSIDY (Composer of the Burlesque Galop). Just published, extensively Illustrated. Price 3s.; Duet, 3s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop, by CASSIDY (Composer of the Harum-Scarum Galop). Capitally Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, LA REINE DE SABA.
Complete Opera, Vocal Score. Price 15s.
Book of Airs, by W. Callcott, Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.
Valzer, by F. Bagutti. Price 4s.
Marche Cortège. Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NICOLAI'S MERRY WIVES of WINDSOR.
The only authorised edition.
Book of Pianoforte Solos ... Solo, 3s.; Duet, 6s.
Overture ... ... 4s. 6d.
Potpourri (for four hands) ... Brunner. ... 3s.
Fantasia (Piano Alt.) ... ... Ascher. ... 4s.
Improvisation ... ... W. Kuhe. ... 3s.
Polka ... ... Charles Coote. ... 3s.
Galopade ... ... Ditto. ... 3s.
Fantaisie de Salon ... ... Charles Voss. ... 4s.
The principal Vocal Pieces, with Italian Words, are sung at Her Majesty's Theatre.
DANCE MUSIC.
The Fairies Polka (Illustrated). ... A. Mazas. ... 3s.
Set of Waltzes ... ... 4s.
Quadrilles ... ... C. Coote ... 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THE BRIDE OF SONG.
Operetta in one act. Composed by CHARLES PLANTÉ. Produced by JULES BENEDICT. Complete (Piano and Voice), net, 10s.
1. Duet—Sir Mel and Monsoy ... ... 3s. 0d.
2. Song—My Home in Cloudland, original key D flat, transposed key, B flat ... ... 3s. 0d.
3. Trio—Now, girls, move! ... ... S. C. T. 3s. 0d.
4. Song—Ah! Monsoy ... ... T. 3s. 0d.
5. Trio—My Heart is beating ... ... S. T. and B. 3s. 0d.
6. Duet—Ah! Captain, I am see you ... ... S. and B. 3s. 0d.
7. Song—The Fairies' Lullaby ... ... S. 3s. 0d.
8. Song—Ah! do not take her from him ... ... T. 3s. 0d.
9. Quartet—The Holiday Folk ... ... S. T. and T. 3s. 0d.
10. Quartet—The Holiday Folk ... ... S. T. and B. 3s. 0d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

CHARLES SALAMAN'S "SPANISH CAPRICE." A Fantasia, played by the Composer, and encored frequently.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

RENÉ FAVARGER'S STRADELLA, 3s. 6d.
An elegant Fantaisie de Salon.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

RENÉ FAVARGER'S MASANIELLO, 4s.
A brilliant Fantasia.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES BLUMENTHAL.
Tyrol Tyrol! Chanson Napolitaine ... 3s. 6d.
La Bella Fiore Napolitaine. Napolitaine ... 3s. 6d.
Adieu à Prague Agitato ... ... 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

ARDITI'S GARIBALDINA. BRINLEY RICHARDS' Grotesque Galop. Each for the Pianoforte, 3s. CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. By J. P. CLARKE LAVIS. Beautifully Illustrated. 4s. Founded on four of the most favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. The most popular Air of the day. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BOAT SONG. By VERDI. 2s. 6d. A Barcarole.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER. By VERDI. Price 2s. "Beautiful Melody."—Era. "From the Forza del Destino."—Observer. CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

LITTLE GOLDEN HAIR. Venetian Ballad. By VIRGINIA GABRIEL. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

GARIBALDI. Song. By ARDITI. Words by Henry Farie. With capital Portrait of Garibaldi. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

ARITA. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s. (Founded on a pathetic passage in the life of Garibaldi.)
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

ARDITI'S LA GARIBALDINA. 2s. 6d. Sung with immense success by Madame Rudersdorff, Mdlle. Liebhart, and Mr. Henry Haigh, at Her Majesty's Theatre, and elsewhere.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

"ARDIT." "TITIENS." "FALSTAFF." Arditi's "Il sano dal Mondo." 3s. Valse. Introduced by Mdlle. Titiens at Her Majesty's Theatre.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THALBERG'S NEIST ET ANTASIAS. Tvarista, 4s. Tvovatore, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. Post-free Catalogues of Pianoforte and Organ Music.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street. W.

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
COOTE'S TULLERIES QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INNOCENCE VALSE. Price 4s. "This single composition would raise his name to the top of the ladder."—Review.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND.
COOTE'S PRINCE ALFRED VALSE. 4s. With a coloured portrait of His Royal Highness.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S PRINCE IMPERIAL GALOP. Price 3s. Rehearsed nightly at all the balls. Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET EVER COMPOSED.
COOTE'S POLLY PERKINS QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Songs, "Isabella," "Waltzer-mania," "Polly Perkins," and "Polly Perkins," &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT ALL THE STATE BALLS.
COOTE'S HUMMING-BIRD VALSE. 4s. Considered the best set of Valses by this popular Composer. Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay," "Sorry to go Morning," "The Cure," and other popular Airs. Illustrated in Colours. Rehearsed nightly at the Cremorne Gardens. Always rehearsed at Collinet's Ball-room, Leicester-square. "Talbot's Dairy, &c.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, introducing "Kathleen O'More," "Terence's Farewell to Kathleen," "A Nice Derangement," "Rosin the Beau," "Sally in our Alley," &c. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW OPERA, BY THE AUTHOR OF FAUST.

MIRELLA,
performed at Her Majesty's Theatre,
NOW READY,
THE PRINCIPAL ITALIAN AND FRENCH SONGS, &c.

Non mentia il cuore la me ... Aria, sung by Mdlle. Titiens	2 6
Sul lo, pe' giardini ... Aria, sung by Mdlle. Titiens ...	2 6
Qui vi posiate	2 6
Ah! Crudele, e Bella ... Romance, sung by Mdlle. Trebelli	2 6
Ah! Ascoltami, ora, mia pa... Baccarat Melody	2 6
celeste
Ah! la pagherà ... ... Cavatina, sung by Signor Giuglini	2 6
Io? Aries si son regina ... Strofa, sung by Mr. Santley ...	2 6
Dolce sia tuono ... ... Chanson Bachique, sung by Mdlle. Titiens and Signor Giuglini ...	3 0
Ah! parla amore ... ... Duet, sung by Mdlle. Titiens and Signor Giuglini ...	3 0
Pascian sazzie, e spiritate ... The opening Chorus, arranged as a Part for Chorus ...	3 0
Pallor pastoral ... ... Cavatina, sung by Mdlle. Volpini	2 6
The Savoyard Melody, with English words, "Far from his mountains," by George Linley ...	3 0
The Opera complete, in Italian	15 0
Ditto ... ditto	16 0
Ditto ... ditto ... Duet Solo	12 0

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

The Overture	4 0
The Favourite Airs by W. H. Callcott, in three books, each ...	4 0
Kuhe's Fantasia	4 0
Ditto's Grande Valse	4 0
Bosellini Sequin's Mirella (a selection of Airs)	4 0
Nordmann's Bouquet de Mirelles	4 0
Brinley Richards' Gems de Mirelle (the opening Chorus)	3 0
Benedict's Savoyard Melody	3 0
Kettering's Fantasia, Impromptu, a very brilliant piece ...	4 0
Lovering's Fantasia	4 0
C. Voss's Fantasia, Brilliante	4 0
Gaun's Reminiscences of Mirella	4 0
Favarger's Fantasia	4 0

DANCE MUSIC.

Coote's Mirella Quadrilles (Illustrated)	4 0
Coote's Mirella Valse (Illustrated)	4 0
Victor Collins's Mirella Valse (Illustrated)	4 0

ARRANGEMENTS.

Nordmann's Four Favourite Airs	4 0
Ditto's Fantasia, Grande Transcendantale	4 0
1. Chanson, Bachique, Mr. Santley	2 6
2. Savoyard Melody	2 6
3. Pastoral Duet	2 6

PIANOFORTE DUETS.

The Overture	5 0
W. H. Callcott's Favourite Airs, in Three Books, each ...	5 0
Kuhe's Fantasia	5 0
Coote's Mirella Quadrilles, for String Band	2 6
Coote's Mirella Waltz	2 6
Boosey's Selection for Military Band ... ... 2s., Septet	15 0
Boosey's Selection for Full Band	15 0
Pianoforte Solo, Duet, and Septet, Follow-street.

CLARIBEL'S BEST SONGS.

Although the Day be Never so Long	2 6
Little Bird, Little Bird on the Green Tree	3 0
Blind Alice	3 0
Blind Alice	3 0
Five o'Clock in the Morning. Tenth Edition	3 0
I Remember It	3 0
Janet's Choice. Tenth Edition	3 0
Janet's Dowry. Twentieth Edition	3 0
Lilian's Love	3 0
Prize Flowers	3 0
Prize Four Silks	3 0
Prize Lace	3 0
Shilly-Shally	3 0
The Broken Heart	3 0
The Broken Vow	3 0
The Brook	3 0
The Mariner's Farewell	3 0
The Two Nests	3 0
The Old Folks	3 0
The Old Folk Dance	3 0
Through the Jessamine	3 0
Won't you tell me why, Robin? English Edition	3 0
Yes and I. Sixth Edition	3 0

PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.

Brinley Richards' Janet's Choice	3 0
Kuhe.—Maggie's Secret	3 0
Rimbault.—Janet's Choice	3 0
Duncan.—Maggie's Secret	3 0
Coote's Janet's Dowry Quadrille Waltzes, on Claribel's popular Melodies	4 0
Burnhardt.—Clarified Quadrilles, on Claribel's popular Melodies	4 0

BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

FORBES' CAPTAIN. Chanson Napolitaine, for the Pianoforte, and the dancing this piece. By the Author of "Saipolina." Price 3s. 6d. Just published.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS HAWLEY'S IVANHOE. New and Illustrated Edition of the Popular Song, "Ivanhoe." By the Author of "Saipolina." Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BEHOLD MY LOVE! SHE SLUMBERS. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington. Composed by CHARLES LEVEY. Composer of "Pandora." A most charming melody and effective song for Soprano or Tenor. Price 2s. BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S LIBRARY.—Two-Guinea Subscribers have the privilege of three pieces of Music in town, or twenty in the country, besides receiving gratuitously a gallon Cabinet of the newest and best Music. Prospectus free.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

NEW SONG, by MISS C. M. E. OLIVER.
"When first I met my love.
"When first I met my love, I thought there never grew
Flowers so sweet as those that blossom'd in her cheeks.
To be had of the Author, 6, Montpelier-row, Blackheath. Price 2s. 6d.

EWER and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY, British and Foreign,
Subscription, Two Guineas yearly.
Prospectuses gratis.
97, Regent-street, London.

THE NIGHT IS CLEAR AND CLOUDLESS
WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.
By C. M. E. OLIVER. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SONG OF THE DAY.
POLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

UNPRECEDENTED SUCCESS OF THE NEW BALLAD SONG.
NORRIBLE TALE; or, The Suicidal Family. Price 2s. Encored five times nightly in The Area Belle. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

C. M. E. OLIVER'S NEW BALLAD.
THE BLOW AND THE KISS. By THE WIND. Price 2s. 6d. One of the best of the Composer's pretty songs. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ITALIAN OPERAS.—Boxes and Stalls in the best situation for both the Operas. Tickets for every Concert, and every description of Theatre. Places may be obtained of the Agents.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

HARMONIUMS
BY ALEXANDRE, 55, Baker-street, W.
The 5-GUINEA HARMONIUM (Cottage) has a soft and agreeable quality of tone.
The 10-GUINEA HARMONIUM (for Schools) has a rich, full quality of tone, and is very powerful.
The 15-GUINEA HARMONIUM (in Walnut) is very powerful, and admirably adapted for piece of worship.
Boosey and Co. have also the extensive stock of Harmoniums by Evans, new and reconstructed, at greatly reduced prices, including a few Second-hand Instruments with two rows of keys and pedals.

PIANOFORTES
BOOSEY and CO.'S 84, Holles-street.
The MINIATURE PIANO, 3ft. 3in. high, in walnut, has the full compass and an excellent quality of tone and touch. The Pianoforte Model, 4ft. high, in walnut, with fine tone, is highly recommended for small rooms. The Cabinet Model, 4ft. 6in. high, is the most popular size on the continent, being in a most suitable case, and possessing a very superior tone, with remarkable evenness of touch throughout the entire compass. The Grand Model, 6ft. 6in. long, in rosewood or walnut, is the largest size that can be made, and is unrivalled for its fine quality of tone and touch.

BOOSEY and CO.'S 26-GUINEA PIANO, in Rosewood, or 27 guineas in Italian Walnut, is a highly-finished Pianoforte, possessing a very superior quality of tone, and is also for any drawing-room. The touch is elastic, and the tone of that note, rich quality that especially distinguishes first-class English pianos.

BOOSEY and CO.'S 35-GUINEA PIANO, in Rosewood, or 37 guineas in Italian Walnut, is four octaves and a half in compass, with the full iron frame, and is a richly ornamented case, and has the registered key-board as well as the new grand compass of seven octaves.

PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO. make special arrangements with those desirous to pay for a PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be known on application at the Gallery, 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, SEMI-GRAND PIANOFORTES. Price 45 guineas in Rosewood and 46 in Walnut. Possessing this instrument pronounced by the nobility of the public, Cramer, Wood, and Co. have limited to observe that it is alike remarkable for the power and quality of tone, firmness and elasticity of touch, durability of construction, and elegance of external appearance. The tone was formed by powerful fingers of the artist, or drawn out by the less accustomed hand of the amateur; it responds with equal facility to hard-blows, and the most delicate touch, and yields the same with little effort. The action, as mechanism, is of the very best description, and is constructed on the principle of compression of the keys. All the Semi-Grand Pianofortes let out by Cramer, Wood, and Co. have wires to each note, like the Pianofortes of concerts, these being three times heavier than the ordinary wires, and by this means a much finer instrument is obtained. Cramer, Wood, and Co. have selected from all parts of the country without risk to the purchaser, and have for SALE, HIRE, or EXCHANGE Semi-Cottage Pianofortes by Broadwood, 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE. 22 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small instrument. It has all the qualities of the best Pianoforte—check action, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished walnut, and the front panel has a Pianoforte desk, which the player will be strengthened much more rapidly than on an old instrument loose in the hand. Cramer, Wood, and Co., 207 and 209, Regent-street.

Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument has the name of the single action, but the double repeating check action; and that Cramer and Co. were the original manufacturers of it.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE. With solid upright COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in solid Mahogany, with check action, 60 guineas. Cramer and Co. have introduced this to meet the effect of extreme climates. Nothing has been left out in the finishing. The Mechanism of the Instrument as well as the case has been considered with reference to the climate, and the strings have been tightened upon their manufacture, and they have obtained the highest possible standard for their resistant quality of tension. Cramer, Wood, and Co. deliver these Instruments, f.o.b., packed in Liverpool, at the following prices:—Height, 3ft. 11in.; width, 4ft. 4in.; depth, 2ft. 1in.—Piano-Cottage, 60 guineas. Cramer, Wood, and Co., 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANETTE, in solid Mahogany, to stand any climate. The most portable Pianoforte yet made. Price 35 guineas. Cramer, Wood, and Co., 207 and 209, Regent-street, London.

PIANOFORTE RENOVATION.—CRAMER and CO. repair and renew the mechanism of pianofortes worn out by years of continuous practice. Cramer and Co. have originally good, the instrument will be restored to great freshness of tone and touch. Pianofortes taken in exchange. Cramer, Wood, and Co., 207 and 209, Regent-street. Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

PIANO MECANIQUE.—CRAMER and CO. supply Pianos à Mécanique, by which anyone is enabled to rank foremost among the triumphs achieved in the mechanical arts. Anyone can play upon it. Its touch is elastic, with a keyboard, enabling it to be used by a pianist like an ordinary Pianoforte. Cramer, Wood, and Co., 207 and 209, Regent-street. Warranted to stand any climate.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for HIRE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for SALE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO'S ARTIST'S CONCERTINAS, selected by Mr. Richard Blagrove.
12 and 20 guineas.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA.
The best Cheap Concertina yet produced.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO. SECONDHAND CONCERTINAS.
CRAMER and CO. PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c. for Sale or Hire. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the only Pianino to which the Prize Medal was awarded).—A very elegant Pianoforte, 7 octaves, in mahogany case, with trichord, the most perfect touch, admirably adapted to Small Rooms, Schools, Lodgings, Continental Climates, &c. Price 35 guineas. Also, a new and cheaper Pianino, with three strings, and other improvements.
Pianos for temporary, reserved, or walnut, 25 and 30 guineas. A great variety now ready.
Chappell and Co.'s 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, manufactured preferring the very English tone of the Broadwood or Collard Cottage, and the elegance of the Continental Cottage, combined in the most perfect manner in a moderate price. The action is of the same simple description as that which has given such universal satisfaction in the Model Cottage; but the more complicated actions are objectionable in many of the Cottages now manufactured. Price 50 guineas; in rosewood or in very respect to match the Drawing-room at 55 guineas; in walnut, 45 guineas.
Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 45 guineas in rosewood; or in walnut, 45 guineas, with the full compass of seven octaves, and the trichord throughout. This Pianoforte is recommended by every possible means to endure the greatest amount of wear and tear, and to stand any climate. Its great durability is of the utmost importance to families in exile, hall, and club; and the peculiar touch that of a Broadwood or Collard. Chappell and Co. have the honour to state that the Pianofortes of this description which they have made in England at the same price. Every instrument will be warranted, and (if desired) exchanged within twelve months if not approved.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. The best Pianofortes for sale or hire, and for any of the newest kinds by these celebrated makers, may be tried side by side at Chappell's, 50, New Bond-street, where a large assortment of second-hand Pianofortes by other makers is always ready.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany or plain walnut, the best Pianoforte ever produced at the price, with the full compass and all the latest improvements. Messrs. Chappell strongly recommend this instrument to persons about purchasing or at once the same price, whether new or secondhand.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, at 35 guineas, a new Oblique Piano, with the best qualities of tone and touch, and the full compass of seven octaves, in rosewood or walnut. This Pianoforte is much lower than any other oblique pianoforte. The same instrument in cottage form, at 30 guineas.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S NEW HARMONY-ROOM (MODEL HARMONIUM), for the first time made entirely of pitch pine, and the only Harmonium that can be easily given the appearance of other woods. Also, Alexandre's Harmoniums and Pianofortes and Harmoniums upon application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with five octaves, two footboards, and in rosewood or walnut. The best in tone and superior to all other cheap Harmoniums. Descriptive lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, Prince, Debain, Evans, &c., in every variety, and at prices from 4l. to 50 guineas. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION HARMONIUM, for CHURCH, DRAWING-ROOM, and CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES. CHAPPELL and CO. have a large Stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES for SALE, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., that have been taken in exchange for Grand Pianofortes of Messrs. Jabs, New Cramer, and other makers.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by CHAPPELL and CO., the best and most perfect instrument, warranted for ten climates, and to keep well in tune, from Two guineas, with case, to Twelve guineas.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE SURGEON OF THE ALABAMA.

MR. David Herbert Llewellyn, who was the surgeon of the Confederate war-steamer Alabama during the two years of her adventurous career, perished by drowning on Sunday, the 19th ult., sinking with his ship after her conflict with the Federal steamer Kearsarge. He was the son of the Rev. David Llewellyn, Perpetual Curate of Easton, near Pewsey, Wiltshire. He was educated at Marlborough College, and studied for the medical profession, firstly as an articled pupil of Dr. Hassall, at Richmond, and then, from 1856 to 1859, at Charing-cross Hospital, where he gained the silver medals for surgery and chemistry. The last letter which Mr. Llewellyn ever wrote was addressed to Mr. Travers, the resident medical officer of Charing-cross Hospital, and is as follows:—"Cherbourg, June 14, 1864. Dear Travers,—Here we are. I send this by a gentleman coming to London. An enemy is outside. If she only stays long enough, we go out and fight her. If I live, expect to see me in London shortly. If I die, give my best love to all who know me. If M. A. de Callix should call on you, please show him every attention. I remain, dear Travers, ever yours, D. H. LLEWELLYN." Mr. Llewellyn was much loved and respected by all on board. In the final struggle of the Alabama, when the ship was sinking, the whale-boat and dingy, the only two boats uninjured, were lowered, and the wounded placed in them, Mr. Fullam being sent in charge of them to the Kearsarge. When the boats were full, a man (unwounded) endeavoured to enter one, but Mr. Llewellyn held him back. "See," said he, "I want to save my life as much as you do; but let the wounded men be saved first." "Doctor," said the officer in the boat, "we can make room for you." "I will not peril the wounded men," was his reply. He remained behind and sank with the ship, an ever memorable instance of that chivalrous spirit and devotion to duty which we are proud to believe characterise the medical officers of the united services and the medical profession generally in the United Kingdom. It is further gratifying to hear that Llewellyn's fellow-students have appointed a committee to provide for the erection of a tablet to his memory in Charing-cross Hospital, where as a pupil he had so greatly distinguished himself, and that another memorial is to be fixed in the church of Easton parish, where he was born. The Portrait of him which we have engraved is from a photograph taken at the Maison Ribeau, Cherbourg, on the Thursday before his death.

THE LATE DAVID HERBERT LLEWELLYN, SURGEON OF THE ALABAMA.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION AT ALDERSHOTT CAMP.

LAST winter Colonel Pennefather who had command of the 12th Regiment, then stationed at Dublin, suggested to some of the most intelligent of his men that they might considerably relieve the monotony of their leisure hours by getting up an Industrial Exhibition. The men received the idea of their Colonel with pleasure, and exerted themselves so heartily that the exhibition was a decided success. The gallant 12th proved that they numbered amongst their ranks some very ingenious and clever mechanics and designers. Believing that the example set at Dublin could be carried out with great advantage at Aldershott, Colonel Lowe, of the 6th Regiment, stationed at the camp, mentioned the subject at a meeting of officers which was held last February. Sir John Pennefather, K.C.B., General commanding the division, and several others of the staff officers, at once expressed their favourable opinion of the project, and his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief likewise gave his sanction. Regimental committees were formed, and during the interval which has elapsed to the present time the several corps in camp have displayed an honest rivalry as to which should preeminently distinguish themselves. The exhibition, which is at the Camp Clubhouse, was formally opened by Lieut.-General Sir John Pennefather, on Wednesday week, the Duke of Cambridge, who had intended to be present, being accidentally detained in town. There was a numerous company of visitors, who formed, with the regimental officers in camp, a half-circle in front of the Clubhouse, while General Pennefather, standing before the door, briefly explained the objects of the exhibition, and declared it open; this announcement being followed by the firing of a salute of guns and bursts of music from several bands. The club-room was soon filled with ladies and gentlemen paying half-a-crown for admission; the common soldiers and their wives were admitted for sixpence on most of the following days; on Friday last the charge for entrance was one shilling. The corps which exhibited were the 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabineers), 1st Royal Dragoons, 2nd ditto, 13th Hussars, 14th ditto, Royal Artillery, Royal Engineers, second battalion Military Train, fifth battalion ditto, first battalion 6th Regiment, first battalion 24th Regiment, 37th Regiment, 39th Regiment, second battalion 60th Regiment, 73rd, 75th, and 87th Regiments; Military Store Department, and the Divisional Staff. The arrangement of the exhibition is admirable. Each corps has been allotted a certain space, which in every instance has been used to the best advantage. The entire collection is most artistically displayed, and, considered as such in a bazaar, is varied and effective. Part I. comprises articles invented or made by officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, or their wives or children. There are six classes:—1. Painting, drawing, photography, &c. 2. Carving, cabinetmaking, and carpenters' work. 3. Military engineering, architecture, contrivances, implements, &c. 4. Armourers' and smiths' work. 5. Leather-work. 6. Needlework and clothwork. Lieutenant Wilkinson, Inniskilling Dragoons, has a fine work, made in leisure moments, which is as exquisite in design and workmanship as Chinese work. Gunmakers exhibit a variety of the exhibition subjects, among others a new improved cartridge-box, invented by Corporal Dagnall, R.E., which, by a very simple spring, drops a cartridge from the bottom of the box; and a new rifle-sight, invented by Private Scott, signalling at rifle practice. There is also a very ingenious machine for making list on the field of battle, invented by Private Southam. Altogether, there are between 700 and 800 articles exhibited by officers and men and their families, connected with the regiments at Aldershot, and about 400 sent on loan. The men have permission to sell their things; while the officers and their lady friends devote the proceeds of the sale to charitable purposes, the particular object being agreed upon by the buyer and seller. A very brisk trade has been done. The second part of the exhibition, which is the most interesting description, includes articles which have been collected by officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, their wives and families, during the course of their service in various parts of the world. Many of these, consequently, an almost innumerable quantity of "trophies," especially from India and Ghanta. Numbers are lent by officers of the Brigade Major, first brigade, and Captain Lockhart, D.A.A. General; and the secretaries, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. E. H. Cadogan, Lieutenant-Colonel Wilbraham Taylor, and Major Baumgresky, Director of Gymnastics. The exhibition will close next Thursday.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION AT ALDERSHOTT CAMP.

"DEAD SWAN AND PEACOCK."

THE picture which forms the subject of our Fine-Art Illustration this week is one that was left unfinished through the untimely death of the painter. Mr. Duffield, before his decease, had only painted the entire bird the peacock; all the rest has been added by the hand of Mr. John Gilbert. Mr. Duffield intended, we understand, to introduce a silver plate with the richest fruits, a golden vase, and a richly carved stool with velvet-covered seat, a knight's hat with feathers, and a pair of spurs: the whole of which combined together with rich drapery to the left hand, were meant to suggest an apartment in the chateau or hall of some old nobleman. Mr. Gilbert, doubtless from a modest wish to avoid any rivalry with his predecessor, has left the bird upon an open-air background, with a hunting-horn lying in front, changed the scene, as it may appear to the confines of some park and forest. We perceive various kinds of game are being collected for the provision and decoration of an old-fashioned table. In the picturesque middle distance are seen a stag and a wild-boar, and a stag which has just been pulled down and dispatched according to the rules of venery. Bearing in mind the unfortunate decease of one of the two painters, and the difficulty of altering the entire scheme of a picture, we may say that Mr. Gilbert has been fairly successful in giving completeness, though not of the kind intended, to the canvas in part painted by Mr. Duffield. The work of each artist respectively has distinctive and yet both contribute harmoniously to the whole that have been expected. As regards the still-life painting of Mr. Duffield, we could hardly select a more favourable opportunity for the exercise of his peacock and swan. Both birds are imitated with perfect precision. The diverse textures of their plumage have taxed the painter's powers of transcription to the utmost. The purity of the intense and gorgeous colours of the one—all scintillating, as it were, with the most intelligent sparkle—and the super-delicate and indescribable whiteness of the other, have afforded an opportunity for Mr. Duffield to show his command at once of the most delicate tint, of colour, and a scale of gradation comprising the tenderest possible nearly half tints.

It is difficult to come away from this picture without feeling the conviction that, as too frequently happens, the painter was not adequately appreciated in his lifetime. Of the many eminent still-life painters who have been removed within little more than a year—William Hunt, Lance, and Duffield—the last was by many years the youngest, and he had yet to see had developed some of the highest qualities attainable in the province of art which he had chosen. As we have given little more than a commonplace notice of his decease in our columns, and as some inaccuracies have appeared in the notices of it in the given in general journals, a few biographical details supplied by the painter's wife—herself an artist of considerable merit—may not be out of place. William Duffield was born at Bath, in the year 1816, and died in the city. From his childhood he showed a decided predilection and natural talent for art; but it was not without great opposition, at first, that his friends ultimately consented to allow him to study art with a view to making it a profession, and, even then, they only contemplated his becoming an engraver. The family, however, placed him with Mr. Charles Heath, of Bath, whose family he resided while, during four years, he continued to be a zealous and intelligent student of the Bath Academy. Before completing this course of study he returned to his native city, and for for some time practised portrait-painting with much success. However, no means for further improvement within his reach, he was induced to go to Antwerp, where, under Baron Wappers, he studied for two years with considerable diligence. The bent of his professional life were spent in those struggles which too frequently fetter the talent of the young painter, but his conscientious carefulness and ability began at last to be appreciated by the public, though, as we have intimated, not, in our judgment, to the extent they deserved. In gathering materials for his picture he was busily employed to the last, particularly in the neighbourhood of Windsor Forest and Ascot-heath, where, after a few days' illness, he died suddenly on the early age of forty-seven, just as the success for which he had so long been striving appeared within his grasp.

The picture we have engraved is one of a collection of the artist's works (several of which have been finished by Mr. Gilbert) now being exhibited at Morby's Gallery, Cornhill.

LIVERPOOL TESTIMONIALS TO CAPT. INGLEFIELD, R.N.

A HANDSOME testimonial was presented about a month since to Captain E. Inglefield, late commander of H.M.S. Majestic, in the Mersey, by the Mercantile Marine Service Association of Liverpool, upon the occasion of his relinquishing command of the ship, he had held for three years and a half. It was particularly intended as an acknowledgment of his successful efforts to promote the organisation of the Royal Naval Reserve (in which rank of officer so many gentlemen in the officers of merchant-ships) as well as of his great assistance in the management of the training-ship Conway, which was established in the Mersey about six years ago. That ship was given for the purpose by the Admiralty at the request of the Liverpool Mercantile Marine Service Association, warmly seconded by Captain Mends, the predecessor of Captain Inglefield in the command. The testimonial consisted of a silver vase, with a written address signed by Captain Sproule, the president, and Mr. Thompson, the secretary of the association. It was publicly handed over to Captain Inglefield at a meeting on the 7th ult. We have engraved a representation of the vase and its cover. It stands upon an ebony pedestal, bearing three shields—one engraved with Captain Inglefield's armorial bearings, another the corporate arms, and the third the badge of the Mercantile Marine Service Association. The vase presents a very happy combination of nautical emblems, the pedestal representing a ship's capstan, surrounded by coils of rope, and supporting anchors on each side. The upper part is very delicately chased in relief, and is provided with handles in the form of dolphins, whilst the cover bears a clever delineation of various sheils, and is surmounted by a model of the "river," the fabulous bird from which Liverpool is said to have derived its name. Upon one side of the vase is an inscription. The vase was manufactured by Messrs. Elkington, of Church-street, Liverpool, from a special design by M. Willms, their principal artist.

On the same day Captain Inglefield was likewise presented with a silver salver, at the annual dinner of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club, by some of the most influential members of that institution. During his official residence at Liverpool he was a member of the sailing committee of the club, over which he presided for some time, and to each assistance in this as in all other matters of public interest and utility. Commodore Graves, in presenting the salver, assured Captain Inglefield that he carried with him the best wishes of the club and the respect of the town. The salver is a beautiful specimen of work, manufactured, like the vase, by Messrs. Elkington, and bears a suitable inscription on a portion of one of the Pompeian frescoes, and a brief inscription.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE NEW EXCHANGE

We have engraved a Sketch of the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the new Low Lights-Sea Dock at the mouth of the river Tyne, which took place on the 23rd ult. The foundation was the esteemed chairman of the Tyne Improvement Commissioners, officiated upon this occasion, and the Mayors of Tynemouth, North and South Shields, Newcastle, Gateshead, and Morpeth, the chairman of the River Wear Commissioners, Sir Hedworth Williamson, the Master and Brethren of the Trinity House, the principal dock and Mr. Laycock, chairman of the Blyth and Tyne Railway Company, were present. The Mayors of North Shields and Tynemouth had prepared with great zeal for the festive celebration of an event so important to their local interests. The streets were decorated with a profuse display of flags, and the neighbouring townships of Cowen and other members of the Tyne Commission from the North Shields Dockside, where the ceremony took place. Here was to be laid, which was at the Black Middens, at the point forming the south-east corner of the intended dock. Unfortunately, it rained in the forenoon, and in spite of this disagreeable circumstance, gathered on the sloppy sands and slippery rocks to witness the laying of the first stone. After an appropriate prayer by the Rev. T. Featherstone, the Mayor of Tynemouth, Mr. Joseph Spence, addressed the Chairman and invited him to perform this office. Mr. Cowen took the trowel and mallet presented to him, spread the mortar on the stone, and tapped it, and tried it with the square as is was lowered into its abiding place. He then proceeded to lay the stone and spoke a few words, after which he drank a glass of wine to the toast of "Success to the Low Lights Sea Dock." A banquet in the Victoria Assembly Rooms of the Albion Hotel, followed by the tradesmen's dinner at the Commercial Hotel. In his after-dinner speech, Mr. Cowen explained that the Act of Parliament which was passed in 1861 for the purpose of making improvements in the river from one end to the other, and deepening the channel over the bar, had not been fully carried out as it was originally intended should be done. What had been done by the commissioners in the deepening of the river had only made the construction of this dock the more necessary, though it would be a long time before the benefit of this work had been commenced before. The depth of water on the bar, however, was 22 ft. at low tide, and he hoped the commissioners would be satisfied till they got as much as 40 ft., so as to admit a large portion of the river coal trade. The Low Lights Sea Dock the commissioners had no power to apply any of their revenues to the construction of this dock, except in building the south wall, of which they had agreed to build 1000 ft. in length, and it was an undertaking for the benefit of the whole district, since vessels of a certain size would have to lie in the river Tyne, as they did not sufficiently capacious to receive them. Another gentleman (Mr. Twiedy) called attention to the immense and rapid increase of the trade of the Tyne: the number of vessels that left the river in 1873 was from Liverpool, and 1 per cent less than from the port of London; while the yearly export of coal had increased 67 per cent since 1845, and now amounted to 470,000 tons. The shipbuilding trade was no less on the increase. Messrs. Palmer had launched from their yard one steamer, 300 ft. in length and of 3500 tons burden. They were building others of 4000 tons. The aggregate value of the produce and manufactures of the district was 100 millions annually, the gross sum of twenty millions sterling. Such facts and figures as these, which were received with loud applause, showed that, should the North Shields banquet, show that the foundation of the new Deep-Water Dock is an event of national importance, deserving this illustration in our pages.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the Hon. Edward Henry Roper-Curzon, of Ramsem, near Barnstaple, Devon, was proved in the London Court on the 7th ult., by the Hon. Robert Nathaniel Curzon, the brother and one of the whole of his property. The attesting witnesses are Anne Maria Cooke, gentlewoman, Barnstaple, and Thomas William Hance, solicitor, Barnstaple. The testator was the son of Henry Francis Roper, fourteenth Baron Teynham, who assumed the name of Curzon.

The will of the Rev. Sir Charles Hardinge, Bart., of Boundes Park, Tunbridge Wells, Vicar of Tunbridge (1870) and Rector of Crowhurst (1864), was proved at Maidstone on the 15th ult., by the executors, who swore under £45,000. The executors and trustees are Lady Hardinge, the widow; the Hon. Frederick William Byng, M.P., brother-in-law; and Sir Charles, the testator's eldest son. He will bears date in 1864, to which he has since made a codicil, dated April 1, 1873. By it he bequeaths to his wife, besides the property under settlement, there is an annuity of £400, an immediate legacy of £1000, and the use of the house in Grosvenor-street, which, upon her decease, will be divided amongst the children, who are to receive £1000 each on attaining the age of £2000, an annuity of £200 a-year, and the whole of the furniture. The oil paintings and plate at her decease to be divided equally between the children. There are not daughters residuary legatees, share and share alike. To his brother and executor he gives the annuity of £200, and the latter makes such an annuity of £300, and legacies to some other relatives and friends.

The Albany Journal says that a Greek coin of the Macedonian Philip, father of Alexander the Great, has been obtained by the Rev. W. W. Eddy, an American missionary stationed at Sidon, in Syria.

A new Consulate-General for Egypt has been formed. Instead of the red ground and white crescent as hitherto, the colours are, green ground with a red half moon. The new flag was hoisted on the 15th ult.

A large quantity of agricultural machinery is being exported from Southampton to Egypt by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers.

The Mont Blanc of Geneva says:—"A lady has again this summer undertaken an official trip between Paris and Turin, Mont Cenis and La Seigne, going from Chamounix to the Great St. Bernard by passing round Mont Blanc. Last year Mdlle. Isabelle Eberhardt, who was born in Switzerland, but Russian, made this difficult excursion in two days, notwithstanding the inclemency of the season and the roughness of the roads."

SHIPS CARRYING LETTERS TO SAIL THIS MONTH.—On the 9th: William Cory, from Gravesend, for Sydney. On the 14th and 28th: private steamer, from Liverpool, for Lisbon. On the 17th: Glenisla, from Gravesend, for Canterbury, New Zealand. On the 20th: Egmont (s.s.), from Gravesend, for Melbourne, Cape of Good Hope, and New Zealand: Kent, from Gravesend, for Melbourne: Devonshire, from Liverpool, for Sydney: Tasmania (s.s.), from Liverpool, for Melbourne: Ellora (s.s.), from Liverpool, for Auckland, New Zealand. On the 21st: Peter Denny (s.s.), from Liverpool, for Quebec. On the 23rd: Fleet Star, from Gravesend, for Queensland. On the 24th: Colonial Empire, from Gravesend, for Sydney: The Murray, from Gravesend, for Adelaide. On the 29th: Royal Sovereign, from Liverpool, for Melbourne: Ivery (Tuesday): Private steamer, from Hull, for Norway.—Post Office Official Monthly Director.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

THERE are many who remember the debates which took place in 1825, when that gigantic Bronobyrdon—to designate him mentally as he faced the agile and graceful Canning; and the Evergreen Review thus pictured the contrast:—"Canning was airy, open, and prepossessing. Broughham seemed stern, hard, lowering, and almost repulsive. Canning's passions appeared upon the open champaign of his face, drawn up in ready array; those of Broughham remained within, as in a citadel which no artillery could batter and no mine blow up." One sees, of course, which way the editor leaned, although his favourite ultimately got as worsted as he handled that he sprang up and cried out, "It is false!" and then subsided into meaningless gibberish. These intellectual battles are as old as the practice of representative Government; and one of them, recalling the old glories of the House, began on Monday. The conservatives are in earnest, and the nation too; and the face of Tennyson, worn and weary, but now and then lighted up; and that of Earl Russell, with the old, eager, shrewd look on it, as his party fought their forlorn triumphs, were to be found gazing on the scene. Wild tales are told of the influences exerted by the Speaker; of mass meetings in the Strangers' Gallery from eight in the morning till the debate came on, and of commissionaires being paid as warning-guns for enthusiastic admirers of one or the other leader. How it went one cannot say, nor will show. It is but fair to say that, brilliant as Mr. Disraeli's attack undoubtedly was, the defence of Mr. Gladstone was, in its way, and his peroration exceedingly eloquent and weighty.

In the House of Lords the attack was postponed till Friday, an unlucky fit of the gout withholding the veteran Rupert of Debate from his usual slashing and brilliant charge. If, of the two contending Chancellors of the Exchequer the Liberal has the best of it in the Lords, of the two ex-Prime Ministers the Tory will get the upper hand. It was always so in the old Parliaments—the contest between 1841 years ago: Rupert and his cavaliers were flying over the heads of broken battalions far away from the field, while on the right, whilst on the left and centre the great Major-General had annihilated his opponents, and kept possession of the field. It is but fair to say that the old differences in the Conservative party seem to be healed. At the Carlton it was cheered most warmly, and fought well with his fresh keen of the leadership. General Peel acting as Lieutenant. The Romish Archbishop of the Conservative party is as yet unknown. "Our policy," said its leader, with a vague grandeur, "is the national honour and the peace of Europe. The first is the best guarantee which we can offer for the last." So that "the national honour and the peace of Europe" is the new cry with which the brilliant Company will go to the country when her Majesty's Ministers be obliged to let him.

Punch has made free with Sir Alfred Wigram, springing in being all armed, like Minerva from the head of—Punch. The Morning Post, following the example of its protege the Owl (i.e., Minerva, the Post being Jupiter, you know), has been compelled to have its own Wigram for transmitting despatches, and has given us the text, or something like it, of Sir Alfred's speech at Maidstone, who "did" a dinner as well as after the bold Roman hand of Abraham Lincoln, he obliged to bowl out his repentance, like Caliban in the cleft pine, in the fort named after that fanatical Puritan, Queen Victoria. No one, however, thinks of plucking the feathers of the Owl or whittling the Post, and her Majesty's Ministers, as well as the Liberal Party, the French papers affect to believe. After all, it is very likely to have been true, although the Russians do explicitly deny it, and Lords Palmerston and Russell, after the manner of Ministers who will not answer, have done partially so, and in detail. In the House of Lords a lingering belief still wanders, even in some quarters as Lord Stratford de Redcliffe appears not to be altogether above such credulity. Let us hope that, to her denial of complicity in the Carlist affair, Russia will make haste to add a most emphatic denial to that telegraphic report which accuses her of having slain in cold blood four hundred Swedish volunteers found in the ranks of Don Carlos. Lord Shaftesbury seems to believe this; for the honour of humanity and of the profession of arms, we hope that Lord Shaftesbury is right. The Saturday Review, thinks of plucking the feathers of the Owl or whittling the Post, and her Majesty's Ministers, as well as the Liberal Party, the French papers affect to believe. After all, it is very likely to have been true, although the Russians do explicitly deny it, and Lords Palmerston and Russell, after the manner of Ministers who will not answer, have done partially so, and in detail. In the House of Lords a lingering belief still wanders, even in some quarters as Lord Stratford de Redcliffe appears not to be altogether above such credulity. Let us hope that, to her denial of complicity in the Carlist affair, Russia will make haste to add a most emphatic denial to that telegraphic report which accuses her of having slain in cold blood four hundred Swedish volunteers found in the ranks of Don Carlos. Lord Shaftesbury seems to believe this; for the honour of humanity and of the profession of arms, we hope that Lord Shaftesbury is right. The Saturday Review,

Another of England's many admirers, Mr. George Francis Train, has turned up in San Francisco, and from a visit to Abraham Lincoln, at one of many countries the profundity "Brown Jack Abraham." His last resting-place has not allowed the effervescence of the London champagne to subside, for he has "left behind him a liberal Democracy" is as solid as ever. "England," he says, and his subject was chosen by his audience, "is the mother country of France, and the revolution is coming there. When the Fenian brotherhood rises and fires its guns on the tops of the mountains," &c. Silly brotherhood! why on the tops of the mountains? Why not here come over to us, and listen to the good sense of Mr. Justice Keogh and those true friends who would try to prevent the hanging of the Manchester men, are beginning to see that their interest lies also with the Government and the prosperity of the people—and the last way of showing the true character of the Fenians is to quote the approval of them by Mr. Train and the Americans, who in their own battles invariably put the Irish recruit in the front.

It is now some years since the Etching Club has made an appearance before the public, and it is to be regretted, for their efforts in the past were admired by all. Their last series of etchings given to pricsholders of the Art-Union fetches a very advanced price when a copy now and then crops up in a sale. It is to be hoped that another set will be put of print. The new volume—which will include etchings by C. W. Cope, R.A., Frank Dicksee, R. Redgrave, R. Redgrave, Jun., and Horsley, all of the Royal Academy; and of Holman Hunt, G. B. O'Neil, Solomon, and Frederick Tayler, non-R.A.'s—is of a larger and more ambitious character than their former publications, and will represent the fruits of greater knowledge and experience, both, as all etchers well know, of much importance in this art. The work will be published by Mr. Cundall, of New Bond-street.

The Annual Meeting of the Archæological Institute of Great Britain are to be this year in Warwickshire, a fit county for such scientific sport. The members will meet at Warwick on the 28th of July, and on the 29th and 30th of July, and one of the patrons of the meeting is the Earl of Warwick himself. Warwick Castle, Leicester Hospital, the Beauchamp Chapel, Kenilworth, and Coventry, Combe Abbey with its portraits, Stoneleigh Abbey, and Stratford-on-Avon are all visited; and the Rev. Cotteford Peshall, who must emphatically the right man in the right place) will deliver a discourse on the architectural history of that building. Anything more attractive to a true antiquary than a programme can hardly be imagined. Luckily, England is rich in such hunting-grounds, and the institute will be able to repeat a like treat for years to come. Any gentleman who may propose to read memoirs or papers upon anything of interest in the route will do well at once to communicate with the secretary of the institute, Mr. Roach-Smith.

The Shakspeare committee is, it appears, "not dead yet. Several of its members are very justly indignant at the failure of the object they had in view, and still wish to carry it out. A working man's committee is to be formed, and a penny subscription started—a penny for a penny—a dignitary of that Church which claims to be especially the guardian of net of all kinds will lecture in aid of its efforts. The scheme be carried out with success? Less or bombast, and the committee be indeed working men as well as gentlemen, it will no doubt succeed. If so, they will be enjoying success to which will be profuse in the honour paid to the resuscitators of an almost extinct movement, but it is to be hoped that the best provision of Gower, one day, so the story goes, amused Davie with his imitations of drunkenness. "Well," said he "Dave goes it, am I drunk?" "Egad!" hiccupped Garrick, giving him the joke, "you are drunk all over, except your left leg." This Working Man's Committee, if not this left leg, will be left left of the National. Surely, that is dead all over except in that one limb.

Curious are the problems of books, and sometimes curiously do they contrast with the titles. Who would think that Father Newman's "Apology for his Life" contained an elaborate essay on lying? There, however, it is: the curious may read it. You may first determine what is lie is; next, how to make it, whether by evading, bowing, hiding, or paring down the truth; next, how to tell it—here to put it out, in, or amongst truths; next, its quality, strength, and kind; then, its weight, size, and so on; and, lastly, let us say, its justice to Roman Catholics and Protestants, you will find that all good men detest it as abominable, mean, and often useless contrivance; although some speak of it in a favourable way, like Dogberry, who he said something "was very tolerable, and not to be endured."

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

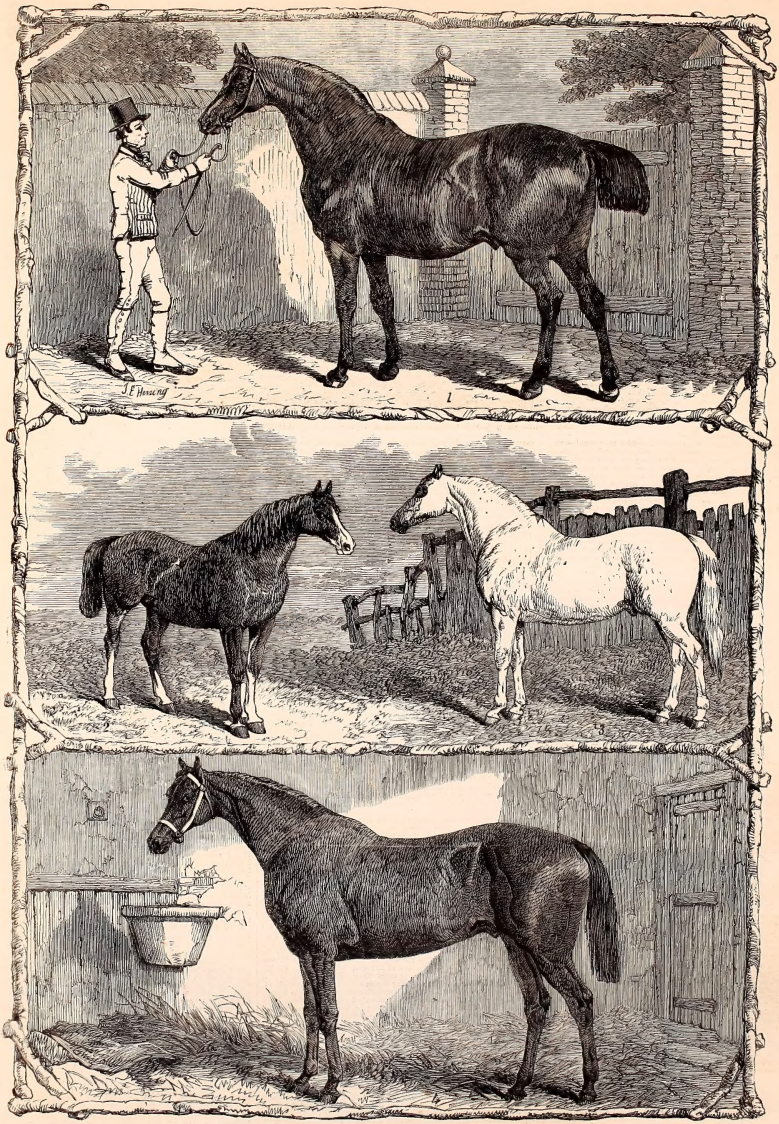
IN anticipation, probably, of the great party debate which has occupied the House of Commons, there seemed in the earlier part of last week to have supervened a portentous lull. There were those who said that certain indiscreet, half-cousin revelations of what ought to have been the secret councils of the Conservative party had mortified them almost into paralysis; and certainly that was one way of accounting for the palpable reticence and absence of fuss and froise the house up to late on the Friday night of last week. By that time they had plucked up their courage, and their game forward for a those rehearsal of a political faction fight, the plan of William the Conqueror in practising his soldiers in certain peculiar manœuvres on the inert Harold in the field, seemed to have been their inspiration; for of course the guides and philosophers of the party have been studying the history and evolutions of the country with care, and searching for precedents from all points of view, in order to perfect their tactics by that political rule and square in which many excuse opponents of being deficient.

By a lucky chance, a new Conservative club was opened on the evening after the Tories Abolition Oxford Hill came to a third reading, and so all the errant members of the party, and most of the steady ones besides, were collected in one spot at a convenient distance; while the circumstances of the gathering were such that if the spirits of any one had not recovered from the check they had met with, they were plainly of opportune for supplying those who were faint with Dutch courage. At a very witching hour, hard upon twelve, the ball rose on, and, as the proceedings were kept up in the open air, there was room. There was narrow in its favour. Off went messengers; click, click went the telegraphs; swift cabs, going to the dignity of war-chariots, came rattling down to Palace-yard, not singly, but in battalions. Gentlemen possessing what in this case emphatically may be called the gift of the gab talked against time; members with strong voices, like Mr. Colman and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, nuddling their lungs to powers against five hundred bellowers, and hissers, and stampers; sense in movement, sone clinging with a sort of astounded energy to the seats; and the whole evening was a scene of noise and rampage, resembling the surging and lashing of the sea under the influence of a cyclone. What a moment for a Whig or to have come in with a great constitutional assembly! A burst of triumphant cheers from the Opposition announced that a sort of electrical communication they had become aware that in the last few minutes they had bagged two more men, and that the support of the other side had run dry. The third division gave the opposition a majority of fifty and two, and sent the Conservative party jubilant to their beds.

So much notice has been taken of this affair, in the face of rich embarrassment of more important matter, because the circumstances of that struggle bore on the fortunes of the more formal contest which was impending. It was, in fact, a reconnaissance effected by the Conservatives, and its result was calculated to reassure them with regard to their strength, and encourage them to the day of battle. The debate of Genesee to come in more cleanly for them than it otherwise might. For many a long year Ireland has been a nightmare to us with a monstrous hundreds, we had almost said thousands, that the chamber in which the Commons met had been devised on the magic plan of that which was possessed by the Fairy Queen, which could, at will, expand itself, which would contract into a snug chamber for an individual or expand into a covering for an army at will. So we might almost have had to stow themselves in a space calculated for four hundred; a thousand strangers were candidates for accommodation adequate to two hundred; privileged persons, such as the Lord Chancellor's crowds and jobbies to their places; peers, prelates, and diplomatists struggled for their seats; others, in a constant succession, for standing room at least; in the midst the Poet Laureate got beside the Duke of Argyll, who looked astonished at such contact; and, to crown the climax, Earl Russell made his first (we believe) appearance in the Lower House as a spectator, and, with a grim smile upon his lips, listened to the elaboration of an indictment which, though not framed by him, was special in its purpose against him. With a less loyal chief than the Foreign Secretary present, the attack would have been resolved itself into an impeachment of that single Minister; and, in truth, all through the discussion, every thought was Russell, though every word may not have been addressed by applause to him. It was to such an audience as has seldom if ever awaited a Parliamentary orator that Mr. Disraeli presented himself when he arose to lecture. Anyone who knows Parliament will understand how incongruously it sounds for a member to commence "Mr. Speaker—" In the beginning of the world," or something like it. The first sentence was a failure; and, despite of snatches of sarcasm here and there, and down even to the peroration, which had been carefully prepared and committed to memory that two or three lapses of the tongue which had to be corrected, made it nearly fiasco, in the same fatality dogged the whole speech, which was an elaborate didactic essay, overweighted with matter, and delivered with a want of decision and an absence of spontaneity which fully accounted for the sparse cheers with which it was sprinkled. Perhaps all this was inevitable from the nature of the situation; the orator, in fact, had been reserving all his point and aggressiveness for the reply with which he will conclude the debate, and, in so far, he was not tactique enough. One could not bet wonder, however, that his blood was not more stirred by the fact that, in the position in which he stood, his eye fell exactly on Mr. Russell, on whom he was supposed to be offering up as a sacrificial offering to the outraged honour of England. It was in vain for Mr. Gladstone to attempt to persuade that contemptuous attitude and that feigned drowsiness which he always effects when Mr. Disraeli is speaking. He had to answer the speech of the leader of the Opposition point by point, and, though he had committed to Mr. Layard the duty of picking out and marking the necessary bits of blotchaud, he was obliged to look up and to assist in collecting the materials of his rejoinder. It turned out to have been the wisest thing that the Government could possibly do to put up Mr. Gladstone thus early in the debate. The personal rivalry—it is little less—between him and Mr. Disraeli; the fact, as it is well believed to be, that Mr. Gladstone has been a ruling spirit in the direction of the Danish policy of the Government; the probability that his anchor would be grounded when he took his massive use of the action, and appealed, as it were, to the freshness of the audience; all combined to give him force and effect. It was a right-down-hearty and debating power, elevated by real eloquence, and spiced to the highest by personal impulses and motives—however unacknowledged to himself. Long, gesture, eye, all were put into incessant requisition; and at one point of his address he actually flung a book at Mr. Disraeli—that is, having finished a quotation from Hansard at the Table, he hurled the volume on the table with such scornful energy that it flew over, almost to the verge of the other side of it, and within a foot or so of the person of the leader of the Opposition. Argument and refutation exhausted, there then came bold, defiant statement of the case of the Government, and appeal to the House. The fire of the orator were the audience that it was clear that bursts of, at least, attachment existed with difficulties between many of the Tories, while those foremen of the Government who call themselves independent members of the Liberal party were involuntarily impared into the most energetic cheers, although, to be sure, Mr. Osborne did contrive to make his ironical; but then he is as consistent as he is amiable, and never suffers his feelings to overbear his principles. How Mr. Newsletter moved and how Mr. Kinglake purred out their speeches on introducing their amendments, which nobody attended to, it boots not to record. The men were fitted to the hour that of more or less general dining, when anyone who is dreary is in keeping with the appearance of the house. It was reserved for General Peel, with an unexpectedness quite startling, to revive the interest of the division and to carry off the second prize of the evening. He is dispatial; he did not argue; he did not declaim; but he said sharp things, nearly smart things. He talked to the House and he scolded the Ministry, not as a member of a party but as a plain man, of sound sense and large experience, who had always considered men and things from the point of view of a gentleman of honour, who had not quite emancipated himself from the influence of that code, now obsolete, by which gentlemen of honour were accustomed to be regulated. In fact, he was a representative man, the type of thousands of nations, and stated his opinion that statesmen and diplomatists could not do better than to take that guide for their policy. It was plain that the Lord Advocate was not prepared to speak on that first night, still less to wind up that part of the debate; but the exigencies of a protracted fight required the sparing of the Ministerial reserves necessary, and he good-naturedly undertook to perform a part which was by no means his own. He came on in the twilight hours, when nobody cares, and which, as the last piece in a concert of sterling music, is cast to the composer of the overture. Oddly enough, Lord Stanley would not allow the "learned Lord" to do this; but, declining further to incubate on his speech, delivered to a small House—judging from the chorus of cheers—a very telling one, and who may be supposed to have heard him—an appreciative audience.

The second night of the debate of necessity showed signs of reaction, though not enough of diminished numbers, especially as the opposition whips will Dr. Clarke on in this critical state of affairs." Well, he did admirably, from his own sense of foreign policy; he enunciated it with courage and with energy; pleasantly and with composure, if not exactly a sympathising, House; ridiculed, laughed to scorn, cautioned the Government, and finished up his vote by saying that Lord Cecil must have cruelly disappointed the House. He came before them as if yest emerging from one of his calmly-conducting sessions, as was appropriate enough, decked, as evidently endeavouring to show that as he was practising for the part of a statesman he was equally prepared to act the orator, to appear as a mere party gauntlet. He was nearly as dull, looking to his Parliamentary antecedents, as Mr. Disraeli; and as he was carefully avoiding the temptation to make a success of his speech, he succeeded himself; though, perhaps, the House would have better liked the more genuine Lord Cecil of the two days' debate. One day remember, Mr. Butler Johnstone was said to have achieved a sudden Parliamentary success by the fact that he remained silent. Lord Cecil made a similar appearance of himself, and of his having gained a standpoint in the House, in his manner of addressing it on Tuesday. Impudent people, Mr. Punch remembers, said that the impression from him, would have it that he only fired and shunned shot, and that, if he had to be wholly interesting, instead of being nearly tiresome; and on this occasion he would have personally obliged Mr. Punch's correspondent by, after the first discharge, he drove into the small hours and cut him off from the advantage of a full house. It is notable that, so far as the debate has gone, with the exception of official explanations, there has been no opposition on the part of the Government; but as many, who might have been doubtful in material respects, have been silenced by the speeches, it is said many to vote for them. Ministers may compound for a little friendly abuse. The vote's the thing.

THE FARM.



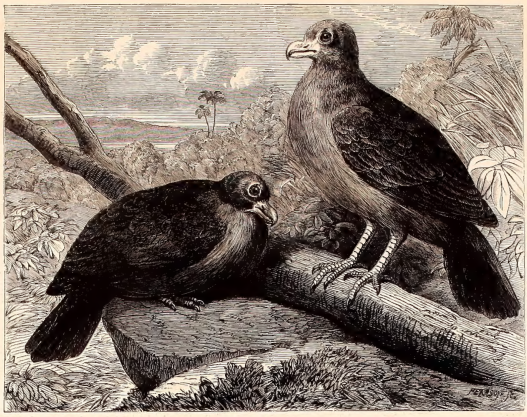
THE sayings and doings of Stalybridge, as detailed by Cristen Dickinson, have been, it is understood, the cause of Mr. Lowe's not to furnish endless amusement to one of the first politicians in the peerage when he dropped across that ancient worthy at Newcastle. He was, it seems, on his way home, to intend to inhabitants that they had not eaten, as they supposed, the carcase of the "Durham Cup ox," but that the latter was a trusting for fresh Christmas carnage in a few miles beyond Aberdeen. We have received a letter from the butcher in question which, as throwing light on the matter, we insert. His explanation is most straightforward, and runs thus:—"The beast that was killed here was put up to be raffled for by a Chesterfield butcher and myself. He was to have the hindquarter, and I the forequarter. I killed the gold cup at Darlington, and I never knew the contrary till it was entitled to the cup. Neither I nor the other man ever saw a penny slightly reasoned, and gifted nine feet one inch. I have written to the butcher, as question telling him that he was not what he put him for, and asking him to write me where to get him from, but I can get no answer." This is indeed an odd age, when the very bullocks are personated, and when the "Durham ox" of Christmas will soon become practically neutralised, unless "and without repurchase" is annexed to the bill.

The Mark Lane Express gives the following anecdote of a very hardworking Suffolk farm-servant:—"That trustiest of men emerged from the ranks of agriculture, the head steward, or bailiff, employed by Guard, with his scrubbing-brush under his arm. He is strongly opposed to early rising, which he considers a most pernicious habit; he is as limber as a weasel in that respect, and as active as a roe. Once only did he complain to his master, and then most bitterly, that he was gotten out of bed at any time. 'I wouldn't have cared for that, but he took an unfair advantage of me. He got it in the morning, because he knew I could not help it; but he got it in the afternoon, too.' The average account on many farms would be very different if such energy and fidelity were more common.

The half-yearly meeting of the Highland and Agricultural Society was held a few days since, and 102 new members were elected, including Lord Elcho, M.P., Sir Archibald Grant, and Mr. Duncan Bryden, jun. Mr. Hall Maxwell stated that 380 head of cattle were entered at Stirling, which was an increase of 80 on last year. There were 1,200 thoroughbred horses at Stirling (and, after the queer display at Kelso, we cannot much regret it); but still, the horse entries will be the least favourable. The sheep were 2,000 more and the average account on many farms would be very different if such energy and fidelity were more common.

The half-yearly meeting of the Highland and Agricultural Society was held a few days since, and 102 new members were elected, including Lord Elcho, M.P., Sir Archibald Grant, and Mr. Duncan Bryden, jun. Mr. Hall Maxwell stated that 380 head of cattle were entered at Stirling, which was an increase of 80 on last year. There were 1,200 thoroughbred horses at Stirling (and, after the queer display at Kelso, we cannot much regret it); but still, the horse entries will be the least favourable. The sheep were 2,000 more and the average against 532 and 49.

In short, there are 116 head of stock, against 532 and 49. In short, there are 116 head of stock, against 532 and 49. In short, there are 116 head of stock, against 532 and 49.

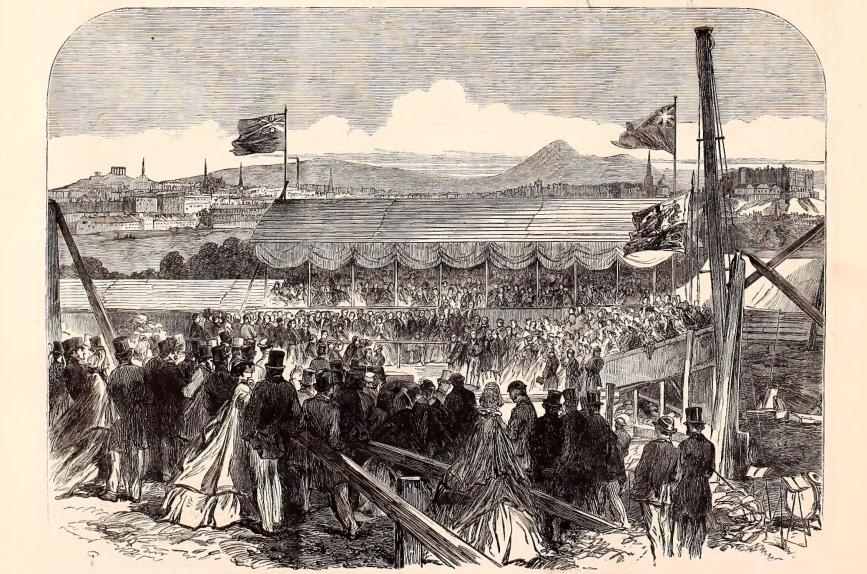


1. MR. THOMAS BROWN'S FIRST-PRIZE TROTTING SIRE, PRESIDENT JUNIOR.
2. MR. M. S. ASHWELL'S FIRST-PRIZE PONY UNDER FOURTEEN HANDS, ASTERISK.
3. MRS. HARRIET TURNBULL'S FIRST-PRIZE ARAB, OPAL.
4. MR. SAMUEL GALE'S FIRST-PRIZE HUNTER, RURAL DEAN.

PRIZE HORSES AT THE AGRICULTURAL HALL, ISLINGTON.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

RARE BIRDS FROM THE NAVIGATORS' ISLANDS.

WE have received from Dr. George Bennett, of Sydney, New South Wales, a drawing and description of a pair of extremely rare birds, called the Didunculus strigirostris, or tooth-billed pigeon, which he had alive in Sydney. A notice of this singular bird, which had been considered nearly extinct, will, no doubt, be of interest to ornithologists. Dr. Bennett availed himself of the services of Mr. E. Thomas to take an accurate drawing of the birds from life in their natural and most usual attitudes. Our Engraving, made from this drawing, will convey an excellent idea of their appearance and peculiar expression when alive. The didunculus has a very limited range of habitation. It has only been found in the Samoan or Navigators' Islands. It received the generic name of didunculus, or Little Dodo, from its resemblance to that celebrated extinct bird the Dodo, like which, the didunculus combines in its form the character of a rapacious bird with that of the harmless pigeon. In the contour of the bill, the form and position of the nostrils, and several other characteristics, the didunculus differs from any other living species at present known; and although a small bird in size, it approximates the nearest in all its characters to the gigantic dodo. The remains of the dodo and allied genera have only been found on the small islands of Mauritius, Bourbon, and Rodriguez. In the didunculus the bill is large and strong; the upper mandible is convex and strongly hooked at the tip; while the lower mandible is abruptly truncated at the apex, and armed on each side with three strong teeth, into which the hooked portion of the upper mandible fits as in a socket. The basal portions of the sides of the upper mandible are covered with a membrane, in which the elongated and oblique nostrils are placed. The mandibles of this bird, powerful as they are in structure, were never seen, during its captivity, used as an offensive weapon; for when the hand was placed in the cage, or when the bird was taken in the hand for removal from one cage to another, it made no attempt to bite, but, after fluttering about and running into a dark corner of the cage, or trying to escape, it became quite subdued and was readily taken. It is named by the natives of the Navigators' Islands Manu Mea, or Red Bird, the predominant colour of its plumage being chocolate red. Its habits are very shy and timid, and, like the ground pigeon, it roosts on bushes or stumps of trees, but feeds on the ground, where it also builds its nest. In a wild state it feeds on plantain-berries, and is partial to the fruit of the "soi," a species of dioscorea or yam. During the breeding season both parents aid in the duty of incubation, and relieve each other with great regularity. They are so intent upon this duty that when sitting on the eggs they may be easily captured. The power of the wing of the pigeon tribe is very great; and this bird, when rising, makes with its wings so loud a noise that the expression "noisy as a Manu Mea" is common among the people of the Navigators' Islands. In captivity the birds were fed on boiled potatoes, stale bread, bleached almonds, and hemp-seed. The first bird was captured on the island of Upolu, not more than five miles from the settlement of Apia; the second was from the island of Savai, one of the largest and most mountainous islands of the Navigator group. When the bird is in adult plumage the head, neck, breast, and upper part of the back are of a greenish black colour; the back, wings, tail, and under-tail coverts of a chocolate red. The legs and feet are of a bright scarlet and the claws of a yellowish white. The mandibles are of a bright orange red, shaded off near the tip with very light yellow. The circle around the eyes is of a bright orange red: the irides are brownish black. When any person approached their cage the birds uttered a deep guttural growl, frequently repeated, and often followed by a vibration of the whole body, from the head to the tail, with a plaintive note of "Yoo, yoo, yoo." One of these valuable birds died on the 14th of September. The surviving specimen was placed on board the ship La Hogue, Captain Williams, in excellent health and condition, on the 11th of January, under charge of Mr. Broughton, the steward, to be sent to England as a present to the Zoological Society of London. It is still alive and well in the Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, where it may be seen placed among its true kindred—the pigeons. Of Dr. Bennett's pair, which were a male and female, it is the female which has survived. She laid an egg during the voyage, which has been carefully preserved, although it could not be hatched. Dr. Bennett, however, hopes to secure another pair, and to send them home shortly, since he has heard of other birds being recently taken alive.



RARE BIRDS FROM NAVIGATORS' ISLANDS: THE DIDUNCULUS STRIGIROSTRIS.

FOUNDATION OF THE FETTES COLLEGE, EDINBURGH.

THE foundation-stone of a new college for the education of those children of the higher classes who, by the death of their parents or by any other misfortune which does not involve culpability in their parents' conduct, are deprived of the means of schooling, was laid at Comely Bank, near Edinburgh, on Saturday week. An endowment, which has accumulated till it now amounts to £300,000, was provided, in 1830, by the bequest of the late Sir

William Fettes, twice Lord Provost of that city. It is proposed by the trustees that out of this large sum £80,000 shall be expended on the building just now commenced. A hundred boys at least will be taught in the school, fifty of them boarders, who are to be admitted on the foundation, from eight to eighteen years of age; the remaining fifty, day-scholars, from whose friends a fee will be required. There will be two exhibitions in the University of Edinburgh of the annual value of £60, tenable for four years, and to be called the "Fettes Exhibitions," one of these being open for competition exclusively among the foundationers, and the other among the foundationers and day-scholars. The trustees also propose to institute two fellowships of the annual value of £100 each, to be held by graduates in arts of the University of Edinburgh who have been educated for five years, at least, at the Fettes College. The staff will consist of a head master, with a salary of £800 a year, and two resident under-masters, at £300 and £150, besides the non-resident assistant-masters, and the steward and matron. The trustees are Lord Wood, the Lord Justice Clerk, the Hon. Bouverie Primrose, Mr. Anderson, of Morehun, and Mr. A. Campbell Swinton. The site which has been chosen for the building is upon one of the estates belonging to the founder, a little west of the north-west of the busy city of the city of Edinburgh. This position commands a striking view of the slopes of the New Town, the great central ridge of the Old Town, and the neighbouring rocks, hills, monuments, and towers. A little to the spectator's right, a magnificent view may be obtained of the Pentland Hills, and, under this situation is one of the finest that could have been secured in the environs of the city. The building is designed in the Early Romanesque style, from plans by Mr. Bryce, R.S.A. While it will differ in character from all the other educational institutions of the city, it will rival the best of them in point of dignity and appearance, and probably surpass them all in beauty and richness of ornament. It will undoubtedly form one of the finest architectural combinations of which the Scottish metropolis can boast. About twenty acres of ground around the building will be set apart for garden and play-ground. The ceremony of laying the foundation-stone was witnessed by several hundred ladies and gentlemen. The weather was fine, and a light breeze kept off the sun. The stone, which in form was erected around the foundation-stone, with a dais and ladies' gallery to the west, and to the gentlemen to the south for the general body of spectators. At the request of the trustees, the Hon. Mrs. Primrose performed the ceremony. Mrs. Primrose was attended by a number of ladies, the Lady Haddington and Dunfermline, Lord Neaves, Lord Ardmillan, the Solicitor-General, and the assistant professors, lawyers, and other gentlemen of Edinburgh, were present on the occasion. After a prayer from the Rev. Dr. Grant, the glass jar, containing coins and papers, was placed in a cavity of the stone, the mortar was spread, the stone was lowered, and then tried with square and level; the architect pronounced it to be well and truly laid. Mrs. Primrose then, with a mallet in her hand; she next took the corn of plenty, the wine of refreshment, and the oil of joy, and poured them upon the stone in form, after which she delivered a brief, energetic, and appropriate speech. We have engraved a representation of the scene, from a photograph by Mr. M'Craw, of Princes-street, Edinburgh.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE FETTES COLLEGE, EDINBURGH.

THE MAGAZINES.

THE announcement that George Eliot has again become a contributor to the Cornhill is of itself a sufficient indication whether to look for the gem of the magazine literature of the month. The romantic purchases of world-be humour. "Brother Jacob" is as complete a triumph of genius and art as anything that has appeared from her pen ever achieved. In some respects George Eliot's short stories are even more masterly than her more ambitious works. A certain impression of consummate finish seems present to her genius: it appears unhuman to her to perform with the ease of perfect mastery all she attempts, that the mere examination she falls short of the author's habitual standard affect us with the same painful sense of incongruity as the sight of a swan on land or a raven in a railway truck. It is not, however, genius even to possess the key to human nature, to attain elevation throughout a three-volume novel: hence a sense of discomfort and dissatisfaction at blemishes which are not encountered in writers with whom perfection seemed less a matter of course. There is nothing to interfere with the impression of wholeness in the short stories, the blending of perfect unity of interest, and the thorough concentration of her extraordinary analytic power on a small group of characters. "Scenes of Clerical Life" accordingly, are the closest with those rare masterpieces to which nothing can be added and from which nothing can be removed, without the sacrifice of symmetry. "Brother Jacob" is, in the main, scarcely less consummate. As a psychological study of imbecility, it is unrivalled by anything out of Shakespeare. Dickens is great in wrapping the grotesque and poetical aspects of insanity; but blank fatuity affords the slightest of nothing to lay hold of, and can only be realised by a mind capable of temporarily identifying itself with the subject of its investigations. The other contents of the magazine are readable, but not remarkable. "My Three Days' Dictatorship" is an amusing sequel to the series of Garibaldian reminiscences which have for some time been appearing in this periodical. "Summonstown" and "Turnpikes" will equally serve to while away a dull half-hour. "Peterhead" returns to the subject of the Fenian, a pretty good case, and having apparently learned moderation from recent mishaps ventures, he has drawn up an able and effective indictment. It is universally allowed that Eton has come worse out of the recent inquiry than any other school, and it will be well if the discussions give no rougher exposure than "Peterhead" does. It is terribly sarcastic at the expense of the authorities, but discreetly conservative in his own suggestions. The most remarkable passage in the article is a crushing onslaught on the evidence given by Mr. Walter, of the Times, which we suppose may be accepted as an indication that "Incola" intends to make that journal the butt of the past. There is a vivid picture of Charleston under General Hallinan's bombardment.

Macmillan proffers a very good number. The two most interesting contributions relate to America—one a poem by Longfellow, full of wholesome feeling; the other, Miss Bird's bright sensible letter of her acquaintance with Nathaniel Hawthorne. There is not much to communicate about this special number, yet Mr. Dicey has contributed a sens Indies, Egypt, the Mediterranean, and the Peninsula.—Captain John Hoskins Brown, R.N., C.B., late Registrar-General of Seamen, a Trafalgar officer, died at Brixton on Wednesday week, aged seventy-two.

At the speech-day and distribution of prizes which took place at Wellington College yesterday week, the college was honoured with the presence, for the first time, of the Prince and Princess of Wales. After the business of the day the Head Master entertained the company to lunch in a building specially erected for the purpose, after which the Prince and Princess left for town amid enthusiastic cheering.—Her Majesty presented to the Royal Humane Society a handsome silver salver, amounting to nearly 200 volumes. Boys' Liberty, a periodical conducted entirely by amusement and instruction, will be admirably chosen with a view both to these requirements and to the tastes of the juvenile portion of the community. The following is an extract from a letter from Sir C. B. Phipps which accompanies her Majesty's gift:—"I am directed by the Queen to say that her Majesty has gladly availed herself of this opportunity of showing the deep interest she takes in this institution, which is destined to assist in preserving the memory of her husband's liberality originally established by her beloved husband. Her Majesty would wish these additional volumes to be considered as a gift from Her Majesty herself, in her character as the Boys' Liberty."

The much-talked-of screw-corvette Favourite was successfully launched on Friday at Deptford Dockyard. The Favourite was originally intended as a 21-gun corvette, her keel having been laid on the 23rd of August, 1859, but the war steamer has since been lengthened and has now been completed under the superintendence of Mr. Reed, the Chief Constructor of the Navy. She is to carry ten guns, six of which are 10-in, and four 100 pounders. Her armour-plates will be 572 tons, and her engines of 400-horse power. The following are her dimensions:—Length between perpendiculars, 225 ft.; length between for tonnage, 226 ft. 8½ in.; length of keel for tonnage, 175 ft. 6½ in.; breadth, extreme, 45 ft. 4 in.; breadth moulded, 44 ft. 1 in.; depth in hold, 19 ft. 6 in.; draught, 14 ft. 10½ in.; breadth moulded, 44 ft. 2½ in.; depth in hold, 19 ft. 6 in.; draught of water forward when ready for sea, 14 ft. 6 in. After the launch her burden in tons, builders' measurement, 2,262 70/94. After the launch her draught of water forward was found to be 9 ft. 9 in., aft ditto, 16 ft. 6 in. The Favourite has been towed to Sheerness to be docked and completed for commission.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The annual meeting of the Essex County Rifle Association was brought to a most successful close at Harwich. A silver cup presented by Mr. Braybrooke, Vice-Lieutenant of Essex, was won by Sergeant Munn, of the 2nd Essex regiment. A second prize of £10 10s. was won by Lieutenant F. A. G. Rose, president of the association, was won by Corporal Whisker, of the 2nd Essex; and a third prize, of £5, given by the association, was won by Corporal Went, of the 4th Essex. A challenge "shield" was next competed for by ten companies selected from the three county battalions. The shield was won by the third battalion, and will be held for a year by its commanding officer, Major Round, and a prize of £5 was given to the competitors in this match. Thus a silver cup, presented by Lady Braybrooke, was won by Sergeant Munn, of the 2nd Essex; a second prize, of £10 10s., presented by the High Sheriff of the county (Mr. E. Disney), by Private Farmer, of the 4th Essex; and a prize of £5, given by the association, by Sergeant Hull, of the 3rd Essex. A silver snuffbox, presented by the members for Harwich, Captain Jervis and Colonel Rowley, was won by Private Haward, of the 1st Suffolk, the prize being open to competition also by Norfolk and Suffolk volunteers. A silver cup, of the value of £5 5s., offered by the association in connection with this match, and were won—the former by Corporal Fisher, of the 6th Essex, and the latter by Ensign Lord, of the 2nd Essex. A carbine competition took place, and the first prize, of £4 4s., was won by Gunner Ayles, of the 2nd Essex Artillery, and the second of £2 2s., by Sergeant Riddell, of the same battery. The association prizes were decided as follow:—The first, £1, went to Corporal Went, of the 4th Essex; the second, of £10, to Sergeant Hill, of the 2nd Essex; for the third prize, of £5, Captain Cotsworth, of the 2nd Essex, and Captain Barnes, of the 21st Essex, tied. A prize of £10 10s., offered by the Great Eastern Railway Company, to the competition open to volunteers of Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex, was won by Corporal Farmer, of the 4th Essex; the second prize, a piece of plate of the value of £6 6s., presented by the town of Harwich, by Corporal Wright, of the 6th Essex; the third prize, £5, given by the association, by Private Bryant, of the 6th Essex; and for the fourth prize, of £5, given by the association, Captain Russell, of the 1st Essex, and Corporal Gibbons, of the 17th Essex, tied. In another competition a prize of £10 (with £5 added by the association), presented by Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Claude de Crespigny, was won by Private Atkins, of the 2nd Essex; the second prize, of £10, presented by Mr. G. H. J. Bagshaw, by Sergeant Scruby, of the 1st Essex; the third prize, of £5, given by the association, by Private Farmer, of the 6th Essex; and for the fourth prize, of £5, given by the association, Sergeant Hunter, of the 17th Essex, and Private Harper, of the 22nd Essex, tied. Some carbine prizes, given by Mr. H. Disney, of Norton Hall, Essex, were also won. The first prize was won, the first, of £10, by Gunner Ayles, and the second, of £5, by Gunner Tomlin. Some prizes—open to Essex and Suffolk—presented by a yeomanry cavalry captain, of £6 6s., presented by the town of Harwich, was won by Gunner Dewey, of the 2nd Essex Artillery. Some Colchester prizes were decided as follow:—The first, £1, to Corporal Hawes and Private Palmer, of the 6th Essex; the second, of £5, to Corporal Farmer and Private Bryant, of the 6th Essex; and the third, to Private Atkins and Private Pryce, of the 12th Essex. The prizes were distributed by Lady Caroline Jervis.

Last Saturday a number of volunteer regiments were inspected on the Knollsbury Racecourse by Lieutenant-Colonel Hume, Inspector of Volunteers for the Northern District. The corps attending the review were the Blackburn battalion, the 9th (Bury), the 27th (Oldham), the Swinton corps of the 4th Administrative Battalion, and the 47th (St. Helens).

Yesterday week the officers of the Edinburgh, Leith, and County of Midlothian volunteers entertained Her Majesty's Inspector-General of Volunteers, to dinner in the Douglas Hotel. Lieutenant-Colonel Inglis, of the Edinburgh Rifles, presided, and the company numbered about sixty. In speaking of the condition and prospects of the volunteers, Sir Colonel Maxwell said that, in his opinion, the force was not considered their present strength to be but the nucleus of what would be required in case of war. The number at present enrolled was 160,000, of whom about 150,000 or 140,000 were efficient. Judging by the number who had passed through drill and medical tests from the first, he thought that in emergency the volunteers would very rapidly increase to 200,000. Colonel M'Murdo said that the training ultimately only of volunteers was necessary when he said he should like to make "more of soldiers than they now are."

On Saturday evening the 1st Battalion of Volunteers of Her Majesty's Inspector-General of Volunteers, to dinner in the Douglas Hotel. Lieutenant-Colonel Inglis, of the Edinburgh Rifles, presided, and the company numbered about sixty. In speaking of the condition and prospects of the volunteers, Sir Colonel Maxwell said that, in his opinion, the force was not considered their present strength to be but the nucleus of what would be required in case of war. The number at present enrolled was 160,000, of whom about 150,000 or 140,000 were efficient. Judging by the number who had passed through drill and medical tests from the first, he thought that in emergency the volunteers would very rapidly increase to 200,000. Colonel M'Murdo said that the training ultimately only of volunteers was necessary when he said he should like to make "more of soldiers than they now are."

On Saturday evening the 1st Battalion of Volunteers of Her Majesty's City of Edinburgh and county of Midlothian were inspected in Holyrood Park by Colonel Scarlett Jones, and the battalion received and the band by the Colonel M'Murdo, her Majesty's Inspector-General. There were about 3000 men on the ground, divided into two wings, and they went through a great variety of movements on the level park, the whole body were marched to the heights to meet an attack on a supposed enemy strongly posted at Salisbury Rock and on Crow-hill and Arthur's Seat. The whole battalion were afterwards marched and manœuvred in terms of all the movements of skirmishing, and especially praised the conduct of the second battalion of the Edinburgh Rifles.

The annual competition and review, known locally as "The Stonehaven," of the volunteers of Kincardine, Forfar, and Aberdeen, commenced at Aberdeen on Tuesday and continued till Thursday last week. The weather was favourable, and the result was an excellent muster of the volunteers, both artillery and rifle, from the several counties, and good shooting. On the 3rd honour of the competition, the inspection of arms was carried off by the Alford company (Captain Morison), twelve men of which made splendid scores, excelling them in the first round, and in the second for long-range shooting was won by Sergeant Forbes, Elbon company, the next in order to those being Private Wilson, Aberdeen, and both of these names are among the best shots in the north, and the latter gentleman has won a place in the Queen's Prize list for several years. The Aberdeen corps mustered at Whinhillock during the present year. Prize for one hour, Wednesday—Won by Private Wilson, Aberdeen, before Colonel M'Murdo. They were formed in a hollow brigade, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Erskine and Lieutenant-Colonel F. Fraser, and went through a number of movements, at the close of which Colonel M'Murdo complimented the corps on the appearance they had made. He was told, he said, not to expect too much from them; but he felt, as he had previously expressed, that there was anything with the brigades after a few days of consecutive drill. As an old soldier, he could admire the movements in which they had gone through. After commenting on the file-firing—which he considered "very bad," and which, in place of a complete volley, was "like the cracking of grains"—the gallant Colonel specially congratulated Colonel Erskine upon "commanding a magnificent battalion, as indeed a corps;" and concluded by stating that it would give him the greatest pleasure to come on a future day and honour the Kincardine Volunteers again. The prizes were then presented, in front of the grand stand, by the Lord Provost of the city; Miss Anderson, his Lordship's sister; Lady Jane Gordon, Miss Gordon, Miss Bowie, Lady Saltoun; Colonel Fraser, of Castle Fraser; and Colonel M'Murdo.

Messrs. Bacon and Co., of Paternoster-row, have opportunely published two maps, compiled from official sources, enabling persons readily to follow the various movements of the forces now engaged in the case of these elsewhere the vicinity of Richmond and the Peninsula with all the fortifications; the other is a map of fifty miles round Richmond. The same firm have also produced a larger war map showing fifty miles round Washington and fifty round Richmond.

The Queen has appointed the Duke of Richmond, Lord Stanley, Dr. Lushington (Judge of the Court of Admiralty), Sir John Taylor Coleridge, the Right Hon. T. O'Hagan (Attorney-General for Ireland), Messrs. J. Moncrieff (Her Majesty's Advocate for Scotland), Hewitt Wallington, John Bright, William Ewart, Gathorne Hardy, George Ward Hunt, and Charles Neate, to be Commissioners to inquire into the provisions and operation of the laws now in force in the United Kingdom under and by virtue of which the punishment of death may be inflicted upon persons convicted of certain crimes, and also into the manner in which capital sentences are carried into execution.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

M. B.—The statements and inferences in the chess publication mentioned regarding Messrs. Cochrane and Staunton's play are quite at variance with the facts. The games never exclusively a match of those mentioned by them—were not taken down by the players. Mr. Staunton, in fact, did not play in the first game, and Mr. Cochrane played only half the moves in the second game. Mr. Staunton's remarks on the relative merits of the players are by such. On this point it is only necessary to say that, before Mr. Cochrane requested to have the odds of Pawn and move given to him, he played several matches on equal terms—but in his opponent was found to score eight games out of every eleven or less. Of course, these facts were found out afterwards, and ultimately they were changed for Pawn and move.

A. BR K.—A communication has very recently been sent by post. The paper did not reach us.

I. M. Petersburg.—Received with cordial thanks.

C. K. G.—Your solution of Problem No. 1360 is unsound, as it took upon the position of Problem No. 1359. Our present view of it would require you to move Knight.

C. K. G.—Certainly unfavourable, no matter how often the King may have been checked.

ERRATA.—The composer usually meant "Bishop's Sq." in Problem No. 1360.

DR F. Paris.—Your proposed variation shall be examined. Meantime, you have not answered our question as to the solution of No. 1360. Is it by 1. Q to Q B 4th, or by 1. Q to Q B 5th?

A. B. K.—Problem No. 1362 is Black for the adversary's Q 3rd, having first move double-locked giving the "Exchange"; is a mere pretence of giving odds to an able player, and is, in fact, a very poor composition. Problem No. 1363 is White for himself at Q B 4th, and is a very pretty and difficult one. Problem No. 1364 will give the exchange and save in a different manner. That is, perhaps, giving an advantage of the pawn. Examine and let us know your opinion.

J. B., Salford.—The game is very well played on both sides. At the point when White resigned, he had the best of the game, and could win.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1361, by Messrs. Ed. Pratt, Dr. Pauld, Mercury, J. D. Q., Sigma, Cornet, The Tyro, Percy, W. G., Delta, Cherry-pie, H. T. F., Carlos, B. D., Ayr and Cye, Petrarch, Philo, Alpha, Rook, Query, Iota, F. S., Pip, Tony, O. D. V., J. Bull, Nemo, Cowtown, F. C. S., Quirk, W. M. O. Mc. Buffy, Lacey, R. B., Hillside, Ajax, Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, Pepper, Dorothy, W. T. A., Kenilworth, Kenneth, F. A. B., Try Again, W. I., Bertha, M. F., Junius, Boscawen, Leo, Carnelite, F. B., Junior Curate, Mrs. Kidder, Argus, Ambrose, Hippocrates, Ben Nevis, Mrs. Hooper, H. of Edinburgh, Bewildering, Lefty, I. I. Gill, A. Student, C. M. A., Ribbons

HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, BROMPTON, S.W. Supported by voluntary contributions. Liberal and continuous SUPPORT is REQUIRED to meet the current expenses of this charity.
PHILIP ROSE, Hon. Sec. HENRY DOBSON, Sec.

£1000 IN CASE OF DEATH, or an allowance of £6 per week while laid up by injury caused by accident. The Railway Passengers Assurance Company insure against accidents of every description, including shooting, driving, or boating, or by horses, may be secured by an annual payment of £3 by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY. For particulars apply at the Offices, 10, Regent-street, and 64, Cornhill. WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

MALVERN PROPRIETARY COLLEGE COMPANY (LIMITED).
Trustees—The Right Hon. Viscount Cranborne, M.P. The Right Rev. the LORD BISHOP of WORCESTER.
Head Master—The Rev. ARTHUR HOLMES, M.A., Fellow and late Tutor of New College, Oxford.
The Directors have the pleasure to state that the Malvern College will be opened for the reception of Pupils on WEDNESDAY, JAN. 25, 1865, with an efficient staff of Masters.
The leading regulations of the College will be under the sole management of the Head Master, from whom information regarding the terms, &c., may be obtained after the 1st of August next.
Applications for shares to be addressed to the Secretary, BENJ. ALDRICH, Esq., Orwell Lodge, Malvern, from whom also any further information may be obtained.
MALVERN, June 18, 1864.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS, adjoining the Steam-boat Quay. Sea-bathing, unsurpassed, 3s. 6d. per day. Inclose a stamp for an interesting Sketch of the Island and Map.

MONEY.—Mr. W. F. MORRIS'S Offices are REMOVED from 103 and 104, 11, Bouverie-buildings, Strand, where inhibitors and other persons requiring Money Advances, Loans, Annuities, Reversionary Investments, Life Policies, Mortgages, Bonds, Debentures, Bills, Debts, or Liabilities of every description, Income, Chancery disputes, or annuities, by way of mortgage, at 5 per cent. No publicity or inconvenience, unnecessary publicity, or delay.

REMOVAL.—MDME. LE HEUP (late Alabaster and Co.), Court Milliner and Dressmaker, has removed from 9 Grafton-st. to 11, Bruton-st., Bond-st. In consequence of the lease of her premises, 115, Piccadilly, having expired.

REMOVAL.—Messrs. ALEX and JONES beg to announce their REMOVAL to 33, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, in consequence of their premises, 31, New Bridge-street, being required by the Londonand South-Western Railway Company.

TRELOAR'S COCOANUT MATTING AND KAMPTULICON
FLOOR CLOTH WAREHOUSE,
Removed from No. 42 to 10, LUDGATE-HILL, LONDON

THE PLANET JUPITER, when magnified 1 200 times with the new MICROSCOPE, appears even larger than the moon is to the naked eye. Price 10s. 6d. Also the JOLLYBOY lantern, more proportionately, 21s. and 42s. Also the Alhemar's-street, Piccadilly. Physical small pocket Telescopes, opera, race, field, and general outdoor glasses.

A NEW High-power BINOCULAR GLASS, the cheapest, lightest, most powerful, and portable ever produced. Invaluable to tourists, sportsmen, and for the race. Price, mounted in strong leather case, with sling, 42s., sent free. This glass is especially arranged for the use of officers, and is portable, powerful, and general outdoor use.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

NEW 20-SHILLING TOURIST and RIFLEMEN'S SHOOTING TELESCOPE. Messrs. SOLOMONS have just completed a small and very powerful glass, well adapted for tourists, and the gamekeeper, as well as the requirements of ordinary outdoor use. Price 20s., post-free.—39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

POCKET BAROMETER, COMPASS, and THERMOMETER, all in one, the size of a watch, for telling the weather, the brightest of mountains, direction of winds, and temperature of rooms. Guaranteed for correctness. Price 21s., sent free.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-st., Piccadilly.

OPERA-GLASSES.—The Patent Newly-invented INVERTED GLASSES, recommended by the magnificent illumination they give at the Opera, Theatres, &c., are extraordinary for relief by day and night to weak, dim, and defective eyes.—S. and B. SOLOMONS, 39, Albemarle-st., Piccadilly.

DEAFNESS.—The SOUND MAGNIFIER and INVISIBLE VOICE CONDUCTOR, for Deafness. It fits into the ear, is perfectly invisible, and enables the most deaf to hear audibly and perfectly in church and at public assemblies.—Messrs. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

OPERA, RACE, AND FIELD GLASSES. The best selected stock in LALLEMAND'S, 23a, New Bond-street, W. (corner of Conduit-street). Every instrument, personally examined (glasses not warranted). H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, through the largest size, weight but a few ounces. Lists free. Field Glasses for Deer and Field Glasses made by Lallemand, Paris, London, and Vienna.

THE WIMBLEDON MEETING.—C. F. HANCOCK, 29, Bruton-street, Bond-street, Jeweller to the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, begs respectfully to inform the Members of the National Rifle Association that the Wimbledon Cup may be obtained at his Establishment, and is manufactured by him, of the size, and to gold enamelled, 3 guineas.
F. S.—A large stock of every description of Prize Cups, and Testimonials of every description. Victoria Crosses Manufactured.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—"The movements are of the finest quality which the art of horology is at present capable of producing."—Illustrated London News, Nov. 5, 1864. Watches, adapted for every clime, climate, and country, from 20 to 200 guineas.

Benson's London Made Lever Watches.	Open Face.	Hunters.	Open Face.	Hunters.
Patent lever, jewelled, in gold	£ s. d. 16 10 0	£ s. d. 18 0 0	£ s. d. 5 5 0	£ s. d. 6 6 0
Do., extra jewelled	17 10 0	19 0 0	7 7 0	8 8 0
Do., fine, eight jewels	18 18 0	20 10 0	10 10 0	11 11 0
Splete lever, eight jewels, fine	21 0 0	23 0 0	12 12 0	13 13 0
Do., chronometer	25 0 0	27 0 0	15 15 0	16 16 0
Do., balance compensation	30 0 0	32 0 0	21 0 0	22 0 0
Do., pocket chronometer	35 0 0	37 0 0	31 10 0	33 0 0
Foreign watches of every description	5 5 0	7 7 0	3 3 0	4 4 0

Benson's Illustrated Pamphlet (free by post) for two stamps contains a full variety of Watches and Clocks, with prices and directions how they can be sent to any part of the world to select a watch and have it sent safely by return of post. 33, Old Bond-street, and Royal Exchange, Change Alley, E.C. Watch and Clock Maker by special warrant of appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Established 1749.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—M. F. DENT, 33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, Watch and Chronometer Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen, 33 and 34, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross (corner of Spring-gardens).

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, MANUFACTURERS, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London (opposite the Bank). First-class Patent Detached Lever Watches, with the famous improvement and maintaining power to continue going whilst being wound, recommended for accuracy and durability.

	£ s. d.
Patent Lever, jewelled in four holes, in gold, hard enamelled seconds	12 12 0
Ditto, jewelled in four holes, and capped	14 14 0
Ditto, fine finish, jewelled in eight holes	16 16 0
Silver Watches, in Hunting Cases, the fifi. size.
Patent Lever, jewelled in four holes	8 8 0
Patent Lever, with richly-engraved case	11 11 0
Ditto, with richly-chased case, and jewelled in four holes	12 12 0
Ditto, with extra fine case, and jewelled in four holes	14 14 0
GOLD WATCHES—SIZE FOR GENTLEMEN.
Patent Lever, jewelled in four holes, hard enamel dial, seconds	16 16 0
Ditto, in strongest case and capped	17 17 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance	17 17 0
Gold Watches in Hunting Cases, £2 2s. extra.

List of prices with remarks on Watches, gratis and post-free.

MUSIC BOOK DEPOT for the Sale of NICOLAI'S celebrated Sacred Compositions is REMOVED from 24 to 1, Conduit-street, Regent-street. Also assignment of all stock from Cramer has arrived. Lists of Tutors and Prizes graded on application.

A. FORRER, HAIR JEWELLER to the QUEEN, 2, Hanover-street, Hanover-square.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—G. HOOPER, Artist in Hair, Solid Gold Jackets for Hair, from 5s. each; Hair Rings, from 2s. 6d.; Hair Chains, from 12s. each, &c. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—115, Regent-street, London.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST IN HAIR. DEWDNEY beautifully makes and mounts in fine gold Hair Bracelets, Lockets, Rings, Brooches, Studs, &c., in the newest designs. Illustrations sent free on application. An elegant collection of specimens handsomely mounted kept for inspection. A splendid assortment of Jet for mourning. An Illustrated Book sent post-free.—Dewdney, 179, Fenchurch-street, London.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE—send name and county. Arms painted and quartered. Sketch, 3s. 6d. or stamps. Engravings of Families, &c.—PUGH BROTHERS, successors to H. Salt.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. The established office of authority in England for furnishing Arms, Crests, &c., authentically. "The Lincoln's-inn Manual of Heraldry," 3s. or stamps—Send Transcript, Lincoln's-inn, London.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE. Engraving by the Lines of Engine Rings and Arms. Crest on Seals or Rings, 7s. Pedigrees traced. Arms painted. Dies sunk. Designs for Cover, Die, or Book-plate, and Arms, with Name, 20s.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, send Name and County to CULLETON'S HERALDIC LIBRARY, the established Genealogical and Heraldic Office, for the most correct and quaint, plain sketch, 3s.; in heraldic colours, 6s.; Arms, Crest, and Motto, 10s. Engraved on Seals, Rings, Dies, Steel Plates, &c. Family Histories traced, with the original grant of Arms, to whom and when granted, 20s. By T. CULLETON, Chief Clerk of the Heraldic Office (Inventor of St. Nicholas's Seals), 25, Cranbourn-street, London.

MONOGRAMS DESIGNED, Pencil Sketch, 1s.
CULLETON'S SOLID DIE, 10s., 18-carat, Hall-marked, engraved with Crest, Motto, and Name.
EMBOSSING PRESS for stamping paper with Crest or Address, 18s.
CULLETON'S PLATES for MARKING LINEN. Initial Plate, 1s.; Name Plate, 2s. 6d.; Crest Plate, 5s.
PRINTING CARD PLATE ENGRAVED, and 50 best cards, 2s. Post-free.
CULLETON'S GOOD QUILL PENS, 6d. per dozen. Sent free.
BOOK-PLATES engraved with Arms and Crest, 15s.; Crest-plate only, 5s.
CULLETON'S DIARY FOR 1865, engraved with Crest, 10s.
LUXURY BUTTONS, with Crest, 1s. per dozen.
CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX OF STATIONERY. No charge for engraving Dies with Crest. Illustrated Price-list of Stamping Dies, Presses, &c. Sent free. Best Paper and 500 Envelopes, or Die, all stamped free.
25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, London.

MONOGRAMS and CRESTS for ALBUMS, stamped in relief, various colours, 6d. per sheet.

STENCIL PLATES for marking Drawings, Tins, Sacks, Wood, Canvas, &c. Price-list sent free.
CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street.

CULLETON'S MANUAL OF HERALDRY, containing 1,000 Engravings, 3s. 6d., post-free. By T. CULLETON, Engraver to the Queen, Prince of Wales, and Royal Family, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, London. Fifteen Prize Medals awarded.

JENNER and KNEWSTUB, to the Queen the Prince and Princess of Wales, beg to call attention to their Stock of Dressing-cases, Bags, Writing and Work Boxes, Despatch Boxes and Portfolios, Inkstands, and other elegant articles suitable for presents, all of the best workmanship and finest paper. Lists free.—Jenner and Knewstub (late Prue Meeks Jewell), 33, St. James's-street, London. Established 1807.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and Travelling Bags, containing Silver-gilt Fittings, in every variety. Mounted and Ormolu Scales for Weighing Letters, Inkstands, and Writing Cases. Manufactory of Elegant Novelties for Presents, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and Writing Cases, with Chubb's Locks, pronounced by the best quality. Elegantly mounted Envelope Cases, Blotting Books, Inkstands, Portfolios, &c. HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS, of splendid Morocco, with Gilt Clasp, Album for Photographs, and Monogram. Portraits of Celebrities, 1s. 6d. each. H. RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, W. Post-free, 1s. 8d.

NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram, Illustrated Price-list sent free. Cards Printed and Plate Engraved. Richest and Best Wedding Cards, 50 for 4s. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

A VISITING CARD PLATE ENGRAVED and 100 CARDS printed, for 4s. 6d. Wedding Cards and Envelopes. Best Paper, Envelopes, and Die, printed and stamped with Crest or Address at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

20 MILLION ENVELOPES sold annually at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, 25, Oxford-street, W.
Useful Envelopes . . . 5s. 6d. per 1000.
Cream Laid . . . 7s. 6d. per 1000.

100 SHEETS NOTE-PAPER for 6d.; 120 thick 4to Commercial Note, bordered for 1s.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
25, Oxford-street, W.

BIRTHDAY and WEDDING PRESENTS, at moderate prices.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
25, Oxford-street, W.

WRITING and DRESSING CASES of every description.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

PURSES, POCKET-BOOKS, CARD-CASES, Cigar-cases, Writing Cases, and Dressing Glasses.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
25, Oxford-street, W.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ALBUMS of the best Make. A choice assortment. Portrait-engravings, Desks, &c.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

INKSTANDS, DESKS, BOOKSLIDES, Envelope-cases, Blotting Books, Despatch-boxes, Writing Desks.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

9s. PRIZE WRITING-CASE.
By post for 18 stamps. Illustrated Catalogue gratis.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

DRESSING BAGS, Hand Bags, Courier Bags, Portmanteaus.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

DESPATCH-BOXES, WORKBOXES, Blotting and Glove Boxes, Jewel Cases, Ornamental Cutlery, Dressing Cases, and Bags.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

150.00 BIBLES, PRAYER-BOOKS, and Church Services.
PARKINS and GOTTO,
24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S only West-end Address, 77 and 78, Cornhill.

DESPATCH BOXES—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO. Manufacturers of Dressing-cases, Bags, and Despatch-boxes, warrant the following:—

Complete, with cutlery, stationery, inkpots, and best double lock.	French Morocco.	Real Russia.	Real Russia, double lock.
12 by 8 inches	£2 2 0	£4 0 0	£6 10 0
Ditto, double lock, pencases, and extra fittings	£3 3 0	£5 5 0	£7 15 0

DRESSING-BAGS.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO, Manufacturers, warrant every article sold by them, and fitted according to the size of bag required.

For Ladies.	French Morocco.	Real Russia.
Containing fourteen useful toilet requisites	£2 10 0	£4 4 0
Ditto, with silver-gilt mounts	£3 3 0	£4 4 0
For Gentlemen.
Large size, containing thirteen most useful requisites	£2 2 0	£3 3 0
Ditto, with sterling mounts	£3 3 0	£5 5 0

Every article of the best quality, and 77 and 78, Cornhill, corner of Sweeting's-alley.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S only West-end Address, 77 and 78, Cornhill.

MAYALL'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAIT GALLERIES, 224 and 226, Regent-street (corner of Argyll-place), LISTEN TO WHAT THE HIGHLY-FINISHED PHOTOGRAPHS say to life-size taken daily. Specimen on view. List of prices per post.

LOCK and WHITFIELD'S PHOTOGRAPHS on PORCELAIN, MARBLE, and IVORY. In addition to the ordinary Photographic Miniature Style, Messrs. Lock and Whitfield's studio, they have on view some most beautiful specimens of Photographs on Porcelain, Marble, and Ivory. Portraits, Views, Groups, Interiors, Copies of Pictures, &c. These pictures exceed anything ever produced in photography, and have received the highest honours wherever they have been exhibited. Visitors to all who may favour them with a visit.—176, Regent-street, W.

PHOTOGRAPHIC BATHS, TRAYS, DIPPING-TUBES, DEVELOPING-CUPS, SENSITIZING-DISHES, &c., &c. PATENT HORNITE, very light, and not liable to break. Every description of Photographic Apparatus and Chemicals kept in stock. Catalogues with an empty portrait-bath. To be had of all Dealers in Photographic Apparatus. Wholesale Depôt, 4, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street. Manufactory Works and Photograph Cable Company (Limited), 9 and 3, Bishopsgate-street Within. Established 1853.

BILLIARD-TABLES—MAGNUS'S ENAMELLED SLATE BILLIARD TABLES are noiseless, looking glass of fashionable, superior in construction to any of the old make, and are cheaper. They are in daily increasing demand by the Nobility, Gentry, Clubs, Hotels, &c. Strictly for use at home, abroad, and in all climates. Awarded the only Medal at the 1862, a First-class Medal at the Paris Exposition 1855, and the International Exhibition, 1862.—Manufactory and Show-rooms, 30 and 40, Upper Belgrave-place, Pimlico, London, S.W.

FLOWER-STANDS and BASKETS for the Conservatory, Garden, and Dwelling-house, Gold and all Colours at Moses, HAMMONDS', Decorators, 13, Baker-street, Portman-square. Price-lists sent free.

THOMAS'S PATENT SEWING-MACHINES, for Private Families, Tailors, Shoemakers, &c. They will Hem, Bind, Braid, Gather, Tuck, Cord, &c., and Sew with perfect regularity. Prospectus and Specimens of Work sent free on application to W. F. THOMAS and Co., 66, Newgate-street, and Regent-circus, Oxford-street.

MARBLE CHIMNEYPIECES.—EVANS, 63, Dean-street, Soho, invites the attention of purchasers to his extensive Stock of the above, as well as of Sienna, Grotto, Verde Antique, Scagliola, and other Slabs, for Tables, Counters, &c. Estimates free.
Show-rooms, 33 and 34, King William-street, London Bridge.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES, in large assortment of new and good patterns. Also a beautiful variety of every description of Out Door Garden Vases, Tazzas, Flower-pots, Chimney-pieces, &c., at DEANE'S, 46, King William-street, London Bridge.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY, Candelabra, Moderator Lamps, Table Glass, Cutlery, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, Tea Pots, Turner, and other ornaments.—DEANE, 46, Oxford-street, W.

OSLER GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, Table Glass, Ornamental Glass, Glass Globes. Glass Shades for Gas Burners for 12 persons, from £7 10s.
Glass Dishes, Bowls, Vases, Jugs, Cups, &c.
Engraved Glass, Crystal Fountains, &c.
Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.
Mess, Pigeon, and Presentation Plate promptly executed.
Lenden, show-rooms, 45, Oxford-street, W.
Birmingham Manufactory, Broad-street.

SLACKS' SILVER ELECTRO-PLATE
Is equal in wear to sterling silver.
Full Size. Full Size. Full Size. Full Size.
Table Forks . £ 0 6 £ 0 12 Spoons . £ 0 6 Spoons, Hafdles, Dec. £ 0 12
Dessert Ditto . 0 5 0 10 Ditto . 0 5 Ditto, Gilt . 0 15
Table Spoons . 0 10 0 18 Dessert Knives . 0 12 Ditto Spoons . 0 10 0 18
Dessert Ditto . 0 8 0 15 Carvers, per pair . 0 15 Egg Spoons . 0 12 0 18
Tea Spoons . 0 12 0 18 Kitchen Knives & Forks 0 8 6
Sugar Tongs . 0 3 6 Fish Carvers, per pair . 0 12 6
Richest and Best Quality Table Cutlery, Warranted.
SLACKS', 336, Strand, London. Established 1804.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE
Families who study economy of durability and elegance should visit this establishment before giving their orders. It will save them much time, trouble, and money. Every article is marked in plain figures in twenty-four hours. An Illustrated priced Catalogue and post-free on application.
The next house, although in the same trade, is not connected.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS BEDDING
Mahogany winged wardrobes, 6 guineas; drawing-room furniture, in rich velvet tapestry, 10 guineas; handsome dining-room suite, in morocco, 5 guineas; many chiffoniers, with plate glass and marble, 3 guineas; iron bedsteads, 10s. 6d.; handsome brass ditto, 2 guineas; sets in bed, 30s.; superior ditto, 3 guineas; and every article in proportion.
Illustrated Catalogues free on application.

EASY-CHAIRS, SOFAS, and COUCHES, best quality, Spring-stuffed, Overlaid, and Spring-sides, at W. S. HILLIER and SON'S Manufactory, 31, 32, and 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, and 1a, Ellisonstreet, Commercial-road, post-free.

CARPETS.—Notwithstanding the late advances in the price of Carpets, T. VENABLES and SONS, Manufacturers and Importers of Carpets, are enabled to offer their Stock of Brussels, Tapestry, and others at old prices. Patterns can be forwarded to the country. Purchasers should avoid the misleading Statements of Advertisers. Catalogues of Genuine Drapery and Carpets, post-free.—303, 304, and 305, Whitechapel, E.

PATENT SPRING PILLOWS.—These pillows are stuffed with the finest fly, medical purposes for affording great ease and comfort to the invalid. To be had of all Bedding Dealers. Wholesale Depôt, 4, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street.

TO LADIES FOND OF SILVER IVY-LEAVES, for ornamenting Christmas-boxes. Engravings are given of several varieties, with directions for gilding, cut and stamps. Send Patterns for Dresses, free parcels, nursery stamps, &c. Post-free, 13 stamps.—Miss LEA, Ivy-lodge, Malvern.

CHUBBS' PATENT LOCKS and SAFES, with all the newest improvements. Street-door Latches. Cash and Deed Boxes. Complete Lists of Prices sent free.
Chubb and Son, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

MR. LAWRENCE VANDERPANT, Dentist, Author of several Treatises on the Anatomy and Diseases of the Teeth by means of the most modern systems of practice. Free Consultations daily, from 10 to 4, at 110, Bond-street, Piccadilly.

SALVEO PEDES.—TENDER FEET.—A Gentleman, who has suffered for years from Soft Corns, Bad Bunions, Patent Medicine Vendors, and Perfumers, in half bottles, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 7s., 11s., Little Russell-street, Drury-lane.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and is unequalled as a mild aperient for constitutions.—172, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

SKIN DISEASE.—Dr. HARVEY'S CHARCOAL BISCUITS are strongly recommended by the Profession for Eruptions, &c. It is certain and safe in its effects.—Sold by all Chemists, in tins, 2s. and 4s. each.—Dr. H. DRAWER, Lamb's-conduit-street, London.

ALL afflicted with WEAK EYES may obtain instant relief by using Dr. WARNER'S EYE-WATER: it removes all inflammation arising from cold, dust, or constitutional cause.—Sold in bottles, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., by Sanger, Oxford-st.; Prout, Strand; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Hooper, London Bridge.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN PLASTER, 9d. per box. YOUNG'S ARNICATED BUNION PLASTER, 9d. Sent on receipt of stamps. Observe the trade mark, H. Y.—31, Shaftesbury-place, City.

DIMPLE REMOVER.—All Diseases of the Skin are removed by one dose of ALEX. ROSS'S CELEBRATED ESSENCE OF ROSES. Sold in bottles, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 21s. each, by all Perfumers, Chemists, and Medicine Vendors throughout the United Kingdom. Observe the trade mark, a Rose, and name, ALEX. ROSS, 33, Long-acre, London.

ORIGINALITY, NOVELTY, AND TASTE.
GRANT and GASK are selling an immense quantity of new patterns and colours, at 9½d. per yard. Also, several pieces of Grosgrain, at 1s. 3½d. per yard, and other entirely new fabrics, equally cheap.
In the Mantle and Shawl Department, including made-up Skirts, the prices will be found greatly reduced in consequence of the unusually late season.
Patterns of Illustrated Fashions forwarded free on application.
58, 59, 60, 61, 62, Oxford-street, and 1, 2, and 3, Wells-street, London.

RICH SILKS, MOIRE ANTIQUES, ETC.
GRANT and GASK respectfully recommend the following lots at 39s. 6d. per dress, to the notice of their customers—viz., Superb Moire Antiques, in all the new shades; 1 to 3 gradations of the Full Dresses of the Empress Eugenie, at 3½ guineas for fourteen yards, all inclusive. An immense variety of Rich Glacé Silks, in the new shades, at 1 guinea for fourteen yards, all inclusive. Rich Brocaded Poult de Soies, in a variety of quite new patterns, from 29s. 6d. the Full Dress. Patterns of the above forwarded free on application to GRANT and GASK, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, and 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, Oxford-street, London.

WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, Walking and Yachting Jackets, Scapes, Fine Tweeds and Lister Waterproof Cloths, for Ladies and Riding Dresses.
Patterns free.
JAMES LOCKER and CO.,
The Scotch Warehouse,
By appointment to H.M. the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales,
143, and 147, Regent-street.

SEWELL and CO'S MOIRE ANTIQUES, Spitalfields manufacture, celebrated throughout the kingdom. Magnificent Colours, 3½ guineas.
Complete Assortment of Plain, Striped, and Old Gregorian-street, Soho, W.

SEWELL and CO'S MORNING and PROMENADE DRESSES made complete, with Bodices, 29s. 6d. Patterns free.
Burlap Angolas and Grenadines, 7s. 6d. to 30s.
Evening and Dinner Dresses, in Silks made and made complete.
Beautiful French Organdies, Muslins, recent patterns, 1s. per yard and upwards.
Patterns free.
Old Gregorian-street, Soho, W.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Checked Glacés, 12 yards, 42s. 6d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. Also Plain Glacés, 12 yards, 42s. 6d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Checked Glacés, 12 yards,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Checked Glacés, 12 yards, 42s. 6d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

MANTLES and SHAWLS
Now Shapes for June.
A Cheap Lot of Velvet Jackets, Sable Shade, 10s. 6d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

GLACÉ-ALPACAS and 3000 PRINTED LAWNS, for Morning and Seaside wear
Patterns free.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

SOFT MAKE of BLACK GLACÉ SILK, 2s. 6d. per yard, warranted not to cut.
Patterns free.
This new make of Silk, which shows a bright as the brightest Glacé, by the way of HOWELL and CO.,
Establishment,
Patterns of every description. Full Black Silks sent post-free.

INDIA SHAWLS.—FARMER and ROGERS request attention to their magnificent variety of CASHMERE SHAWLS, manufactured expressly to their order in Indian, and Shawl Dress Emporium, 171, 173, 175, and 177, Regent-street.

REAL IRISH LINENS, direct from Belfast, Sheetings, Shirtings, Linen Cambric Handkerchiefs, with Diapers and Slips to match; Sets, medium, and heavy Family Linens, Dowlas, Huckabacks, Towels, Diapers, Damasks, Quilts, Blankets, Flannels, and Patent Linen Fronts, Collars, &c.; Kitchen and Nursery Tablecloths, Table Linens by the yard, Furnishing Linens, Dress Linens, and Cambric Handkerchiefs. Samples free.—JAMES LINDSAY and CO., Belfast.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS of the Paisley Shawl Pattern, Lined throughout with Rich Crape. Patterns of materials and prices sent post-free.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., Manufacturers to the Queen,
Edinburgh.

SWITZERLAND and the RHINE.—Ladies' Waterproof Tweed Cloaks, Riding Jackets, and Skirts fitting in a small compass. Patterns and Prices sent free. Address, JOHN NOBLE, Manufacturer, Keswick.

BONNETS.—MARKS and GAVELL, returned from Paris with elegant Custom Bonnets in every material. Mourning Orders executed in Three Hours. First Floor, 91, Regent-street (four doors from Swan and Edgar's).

HUBBELL'S SANSFLEXTUM CRINOLINE is the most elastic and durable ever produced. The steels are covered and adapted for wet weather, as they only require wiping to keep them clean. They are the lightest in weight, with the greatest amount of spring, and will support the largest amount of engraving and rubbing without getting out of order, and are the most graceful and comfortable. The lightest, lightest, and most graceful and the Patent Sansflextum Corset is a new quality to all ladies desiring the most perfect fit and elegance of shape. Observe the name and address on every pair of genuine goods, as this newest novelty is composed, while cheech specially to ensure durability, in the most delicate and beautiful colours unpleasant odour in expectorated. To be had of all good Drapers.
Wholesale Depôt, 4, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, Manufactory.

SANSFLEXTUM CRINOLINES,
10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., and 15s. 6d.
"Worn admirably well."—Court Journal.
"Elegant."—Queen.
"Perfection."—Lady's Newspaper.

GEMMA, or JEWELLED JUPONS, 30s. 6d., 36s. 6d., and 42s. 6d.
"A very graceful article."—Court Circular.
"Elegant."—Queen.
"Perfection."—Lady's Newspaper.

PUFFED HORSEHAIR JUPONS, 18s. 30s., and 35s.
"Adapted for the present fashion."—Queen.
E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

CRINOLINE.—The Patent GONDINA, or WAVED CRINOLINE, is the only flexible steels of the kind that will not break. It is the most graceful skirt that may secure a step-mist, may assume a table, throw herself into an attitude, or rise or fall at the caprice of the wearer, and in the carriage, without inconvenience to herself or others, or provoking the remark of the most fastidious critic. It is the most elastic and durable skirt ever produced, and is the only one recommended by Englishwomen; and, lastly, it allows the dress to fall into graceful folds. To be had of all the principal Drapers in the Kingdom.
E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly, W.

ONE GUINEA.—Three Imperial Shirts, in Oxford, Regatta, and Fancy Shirtings, with Linen Fronts and Wristbands, to measure, 3 for 21s. Sent free by post.
GANNS, JONES, and CO., Shirtmakers, 171, Fenchurch-street.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, &c. Mr. or Mrs. DAVIS, Clothes-dealer, 52, Monmouth-street, Ladies and Gentlemen privately to purchase Wearing Apparel, Theatrical Costumes, Uniforms, Furs, Plate, Jewellery, Boots, &c. Post Office orders made payable to Mr. or Mrs. DAVIS. Terms cash.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Furniture, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest prices. Ladies or gentlemen waited on by addressing to Mr. or Mrs. D. HYAM, 10, Hart-street, Regent-street, W. &c. Parcels being sent, the utmost value in cash instantly remitted. Established 1805.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by JOHN CRACKNELL LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1864.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Nos. 1268, 1269.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1864. TWO SHEETS, AND COLOURED PICTURE, "THE RIFLE CONTEST AT WIMBLEDON." | TENPENCE

THE MORAL OF THE GREAT DEBATE.

ALTHOUGH in our last Issue we explained the real purport, pointed out the drift, and anticipated the result, of the great debate on the line of action pursued by her Majesty's Government in relation to the Dano-German question, it will not, we trust, be considered either a wearisome or an unprofitable task, if, before finally dismissing the subject, we gather up the practical lessons which the statesmen of this country may learn from this latest chapter of the national history. The struggle of parties is over. The heat of conflicting interests and passions is cooled down. The clouds of dust raised by the exciting strife have been blown away. Let us now try to ascertain what conclusions of permanent worth—not to this or that political party, but to the whole people of the realm—the Parliamentary discussions and decisions of last week have fairly established.

It must be evident to every dispassionate and reflective observer that, as to the part which this country has taken in the quarrel between Germany and Denmark, there has been a complete and manifest breakdown. She has failed, signally failed, in giving effect to her intentions. We dismiss, for the present, as exaggerations of party, such charges against Ministers as involve the notion that England's just influence in the councils of Europe has been lowered, and that thereby the guarantees for the continuance of peace have been impaired. We do not believe she has lost a tittle of what is rightfully due to her, nor of what she may reasonably desire. Nevertheless, it is clear that her diplomacy has been utterly foiled, and that its labours have come to nothing, if not to a rather more disagreeable end. To what is that result due? To moral obliquity in those who administer her affairs? Nobody has breathed a whisper of suspicion against them. To negligence of the business committed to their management? Their industry has been wonderful; their painstaking excessive; their perseverance indomitable. To a misapprehension of the proper object of British policy? That object, which was to keep the peace in Europe unbroken, and to restore it when disturbed, has received the commendation of all parties. To "utter incapacity"? The country will smile at Mr. Disraeli for levelling such an accusation against the

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON: THE CLUB-ROOM.—SEE PAGE 66.

Palmerston Government, but will smile incredulously. No; the present breakdown is not of an Administration, but of a system. It would have happened under any Administration guided by the traditions of the Foreign Office. The moment was sure to come when that which has long been obsolete in policy would become obsolete in fact—and it has chanced to come under a Liberal régime—it would have come all the same under a Conservative one. Our material, social, and moral interests and responsibilities have immensely outgrown the formulas and maxims by which statesmen of the past interpreted and regulated the relative obligations of England to the Continental States. Old bottles have been used for new wine, for the leaders of both parties persisted in declaring old bottles to be best. Events have shattered time-worn theories. That is what has occurred, but, happily, has occurred under circumstances which rendered war impossible.

The footing upon which the Foreign Office and the Board of Trade stand, and for some time past have stood, towards each other aptly symbolises our international policy. The former thinks it derogatory from its dignity to consult the latter, reluctantly and perfunctorily attends to its requests, and jealously repels all appearance of encroachment. But the Board of Trade is but an expression of the political and international wants of which this country has been made sensible by the rapid and immense expansion of her commerce. To pretend to depreciate those wants as ignorance, selfish, mean, and unworthy of subsidiary, is the veriest pedantry. England must stand for what she is, and not for what a small minority of her people, in the indulgence of a romantic sentiment, might wish her to be. She has multiplied her commercial enterprises and engagements to an unparalleled extent, and the touches with them every part of the globe. It is all very well to call them coarse and subordinate—they are only so in the same sense as the foundation of a glorious edifice is coarse and subordinate. They are not, it is true, of the highest value for their own sakes; but for the sake of what rests upon them they must be taken into account. Our social well-being, our political contentment, our progress in art and science, our intellectual culture, our veneration of law and order, our moral development, are more largely dependent upon the uninterrupted prosecution of our enormous trade than many people are prepared to imagine. It is especially a great European war, would have to be paid for, not merely in so much money wasted, or in so many lives thrown away, but in the fresh difficulties with which it would surround the solution of vital social questions; in the additional disadvantages under which it would compel the masses to fight the battle of life against the inroads of squalor, disease, vice, and crime; in the demoralisation of popular sentiment; in the check given to our political progress; and, consequently, in the deterioration of that "just influence" which our example might have upon Europe and mankind. With the grand opportunities for social reforms and improvements which are within our world-wide commerce, we are no more at liberty to rush into every Continental fray, even for the purpose of defending the weak from the strong, than the father of a numerous and dependent family would be in taking a duel off the hands of a neighbour. We must be more actively in every street row. Under Providence, we have made a position as unique and elevated as our geographical insularity will allow us to occupy, and the mistake of the Foreign Office system has been that it would not accept that position.

The searching and exhaustive analysis to which the late diplomatic proceedings of the Government were subjected in last week's debate has brought out two or three conclusions of which no British statesman in future will venture to be heedless. It has been made abundantly clear that the aspirations and sympathies of the great military monarchies on the Continent are commonly such as to render their expenditure for England to be intimately associated with them in the political management of European affairs. It is sufficiently obvious that they are moved far more powerfully by dynastic considerations than by a regard to the welfare and prosperity of the nations whose interests they affect to guarantee. It is only when they are divided one against another that the weaker Powers can place any reliance upon treaty stipulations made with them. But England, whose naval armaments are unapproachable, can do nothing to preserve what is called the "balance of power" on the Continent, except as she allies herself with a military despotism on the one hand or with revolution on the other. Her Conservative principles forbid the last: her constitutional liberty always makes the first embarrassing. The smallness of her army, as compared with those which she would confront, or with which she would co-operate, on a foreign soil, exposes her inevitably to the disadvantage of an unequal contest, or of finding herself compelled to yield the direction, the decision, and the main fruits of war to her ally. It is useless, therefore, for her to assume to herself the championship of the weak against the strong on Continental ground. It is something worse than useless. It emboldens without ultimately assisting the weak; it provokes but it does not affright the strong. In the present case it has tempted Denmark to cherish and act upon expectations which we could not fulfil, and to irritate Germany, whom, single-handed, we could not control. In fact, it has been the grand though not altogether unnatural delusion of the Foreign Office to imagine that it held in its hands "the balance of power," and its mistake has been that it has framed its foreign policy upon that supposition. Whenever it suits the military despotisms to stand aside from us, we can enforce our will upon no Power on the Continent. We are not qualified, therefore, to dictate in European politics. Our insular position, as well as our constitutional principles, enfit us to do so with effect. If we are disqualified, it cannot be our duty. We have assumed an obligation that does not fairly devolve upon us. Our diplomacy has shaped itself on this hypothesis. It has meddled in everything. It has aspired to predominance in the regulation of European interests. It has made treaties, it has originated protocols, it has penned despatches, it has offered advice, it has used menaces, as though it were able, when it pleased, to enforce its own decisions. But it has been corrected under the eyes of all nations. Not the country, but its diplomatic system, has suffered humiliating rebuke, which no British statesmen can hereafter afford to forget.

Are we, then, to sever ourselves from the comity of nations? Are we to say that we have been very impressively taught by recent events that we only do mischief and make ourselves ridiculous by assuming to do what, when limited to our own resources, we are physically and morally incompetent to do. We may now, with the Queen's Speech in hand, be invited to take the view of Continental Europe, for, when we are put to the test, we find how utterly incompatible it is with our numerous and weighty responsibilities elsewhere. We have our place, and it is one of dignity; but it is not to preside over Continental politics. When great principles are at stake we shall always be consulted, and always have our due proportion of influence. But we had better leave dynastic and territorial quarrels to those whom they concern. Our interferences in them do no good, but rather harm. We are not fitted to act on a land power. We can only play a secondary part in enterprises which require vast military forces. Henceforth, it may be hoped, our Foreign Office will confine itself to its proper rôle, and construct its system of policy upon a mature consideration of what the British empire and people are both and qualified to undertake. In that case, the bitter lesson we have learned will be unspeakably profitable.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

Accounts from Vichy state that the Emperor's health is excellent. His Majesty has given his decision as arbitrator in the Savoy Canal question.

Prince Napoleon has returned to Havre from his excursion to the Isle of Wight.

The Princess Clotilde is residing at the château of Meudon, where she will remain until after her confinement.

M. Drouyn de Lhuys has addressed a circular to the Ministers of France on the result of the Conference. He says that the French Government cannot abate the value to the importance of the movements now going on, "touching directly, as they do, the interests of all the European States, and the future of Germany, the equilibrium of that part of Europe." They wish to preserve the attitude of impartiality which they have adopted, and to which no change or complication may arise to give reason to accentuate another policy."

A shocking disaster to a steam-boat on the River Saône occurred on Sunday (August 7). The steamer, which was full of passengers returning to one side, caused her to lurch, when fifty persons were thrown into the water. Of this number it is believed that forty were drowned.

In the south they have begun the harvest. The quantity of corn is not great, but its quality is excellent. The same observation applies to the hay.

According to accounts from Algiers, General Rose had met 500 deputies from the insurgent tribes on their way to make offers of submission. They said the revolt will be transported to Senegal with the insurgent tribes disarmed.

The disputes between France and Morocco have been satisfactorily settled.

The Moniteur announces that on the 12th of June the Emperor of Mexico signed the Royal of his dominions and the nationalities of the people. "An indescribable enthusiasm" is stated to have been manifested, in which, the Moniteur adds, "the Republics of Mexico will not remain behind." By way of Panama we learn that on the 2nd of June the French fleet entered the harbour of Acapulco, and the Governor, Vera Cruz, who drove the Mexicans from the town at the point of the bayonet.

BELGIUM

A dead-lock has occurred in the Belgian Parliament. The Roman Catholics in that country form a distinct party, and in number nearly equal to the Liberal or Progressist party in Chamber of Deputies. To prevent the passing of a bill which will increase the number of representatives, and possibly endanger their influence, the Catholics have withdrawn from the House, and thus prevent the house. The position of affairs was singular. The House could not legally proceed to business without an absolute majority of members; parties were so nearly balanced that, when the Roman Catholics absented themselves, the absolute majority was not obtained, and thus the whole business of session was thrown day to day prolonged. This difficulty has been cut short for the present by a Royal decree, read in the Senate on Wednesday, which dissolves the Chamber.

SPAIN.

The King will go this year to France to pay a visit to the Empress of the French. The Queen will go to the sea-baths.

A squadron, consisting of an ironclad and four other vessels, is in active preparation at Cadiz to reinforce the naval strength on the coast of Peru.

The Spanish papers publish the terms on which the Government offer to settle the pending dispute with Peru and give up the Chincha Islands. If those terms are agreed upon, the Peruvian Minister will withdraw from Madrid, which is similar to those which exist between her and the other Spanish-American Republics.

An official Gazette publishes the convention between France and Spain for the international railway service between the north of Spain and the south of France.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

There are prospects of peace in the north of Europe. A conflict between the King of Denmark and the Ministry of Bishop Monrad has been terminated by the resignation of the Bishop and his colleagues. The King deputed Baron Ulrich Scheel-Plessen to form a new Ministry. Baron Scheel belongs to the strongest reactionary party, a totally different policy, both home and foreign, was to be expected. The change of Ministry is not yet complete. The Administration is complete. M. de Bluhme, the President of the Council, also undertakes the duties of the portfolio of Foreign Affairs. Count Holstein Ledreborg is the Minister without portfolio; so also is M. de Quaade. The latter, who was the representative of Denmark at the late Conference, is about to proceed to Berlin. His visit is generally believed to have for its object the termination of the war and arranging the terms of a permanent peace.

The changes made by the new Ministry to the Rigsraad states that the King believed that men unconcerned in the late events could just now direct effectually serve the country, and that, while the new Ministers cannot venture to lay down their programme at present, they can confidently undertake that their mission shall be to uphold the honour and the independence of Denmark.

The Danish Government has forwarded despatches to the Courts of Berlin and Vienna asking for a suspension of hostilities and the opening of negotiations for peace. This important piece of news comes from several sources, and is confirmed by intelligence which the Foreign Office has received. A confident expectation prevails that we shall shortly hear of the conclusion of a regular armistice and the opening of negotiations for a final settlement of the questions in dispute between Denmark and Germany.

Another indication of the cessation of hostilities in the Baltic is the fact announced by the Morgenblad that the whole of the Norwegian army intended for active service has been disembodied and a portion of the fleet recalled.

The Lüne Fiord has been passed by the Prussians, and the entrance northern towns of Jutland have been occupied.

The Wirtemberg Estates have been opened by the new King. His Majesty expressed a hope that the Schleswig-Holstein question might be settled in accordance with national rights.

SWITZERLAND.

The Federal Assembly has elected M. Chalet-Venel, of Geneva, a member of the Federal Council, in place of M. Johann Baptist Foda.

AMERICA.

There is no news of importance from Virginia. General Grant has made no further attempt to turn the Confederate position at Petersburg since his defeat on the 22nd ult.

Wilson's cavalry has destroyed twenty miles of the Danville Railroad. On their return, on the night of the 27th ult., they were intercepted by the Confederates at Beam's station, on the Weldon and Petersburg Railroad. Wilson fought all night and the following morning, but was unable to push his way through. Meade sent the 5th corps, with a division of the second corps, to the assistance of Wilson. On the 29th the Confederates were moving in the direction of the rear of Grant's left.

A special despatch to the New York Times, dated Washington, June 29, says:—

Latest advices from General Grant's head-quarters report only such occasional skirmishing and artillery practice as inevitably occurs when the close proximity of the two forces. The chief enemies our soldiers have had lately to combat are the heat and dust, which have even been of the most malignant character. For thirty days not a drop of rain has fallen, making a drought of a duration unparalleled in that region for many years. It is with the utmost difficulty that men and animals get even a scanty supply of water. Fortunately for the army, General Hamilton's old mill on the Weldon Railroad seems to supply a perfect explanation of the recently-reported march of rebel troops from Lee's army to North Carolina, on which such absurd speculations have been based. General Hancock, yesterday morning, resumed command of the 2nd army corps. On Friday last Acting Master Street, of the Sonoita, obtained information that there were a number of rebel blockade-runners in the sounds, mounting torpedoes, and accordingly on that night he landed with thirty men and proceeded over the country to Elizabeth City, where he found the rebel steamer was a Confederate captain and physician, whom he brought off as a prize.

A despatch dated Saint Louis, June 28, says that the army of the Potomac, June 28, five a.m., says:—

All remains quiet at the front. Our left wing swung round and took possession of the Weldon Railroad, about four miles from the city, without opposition. It is believed the enemy's lines have been somewhat contracted since Friday last, and the opinion prevails that a force has been sent to meet and drive back General Hunter.

Another despatch, dated the 28th of June, noon, says:—

A severe engagement took place on Saturday between our cavalry and a force of the enemy, commanding in person General Hampton, at the Chickahominy river. The enemy had followed Sheridan from the White House, in the expectation of being able to cut off part of the Union cavalry, which was very large, and it was here they made their attack. Jurbet's division was ordered to proceed to the ford to cover the retreat, and Gregg's division was to cross at the ford on the road to Charles City, and thus by a circuit to strike the enemy on the rear while they were known to occupy. It is only hour skirmishing commenced, and was kept up until noon, when the Confederate infantry, which had been dismounted, made a desperate charge on our lines. For a time our troops were dismounted and fought them gallantly for a time, they were finally compelled to retire, suffering considerably. Our loss is supposed to be about 500. Our men fell back to their position near the bridge, and the command, with the entire train, subsequently got over it without further loss. The enemy's loss is known to be heavy, and it is thought they must have suffered severely. The whole command has arrived at the James River, and will cross to-night. General Wilson has about 1000 sick and wounded in hospital at City Point, and they suffer much from the heat and from the dust. The marches of the last few days have been such societies are fast giving out from exhaustion and fever, and many of them have been forced to give up and return unarmed and unfit.

General Sherman has been repulsed in Georgia with heavy loss. He reports that two assaults were made on Saturday under Hooker, Howard, and Thomas, simultaneously attacked the Confederates at Kenesaw Mountains on the north-west and north-east. He admits Thomas's attack was driven back and the 27th, and were repulsed. The attack on Howard's front, under Harker and Colonels, Confederate despatches state the Federal loss at 4500. Sherman believes the Confederate loss to have been heavy, they being protected by breastworks. According to a late rumour, General Sherman was retreating in fear of want of supplies. The Confederate General Pillow had been operating on Sherman's rear, and had attacked the town of Lafayette, but was defeated.

General Hunter has been obliged to retreat into Western Virginia. Mr. Stanton announces that Hunter, finding his ammunition running short, was retreating to Western Virginia, but reports the complete success of his expedition to Lynchburg. According to Hunter's despatches he destroyed much Confederate property and supplies, and had the enemy in several engagements. Confederate despatches of the 26th ult., however, state that the Confederates were pursuing Hunter, and had attacked his rear guard, captured thirteen of his cannon, and inflicted heavy loss upon him in killed, wounded, and prisoners.

Mr. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury, has resigned, and Mr. Lincoln nominated as his successor ex-Governor Todd, of Ohio, who having declined the appointment, Senator Fessenden, of Maine, was appointed, and has confirmed by the Senate.

President Lincoln, in reply to a resolution of the United States Senate, had sent in a communication from the Secretary of State, from which it appears that no authority has been given by the Executive of the Federal Government to any one to say succeed or consent, anyone, either in the United States or elsewhere, to obtain recruits either in Ireland or Canada, or in any country, for either the army or navy of the United States; and, on the contrary, that whenever application for such authority has been made, it has been refused and absolutely withheld.

The following is President Lincoln's letter accepting the nomination for the Presidency:—

Executive Mansion, Washington, June 27, 1864.

Gentlemen,—Your letter of the 16th inst., formally notifying me that I have been nominated by the National Union Convention to be their candidate for President for four years from the 4th of March next, has been received. The nomination is gratefully accepted. While the resolution you append to exhibit the platform are heartily approved, while the recent successes in the suppression of Rebellion render it certain that the platform will be fully executed in, there might be misunderstanding were I not to express my full concurrence in the resolution to the action of France in Mexico, the position of the Executive Government of the United States in those questions as assumed through the State Department, and the policy of the Executive, will be faithfully maintained, among the pressures and entanglements of foreign questions, perplexing and sometimes dangerous, so long as the state of facts shall leave room for doubt. I am especially pleased to concur in the sentiment that reward is due to the soldier and the seaman were not forgotten by the Convention, and that they ever will be remembered by the grateful country for whose services they are employed. Whatever else may be the result of the present civil war, this will surely remain, that nearly four millions of people have been set free by the action of the Convention, I subscribe myself your obedient servant, ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Congress has repealed the Gold Bill.

In Congress, on the 29th ult., a joint resolution, on the motion of Mr. Harlan, of Iowa, was adopted, that the President of the United States be requested to appoint a day for humiliation and prayer by the people of the United States, to confess and to repent of their manifold sins, to implore the compassion and forgiveness of the Almighty Ruler, if consistent with his will, the existing rebellion may be speedily suppressed, and the supremacy of the Constitution and laws speedily established throughout all the States."

In the House of Representatives the session was an excited one. The bill amendatory of the Enrolment Act was taken up. The principal point at issue was the proposition to repeal the 300 dollars commutation clause. The debate was a very animated one, and at times became very personal and bitter. Mr. Fernando Wood, of New York, made a speech denouncing the war and insisting that it should be immediately stopped. He became so violent in his remarks that he was hissed by the members.

Gold opened at 250, rose to 282, but declined to 269 on Mr. Fessenden's confirmation to the secretaryship of the Treasury, and to 250 on the repeal of the Gold Bill by the Senate.

It appears that General Bishop Polk was killed in battle in Georgia on the 14th ult. The Bishop graduated at the West Point military seminary in 1827, but Bishop M'Ilvaine, who was then Chaplain at that place, induced him to enter the Church, and he afterwards became Bishop of Louisiana. He inherited a good estate, with many slaves, and his ideas were always intensely Southern. When the present war broke out he threw aside the clerical garb, and was made a Brigadier-General. He never resigned his bishopric, probably intending to take it up at the close of the war to resume his spiritual functions.

Mr. Joseph F. Scovile, the well-known correspondent ("Mathatta") of the Standard and Herald, died suddenly in New York on the morning of the 25th ult. of inflammation of the lungs. He had been summoned recently before General Dix to answer for some of his statements in his letters, and recently on leaving the War Office at fifteen minutes past 12 at night.

Three hundred Swedish and Norwegian emigrants arrived in Chicago on Sunday morning by the Michigan Southern Railroad. One portion of them will go into Missouri, the other portion left for Minnesota.

The heat in New York had been intense. On the afternoon of the 25th ult. the quicksilver mounted to 97 deg. in the shade. Several cases of sunstroke had occurred.

CANADA.

The new Canadian Ministry having been left in a minority in the Legislative Assembly, the Upper Canadian majority standing opposed to the Lower Canadians, while the Ministry is divided almost equally between the two sections, the Governor-General has called upon Mr. A. Brown, as representing the majority of the Upper Canadian members, and stated to the Governor on the 22nd ult. that he had come to a satisfactory standing with a view to the adoption of the federal principle in Canada, which proposes to form the Canadian Provinces into a general and north-west territory when they should be disposed to accede, and to preclude ultimate union of all British North America under one general Government. It is purposed to submit a measure during the recess for carrying this arrangement into effect, and to give security for the fourteen members of the Ministry with which they now invest themselves should be prosecuted; the Opposition are to be represented in the Cabinet by the introduction of Mr. Brown and two of his Upper Canadian friends.

A terrible accident has occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway, near St. Hilaire, Quebec. An excursion train consisting of seven cars and carrying 354 German emigrants went over Below Bridge on the 29th ult. At the latest accounts thirty-four bodies had been recovered, and between thirty and forty taken out badly injured. One car had not been sufficiently reached to allow the dead to be taken from it. The engineer was thrown with his engine and escaped with slight injuries. The depth of the water where the accident happened is about ten feet. The conductor, Mr. Hughes, is killed; the woman also is supposed to be killed. St. Hilaire is about nineteen miles from Montreal.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The intelligence from India is of no political or general moment. Measures have been adopted by the Government towards the rebellious and troublesome Bhootans that will soon bring them to submission. There was no abatement of the speculation mania in Bombay. Two more banks had been started. The Ameer of Cabul is reported to have completely defeated Afzal Khan in a great battle at Bameean, 100 miles West of Ghuznee, and has since marched to completely defeated his brother, Mahomed Azim Khan, who attempted to seize the reins of government.

The China papers confirm the telegraphic report of the capture of Chung-Chow-Foo by Colonel Gordon and the Imperialists, and afford some details of the assault. Colonel Gordon had left Soochow for Nankin is now the only stronghold of the rebels. Colonel Gordon has determined on retiring from the Imperial cause.

JAPAN.

(From our Special Artist.)

YOKOHAMA, May 16.

The 26th Regiment has been sent for, and will be here shortly; also 500 marines in the Conqueror. The island sea remains quiet, and the Government say they cannot open it. There is a probability, therefore, that it will be opened by main force in the course of a few months. Naturally, the nations whose flags have been insulted will join with the English, and, if they do not succeed, and force the Prince of Nangato to open the passage through the strait. These are the only measures at present talked of, and seductive, may arise out of them. The most curious part is that after every difficulty we seem to lose much more than we gain. A year and a half ago Ministers lived in Jeddo, and consuls, with arms in remembrance, in Kanagawa; but now everyone lives in Yokohama, made into an island by cutting a canal round it.

[We have received from our Artist several sketches, which will appear in this Journal.]

AUSTRALIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, May 30.

The lapse of a month seldom gives your correspondent much to chronicle any very startling events, and at present the only thing sensational connected with Australia and New Zealand was the mail this month will carry with it the news of the greatest defeat which the Maories have ever sustained since the first portion of the globe. The loss is the more disheartening as it was wholly unexpected. By all thought out here, as Parliament seems to have done at home, that the war was virtually at an end, and now the fat is in the fire worse than ever. It is not very comforting to find a whole English regiment turned tail before half their number of semi-savages; but this engagement has shown, if ever we doubted before, that the Maories, in hand to hand fight, are equal to any Europeans, and never lose the ancient painful feeling in Melbourne; for, though above a thousand miles of seas roll between this and Auckland, the sympathy counts for nothing among the wandering Australians. If a man does not like his locality, he packs up his traps and goes off to another country with as little preparation as a Londoner going to Brighton. Melbourne does a great and growing trade with New Zealand; and the three strong Waikato regiments of militia were chiefly supplied from Victoria with clothing, without some grumbling, because we cannot spare our men. Moreover, the colonial Ministry, to the Crown's certain cost, are determined to spread loyalty. If Professor Goldwin Smith choose to come out here and lecture on the conflict on American sentiments he would see theories he would run an excellent chance of being particularly well thrashed. The feeling displayed upon the transportation question, and especially the question of the Fenian prisoners, by our native criminals to England, man for man, in return for the British sympathy which you kindly forward to us, would make you right tolerably inconsistent with that boast of loyalty. It is precisely, however, because they are so strongly attached to the mother country that they rejected the recommendation of the committee not only as a base bribe but an insult. The Swan River gentry would soon have found their level, and, in a country where gold is still mainly waste, the danger, especially to women and children, would be too great to be lightly risked. The nothing was negatived, of course; but a recurrence of the same want of judgment at home may readily convert it into a reality; for this country that they rejected the recommendation of the committee not only as a base bribe but an insult. The Swan River gentry would soon have found their level, and, in a country where gold is still mainly waste, the danger, especially to women and children, would be too great to be lightly risked. The nothing was negatived, of course; but a recurrence of the same want of judgment at home may readily convert it into a reality; for this country that they rejected the recommendation of the committee not only as a base bribe but an insult. The Swan River gentry would soon have found their level, and, in a country where gold is still mainly waste, the danger, especially to women and children, would be too great to be lightly risked. The nothing was negatived, of course; but a recurrence of the same want of judgment at home may readily convert it into a reality; for this that will, should the occasion unfortunately occur, develop itself in a the infliction of the threatened curse upon this fair land of ours.

The present Session of Parliament is evidently drawing to a close a few days will see the last of it—after a rather imperfect success. The land question rests pretty much where it did; but some progress has been made in amending and consolidating the law of commerce and property. The Government, too, has carried a measure for facilitating the sale of colonial-grown wines, which was very much wanted, for this is a regular load of grapes; and, now that strong drink and imported ale are getting into disuse, the demand for the product of our own vineyards will increase with the facilities afforded for its consumption. The revenue is in a tolerably good state; the railway to the Murray will be finished by the time this reaches you, and business is generally sound. New buildings are springing up in every direction, and some of them are very superior, Melbourne bids fair to be one of the handsomest cities in the world. It had the good luck to be laid out, when once started, by gentlemen who worked its way into the British mind, and thus it has none of Mr. Nash's stucco; and the public buildings are chiefly good Italian, and most of the churches Gothic. The streets are wide, and even the public preserves, now that the trees are growing, are as pretty as in the suburbs of any city. A great deal prettier than the cities, Van Tean gives any amount of water, and fountains gush and sparkle in a profusion unknown in the Old Country. The streets are never so busy about Melbourne has not even commenced—a sufficient system of sewage. It is all running water in the surface, and all abomination below. Even the new suburb, that is a city of 140,000 inhabitants, and where so many of the summer days are as hot as in India. The commonest conveniences require Liebig's Extract, and some of these days we are booked for a fever. At present the place is singularly healthy. There are frequent tempests, and the sea breezes, there is a constant circulation of air, although it is hot at times, the hot days are not continuous. If health and merriment can go together the people ought to be healthy, for they are constantly merry. The din of the fireworks in celebration of her Majesty's birthday, which has been observed as a close holiday, is sufficiently deafening to convince anyone of our thorough and hearty loyalty. We have our state occasions, too. All the town has just been to the Melbourne Exhibition building, which, however, cannot be said to be a building at all.

The most glaring instance of the unmistakable success of the salmon ova experiment. Upwards of one hundred young fishes have already been hatched from the ova, according to the latest accounts from Tasmania, nearly as much spawn have been hatched since. They are lively, healthy, and apparently doing well.

The gold-fields are in a very prosperous condition. Western Australia to report upon the different phases of the transportation question as they appear to the colonists, and a member of the Colonial Secretary's limited number of transported convicts.

In Sydney and Adelaide, as here, the Queen's birthday was celebrated by the usual display of fireworks.

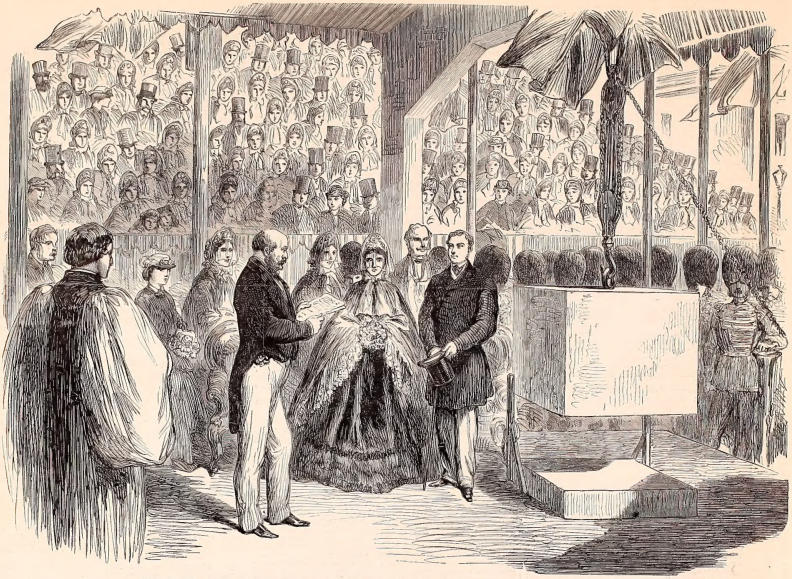
The notorious bushranger, Gardiner, has been tried in Sydney and convicted. Public feeling was in favour of hanging him, and nothing to subscribe £1000 forthwith, provided nine other gentlemen would do the same. That amount was at once subscribed. On the following day, says a local paper, the deeply gratifying intelligence was authoritatively made known that a gentleman, said to be largely interested in the banking business of the town, has informed the committee of his intention to rebuild the parish church at his own cost, if he can be unsubsidised to the amount. The estimated amount required is £20,000.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. W. Cockin, Rector of Bishopsnympton, to be Rural Dean; Rev. W. Knight, Rector of Whitchurch, Bucks, to be Honorary Canon of Bristol Cathedral. Archdeacons: Rev. C. Y. Crawley to Taynton, Gloucestershire; Rev. E. Montague to Northolme, Norfolk; Rev. W. T. Hamilton, Lewisham, Kent. Rural Deans: Rev. R. J. Brewster to Ampton Circuit, Cirencester; Rev. T. Clark to Postion-Bampton Circuit; Rev. W. C. Lancaster to Kirk Michael. Incumbencies: Rev. E. Johnson to Mukor, near Richmond; Rev. G. Jenkin to Norton-juxta-Kempsey, Worcestershire; Rev. W. Christie, Bishop's Stortford, formerly Rev. S. Exton to Exton Chapel, Exton-square, Belgravia, London; Rev. J. Gilbert to Lewes, Sussex; Rev. Chancellor Espinasse to Rev. J. W. Drury to be Domestic Chaplain to Lord Lifford. Perpetual Curacies: Rev. A. J. Harrison to Mortlake, Surrey; Rev. Thomas Smith to Bishopwearmouth Curacies: Rev. F. B. Brodrie to Stoke-on-Trent; Rev. S. Boring-Gould to Horbury, Yorkshire; Rev. W. B. Compton to St. Mary, Henley; Rev. O. Clayton to Addlethorpe; Rev. W. Coskin, jun. to Bishopwearmouth; Rev. R. Curtis to Rye, Sussex; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Ellerton-on-Swale; Rev. F. Hogan to Llawyhaiarn Cruccorney, Aberystwyth; Rev. Jones to Christ Church, Swansea; Rev. H. Jones to St. Andrew, Llanelly; Rev. J. H. Jones to Aylesbury; Rev. T. Parkinson to Bardsey, Yorkshire.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—At Oxford the Biden Law Scholarship has been awarded to Mr. J. M. Maultby, B.A.

A session of council of the University College was held on Saturday, under the presidency of Lord Selborne, when the vacancies in the Council created by the late Lord Stanley of Alderley, and Sir Thomas Erskine May, have been filled up by the appointment of the Rev. R. M. Chumney, of Watton, Herts.

An extra week's holiday has been granted to the scholars at the request of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

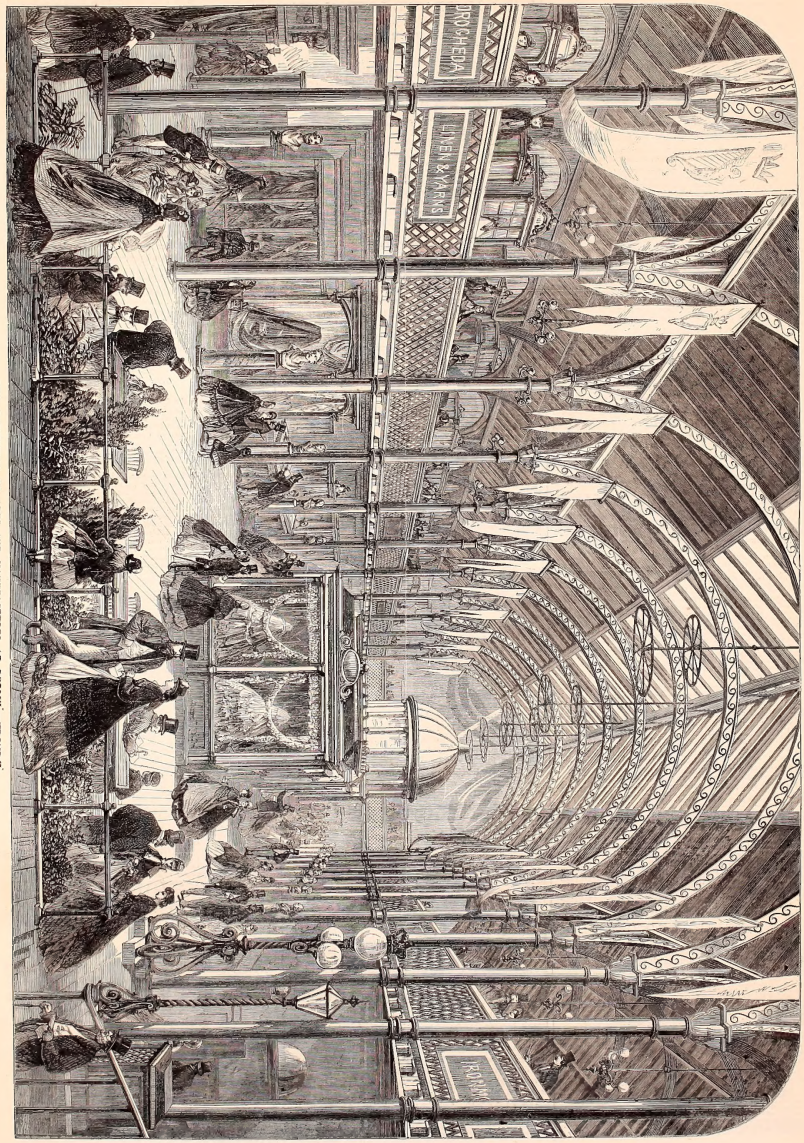


The Rev. C. J. Vaughan, M.A., late Scholar of Corpus Christi, Cambridge, has been appointed to a mastership in Richmond School, Yorkshire.

Thursday, June 30, was spent by the boys of Harrow in festivity, and was a memorable day in the history of the school, from the opening of the new schoolhouse. The building has been erected by the Dean and Chapter and the Ecclesiastical Commission, at the cost of £6000. The day's proceedings commenced with the usual morning service in the cathedral, the anniversary sermon being preached by the Dean of Westminster, who was formerly Canon of Canterbury, and in that capacity an examiner of the King's School. After service the speeches were recited to a very large audience, in the chapter-house; a scene from the "Andria" of Terence, and the ode of the dog Lubex in Aristophanes' "Wasps," eliciting well-merited applause. The Rev. C. J. Vaughan, assisted by the Head Master, read the list of honours gained by the school at the Universities, embracing three Cambridge scholarships, one Oxford scholarship, and several prizes. The national ode, the second for degree, and a classical first in modernities, was read out. After luncheon the company were conveyed to the new schoolhouse at the hall of the new schoolhouse. The Head Master, Dr. Mitchinson, presided. The usual speeches were made, and a large subscription was set on foot augmenting the number of the exhibitions belonging to the school.—Guardian.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.—The Ministerial fish dinner is fixed for Saturday next, and it is expected that the remaining Parliamentary business will be got through by Saturday week. The Right Hon. the Speaker will entertain a large party and the officers of the House of Commons on Wednesday next at his official residence.

A grand fête was held on Wednesday night at the Royal Horticultural Gardens, South Kensington, the Duke of Buccleuch, as president of the society, having issued invitations for a large and distinguished company to meet the Prince and Princess of Wales. The fête commenced at ten o'clock, and terminated at two o'clock on Thursday morning. Illuminations of the whole of the gardens and of the canals by blue and red Bengal lights, and of the Conservatory by coloured lights, which was also tastefully decorated for the occasion. The Prince and Princess arrived at eleven o'clock, by which hour the conservatory was thronged with the rank and fashion of the aristocracy, about 2000 in number. A vacant space in the centre and in the transept was kept open, in which the Prince, who was accompanied by the Duke of Beaufort, walked, followed by the Prince leading the Duchess of Buccleuch, and by the suite. At half-past eleven the party were met by Lord and Lady Palmerston and Earl Granville. Their Royal Highnesses walked through the principal walks and the building, receiving and returning the salutations of the company. The Royal party afterwards proceeded to the grand saloon, which was very splendidly decorated and ornamented by the exhibition of stationary and rare pieces of porcelain. The whole of the grounds were thrown open and were filled with visitors, the scene being one of great elegance and beauty. At twelve o'clock the Royal party left the building and proceeded to the grounds, which were immediately lighted up, the blue and red fire producing a magnificent effect. The band of the 1st Middlesex Engineer Volunteers was present in the grounds, and played a selection of music during the illumination of the gardens. The whole of the company were in full evening dress, the others in uniform and wearing their distinguishing medals. The Duke of Buccleuch, who received the company in the conservatory, wore the star and ribbon of the Garter; Lord Palmerston and Earl Granville also wore the blue ribbon. A large number of Peers and members of Parliament was present, and, altogether, it was one of the most brilliant meetings of the season.



Sold by all Booksellers and Railway Bookstalls.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE NEW WING OF THE LONDON HOSPITAL.—SEE PAGE 67.

NATIONAL ARCHERY MEETING AT ALEXANDRA PARK.—SEE PAGE 67.

THE EXHIBITION OF ARTS AND MANUFACTURES AT DUBLIN.—SEE PAGE 81.

BIRTHS.

On the 6th inst., at Trevor House, Norwood, the wife of C. T. Getting, Esq., of a son.

On the 10th inst., at Prestwich Lodge, the wife of Edward Loyd, Esq., of Lilleshall, of a daughter.

On the 9th inst., at Norwood, the wife of George Clark, Esq., of Bilinbaeyn, Tasmania, of a son.

At Warwick-square, Lady K. Coke, of a son.

At Eccleston-square, the Hon. Mrs. P. Hobart, of a daughter.

At Chesel Park, Lady M. S. Pilkington, of a daughter.

At Wilton-crescent, the Hon. Mrs. Kenyon, of a son.

At Herstlemere Park, Hants, the Countess of Portsmouth, of a son.

At Oxford-square, Hyde Park, the wife of Sir A. C. Weldon, Bart., of a son.

On Wednesday, the 6th inst., at Nottingham, Kent, the wife of Thomas Jackson, jun., of a son.

On the 8th inst., at Munich, Bavaria, the wife of Henry Cunliffe, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 27th ult., at the Cathedral, Bergen, Thomas M. Wilson, Esq., Glasgow, to Victorie, daughter of Herlandt Aasen, Esq., of Dansegaard, late Consul for the United States of America.

On Thursday, the 7th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Rev. R. D. Buttemer, John Robinson Wells, Esq., of 10, Russell-place, Fitzroy-square, to Sarah Ann, youngest daughter of the late Alexander Campbell, Esq. No cards.

At St. James's, Piccadilly, the Rev. R. W. Crawcft, Rector of Harrington, Lincolnshire, to the Hon. Elizabeth Catharine, daughter of Sackville W. and the late Lady C. L. Fox.

At the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, Lieutenant-Colonel A. Campbell, of Llythicoed, to Augusta Clementina, daughter of Lord and Lady Darlington.

At Montalue, Comte de Lapasture, to Leontine, daughter of C. Stanfield, Esq., of Standish Hall, Lancashire.

On the 12th inst., at St. Stephen's, Paddington, George, Marquis of Westmeath, to Elizabeth Charlotte, second daughter of the late D. Vernay, Esq.

On the 6th inst., at St. Thomas's Church, Marylebone, by the Rev. A. P. Cust, C. B. Congreve, Esq., to Elizabeth V. F. Cust, daughter of Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir E. Cust.

At St. Paul's, Wilton-place, Commander the Hon. G. Fitzclarence, R.N., to Lady Maria Henrietta Scott, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Clonmell.

At St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, Rear Millett Deane, Major in the 18th Royal Irish, to the Hon. Lucy Boscawen.

On the 6th inst., at Bray Church, Maidenhead, by the Rev. George Phillimore, M.A., Rector of Radnage, Bucks, the Rev. Philip Swatman, M.A., Chaplain of Guy's Hospital, youngest son of the late Rev. Edward Swatman, M.A., Rector of Little Frimsham, Norfolk, to Elizabeth Harriet Joanna, youngest daughter of the late Captain Sir John Phillimore, R.N., C.B.

On Tuesday, the 12th inst., at St. Paul's, Herne Hill, by the Rev. F. Sterry, M.A., brother of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Thomas Sterry, M.A., Anthony Sterry, Esq., M.A., barrister-at-law, youngest son of the late Weary Sterry, of Upminster, Essex, Esq., to Anna Gertrude, eldest daughter of W. K. Sidgwick, Esq., of Cumberwell.

DEATHS.

On the 7th inst., at Paris, Baron de Montvaillant, of Montpellier, brother-in-law of Mr. Robert Selby, of London, aged 81. And on the 10th ult., in Algeria, Charles de Montvaillant, eldest son of the above.

On the 5th inst., at his residence, Hawthorn House, Bristol-street, Birmingham, Richard Gibson Reeves, Esq., in the 72nd year of his age.

At Wortham Rectory, Diss, Adelaide, daughter of the late Sir Alexander Croke, of Studley Priory, Oxon, aged 63.

At Chelsea, Lady Wood, wife of Sir John M. Wood, C.B., R.N.

On the 15th inst., at Addison-road, Lady Mary Eva Owen Blachford, in the 63rd year of her age.

On the 12th inst., at Heston, Middlesex, Edward Westbrook, Esq., aged 56 years.

On the 12th inst., very suddenly, Arthur Miller Rose, of South Lambeth, aged 42.

On the 4th inst., at Wordham Rectory, while on a visit, Adelaide Croke, eldest daughter of the late Sir Alexander, and Lady Croke, of Studley Priory, Oxon, aged 63.

On the 5th inst., at Bath, Lady Mary Keith, aged 69.

On the 6th inst., at Richmond-terrace, Whitehall, the Hon. Mrs. Arthur Annesley.

On the 4th inst., at Kenmuech, the Hon. Catharine Vanneck, eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Huntingfield, aged 24.

[The announcement of the death of Mrs. A. L. Playfair, of Edinburgh, which appeared in our Impression of the 2nd inst., was erroneous.]

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is five shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 23.

SUNDAY, July 17.—Eighth Sunday after Trinity. Robespierre begins the Reign of Terror, 1791.

MONDAY. Death of the great Italian poet Petrarch, 1374. Birth of Gilbert Wakefield, of Selborne, the Naturalist, 1726.

TUESDAY, 19.—Battle of Alarcos; great victory over the Moors by Alphonso IX., 1195. The first branch bank of the Bank of England established (at Gloucester), 1826. Birth of Princess Augusta of Cambridge, Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, 1822. Hull moon 6h. 30m. a.m.

WEDNESDAY, 20.—The "Convention of Pilnitz" against France, signed by the Emperor of Germany and the King of Prussia, 1791. The majority of Mormon Missionary to the Notables, 1863.

THURSDAY, 21.—Paul Gerhardt, Bishop of the Nortumbrians (or of Lindisfarne), 651. Lord William Russell beheaded in Lincoln's-inn-fields, 1683.

FRIDAY, 22.—St. Mary Magdalene. Edward I. locally divorces Eleanor of Castile, 1290. Battle of Fairfax, 1643.

SATURDAY 23.—Raphael sacked by Tamerlane, 1401. Cairo taken by Napoleon Bonaparte, 1798. The Alexandra Park, Muswell-hill, near London, opened, 1863.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 23.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
9 37	10 46	11 53	morn.	0 58	2 1	3 3

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 0″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above Sea, 94 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER		WIND.		Rain in 24 hours, ending 10 a.m.
	Barometer reduced, 32° and Sea Level.	Dew Point Temperature.	Solar Radiation.	Terrestrial Radiation.	Highest in the Day.	Lowest in the Night.	Resultant Direction.	Resultant Velocity.
	Inches.	°	°	°	°	°		miles.	Inch.
6	30·138	57·7	83·9	0·0	86·2	56·2	N. WNW.	3·0	0·000
7	30·199	58·4	88·1	0·0	91·3	59·0	WNW. W.	15·0	0·000
8	30·142	59·5	84·0	0·0	84·8	60·0	NW. S.	14·3	0·000
9	29·972	59·2	84·0	0·0	87·0	58·3	E. ENE. NNE.	7·3	0·000
10	,,	,,	,,	,,	90·6	71·8	ENE. NNE.	17·7	0·000
11	30·041	67·8	91·7	0·0	92·6	67·0	ENE.	19·3	0·000
12	30·073	69·1	69·7	0·0	75·1	71·4	E. ENE.	11·7	0·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, to under, at half-past 9 a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	30·141	30·134	30·137	30·112	30·062	30·041	30·101
Temperature of Air	58·0°	58·0°	58·0°	58·0°	58·0°	58·0°	58·0°
Temperature of Evaporation	53·9°	53·9°	56·6°	57·1°	61·2°	61·2°	54·5
Direction of Wind	N.	N.	NNW.	NW.	NW.	NW.	N.
Amount of Cloud	0	0	0	0	3·0	2·0	0

POSTAGE OF THE DOUBLE NUMBER OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS FOR THIS WEEK, CUT OUT AT HOME.

Under bearing the impressed stamp (which must be exposed to view) circulate from any Office in the United Kingdom and the Colonies to any part of the United Kingdom or the Colonies, or to any foreign country within the limits of the universal penny-post where they are posted, when they are not liable to a postage of one penny each, which must be prepaid by affixing a postage-stamp of the value of a penny. Letters for the Colonies, or for foreign countries, which do not bear the impress of the General Post Office.

Letters for Canada should have Four penny postage-stamps affixed to each.

FOR FOREIGN PARTS.

The impressed stamp is of no avail for foreign parts, as he next stamed ; those must have postage-stamps affixed to them according to the following rates :—

Africa, West Coast of—Penny Stamp.
Australia—Four Stamps.
Australia—Penny Stamp.
Belgium—Penny Stamp.
Continental—This Stamp.
Cape of Good Hope—Four Stamps.
Cape of Good Hope—Penny Stamp.
China—Two Stamps.
China—Penny-Paper Stamp. This paper
China—Penny Stamp. This paper
France—Four Stamps.
France—Penny Stamp. This paper
Germany—This Stamp.
Germany—Penny Stamp. This paper
Greece—Four Stamps. This paper
Greece—Penny Stamp. This paper
Holland—This Stamp.
Holland—Penny Stamp. This paper
India—Two Stamps. This paper
India—Penny Stamp. This paper
Mexico—Penny Stamp.
New Zealand—One Stamp.
New Zealand—Penny Stamp. This paper
Portugal—Four Stamps. This paper
Spain—Four Stamps. This paper
Sweden—Four Stamps. This paper
Switzerland—Two Stamps. This paper
United States—Penny Stamp.
West Indies—Penny Stamp.

An addition is printed on this paper specially for foreign parts. The postage of the Journal (not the newspaper) must be doubled for those places which are noted as marked in the above list, the title-paper published.

WHOLE-SHEET SUPPLEMENT.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

for SATURDAY NEXT, JULY 23, will consist of

TWO WHOLE SHEETS,

containing the following

ENGRAVINGS:

The War in New Zealand: Interior of Puke Wharangi Pah; Camp of the 68th and 43rd Regiments at Te Papa Mission Station, Tauranga Harbour; and Government House at Auckland.
The National Rifle Match at Wimbledon: Volunteers during an Interval of Rest.
The Railway Accident near Bradfield, in Essex.
Barge-Race on the River Thames.
H. M. S. Achilles Lying at Chatham.
New Animals in the Zoological Society's Gardens, Regent's Park: The New Monkey House.
The Bloomsbury Flower Show in Russell-square.
The East Kent Railway: Margate and Ramsgate Stations.
New Church built on the Site of Vauxhall-gardens.
The Petroleum Works at Oil Creek, Pennsylvania, on a branch of the Atlantic and Great Western Railway—Two Illustrations.
Portrait of Sir Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., her Majesty's Envoy to Japan.
Scenes of Life in Japan: A Japanese Party at Meals. (By our Special Artist.)
Bust of H.R.H. the Princess of Wales. By Mr. Marshal Wood.
Portrait of Mr. E. W. Watkin, M.P. for Stockport.
The Clifden Cup, Won at Stamford Races.

The TITLEPAGE and INDEX to ENGRAVINGS for Vol. XLIV—from January to June, 1864—will be issued with next week's Number.

Price of the Two Sheets, Fivepence; Stamped, Sixpence.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1864.

Two cases of railway outrage have excited much grave attention, though we may be pardoned, in the interest of sober journalism, to repudiate all the "loud writing," which tells us that the metropolis has been thrown into a state of agitation, and that gloom and horror have spread over the suburban districts. As a philosopher has said, an earthquake that would shatter the Pyramid would threaten the continent on which it is placed; and an event that should really agitate the monster metropolis would strike a strange blow at society generally. But big words are dear to small folk. A cruel and wicked murder has been committed on the North London line; but the journals, unhappily, have too often to record cruel and wicked murders to make it reasonable to say that the event itself excites any interest which is taken in the extraordinary affair. The circumstances invest it with that interest, and it is intimately connected with a question which has long been in dispute between the English railway managers and the English public—namely, the question whether persons on railways ought to be furnished with a means of communicating with the conductors of the train.

We have no intention of discussing the details of the greater crime, nor that of the atrocious outrage which is stated to have been committed on the South Western line. This latter case, however, has a stronger bearing than the other upon the communication question. A female, who alleges that she was grossly insulted by a fellow-traveller, contrived to open the door of the carriage and struggle along the narrow footboard until she reached another door, and here, ought best freeman of the company. The Prince and Princess partook of luncheon with the masters and wardens of the company. In the afternoon the Prince rode to Wimbledon. In the evening their Royal Highnesses honoured the Royal Italian Opera with their presence.

On Tuesday the Prince, attended by Captain Grey, rode out. A deputation of ladies, headed by Lady Wrotheseley Russell, attended at Marlborough House and had the honour of presenting a Bible on behalf of the women of the United Kingdom to the Princess. The Prince and Princess afterwards drove to Chiswick and visited the Duchess Dowager of Sutherland. In the evening their Royal Highnesses had a dinner party. The Count and Countess de Flandre, the Duke of Leinster, the Marchioness of Ripon, and a distinguished company were present.

On Wednesday the Prince of Wales rode on horseback, attended by Captain Grey. The Princess of Wales took a carriage drive. Their Royal Highnesses went in the evening to the conversazione given by the Duke of Devonshire, at the Royal Horticultural Gardens, South Kensington. In attendance were the Hon. Mrs. Stonor and Captain Grey.

The Prince of Wales has honoured Mr. Evan Thomas by inspecting the memorial of the Prince Consort, now in position for the unveiling.

The Hon. Mrs. Stonor has succeeded the Marchioness of Carmarthen as Lady in Waiting to the Princess.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred left Edinburgh on Tuesday and joined the frigate Aurora, which left the Firth of Forth for Christiansand, at which port the Prince will land. It is expected that the Aurora will again return to the Firth of Forth from Norway to-day.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary will leave their country residence, St. James's Palace to-day (Saturday) for Cambridge Cottage, Kew.

The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort left town on Saturday last for Badminton.

The Duke of Buccleuch has returned to Sefton House, Prince's Gate, from Bowhill, Selkirkshire.

Louisa Marchioness of Waterford has left Farrance's Hotel for Ford Castle, N.B.

Lord and Lady Cromtess Delaware have left their family residence in Upper Grosvenor-street, for Cowes, Isle of Wight.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

His Excellency the Prussian Ambassador and Countess Bernstorff entertained a select circle at dinner on Tuesday evening at the residence of the Embassy on Carlton House-terrace.

The Earl and Countess Cowper gave a conversazione to the Fellows of the Royal Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday evening at the Royal Horticultural Society's Gardens, Kensington. The reunion was honoured by the presence of the Prince and Princess of Wales, a large and brilliant company being present.

Lord and Lady Ashcombe entertained a distinguished party at dinner on Saturday last at their residence in Euston-street.

Earl Granville entertained a distinguished party at dinner on Saturday evening last at his residence here in Spring-party this season on Monday evening.

Countess Spencer gave her first reception of the season on Monday evening at her residence in St. James's. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and Countess Dowager and a brilliant assemblage were present at the ball.

The Earl and Countess of Cromartie entertained a select party at dinner on Tuesday evening at their family residence in Grosvenor-street.

The Earl and Countess of Rosebery entertained the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a distinguished company at dinner on Monday evening at their residence in Berkeley-square.

Lord Ashcombe, Palmerston had an assembly on Saturday evening last at Cambridge House, Mayfair, Tiverton. The reunion was attended by a large number of the political and fashionable world. Previously to the assembly the noble host and Lady Ashcombe entertained a distinguished company at dinner.

Lady Brokey gave the first of a series of tableaux on Monday evening at her residence, Montagu House, Portman-square. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a large and distinguished company were present.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.

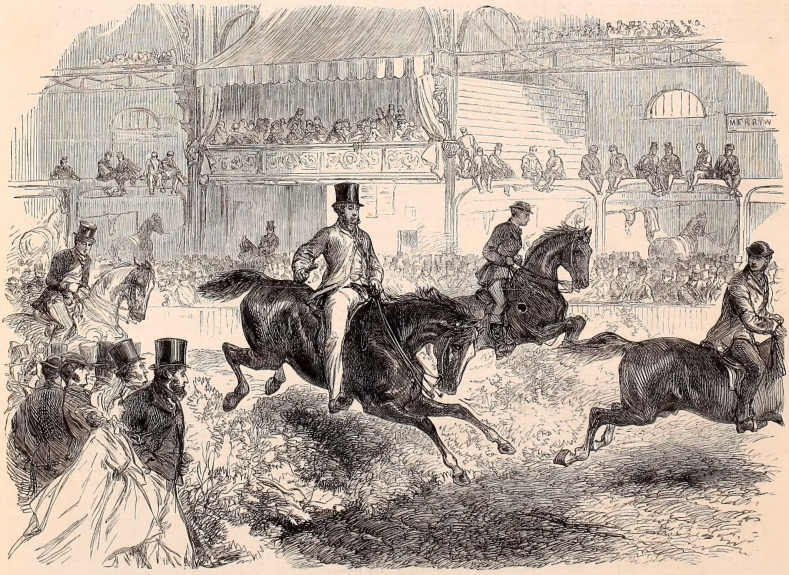
The marriage of Commander the Hon. George Fitzclarence, R.N., to the Lady Maria Henrietta Scott, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Dalkeith, was celebrated on the 13th inst. at St. Paul's, Knightsbridge.

The marriage of Miss Emily Cavendish, third daughter of Mr. Richard Cavendish, to Mr. Noel Mundy, was solemnised on Tuesday at St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge.

FINE ARTS.

MR. HOLMAN HUNT'S NEW PICTURE.

The first impression derived from the announcement that Mr. Holman Hunt was engaged upon a picture of "London Bridge on the Night of the Marriage of the Prince and Princess of Wales" was that of extreme regret that a leader of what has been claimed as the intellectual school should choose a subject which seemed fitted rather for a painter courting the all things, notoriety!—endeavouring himself to the vulgar passion for shows, and trading, without even the excuse of a Royal commission, on the great popularity of the Princess. It seemed difficult to avoid the inference that the artist had been tempted into unfaithfulness to himself under the influence of set-speculation. The remarkable and happy respects as was the "Finding of the Saviour in the Temple"—as an original example of realistic art, and still more so as a modern picture, although it cannot be reasonably doubted that its extraordinary success was due in great part to the fact that it was not exhibited under the usual trying conditions of the Royal Academy. As remarked by Mr. Hamerton in a very able article on the "Reaction from Pre-Raphaelitism," in the last Fine Arts Quarterly, the subject "appealed directly to the London crowd by giving it a picture of itself." It afforded no ground for noble emotion, but was full of the most valuable to a record. That the artist has learnt to avail himself on his own account of the contrivances of the art-speculator is evident in the title exhibited in Hanover-street. The visitor is made to traverse long darkened passages before he is brought to the pictures, and then he views each under effects of partial light, which are meant for the purpose of a panoramic exhibition, but which do not permit a fair comparative estimate of a work of art. But when all is said, the picture is not on the picture of the London Bridge illuminations, the visitor, who may have been chiefly attracted under the expectation of seeing a large and important sensation picture, will be disappointed to find only a small scale of the work.



An inevitable drawback to such a subject is our unfamiliarity with the effects represented. The artist cannot count on intelligent recognition or admiring acquiescence. However truthful, how completely appropriate, how unquestionably evident throughout.

More readily is not to be highly commended for its own sake; yet one cannot, on turning from this picture to the "After-Glow in Egypt," and recollecting many preceding works, but feel surprise at the diversity of subjects painted by Mr. Hunt. The "After-Glow" represents the single figure of a girl of Ghizeh returning from gleaning just after sundown, but while the western sky still glows with reddish light and palpitates with heat. She bears on her head a sheaf of Egyptian wheat, and in her right hand a shaduf, or water-lever. A flock of Barbary pigeons have gathered towards her in search of grain; one fluttering settles on the sheaf, several are about her feet, and others pick up the grain shed in her track. These birds are painted with great force, and the whole picture is very strikingly effective in colour, though some few passages, as in the flesh, are vivid, and wanting in atmospheric quality. Certain technical shortcomings are revealed by this first attempt by Mr. Hunt in the life-size. The chief of these is the absence of unity of impression—that prime essential of art on a grand scale. The eye is rather distracted by the details; it wanders involuntarily from one "bit of colour" to another, from one passage of extreme elaboration to another. Even the head wants unity, the eyes and lips seeming to combine incompletely with the face. Imperfectly disciplined draughtsmanship of the figure is apparent in the incorrect proportions of the lower limbs—a fault conspicuous in a little picture of a Cairene lantern-maker exhibited some years since. Nevertheless, the "After Glow" proves its author to possess an intense and earnest mind, and an essentially artistic temperament. Mr. R. B. Martineau's picture, "The Last Day in the Old Home," which won for its previously unknown author such a reputation when at the International Gallery, is re-exhibited with Mr. Hunt's picture.

A very large picture, by M. Théodore Gudin, representing the disembarkation of the Emperor Napoleon I. at Cannes, on one of the most memorable incidents of the Italian campaign of 1859—has just been added to the exhibition at the French Gallery, Pall-mall, in the picture covers nearly the whole of the south end of the room. It is one of a series of eight commemorative works commissioned of this painter by the Emperor Napoleon III., and the series also included another representing the arrival of Queen Victoria at Cherbourg on her visit to the Emperor in 1858, which was shown alongside it in the English public in the International Gallery of 1862. The whole number are doubtless to be considered as intended to form a naval section of that long series of national pictures, in procuring which every succeeding French Monarch (since Louis XIV. allowed Le Brun to paint the victories of Alexander), from Louis Philippe to himself seems to have sought to outvie his predecessor. The great mass of these pictures—whatever the merits of them as Versailles—do not accurately represent the triumphs of French arms or the empty shows devoted to recording the ceremonies of a magnificent but powerful of state ceremonial. Few, very few, commemorate the powerful of the people over civilisation in the purely glorious incidents which have marked the growth of liberty. From the common faults of works of this class M. Gudin's picture is not wholly exempt. But the

NEW BUILDING OF THE GARRICK CLUB, KING-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN.—SEE PAGE 77.

THE HORSE SHOW AT ISLINGTON: TRYING THE HUNTERS.—SEE PAGE 67.

THE HORSE SHOW IN THE AGRICULTURAL HALL, ISLINGTON.—SEE PAGE 61.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

EVERY Monday last the furious political contest of the previous week had lapsed into history. If the issue had been different it is possible that it would have risen to the dignity of a political event; but as it turned out it will, in the chronicles of our time, scarcely be ranked higher than a faction fight of four days. Such a narrative as is in this place supplied of the incidents of the debate must be taken up at the point where insensible necessity broke it off—at the very critical point of the contest. For three days after the speech of Mr. Gladstone the argument had raged steadily against Ministers, the bitterness of condemnation had deepened only by the concentrated weariness of a promise to vote, when at length Mr. Layard obtained his chance of showing what he could do for the Foreign Office. As he was fighting for his own hand there was every preparation to give him space and verge enough to carry out his intentions. Members left the House, deserted the lobby in every respect; and he availed himself of it to make a speech before him which, shelves of paper, pamphlet-boxes plethoric to bursting with more documents, and stacks of blue-books, in the centre of which stood a tall glass of water—accessories which were received with satisfaction, as it was a probable preventive against the explosion which elsewhere might have been expected. The honourable gentleman had evidently called up some of his Nineveh nerve, and had wound himself up to the pitch at which he used to talk lucy Arabs into doing the work of steam machinery. Much, in the shape of quantity, was imminent, and there was something attractive in the eyes, which showed that the mental mischief, Will, of late most people have had an opportunity of hearing Hamlet's speech of instruction to the players repeated in an accent which was calculated to lead to a lesson of another kind, and, being thus familiar with the proper mode of addressing an audience, they will understand what is meant when it is said that, except that he spoke trippingly enough on the tongue, the orator of the moment reversed all the Prince of Denmark's rules, put no confidence in the very fervent of his rage, and tore passion most mercilessly to tatters; while as to giving his speech shape and fashion, he did not even seem to attempt it. It was undeniably a speech of a sort—a mass of matter, and containing as good a defence of the Government as could be collected from the materials in existence; but dates, and figures, and facts, and quotations, and retorts, and denials, and criticisms on assertions, and appeals to impartiality, and declarations of impartiality but boisterous party of irritability, and taunts, and defiance, and implied petitions for candid if not merciful consideration, and something like an injunctional talk of the manners the debate grew into all so pelted, and hurled, and shovered, and blunted out in one continuous flow that its best positive effect was the impression where the speaker's face created ceased. Nevertheless, again let it be said, it was a speech full of vigour, with much to the purpose in it, and was not without a certain effect on the House—at least on the members around Mr. Gathorne Hardy, when he rose, seemed to have put on more than a usual morning of that mental process which, when the flow of eloquence seems to be driven, headlong and hissing, out of him. Oddly enough, he rose at one end of the Government bench at the same time that Lord John Manners jumped up at the other; but it is not easy to overtake Mr. Hardy in movement or speech—as panting stenographers will know to their cost—and he was accordingly in full rattled away, leaving men's power-of listening almost behind him, until, somehow, Mr. Layard regained his confidence. Mr. Hardy is a gentleman of his mild and unaggressive temperament, and who is so careful and moderate in his phraseology, was particularly shocking. And as he closed up with an appeal to the House to remember that the words should "be taken down." This is one of those mysterious Parliamentary proceedings which amply fearful consequences in wholly undefined and mythical that the prudence of the Speaker is always called into operation to prevent its taking place. Lord Palmerston is not very evident; but with singular infelicity he interposed, playing nobody's game, and placed in the Speaker's decision. With his accustomed sight for a chink in the armour of his opponents, Mr. Disraeli went in to improve the opportunity and to show up the chief of the Ministerial party to a knowledge of his own disadvantages in talk already, and many of whose members were wavering in their resolutions to vote. Of all the persons in the House who spoke in a row, commanded us to Mr. Gladstone; and his intervention now was about as effectual as if any one had thrown oil of vitriol on a scuffle among. Indeed, no one can say how far the intransigent would have gone had not Mr. Osborne rose, in his fine, judicial manner—which is as much a characteristic of the speaker, and as placed in the elevation above human weakness and pettiness—which is so akin to the dignity which we on our own account like to think is our own. Wemala, the son of Wellies, was a representative man—that the Speaker abdicated his functions at once, and, in recommending that the dispute be compromised, insinuated that he had been sufficiently punished by the censure which had been pronounced on them all by the sum of the House in the division list. Then there was a great speech against strong or offensive expressions. After this several little men got the range, and there was nothing in the debate worthy of note, as calculated to stimulate the drowsy Chamber, when he rose at the properly late hour, to do his part for Ministers. As his immediate predecessor was Mr. Peacocke, the last of a long line of Irish Members, Bentinck, with his attack on the independent Irish members, being worthy of attention), there was nothing for it but to make a really passionate reply; and Sir Roundell Palmer, though showing in his first quarter of an hour that he had within him stored for use some dangerous explosive material, yet failed in a fitness to produce an argumentative chiefly, making, as might have been expected, a wonderful case for Ministers. The debate had undoubtedly, to its interest for awhile, and after the Attorney-General had finished there was a rush—not to be hoped for in the case of a speech out of the house—and Lord John Manners was left to shriek out his hexametrical sentences to a very select and decidedly unappreciative audience. One feature of the evening was remarkable enough, and that was the way in which what appeared to others very mild provocation, Mr. Disraeli laughed severe lash. No one could be more cool and collected.

Foreign policy, from an ironico-comic point of view, was on the cards for the opening of the discussion on Friday evening. A Parliamentary Commissioner could not have been more cool as close an imitation of the voice and manner of Mr. Charles Mathews, the player, as possible, to steer clear of the hazard and indeed it was the House than when Lord Palmerston formally opened the Danish question. Little, almost nothing, need be said of the speech of the evening, in which the most and most powerful qualities—and he has many, as well as the least pleasing and satisfactory modes of treating great questions—of the member for Liskeard were displayed. The noble Lord Palmerston laugh in spite of himself, upset the gravity of the Attorney-General, and compelled Mr. Gladstone to laid down his head and compress his lips so firmly that, up to the present time, his countenance has hardly resumed its accustomed calm. It was the speech of the House of course they themselves up to the spirit of the moment and suffered themselves to be fooled to the top of their bent, with a certain consciousness that they were being ridiculed and belittled as a body by a satirical humourist who has on occasion taken time and trouble to make himself master of his subject. Of course such a speech was not suggestive of, coterie talk for members to stay in the house to listen to Mr. Whitestide, who was not prepared to go on with only filling a gap caused by the enforced absence of Sir Bulwer Lytton, who was to have followed; and from that time, on the last night of the debate, the pre-arranged, the unexpected, the fit and the unfit, had chose to speak; in fact, the interest seemed wholly pumped out. It was hoped that Mr. Bright would have given us a big bow flagging discussion; but he had probably inspected the state of affairs outside, and found that it was just a chance whether he could get back from the house in time to make up their minds to wait for the division in pleasanter places, with a reservation in favour of Mr. Disraeli's startling reply which was to come. It has been observed before now that when a debate is dying out, and Parliament folks want the last Ministerial manifesto to be delivered without more ado, Mr. Walpole is put up to bring the discussion to such a culminating point as to justify the Premier in rising. As were, Mr. Walpole was chosen for the operation in his tearful tones; delivers a kind of "moral" on what has been said by his own side, and is so successful in his effort to show universal wish that nothing more will be heard about the matter. He was equal, and more, to this occasion, and did his unconscious duty with a debilitated animation which just served the purpose of the instant. The speech of the Premier was simply business-like and carefully unprovocative, and he studiously left Mr. Disraeli an salient sentence or phrase at the end on which he could found a cutting retort or a brilliant antithesis. Therefore, the leader of the Opposition, in his prefatory remarks, was as nearly sententious as in his opening speech; but presently he showed one of his best qualities, that of being able to make himself felt, for, being aware that the House was against him, he became reckless, and quizzed everybody, pitching out odd incongruous sentences in caustic but witty sometimes in style, that only Lord Clarence Paget was touchy enough to take up as an allusion to his habit of unphysically "hitching up his trousers," which was legitimate enough in the fun of the moment—the trousers are peculiar;—and, in truth, Mr. Disraeli contrived to make the qualifications for the qualifications for keeping a party together, which his usual saturnine demeanour represents supercilious, and which, when he chooses, he can assert of the whole affair, however, was the fact of Mr. Newdegate being obliged to give up the amendment because he would have been supported by only two members, and therefore it was impossible to cram his opponents into one division-lobby. It was, literally, a Parliamentary impossibility, and the House knew it. The division went out of the house for the division. There was intent watching to see which side was cleared out first, a circumstance which would have afforded basis for calculation of the result; but although there were a few adherents of the Government who had not got out when all the opposition members had left the house, it was not a matter of any count could be taken. The next critical point of calculation was the moment when the division-bells ceased to ring. Then Lord Grosvenor knew if the Government were in first, there was for an instant an idea that they were beaten; but the cheers that rang out when the doors opened and to fight their way through the crowd at the bar, which was very dense, and so were belated. But as they appeared some one like an usher of the house—not at all a member of the House—went about the Ministers, and a sudden and boisterous shout broke out, which told that the division was unanimous against them. The result had won. There was a little tantalising delay and shuffling at the table amongst the tellers; but at length the paper was handed to the panel, and then, as was seen being complete, a roar of triumph broke from the Ministerial benches, which, considering the abuse in the course of the debate, and the fact that the division was only the first quarter all through the debate, was a little curious; but it was so universal and sincere that it was plain that the Government were in numbers, which were a surprise, agreeable or disagreeable, according to sentiment, and which as regarded the contest was decisive. The opposition took it in the most unconcerned manner possible, and went quiet and reserved.

All this time there had been going on a cognate tongue-fight in the Lords; and when the Commons had finished their work every one rushed to the lobby and galleries of the "other place," where he found that the debate had absolutely got a hospitality of the Peers present, and that the neutralising process was taking place which was to be the final one. It appeared that the Government made such a head that their defeat was only nominal; that the question was not one of confidence—neither Ministers nor the opposition—and that the Tory Lords could bring against Ministers was by no means easily to be answered when a palpable question to a vote. Of course all that was to be done on this occasion. Probably Ministers were not the only persons who were glad that the "great debate" was over.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

[The following abstract of the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 8th inst., appeared in our Town Edition last week.]

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, JULY 8.

THE VOTE OF CENSURE.

The EARL of MALMESBURY called attention to the Conference. "That it is the opinion of this House that, while the course pursued by her Majesty's Government in the late negotiations has been strictly in accordance with the integrity and independence of Denmark, it has lowered the just confidence of this country in the sincerity of the Government and impaired the securities for peace." In introducing the question, he regretted the absence, from ill-health, of Earl Russell, for he (Lord Malmesbury) felt that's absence was naturally greater, as he had to represent him personally, and to move a vote of censure upon his colleague. He could fully appreciate Russell's remark made by Mr. Layard in the other house, asserting that Earl Russell was only responsible for the policy of the Government in office, and he (Lord Malmesbury) could, if in existence, of the alleged fact should be produced, referring to the despatches that had been written by him on the subject of policy, it was impossible for them to define what they would do when it was impossible to say what circumstances they might be in when the question might be put to the Government. What would they do if they were in Opposition? Why, they would have condemned the Government for not going with the Conservatives out as soon as possible. He did not say that it would have been wise for them to do so, but they would have accused them at a moment when, if the Government had taken a strong tone, and made a strong representation, it might have prevented the present war. He was not alone. He had heard such an opinion expressed by Germans, and by others with competent knowledge of the subject, that the Government had contributed to prove to their Lordships that such was the case. He proposed to show that the Government had, from the beginning of this unfortunate question, misjudged in Schleswig and Holstein were totally and distinctly marked off from inter-national questions. He maintained that the Germans had no right to interfere in nothing to do. It was only with the international question that interference. The Government had, by their conduct, encouraged the Danes to keep a war, and to refuse the concessions which they were prepared to make. Although the question the noble Lord, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had been in office, in the convocation which took place between him and the Prussian Ambassador, Earl Russell gave up the principle which he had laid down before, and at that time they had not made up their minds as to whether they would support Denmark or not. He maintained that upon the principle which he had laid down in Schleswig and Holstein were totally and distinctly marked off from inter-national questions. He maintained that Germans had no right to interfere in nothing to do. It was only with the international question that interference. The Government had, by their conduct, encouraged the Danes to keep a war, and to refuse the concessions which they were prepared to make. Although the question the noble Lord, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had been in office, in the convocation which took place between him and the Prussian Ambassador, Earl Russell gave up the principle which he had laid down before, and at that time they had not made up their minds as to whether they would support Denmark or not. He maintained that upon the principle which he had laid down in the instance of the colonial wars were a Constitution for itself in connection with the Imperial Parliament, and that the Government the House to reject the motion, and if they did not, it would not be in accordance with the feelings of the country.

MR. DISRAELI, in reply, denied that there had been any misquoting of documents during the debate. He then taunted the Government with falling back upon Mr. Kinglake's amendment, when it was admitted on all hands that the question was simply a vote of censure on the Government. He submitted that the Government had applied to France and Russia for co-operation; but what he complained of was that they had forfeited their influence to induce them to do so.

The SPEAKER said that great inconvenience would arise from the division, as the lobby for the "Ayes" would not hold all the members, and he therefore suggested that the amendment should be withdrawn to a division.

MR. NEWDEGATE eventually withdrew his amendment, when

MR. KINGLAKE moved his amendment, and, upon a division taking place, the numbers were—

For the original motion	..	285
Against it	..	313
Majority for the Government ..	..	—28

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The India Office Bill and the Thames Conservancy Bill were read a second time.

The Life Assurities and Life Assurance Bill and the Lunacy (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee.

The Summary Procedure (Scotland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

THE TRIAL BENEFICE.—Lord DERBY, who had given notice of a motion for an address to her Majesty praying for a commission to consider what steps should be taken to obviate the evil arising from the present compulsory and indiscriminate use of the burial service of the Church of England, said, as he understood the Lord Bishop of LONDON was averse to the issuing of a commission, it was unnecessary for him to press his motion on the subject.—The ARCHBISHOP of CANTERBURY said, although he could not agree to the changes proposed by the noble and learned Lord, he did entertain the opinion that a commission for the purpose of considering the expediency of altering the daily lessons.—The Bishop of LONDON observed that a large proportion of the clergy were satisfied with the present state of things, and he thought the best course to pursue would be to leave the matter in the hands of the Government.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he would consult the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Derby, but at present could not give any pledge on the subject.—After some further discussion the motion was withdrawn.

THE PUBLIC AND REFRESHMENT HOUSES BILL.—On the report of this bill, Lord DONOUGHMORE moved amendments to the clause giving control of these houses to municipal bodies. These amendments were negatived by 47 votes to 34.—The Earl of DONOUGHMORE moved that clause 9 be struck out of the bill, the effect of which Clause would be to enact "that this clause be omitted," when the numbers were equal—31 and 31. The Lord CHANCELLOR declared the House was with the not-contents, so that the clause was retained.—The Earl of DONOUGHMORE then proposed to add a clause to the following effect:—"It should have been" that this clause stand part of the bill." If it had been put in that way the vote of the Lord Chancellor would have affected the clause.—Lord CHELMSFORD agreed in this view, but said it was too late to remedy the error.—The report was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

LEAVE was given to bring in the Sheriff in Chancery (Scotland) Salary Bill, "The Indian Islands States Acts of Parliament Bill, and the Expiring Law Continuance Bill, the Military Pay Bill, the Turnpike Trusts Arrangement Bill, the Election Petitions Act Bill, the Criminal Law and Criminal Justice Act (1855) Extension Bill, the Militia Ballots Suspension Bill, the Bleaching and Dyeing Works Acts Extension Bill (the last after a long discussion) were severally read a second time.

The Court of Man Harbours Act Amendment Bill, the Private and Consolidating Stores Bill, the Sheriffs Substitutes (Scotland) Bill, the Thames Embankment and Metropolis Improvements (Loans) Bill, and the Dyeing Works Prohibition Bill passed through Committee.

The Turnpike Trusts (Stamp Duties) Bill, the Public Schools Bill, and the Administration of Trusts (Scotland) Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Court of Chancery (Ireland) Bill was withdrawn.

Lord Proby brought up the reply of her Majesty to the address in reference to Denmark. It expressed satisfaction at the steps taken by the Government and at the policy of the Government.

SIR E. V. BEAD.—Sir W. JOLIFFE called attention to the memorial of Sir T. B. Read complaining that his claims for a pension in respect of his services connected with the Great Exhibition of 1851 had been overlooked by the ex-logical Sir F. B. Head.—Mr. CARDWELL concurred in the eulogy of Sir F. B. Head, but recommended the matter should be left over until next year, the bill in respect to pensions for governors of colonies was introduced.—After a brief discussion, the matter dropped.

SUPPLY.—The House went into Committee of Supply, and Sir R. PEEL moved the vote of £216,500 for national education in Ireland, a long discussion followed. Eventually the vote was agreed to, as were several other votes.—Mr. FAWCETT moved the vote of £46,327 for the Civil Service Commission, and made a short statement in reference to that institution. After some discussion the vote was agreed to.—The Chairman was then ordered to report progress.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Street Music (Metropolis) Bill, the Indemnity Bill, the Defence Act Amendment Bill, the Jedgeburgh, &c., Law Amendment Bill, the Cannock Chase and Wolverhampton Railway Bill, the Lunacy (Scotland) Bill, and the Public Schools Act Amendment Bill were read a second time.

The India Office Bill passed through Committee.

The Facilities for Divine Worship in Contiguous Schools Bill, the Life Assurities and Life Assurance Bill, and the Lunacy (Scotland) Bill, were read a third time and passed.

The amendments to the Civil Bill Court (Ireland) Bill were reported and agreed to.

Earl Russell, in answer to the Earl of Malmesbury, said he had received information from Berlin that the alleged murder of 400 Swedish volunteers in the Danish service, on the capture of Alsen, was entirely false. There were absent seventy Swedes in the service of Denmark, and the Danish minister, a few of whom were Swedes, and were treated in exactly the same manner as the Danes who were taken.

The Earl of Ravensworth, who had a motion on the paper with a recognition of the services of Sir Francis Head in Canada, withdrew it, after the Earl of Ellesmere, Lord Lyveden, the Bishop of Chichester, and Lord Berwick had taken the opportunity of bearing testimony to the value of those services.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

The House had a morning sitting, at which the Highways Act Amendment Bill passed through Committee.

BRAZIL AND THE SLAVE TRADE.

Lord PALMERSTON, in answer to Mr. Sandercock, stated that the obligations entered into by the Brazilian Government with regard to the suppression of the slave trade had not been fulfilled, and that in all cases the slaves were kept in a state of prejudice, as it was absolutely necessary that they should be in number, which bandied him about between a number of officials, before he could obtain his letter of emancipation, after which a piece of residence, in which he was under the surveillance of the police, was assigned to him. Her Majesty's Government had done all they could to suppress the slave trade but certain persons practically abetted in Brazil.

MR. BRIGHT took the opportunity of protesting against the Alien Act passed by Lord Aberdeen on the subject of liberated negroes as an international affront, and which should immediately be repealed. The country of Lincoln and Seward could not be treated with contempt.

SIR J. PAKINGTON took occasion to refer to the fearful destruction of our troops and inhabitants on the coast of Africa, and urged that it was a subject which demanded immediate consideration. The state of the Brazilian Government on that coast was most imperfect, as no vessel belonging to it could go more than eight leagues an hour, which was wholly inefficient to prevent the running of the intolerable by slave ships.

Lord PALMERSTON said the statement which he had delivered was made in answer to a question put to him, and he was not responsible for bringing it forward. He contended that the Alien Act was not in violation of any international law, and was identical with one which had been passed with regard to Portugal, and was introduced to compel the Brazilian Government to do what had been carried out by Brazil for the suppression of the slave trade. If the Act were repealed that fact would be conclusive.

Lord E. MAYNERS spoke in a similar sense to Mr. Bright.

SIR J. HAY referred to the Indemnity Act of the session on the coast of Africa.

LORD CLAUD HAMILTON contended that the statements which had been made on the point were much exaggerated.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Lords amendments to the Valuation of Railway Property (Ireland) Bill were considered and agreed to.

The Criminal Justice Act (1855) Extension Bill was committed pro forma.

The Expiring Laws Continuance Bill and Militia Ballots Suspension Bill passed through Committee.

The Ecclesiastical Courts and Registration (Ireland) Bill and the Trespass (Ireland) Bill were read a third time and passed.

In a Committee of the whole House a resolution was proposed granting the sum of £126,000 for fortifications and works; but, on a discussion arising, the matter was postponed until Thursday.

The House, on open votes agreed to in Committee of Supply were brought up and agreed to.

BILLS WITHDRAWN.—The Election Petitions Act (1848) Amendment Bill, the Poor-law Guardians' Election Bill, the Insolvent Debtors' Bill, the Petty Sessions Clerks' Superannuation Bill, the County Voters' Registration Bill, and the Jersey Court Bill were withdrawn. With respect to the last-named measure, Mr. T. G. Baring pointed out that the matter would receive the attention of the Government during the recess.

NEW BILLS.—Sir H. Cairns obtained leave to introduce a bill for adjustment of charges on the revenues of the archbishopric of Armagh; Mr. Dodson, a bill to confirm certain proceedings of the justices of the county of Sussex; Mr. Cowper, a bill for the better regulation of the traffic on Westminster Bridge and for the prevention of obstructions thereon; Mr. Peel, a bill to confirm a provisional order under the Drainage and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Act (1863); Mr. Peel, a bill for impressing by machinery signatures of parties to petitions to both Houses and certain bills; and Mr. Villiers, a bill to extend the powers of the Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Act. The bills were introduced, and read respectively a first time.

POISONED GRAIN PROHIBITION BILL.—Mr. BERKELEY moved that the House go into Committee on this bill.—Mr. HOWES opposed such a course, in rejection of the measure.—After a brief discussion, the motion for going into Committee was negatived by a majority of 107 votes to 74.—The bill was then withdrawn.

UNIFORMITY ACT AMENDMENT BILL.—Mr. BOUVERIE moved the second reading of this bill, which was to the effect that the requirements and subscriptions of the Church and fellows and tutors of colleges should make declarations conformity conformable to the Act of Uniformity, and not operate to the exclusion of those against whom they were specially aimed, but kept out men who were not willing to do the things required. There was, he said, a general feeling among the fellows of the Universities in favour of the bill.—Mr. WALPOLE moved that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

UNIVERSITY TESTS.—At present Dissenters could come to the University of London, and there was no reason why they should not be able to take any degree.—Mr. WALCOTE thought this should be set aside for their benefit.—Mr. HUSSEY also opposed the bill, on the ground that it would be a step towards secularising the universities.—Mr. WHALLEY supported the bill, which was opposed by Mr. NEATE.—On a division the bill was rejected by 127 votes to 49.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Duke of Cambridge, on Wednesday, presented the 5th Fusilier Guards with new colours, in the presence of a large staff and the presence of a numerous assemblage.

The annual meeting of the present council of the Society of Arts since their election, Mr. William Hawes, vice-president, was unanimously re-elected chairman of the council.

The beautiful new steam-boat pier which has been placed at Westminster Bridge was opened on Wednesday, in place of the rickety structure which has been removed to make room for the new one.

On Monday the annual fête of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was held at the Crystal Palace, and that of the Ancient Order of Foresters at Alexandra Park, Wood Green.

The members of the Garrick Club, on Monday, vacated the building in Garrick-street, Covent-garden, which they have occupied, and took possession of the handsome structure erected for them in New Kingstreet, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

The Queen has addressed a communication to the directors of the Royal Horticultural Society, expressing the pleasure she derived from her recent visit to the gardens at South Kensington, and the gratification she experienced calculated to carry out the objects for which they were designed by the late Prince Consort. The Queen has contributed £100 towards the fund of the Highmen, the 5th of August, is henceforth to be observed as a holiday at the gardens, and the band of the Grenadier Guards is ordered to attend.

Last week the births of 1876 children—967 boys and 909 girls—were registered in London. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years 1854-63 is 1,746, and the number last week in eighty-one cases. Seventy-nine deaths from measles were registered.

MR. "TOM BROWN."—Mr. Hughes (a "Tom Brown") has declined to become a candidate for Lincoln at the next election. He has received numerous solicitations to stand, but he says, "I have given up the idea of standing; upon a broad principle I object to the expensiveness and the corruption of elections. I claim no right to spend such a sum for such a purpose; but were I a rich man, to me it would be a matter of conscience not to contribute to the support of public grounds before giving in to a system which I believe to be injurious to the country."

On Tuesday some satisfactory harbour trials were made in the Regent's Canal Dock, Limehouse, by the crew of the Hibernia, under the superintendence of the officers of the National Life-boat Institution, and Mr. Peake, the coxswain of the Harwich life-boat, the gift of the Duke of Leeds to New Brighton, and is the gift to the National Life-boat Institution of Joseph Lambert, Esq., of Liverpool. The Hibernia is a self-righting boat, after its two sons. The other life-boat is to be stationed at Seaton Cove, and a fund now exists for the purpose. The trials were also superintended by Mrs. Mary Anne Davis, of Bideford. The boat is called, as her request, the Mary Davis.

The Arts Club held its first conversazione on Thursday week, when a large collection of oil and water colour paintings, portfolios of sketches, inlaid cabinets, enamels, ivories, and other objects of interest were exhibited. Photographs and jewels were exhibited. Most of the pictures exhibited were from the collection of Mr. Gambart, and comprised many of the most celebrated works as popular as they are novel features in club life. Mr. Leighton's "Italian Reconciliation," Mr. Frith's "Claude Duval," Mr. Tenniel's "Dropping the Curtain," by Mr. Val Prinsep; some valuable architectural studies by Mr. T. Prichard Cockerell, have been also carefully removed to the club-house. Mr. J. D. Cockerell; and several pictures by Mr. F. W. Burton and Mr. Carl Haag were also exhibited. A ball will take place on the 29th, and further conversaziones will take place on Aug. 6.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Captain Percival, visited the Clothworkers' Hall, Mincing-lane, on Monday, for the purpose of receiving the freedom of the company, and the presentation of the Prince's feathers in a very valuable vessel. The Prince and Princess were attended by General Knollys, Colonel Keppel, and Lord Suffield, and were received by the master, who, in honour, consisting of about one hundred men of the Hon. Artillery Company, the band playing "God save the Queen" and "Le Marseillaise." The Prince, to which were kept by a body of the City police, under the command of Superintendent Pearce. The company afterwards sat down to a banquet, presided over by Mr. F. W. Burton and Mr. Carl Haag were also present.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Captain Percival, visited the Clothworkers' Hall, Mincing-lane, on Monday, for the purpose of receiving the freedom of the company, and the presentation of the Prince's feathers in a very valuable vessel. The Prince and Princess were attended by General Knollys, Colonel Keppel, and Lord Suffield, and were received by the master, who, in honour, consisting of about one hundred men of the Hon. Artillery Company, the band playing "God save the Queen" and "Le Marseillaise." The Prince, to which were kept by a body of the City police, under the command of Superintendent Pearce. The company afterwards sat down to a banquet, presided over by Mr. F. W. Burton and Mr. Carl Haag were also present. The following toasts were drunk:—"The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales," "The Army and Navy," "The Volunteer Force," "The Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and City of London," "The Master and Wardens of the Clothworkers' Company," "The Visitors," "The Ladies." The health of the company was proposed to the Prince, with all the appropriate ceremonies attending it. The company afterwards adjourned to the gardens of Mr. Gambart and wardens.

The Local Humane Society held its half-yearly general court on Wednesday—Mr. B. B. Cabbell in the chair. The receipts for the half year had amounted to £1,200, and the payments to £1,100. The principal case described in which the society's medal had been awarded for humane and praiseworthy conduct was that of Mr. Thomas Bright, of the Hibernia Steamship, a boy, saved Joseph Bowen, a boy, who accidentally fell overboard at the Nore, on the 1st of June. Le Marchant Tupper, R.M.A., second Henry Tupper, R.M.A., sons of Lieutenant-Colonel D. D. Tupper, 11th Regiment, Portsmouth, May 16, 1864; Lieutenant-Colonel D. D. Tupper, 11th Light Infantry, married, on the 5th inst., at Bath, Miss Lucy Ann Bell, of Bath, while toiling at Dover, June 6, 1864.

A melancholy accident had Saturday in a carriage on the North London Railway. Mr. Thomas Briggs, chief clerk in the bank of Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co., Lombard-street, left the Peckham-street station, by the 9.45 p.m. train for Hackney, where he resided. At the end of the train is a first-class carriage—not found to be covered with the usual cushions—and in this Mr. Briggs was placed by a walking guard. The door was kept, both belonging to Mr. Briggs; and a hat, bearing the maker's name, which the murderer or one of the murderers had left behind. Shortly afterwards the locomotive and almost lifeless body of Mr. Briggs was found lying between the lines by the driver and stoker of an engine which was returning from the Hackney-wick station to Bow, and it was removed to an adjacent tavern. The head seemed to have been battered in by some sharp instrument; the clothes were covered with blood; and the broken link or hook of a watch-chain hung to a buttonhole of the waistcoat, the rest of the chain and the watch being missing. The wounded gentleman was quite insensible. Mr. Briggs, it is stated, had received £1,000 in notes that day, was found a deep wound; the skull was fractured and the bone driven in. On the person there were no papers or memoranda of any kind, and were moneys on other parts of the head. Stimulants were applied with a view of restoring consciousness, but to no purpose, and Mr. Briggs, having been removed to his house, died on Sunday night. The money which Mr. It appears that the crime was committed between Bow and Hackney-wick. The distance between these stations is traversed in about five minutes, so that in carriage. The next compartment was occupied by some ladies, but they did not hear any cries, although on the arrival of the train at Hackney blood had been spurted through the carriage window on to their dresses as the train came from Bow. The chain belonging to Mr. Briggs's watch was found exchanged at a public-house in the City for another, by a man who is thus described:—"Age thirty; height, 5 ft. 6 or 7 in.; complexion sallow; has been seen wearing a fur-cap; dressed in dark clothes; speaks good English; dress, black frock coat and vest, dark trousers, and black hat." A reward of £100 is now offered for the apprehension of the murderer or murderers, with a further reward of £50 on conviction. In addition to this, Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co. have offered a reward of £500 for the apprehension of the murderer or murderers.

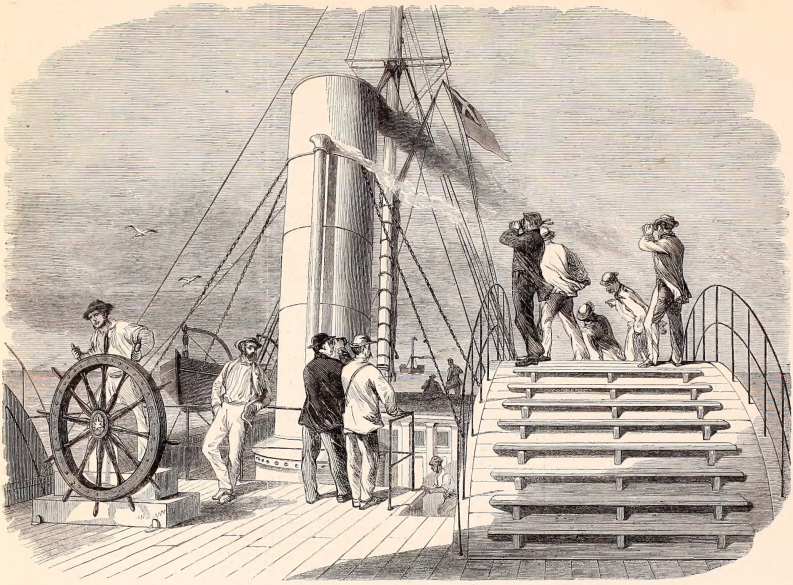
LAW AND POLICE.—The will of Mr. Almond was disputed on Tuesday in the Prerogative Court. Mr. Almond was the father of Miss Romer, the well-known singer, and he had left her the whole of his property for her life; afterwards she was to be at the disposal of Almond, one third to one of his brothers, and the remaining third in an intimate friend who had materially assisted him in his business. The will was objected to by one of his brothers, and they set up a plea of incapacity; but it was proved that there was no foundation for this, and the opposition withdrawn.—Probate granted.

A hard case—that of "Salt v. Salt"—came before the Probate Court on Thursday week. The plaintiff sought to establish the will of her husband, Mr. Salt, late a partner in the firm of Salt, Stevenson, and Salt, of Lombard-street, London. By the marriage settlement, £5,000, and more afterwards, had made his will, leaving her an annuity of £600 and constituting her his residuary legatee. Before his death, however, he had purchased a great deal of land, so that his personal estate was greatly reduced in amount. On Sunday, the 6th of last December, 1863, he went with his wife to church, for the purpose of attending early communion. During the service he fell in a swoon. He was taken out, and shortly afterwards removed home in his own house, where he was placed in bed. At soon as he had come to himself, he called for pen, ink, and paper, and, with a trembling hand, he wrote, with great difficulty, the words, "All my property to my wife," and signed the paper. He stated that the will was executed precisely as he had signed it; but both the plaintiff and they were so intent on applying restoratives to him that they did not see him write the words. The witness, who were the next of kin, resisted probate on the ground that the attestation had not been duly made. Before the case was concluded, on motion of Dr. Spinks, Sir J. Pakington said that after the rare disinterestedness which had been shown by Mr. Salt's wife, he could not but think that the testator had that confidence in her. The holding of a man's testament was a solemn act, and required that certain forms should be observed. It could not be said that these forms had been observed in the presence of the testator, if he was dead; and he (Sir J. Wilde) was afraid, therefore, that he must pronounce for the will, but not against the will, the estate of a man having passed accordingly, the Court pronounced a decree pronouncing for the will, and against the validity of the codicil.

A LARGE compensation case was heard at Guildhall on Thursday week. Mr. Bevington, of Wyvanus v. the Metropolitan Board of Works, which had occupied the Sheriff's Court for several days, was brought before the jury in consideration on Monday. The claimant is a brewer and mechanical engineer, who has premises on the north side of Commercial-road, Stepney, and which were valued at £40,000, but it was reduced to £30,000. The main question to be decided was whether Mr. Wyvanus was entitled to compensation for the loss of the river frontage of the Thames, and to be necessary to carry on his works, which were also said to be the extent of £10,000. The jury found for the claimant, and awarded him £10,000. He had taken new premises at Battersea, for which he had paid £7000. The Board of Works had also taken away his access to the road-way and taken away the watercourse. Numerous witnesses were called on both sides, and the proceedings occupied the whole of the day's sitting. Mr. Charles Pollock, the assessor, summed up the evidence and explain d the law on the subject, after which the jury retired, and returned in about half an hour, with a verdict for £14,000.

THE COURT.—The Queen's Bench were called upon last week, in an action, "Cooper v. Jobbing and Another," to decide as to the appropriation of a silver cup and the sum of £50 to be played for at the Newcastle races, and also known as a Tyne regatta. The defendants were the stewards of the race. Several rowing gentlemen were called to prove their testimony as to the cup being their property, and in order to get to it he had, in common with all passengers, to cross over by a wire rope from the steamer to the pier, and then to ascend from the station at the rate of forty or fifty miles an hour, and struck the counsel's statement, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for £50.

A train of thieves have been pilfering the public baths in south-western London. They take to the water in the swimming bath; one then undresses and performs various feats in the water, thus engaging the attention of the other bathers, whilst some of his companions enter the dressing-room in possession of any watches, money, or other valuables he can find in the dressing-boxes, passing them out to the water-gymnast, who secretes them. In this manner eight watches have been stolen from the Lambeth bath, seven from the Victoria Baths, and two from the Hampstead Baths. The last robbery at the Lambeth bath on Monday week, and were on Tuesday committed for trial.



THE CHARGE OF MURDER.—The boy Lewis Thomas, a well-behaved, intelligent-looking lad, aged twenty-three, a waiter at the Lion Tavern, in the New Cattle Market, Islington, was charged with the wilful murder of Thomas Lewis Foy, a fellow-servant in the same establishment, through jealousy. Sentence of death was passed.

SHOVEL-RACE AT KING'S LYNN REGATTA.

THE King's Lynn Royal Regatta for rowing-boats took place this year, as usual, on the fine, beautiful sheet of water known as the Fen Reservoir. Amongst the races, two were peculiar to this district. One was for gun-boats, which are small, low canoes, used for fen-shooting, and are paddled by a man standing erect in the boat. The other race was for ship's boats, each paddled by six men, with corn-shovels, or scoops, for oars. The winning boat was won on each seat, and use the shovels in the same way that savages paddle their canoes. Each boat was manned by seamen; and it was a very amusing sight to see the great, burly corn-porters driving the boats through the water in the most energetic manner. The first prize, £2 10s., was won by Mr. Fisher's boat, the Thunderer; and £1 10s., third, by Fox's boat, started for the race. We give an illustration showing the boats soon after the start.

OPENING OF THE COLONIAL PARLIAMENT AT GRAHAMSTOWN, CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

THE eastern and western provinces of the Cape colony were long disputing about the place of meeting for the first colonial parliament. It is a capital at Grahamstown, 600 or 700 miles from Capetown, revelled against the commission. The present governor, Sir Philip Wodehouse, has, however, succeeded at length in persuading the two divisions of the colony to accept a choice that has some natural accommodation for holding the Parliament in both cities alternately. It was on the 28th of April that he opened the first session of the new Session at Grahamstown. By meeting of the House of Assembly took place in the Town College, a handsome and commodious building, which is named after the late Bishop Shaw, an extensive benefactor to missionary, by whose efforts the grammar-school, or "college," was established. The governor's procession to the House of Assembly, with the arrival of Sir Philip Wodehouse to open the Colonial Parliament. Upon the day mentioned, about noon, his Excellency left Government House, accompanied by Lady Wodehouse, and proceeded to Shaw College in an open carriage drawn by a pair of splendid grey horses. The Governor was surrounded by a brilliant Staff, including, amongst others, Colonel Bissett, Sir Walter Currie, the Colonial Aide-de-Camp, and the members of the Executive Government, and was escorted by a detachment of the Cape Mounted Rifles. He was received, on his arrival at Shaw College, by a guard of honour furnished by the 98th Regiment and about forty men of the Frontier Armed Mounted Police. The band of the Cape Mounted Rifles also was in attendance. Before the Governor left the carriage he was at once welcomed the Governor and gave notice of his approach.

"OUR SPECIAL ARTIST," ON BOARD THE LILIAN, RUNNING THE BLOCKADE INTO WILMINGTON HARBOUR, NORTH CAROLINA.—SEE PAGE 70.

This is the scene represented by our Engraving. Within the building a large hall up stairs was prepared for the House of Assembly. The galleries were crowded with spectators, of whom a large proportion were ladies. The Speaker, Sir Christoffel Brand, in his wig and gown; the Sergeant-at-Arms, Major Longmore, in his Court dress, carrying the mace; the Clerk of the House, Mr. Le Sueur, wearing a gown but not a wig, led in the procession of honourable members. The President and members of the Upper House (Legislative Council) then entered and took their places on the right of the Governor's seat, with their Usher of the Black Rod in attendance. A few minutes later Sir Philip Wodehouse, clad in the Windsor uniform, and wearing the Collar and Cross of the Bath, entered the hall, bowed to the assembled Ieges and to both Houses of Parliament, and took his seat in the chair of state provided for him. The members of the Executive and of the Governor's Staff formed a brilliant group. The Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, and the Hon. Mr. Southey, with Colonel Bisset and half a dozen other gentlemen, were on the Governor's right; the Colonial Aide-de-Camp, the Auditor-General, Sir Walter Currie, in a uniform of blue and silver, and others, on his left. His Excellency having taken his seat, a manuscript was handed to him by the Colonial Secretary; his Excellency then read the speech, and Parliament was formally opened. In this manner the ceremonial of Westminster is copied by an English legislative assembly in a city of South Africa, subject to the reign of our Queen.

KING'S LYNN REGATTA: SHOOT-RACE OF CORN-PORTERS.—SEE PARTICULARS PAGE

RUINS OF THE CHAPEL ROYAL IN THE SAVOY.—SEE PAGE 70.

OPENING OF THE CAPE COLONIAL PARLIAMENT AT GRAHAMSTOWN, EASTERN DISTRICT.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The state apartments of Windsor Castle are open to the public.

Sir Michael Hicks Beach, a Conservative, was returned on Tuesday, without opposition, member of Parliament for East Gloucestershire, in place of the late Sir William Codrington.

At the Kingstown regatta the first prize of one hundred sovereigns was won on Monday morning by the Galatea, Mr. H. Sanderson, owner. The pig-race between the Dublin University and Cork Rowing Club was won by the latter.

The Corporation of the borough of Guildford have resolved, with only one dissentient, to adopt the Local Government Act. One of the first measures to be adopted under it will be the purchase and improvement of the waterworks, at present vested in a private company.

The official report of the Metropolitan Interments gives the following returns:—28 persons were killed, 138 being men; thirty-seven mills and factories were partly or wholly stopped during the week—one woollen mill, twenty-eight workshops, 413 dwelling-houses, twenty-four breweries and public-houses, 1,000 laundry bridges, seventy-four investigations, and as otherwise described, and 4478 yards of fence-walling. Besides these, in nineteen cases of accidental injury were burned, including fifty-nine dwellings.

MIDDLE-CLASS EDUCATION.—An important step was taken on Tuesday in the work of middle-class education in the laying, by Earl Granville, of the foundation-stone of the new college at Ardingly, near Worth, in Sussex, in which it is proposed to provide accommodation for the education on collegiate principles of 1000 pupils of the lower middle and upper lower classes. The Ardingly establishment is an offshoot of St. Nicolas College, Lancing, which was founded to meet the special wants of improving middle-class education. At the head establishment at Lancing a grammar school for the sons of gentlemen has been in operation since 1848, besides which the society has a college at Hurstpierpoint, in Sussex, for training middle schoolmasters; a sparkling school in the same building for the upper class of tradesmen, farmers, clerks, &c., at a payment varying, according to circumstances, from £20 to £40 a year; and a cheaper boarding-school at Shoreham, also for lower middle schools for the sons of small shopkeepers, mechanics, and others of the working classes, at a payment of £10 a year. The pupils in the latter school are, for the most part, received free in a house hired by the parents, who pay £1 a year rent. In fact, the plan on which the society is working in the middle schools is that a number of boys in this lower middle school is 230, which cannot be extended in consequence of the limited amount of dormitory accommodation. Mr. Woodward, the provost of the college, to whom exertions the great success which has hitherto attended the establishments of St. Nicolas College is mainly due, has devoted his energies to the removal of this difficulty, and, backed by him, the two national institutions of Lancing and Ardingly have bestirred themselves in furthering a scheme for erecting a noble school or college for the use of the middle classes, which is to rank in our collegiate and in the provision made by the State for the support of the national schools, practically exclude from those educational establishments. The lower middle schools at Ardingly are intended when complete to accommodate 1000 boys, besides masters, chaplain, and other necessary persons; but at present it is proposed to erect one wing of the building only, sufficient to accommodate 200 boys.

According to the Victoria Weekly Chronicle, fourteen men were murdered in April last in Rio Janeiro, the British Consul, by the Chilenian Indians.

On Monday an official document was printed showing that in the year ending the 31st of March the amount of "conscience money" paid to the Government was £1060 18s. 3d.

The steamer Wonder, which arrived at Southampton, on Thursday from the Channel Islands, reports that the Federal steamer Kearsarge entered the Cherbourg roads on Thursday morning, and anchored in Westwaday, in which the Kearsarge was disabled and put into Gorey. The Florida was kept out of dry dock, waiting to receive the engagement.

The mail from the West Coast of Africa brings news that John Gerard, the Gordon Cumming of France, is in great health and force, and prior to going to Abeokuta at Bonny, on his mission now commenced, of course, with space, is to trade the source of the Niger, according to his promise to the Liverpool merchants, to Timbuctoo. He is capable of anything in the line.

Intelligence has been received from Tunis to the 4th. The body of 3000 men sent by the Bey against the insurgents had arrived, greatly disheartened, at Feryanna, whence they will march to Kairwan. The General of those troops, Ismail Bunni, was considered to have manifested great weakness in the affair, and consequently to set a bad example to the rest. The result of that proceeding was not known when the accounts left.

A supplement to Tuesday's London Gazette contains a memorandum from the Admiralty, by which the number of captains in the Navy is to be reduced from 350 to 300; of commanders, from 450 to 400; and of lieutenants, from 1200 to 1000. No more promotions to commander are to be made, and the advantages to be secured on retirement, are detailed in the memorandum.

A letter from Calais states that the Confederate vessel the Georgia remains in that port, having been the subject of a judgment given against her by the Chamber of Commerce of Boulogne for commercial debts of the captain. It appears that when the hammer charged to offer the cargo of sale made his appearance on board the vessel the captain warned him off without delay as no such errand could be executed there. The hammer had nothing else to do but retire and draw up a procès-verbal.

"A COMET FOR 1863."—(To the Editor.)—Your Issue of the 26th of December contains a letter dated Melbourne, 1st of March, from Melbourne gives the following pleasant alternative." Although therein my name is mentioned, there can be no doubt that I am the person alluded to as having predicted the appearance of a comet for 1863, and I feel therefore called upon to disclaim any connection with the sensational prediction contained in the letter. I have never said or written anything about the appearance of a comet in 1863 or at any other time.—GEORGE MATHEWS, Montpelier-parade, South Yarra, Melbourne. May 23, 1864.

On Saturday Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Woods disposed of a large number of water-colour drawings and pictures from different private collections for a large sum in all. Among the more important were "A View off Dover," by Turner, for 625 guineas; "Buross-terrace, on the Thames," also by Turner, for 1050 guineas; two early pictures by Stanfield, viz.: "The Country Waggon—Snowdon—Early Morning," and "The Helvoetsluis, Entering the Harbour," for 262 guineas; four drawings by Mr. Hunt, 209 guineas; three exquisite works of Birkett Foster, for 724 guineas; "Interior of a Studio," by Gilbert, for 185 guineas; and a "Coast Scene," by Collins, for 255 guineas.

The fourth parochial flower show of the parish of St. George, Hanover-sq., with a distribution of prizes for class and fifty rounds, took place on Wednesday, in Russell-square, the garden of which was granted by the inhabitants for the occasion. The growth of the flower-show movement in the parish has been very rapid. In the first year 149 plants were registered for exhibition, in the second year there were 300 plants, and in the third year 547 plants were shown by 274 exhibitors; while this year 600 persons had entered their names, and nearly 900 plants were exhibited. Liberal prizes for clean and tidy rooms were offered for the first time, by way of experiment, and formed a section of the exhibition which excited much interest and competition. This year the prizes extended to the whole parish, and 304 competed for them. Many of the parish parishioners were present at the exhibition, and, in the course of some remarks made by the Rev. Emilius Bayley, B.D., the Rector of the parish, who presided, he observed that the movement was much moral benefit, while the prizes for clean rooms had led to more important results in some instances. The show—a show of flowering plants only—held yesterday week in the Ragged School, Pitsroy Market, Tottenham-court-road. Most of the exhibitors were compounded of the class, in small rooms, which were very young children. There was a creditable display of geraniums, fuchsias, and calceolarias flowering in pots; the merits of the specimens of scarcely being judged by Mr. Salter, of Ampthill-square. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Bayley, of Bedford-square.

ENGLISH COINS.—At the recent sale of Captain Murchison's cabinet of English coins, from the Conquest to Queen Victoria, high prices realised were unusually high. We have only space to particularise a few pieces:—Edward the Confessor, struck at Lincoln, £4 5s.; William the Conqueror, Matilda, £17 10s.; another, with half-figure holding a sword, £20 10s.; the gold penny of Henry III., great beauty and rarity, £14 14s.; the rare and brilliant quarter-florin of Edward III., £17 10s.; half-angel of Henry VI., £11 11s.; another, £10 10s.; half-angel of Edward IV., reverse, with Richard III., £13 10s.; half-angel of the same, £13; shilling of Henry VII., £19; another, £20 10s.; half-sovereign of the same, £16; another, £20; Henry VIII., £11 5s.; gold sovereign of Henry VIII., £17; silver halfpenny, Bristol, £1 11s.; another, £1 4s.; great die, with rose and sun, £2 2s.; gold crown of the first year, £81; pattern half-sovereign, £30 10s.; ingot, £37; fine sovereign, fourth year, £50; half-crown, sixth year, £12 10s.; half-angel of Mary, £21; noble, or royal, £63; pattern threepence of Elizabeth, £19; fifteen-shilling piece of James I., £40 10s.; sovereign of Charles I., Bristol mint, £79; the celebrated Oxford crown, by Rawlins, £108; half-sovereign, £60; pattern for a sixpence, £27; pattern for a five-farthing piece, £19 10s.; Commonwealth shilling, £23; half-crown, by Ramage, £31; another, £30; pattern half-crown, by Simon, £30; another, £31; another, £32; gold crown, Cromwell's head, £41; another, in silver, £10 10s.; five-guinea piece, £21 10s.; Simon's celebrated petition crown, his masterpiece, £135; the Bodlaise crown, from the same die, £60; five-Guinea piece, George III., £22; five-sovereign piece, 1820, by Pistrucci, £27 10s.; five-pound piece, 1839, the first struck, £15 15s.; the rarest of the Victoria die, £15 10s. The whole collection, sixty-nine lots, brought £1052 9s.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MATÃO DE ZAMORA.—We cannot more again for so long a solution. The key-move to Mr. Bolton's beautiful problem is 1. B to K 7th. If Black Kts Gives 1. K to B 3rd. White plays 2. Kt to Q 5th; if he plays 1. B takes Kt, White replies with 2. B takes Q P. mate.

C.C.—Very elegant in design, but imperfect in execution. Mate, you will find, can be given in three different ways.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1063 by Caroline, Sigma, I. P. Seeley, Quidnunc, H. T. W., Percy Bee, Fitz Bee and Cee, Qubic, C. C. Marvin, Try-again, A Student, Ben Gunay, F. V. B., E. T., Lenny, Buckinghame, S. P. Q. R., Rogues, J. Dick, J. Dell, H., of Salisbury, Bertie, G. V. V., One of the Blackfriars, W. T. M. E., of Malvern, A Tyro, Dunois, Cherry-pie, Leo, Bath Archer, H. Bromley, Q. E. F., of Barnes, Mervin, Ellen, Ellen's Boy, Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, Ben Cruachan, Ben Venue, Ben Voirlich, Winchester College Boy, Bella, F. A., Fidelity, F. C. B., Fidelity, Sam, H. A., Lenny, Rory O'More, Pickaill, Charley, V. O. D., Manfred, and Mrs. Fribby, Henry Q. Smithson, Gamma, Cambridge, C. W. M. A., Sam, Philomel, Wilfred, Alpha, Omega, Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, Ben Cruachan, Ben Venue, Ben Voirlich, Cee, Q. E. F., Q. E. F., of Barnes, Beta, C. of St. Albans, M. H. H., Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, Ben Cruachan, Ben Venue, Ben Voirlich, Comus, and F. R. M.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1062.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to K 5th	P takes P (or (a))	(a) 1.	B to Q 8th
2. R to K 3rd (ch)	P takes R	(If Black play 1. Kt takes R, then follow
3. P to Q 4th		2. P to Q 4th (ch) and mate next move.)
and mate next move.		2. R to K 3rd (ch) B takes R.
		3. P to Q 4th and mate next move.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1061.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B 6th	K to K 4th	4. Q mates
2. K to K 5th	K to Q 4th (or 4)	(a) 1.	K to K 5 (a)
3. K to Q 3rd	Any move	2. K to Q 3rd	K to B 5th
		3. K to K 3rd

and mate next move.

PROBLEM No. 1064.

By HENRY KLING.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

Considerable interest has been excited at Boston by the play of Captain MACDONNELL, an amateur, well-known in Scotland as a writer, and Mr. A. HAMMOND, an American player of some celebrity. These competitors have fought six matches, which, although they do not appear to have been conducted with great rapidity, have produced many interesting games. Both, it should be said, were won easily by the Scotchman. The following is a short affair, which came off in the last match :—

(Centre Gambit.)

WHITE (Capt. M.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Capt. M.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	13. B to K sq.	Castles.
2. P to Q 4th	P takes P	14. B to Q 3rd	B takes B
3. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	15. Kt to K R 4th	Q to K 2nd
4. P to Q B 3rd	P to Q Kt 4th	(The position at this game is played in
5. P to Q B 3rd	P takes P	irreproachable style by White.)
6. B to Q Kt 5th	P to Q R 3rd	16. Kt to K R 3rd	Kt to K Kt 3rd
(Not the same coup, placed unfa-vourably by Lasker.)		17. Kt to K 5th	Q to Q 2nd
		18. P to K 6th	Q to Q B sq
(The right line, of course, was to take the K P with a Pawn, giving check and then consider which Bishop or not, to take, to have a great authority of position.)		19. B to Q B 4th	Q to Q 3rd
		20. B takes K B P	R to K 5th (ch)
		21. K to K B 3rd	P to K 4th
		22. Q takes R	P takes P
	P to Q 3rd	(Very flashy played.)
7. Kt takes P	Kt to K B 3rd	22.	B takes P (ch)
8. P to K 5th	B to K 2nd	23. K takes B	B takes P (ch)
9. Kt to Q B 3rd	B takes Kt	24. K takes B	P takes Q
10. B to K 3rd	Kt to Q 5th	25. K to K 3rd (ch)	K to K 4th
11. P to Q B 4th	B to Q Kt 3rd	26. K to K Th (ch)	K to B sq
12. P to Q B 4th	P to Q B 4th	27. K to K 5th—Mate.

CHESS ENIGMAS

No. 1358.—By J. MULLER.—(Schachzeitung.)

White: K at Q B 3rd; Kts at K 3rd and Q Kt 4th; B at Q R 5th; P's at K B 2nd, Q B 2nd, and Q Kt 3rd.

Black: K at Q 4th; P at Q B 4th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 1359.—By Mr. C. BAYEN (La Régence).

White: K at K B 3rd; Q at Q Kt 8th; R at K R 8th; Kts at K 8th and K 5th; P's at Q B 3rd and Q Kt 5th.

Black: K at Q B 4th; Q at Q 8th; B at Q B 4th; Kts at K Kt sq and K Kt 6th; P at K R 4th, Q B 5th, and Q Kt 7th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

NOTWITHSTANDING that the supply of money is abundant, and that favourable accounts continued to arrive from the agricultural districts in reference to the crops, the transactions in the Stock Exchange have been on a very limited scale during the week.

Bank and Exchequer Bills have been in good demand, at full prices.

In some quarters the rates for accommodation have slightly declined; but the demand is still active, and unsatisfied applications are numerous.

Thirty days' bills	... 3½ per cent.	Four months' bills	... 3½ per cent.
Two months' bills	... 3½	Six months' bills	... 3½
Three months' bills	... 3½

The Bank rate for money at Paris has been reduced to 4 per cent. On other parts of the Continent the quotations remain unaltered. The following are the present rates at the undermentioned cities :—

	Bank Rate	Open market		Bank rate.	Open market.
	per cent.	per cent.		per cent.	per cent.
Paris	4	3½	Amsterdam	3½	3
Vienna	6	5	Berlin	5	4½
Trieste	6	5	Hamburg	5	4½
Frankfort	5½		St. Petersburg	6	5

Gold, £3,900,000 in bullion has been exported from London to the eastern quarters; but very little gold has been sent into the Bank. There is still some inquiry for France.

Silver is in fair demand, and the quotations are unchanged. Here and in London, the usual delivered at the rate of 1s per cent per annum and a bonus of 8s per cent were tendered. Mexican dollars are in request at 4s 11½d per ounce, and Spanish at 4s 11¾d per ounce. Five-franc pieces are quoted at 3l 17s 6d per 1000 ounces. The Bank of England has received £20,000 in silver bullion, for the most part from the Continent, and a bonus of 1s per cent; of the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank, 6; and of the Foreign and Colonial, 7s per cent per annum premium.

The Stock Exchange has been very dull during the week. On Monday, Bankers' and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, March, 4s to 6s, 5s dis.; Bills, June, 5s, 4s to 6s dis.; Bonds, 2½ per cent, 1871, Exchequer Bills, 4s to 6s dis.; Bills, June, 5s, 4s to 6s dis.; India Bonds, 4 per cent, 4s to 6s dis. On Tuesday Consols, for delivery, closed at 88½; Bills, for August, 4s to 6s dis.; Exchequer Bills, March, 4s to 6s dis.; Bills, June, 5s, 4s to 6s dis.; India Bonds, 4 per cent, 4s to 6s dis. On Wednesday Consols, for delivery, closed at 88½; India Stock, 211 to 213; Exchequer Bills, par to 4s dis. On Thursday Consols were 88¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, 4s dis. to par. It is the market for Foreign Securities only a moderate business has been transacted. The dealings on the following day were rather more numerous :—Consols, for Money, 88¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, 4s to 6s dis.; Bills, June, 5s, 4s to 6s dis.; India Stock, 211 to 213; Exchequer Bills, par to 4s dis. On Thursday Consols were 88¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, 4s dis. to par.

It is the market for Foreign Securities only a moderate business has been transacted. The dealings on the following days were rather more numerous :—Consols, for Money, 88¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, 4s to 6s dis.; Bills, June, 5s, 4s to 6s dis.; India Stock, 211 to 213; Exchequer Bills, par to 4s dis. On Thursday Consols were 88¼; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 88½; Exchequer Bills, 4s dis. to par.

It is the market for Foreign Securities only a moderate business has been transacted. The following quotations in prices is noted in the Continental Exchanges, which is now quoted 86 to 87; Brazilian, 1829, 102; Buenos Ayres, 6 per Cents, 1868, 87; Chilian, 6 per Cents, 1868, 103; Danish, 5 per Cents, 1862, 103; Mexican Three per Cents, 20½; Portuguese Three per Cents, 42; ex div. Russian Five per Cents, 1862, 97; Sardinian Five per Cents, 84; Spanish Three per Cents, 46; Ditto, New Deferred, 19½; Ditto, Passive, 5½; Ditto, Certificates, 8½; Turkish Old Six per Cents, 1858, Bonds, 1858, 71; Ditto, 1862, 69 or 69½; Ditto, Four per Cents, 48; Venezuela for par Cents, 18½; and Italian Five per Cents, 69 to 69½.

Most Joint-stock Bank Shares have ruled firm in price. Aero and Marionnaux's have marked 14½; Ditto, 2nd Alliance, 6½; Ditto, New, 6½; Australasian, 74½; Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 21½; Commercial of London, 19½; Commercial of India and the East, 8½; Consolidated, 1½; English and Scottish, 14½; European, 15½; Hindostan, China, and Japan, New, 22; Imperial, 38½; Imperial of China, 7½; Ditto, New, 7½; Imperial Ottoman, 19; Land Mortgage of India, 6½; London and Country, 2½; London and Northern, 23½; London and Westminster, 10½; Metropolitan and Provincial, 27½; Oriental, 40½; Ditto, New, 40½; Ditto, Scrip, 1½; Union of Australia, 51½.

Colonial Government Securities have been dull, in a very moderate extent. Canada Six per Cents have sold at 106; Ditto Five per Cents, 97½; Cape Six per Cents, 104; Queensland Six per Cents, 104½; and Victoria Six per Cents, 104.

The Miscellaneous Market has been rather quiet. Australian Mortgage, Land, &c., 33; Australian Agricultural, 21½; Australian Estates, 1½; Australian Investment, 1½; Crystal Palace, 11½; East India and Financial, 1½; Ditto, Land, 1½; Financial Corporation, 3½; Forwarders' Warehouse, 4½; General Credit, 7½; Hudson's Bay, 13½; Imperial Mercantile, 1½; Ditto, Land, 1½; International Financial Society, 1½; Ditto, New, 1½; Ottoman Financial, 6½; Royal Mail Steam, 90; Universal Marine Insurance, 3½; and West India Docks, 104.

There has been rather an improved feeling in the Railway Share Market, prices have been well supported. The leading quotations for the week are as follow :—

Caledonian Stock and Shares, 80½; Ditto, Five per Cent Preference, 104; Great Eastern Stock, 50; Great Northern—A Stock, 91; Great Western—Original, 70½; Ditto, Five per Cent Preference, 118; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 120; London and Brighton, 92½; London, Chatham, and Dover, 31½; London and North-Western, 102; London and South-Western, 97½; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 64½; Metropolitan, 112½; Midland, 130½; Ditto, Two and a Half per Cent Preference, 72½; Ditto, New, 5 per Cent, 118½; Ditto, Three per Cent Preference, 84½; and North British, 72½.

British Possessions, Foreign, Railways, and Central India, 16½; East Indian, 95½; Great Indian Peninsula, 104½; Ditto, 5 per Cent Preference, 107½; Grand Canada, 5½; Ditto, Six per Cent Bonds, 1873, 99; Indian Branch, 3½; Madras Guaranteed, Five per Cent, 100; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cent Preference, 97½; Ditto, New, 4½; Ditto, Four per Cent, 97½; Ditto, Preference—Bombay and San Francisco, 17; Dutch-Rhenish, 19½; Great Luxembourg, 10½; San Paulo, 10½.

Obligations.—Great Luxembourg, 5½; Ottoman, 67; Royal Swedish, 94.

The return of the Bank of England for the week ending July 13, shows the following results, as compared with the previous week :—

An increase of circulation of	£270,925	A decrease of other securities of £2,629,943
An increase of deposits of	1,000,000	A decrease of other deposits of 1,000,000
And increase of other deposits of	1,000,000	A decrease of rest of 41,525
An increase of Govt. securities of	30,000	A decrease of notes of 1,000,000

The total circulation is £23,501,901, the bullion £18,591,901, and the rest is made up of deposits to £13,092,746. Securities are £21,957,597; and the stock of bullion is £15,381,142.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, July 11.—There was only a limited supply of home-grown wheat on offer here to-day, and most kinds were in full request, at full prices. Fine foreign wheat realised former rates; but all other kinds were dull, and cheaper. Barley was in fair demand, at extreme rates. Malt met a fair inquiry, at fully last week's quotations. Oats declined 6d per quarter. Beans and peas were in steady request. Flour steadily supported. Linseed and rape cake were in full demand, at 10s per ton dearer.

July 13.—Wheat supported. Monday's currency. The trade, however, was inactive. All spring corn, including flour, was held at full prices.

English—Wheat, Essex and Kent, 32s. 40s. to 44s.; ditto, white, 43s. to 46s.; Norfolk and Suffolk, 32s. to 40s.; ditto, white, 42s. to 46s.; Lincolnshire and Yorkshire, 32s. to 40s.; ditto, white, 42s. to 46s.; Northumberland and Scotch, 32s. to 40s.; ditto, white, 42s. to 46s.; Rye, 28s. to 30s.; Barley, 30s. to 36s.; Kingston and Ware, 40s. to 44s.; Chevalier, 44s. to 46s.; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire grey, 30s. to 34s.; Malting, 36s. to 38s.; Malt, 70s. to 76s.; Beans, and Cork, 34s. to 36s.; ditto, white, 34s. to 37s.; Cork beans, 30s. to 32s.; grey peas, 34s. to 36s.; maple, 36s. to 38s.; white, 34s. to 36s.; boilers, 36s. to 38s.; Harrow beans, 36s. to 38s.; Tick beans, 34s. to 36s.; country beans, 34s. to 36s. per 280 lb. Australian, 18s. to 24s. per barrel; French, 20s. to 22s. per sack.

Foreign duty Paid.—English and Scotch, 40s. to 44s.; ditto, malt, 1270; oats, 600; beans, 600. Hull: ditto, 1780. Foreign: Wheat, 3740; oats, 24,100; flour, 330 sacks.

Foreign duty Paid.—Wheat, 40s. to 44s.; barley, 30s. to 32s.; oats, 22s. to 24s. per quarter. In all other articles very little business has been done.

Linseed, English, crushing, 58s. to 61s.; Calcutta, 56s. to 62s.; hempseed, 38s. to 42s. per quarter; rapeseed, 14s. to 16s. per cwt.; linseed cake, £9 10s. to £10 5s.; ditto white, £9 to £9 10s.; ditto, foreign, £8 to £8 5s. per barrel; English rapeseed, £10 to £10; per quarter. Coriander, Trieste, 22s. to 23s.; Morocco, 20s. to 21s.; Madras, 18s. to 19s.; Bombay, 17s. to 18s. per cwt. Canary, £37 10s. to £38 10s. per ton. Carraway seed, £24 to £25 per ton. Coarse, white ditto, 23s. to 24s. per cwt.

Flour.—Fine parcels of wheaten brand in the metropolis are from 45s. to 47s.; of household ditto, 51s. to 53s. per 4 lb. loaf.

Seeds.—Trefoil, English, new, 20s. to 24s. per cwt.; barley, 27s. 6d.; ditto, 28s. 6d.; rye, 28s. 6d.; Italian, 29s. to 31s.; Russian, 29s. to 31s.

The Ale Trade Association.—Wheat, 40s. 5d.; barley, 27s. 11d.; oats, 22s. 7d.; rye, 28s.; beans, 35s. 5d.; peas, 35s. 5d.

English Grain Sold Last Week.—Wheat, 78,909; barley, 1138; oats, 3366; rye, 138; beans, 1,000; peas, 1,000 quarters.

Tea.—There is about an average business doing for the season in this market, at full prices.

Sugar.—The inquiry is inactive, and the quotations have given way 6d. per cwt. The public sale, on Tuesday last, against 105,962 bags and 1,000 hhds. of Mauritius, 1,000 bags, 1,000 hhds. of Bengal, and 1,000 bags of Manilla, were disposed of.

Coffee.—The market is heavy, and the trade doing in most kinds, at late rates. Stock, 6028 tons, against 10,237 tons.

Rice.—Sales progress slowly, yet prices are supported. The stock consists of 39,561 tons. Last year it amounted to 46,306 tons.

Provisions.—The inquiry for Irish butter is steady, at previous quotations. Fine Choice Carlow, 112s. to 114s.; Cork, 108s. to 110s.; Waterford, 104s. to 106s.; Limerick, 102s. to 104s.; Belfast, 100s. to 102s.; Sligo, 98s. to 100s. per cwt. Waterford bacon is quoted at 60s. per cwt. Hams, lard, and most other provisions are tolerably firm in price.

Tallow.—The trade is very inactive, and prices drooping tendency. P.Y.C. on the spot, is selling at 46s. 6d. per cwt. The stock is 41,384 casks, against 30,437 casks last year. Town Tallow, 45s. per cwt.

Oils.—Linseed oil, £30 per ton. Rape, pale, £42 10s.; brown, £41 10s. Cake, £9 5s. to £9 10s.; coconut, £38 10s. to £40; and fine palm, £35 10s.; French turpentine, 68s. 6d. per cwt.

Hops.—No change has taken place in the value of rum, and the market is very inactive. The stock is 3,000 puncheons, against 3,000 last year.

Spirits.—The next return of colonial rum will be published on the 31st inst. During their progress about 130,000 leaves will be offered. The market, privately, is inactive.

Jamaica.—New qualities are in good demand, and fully supported. Proof, 1s to 1s 2d per gallon.

Metropolitan Cattle Market (Thursday, July 14).—Our market-to-day was well supplied with beasts. All breeds were disposed of steadily, at a decline of 2s per 8 lb on prime qualities. The best Scots and crosses sold at 5s per 8 lb. The show of sheep was moderately extensive, and the supply trade was somewhat heavy, prices ranging from 4s to 5s per 8 lb. Calves were 4s. 4d. per 8 lb. Lambs were in short supply, and steady request, at full currencies—viz., 6s. 4d. to 7s. per 8 lb. Pigs were in fair request, at 4s. per 8 lb. The supply of cattle was extensive. Figures this week, as under, compared with last :—

Per 8lb, to sink the offal :—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s. to 3s. 4d.; second quality ditto, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; prime large oxen, 3s. 10d. to 4s.; prime Scots, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; second quality ditto, 3s. 10d. to 4s.; prime large sheep, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; small sheep, 4s. 4d. to 4s. 6d.; coarse and inferior calves, 3s. 8d. to 4s.; second quality ditto, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; prime small calves, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; suckling calves, 4s. to 5s.; and prime old store pigs, 4s. to 4s. 2d. Number of cattle at market :—Beasts, 1,800; sheep and lambs, 18,000; calves, 730; pigs, 240. Foreign :—Beasts, 630; sheep and lambs, 1810; pigs, 180.

Coals.—Newcastle, Wallsend, 16s. 6d.; Hetton, 16s. 6d.; Lambton, 16s. 6d.; Hartley's, 16s. to 16s.; and sunderlands', 14s. to 16s. per ton.

Potatoes.—Kidneys, 80s. to 90s.; Regents, 70s. to 80s. per ton.

Wool.—The next return of colonial wool will be published on the 31st inst. During their progress about 130,000 bales will be offered. The market, privately, is inactive.

Australia.—New qualities are in good demand, and fully supported. Fine, 1s to 1s 2d per lb.

Metropolitan Cattle Market (Thursday, July 14).—Our market-to-day was well supplied with beasts. All breeds were disposed of steadily, at a decline of 2s per 8 lb on prime qualities. The best Scots and crosses sold at 5s per 8 lb. The show of sheep was moderately extensive, and the supply trade was somewhat heavy, prices ranging from 4s to 5s per 8 lb. Calves were 4s. 4d. per 8 lb. Lambs were in short supply, and steady request, at full currencies—viz., 6s. 4d. to 7s. per 8 lb. Pigs were in fair request, at 4s. per 8 lb. The supply of cattle was extensive. Figures this week, as under, compared with last :—

Per 8lb, to sink the offal :—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s. to 3s. 4d.; second quality ditto, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; prime large oxen, 3s. 10d. to 4s.; prime Scots, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; coarse and inferior sheep, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; second quality ditto, 3s. 10d. to 4s.; prime large sheep, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; small sheep, 4s. 4d. to 4s. 6d.; coarse and inferior calves, 3s. 8d. to 4s.; second quality ditto, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 4d.; prime small calves, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 8d.; suckling calves, 4s. to 5s.; and prime old store pigs, 4s. to 4s. 2d. Number of cattle at market :—Beasts, 1,800; sheep and lambs, 18,000; calves, 730; pigs, 240. Foreign :—Beasts, 630; sheep and lambs, 1810; pigs, 180.

Coals.—Newcastle, Wallsend, 16s. 6d.; Hetton, 16s. 6d.; Lambton, 16s. 6d.; Hartley's, 16s. to 16s.; and sunderlands', 14s. to 16s. per ton.

Potatoes.—Kidneys, 80s. to 90s.; Regents, 70s. to 80s. per ton.

Wool.—The next return of colonial wool will be published on the 31st inst. During their progress about 130,000 bales will be offered. The market, privately, is inactive.

Australia.—New qualities are in good demand, and fully supported. Fine, 1s to 1s 2d per lb.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, JULY 8.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

J. ATKINSON, Mission House, Hackney, and Hurstfield, silk warehouseman.

BANKRUPTS.

J. CAILE, Russell-street, Bermondsey, Waterloo-terrace, Surrey, cheesemonger.—A. BLACK, Surrey-terrace, Fulham-road, Peckham, carpenter.—E. INGLIS, Church-street, Paddington, builder.—J. HOLLOWAY, Bridge-road, Battersea, builder.—J. Freshwater, Isle of Wight, plumber.—J. and G. GODDEN, Sturry-place, Putney, grocers.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-square, Brompton, builders.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-square, Brompton, builders.—H. KING, Harcourt-street, Hackney-road, builder.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmaker.—C. J. FORD, Deptford, plumber.—C. GUBBINS, Bermondsey-wall, Bermondsey, builder.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—J. HART, New North-road.—J. STANFORD, Burlington-arcade, Piccadilly, hatter.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers.—H. DAY, Stoke-Newington, Middlesex, builder.—J. and W. WILLIAMS, Hereford-street, Bishopsgate-street, bootmakers

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Lessee, Mr. CONCART Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—Great hit in the reproduction of JANET PRIDE—Richard Pride (his original character), Mr. Benjamin Webster.—On MONDAY, and during the WEEK, SHAKSPEARE'S ROUSE.—Mr. J. S. Clarke; Mr. Toole; Mr. Webster and Miss Woolgar; and THE ABEL BELLE.—Messrs. J. L. Toole, F. Dobbin, Miss Woolgar. Commence at Seven.

ROYAL ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. JOHN WEBSTER.—On MONDAY, and during the WEEK, the new and original COMEDY, entitled SHAKSPEARE'S HOME. At 8 o'clock, a new Burlesque, by F. C. Burnand, Esq., entitled FAUST AND MARGUERITE—Mr. and Mrs C. Mathews, and Mr. J. Clarke. Mr. LITTLE TODDLE-KINS—Mr. Charles Mathews. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matthews, To conclude with BRITISH DIAMONDS—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matthews.

NOW VISIT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—Park, Gardens, and Grounds in most luxuriant beauty, Grand Display of Fireworks every Saturday. Fine Band and Varied Entertainments. Season Tickets now in full force, and may be had at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, and Exhibition Court, Regent-street. Admission, Saturday, July 16, Half-a-Crown, and Monday, 18, One Shilling. Royal Lyceum College Grand Fête and Fancy Fair. Unequalled attractions and amusements.

Saturday, Grand Aquatic Promenade, at Four.

Thursday and Friday.—Great Cricket Match—Kent v. Nottingham. Saturday.—Open Gravett. Five Shillings.

The Gallant Gallerina escapes every night; no extra charges—Shakspere House—The Chimpanzee—Fine Arts Courts—Palace open from Nine to Seven.

In the Grounds.—Cricket, Ride-shooting, Archery, Croquet, Archery. Also, a great Hippodramatic Performance in the Grand Arena, from Tuesday.

Open till Sunset. One Shilling every day except Saturday. Guinea Season Tickets admit to all Fêtes.

Nowhere such combined attractions and enjoyments.

One hundred trains daily from London Bridge, Victoria, and Kensington (by the Palace, and Blackfriars by Sydenham-hill.

MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY will APPEAR at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, in his New Entertainment, entitled PARIS, and MRS. BROWN AT THE PLAY, every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; and Saturday Mornings at Three. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Doors open half-an-hour earlier. Acting Manager, Mr. ARTHUR WOOD.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY and BACHELOR'S BOX—an entirely NEW ENTERTAINMENT—EVERY EVENING at EIGHT (except Saturday), SATURDAY MORNINGS at THREE.—POLYGRAPHIC HALL, King William-street, Strand. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Amphitheatre, 1s.; Private Boxes, £1 1s. A Plan of the Stalls may be seen and secured at the Hall from Nine in the morning.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS will CLOSE their THIRTY-SECOND EXHIBITION SATURDAY, JULY 30, inst., at their GALLERY, 53, Pall-Mall, near St. James's Palace). Daily from 9 till dusk. Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d. JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED and MR. MACFARLANE in THE FIRST PART, followed by THE PAIRED AND HIS BIRTHDAY, by W. Brough, Esq.; and MR. JOHN PARRY in a new story, THE SEVEN DIALS; or, Mr. Rowland Out of Town.—Royal Gallery of Illustration, 14, Regent-street. Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Balcony Stalls, 5s. Area, 2s. Doors open half-an-hour before.

THE PUBLIC COMPETITION of VOLUNTEER BANDS at the ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS, South Kensington, will take place on SATURDAY in JULY, at Four o'Clock. Admission, 1s.; Volunteers, 6d. each. Members of Volunteer Bands Free.

THE UNITED ASSOCIATION OF PHOTOGRAPHY (LIMITED).
Capital £50,000, in 5000 Shares of £10 each.
Deposit on Application, £1. Payment on Allotment, £2.
The Directors have the pleasure to announce that applications for Shares in the above Company have been received in great numbers from persons of the highest respectability in all parts of the country, and that the Shares which can be made practically available, are very few in comparison with the large number of applications received.
The profits made by the leading Artists and Firms in this field are enormous, as will be seen.
Every care will be taken to obtain the most efficient management and superintendence, and also the most economical arrangements consistent with the superior character of the work which the Company is established to produce.
The Company is now erecting, in London a Studio of the newest and most complete form, combining many valuable advantages not found in the same Building: a small Studio, specially constructed to enable Instantaneous Portraits of Children to be taken, with the certainty of success.
Arrangements will be made for employing the newly-discovered Artificial Light, which has been proved to be a valuable aid in the production of Portraits, when the Natural Light is insufficient, and in the photographing of Pictures, Statuary, &c. at night.
It is also intended to combine with the ordinary process Photographic Printing, the Printing of Books, &c., and to carry on the Photographic Engraving business, in which great progress is now being made.
The services of Special Artists will be retained to take series of Views or Groups at private houses in town or country.
The Directors have secured the services of some of the principal Watercolour Painters, and Lithographic Artists, for the execution of business which is expected to prove highly remunerative.
A considerable number of Shares are already subscribed for.
Applications for Shares in the annexed Form to be forwarded to the Solicitors, Messrs. Bellamy and Chilton, accompanied by a Cheque or Post-office Order for £1 per Share.
If no Allotment be made, the Deposits will be returned in full to the Applicants.
Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 4, Pall-Mall East.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.
To the Directors of the United Association of Photography (Limited).
Gentlemen,
Having paid to your Bankers the sum of £..... being a Deposit of £1 per Share, I request you will allot me that number of Shares of £10 each, in the United Association of Photography (Limited), and I hereby agree to accept such number or any smaller number that may be allotted to me; and I authorize you to place my name upon the Register of Shareholders for the Shares so allotted.
I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servant,
Name in full.....
Residence.....
Profession or Business.....
Date.....

CRAMER AND CO. (Limited), Capital £500,000, in 10,000 Shares of £50 each.
Deposit £1 per share, and £2 on allotment.
Calls not to exceed £2 per share, and at intervals of not less than three months.
Guaranteed minimum dividend of 6 per cent. per annum for five years.
ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.
This Company has been formed, on the most liquitos, for the purpose of acquiring the business of Cramer, Wood, and Co., the Pianoforte Manufacturers, Wholesale Dealers, and Exporters.
A contract agreement has been entered into with Mr. Wood, the only surviving partner and present proprietor, for the transfer to the company, as from the first of December last, of the whole business (free from all liabilities in partner working order, including the Stock in Trade, Book Debts, Plant, Machinery, Leasehold Premises, Nos. 201, 201, and 205, Regent-street, 27, Conduit-street, and 55, King-street, at a price the Directors believe to be reasonable and advantageous to the company.
Messrs. Broom, Bazalgette, and Westcott, public accountants, have examined the books of the late firm of Cramer, and are retained in the same capacity for the company.
Prospectuses, with forms of application for shares, may be obtained at 201, Regent-street; and at the Offices of the Company, 168, Pall-Mall.

CRAMER AND CO. (Limited).—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that TO-MORROW APPLICATION for SHARES in the Company will be received after TUESDAY NEXT, the 19th instant. By order of the Board,
201, Pall-Mall. CLAS. SIEFFARTH, Secretary (pro tem.).

NO. 7, BANK-BUILDINGS (corner of Old Jewry, London) is the Chief Office of the ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE COMPANY. J. W. OLAM, Secretary.

PICTURE FRAMES for the COLOURED PICTURE (gives with this Paper.—Handsome Gilt Frame, Glass, and Back, 2s.; ample, gilt, 3s.; at GEO. REES, 29, St. Martin's-lane, and 17, Drury-lane.

NEW BOOKS.

ENGLAND'S BARDS, 1864.
SONNETS.
To which the First Prize of Fifty Guineas was awarded. Composed by WILLIAM FULFORD, Author of "Soul and Other Poems," and "Songs of Life."
Sweet Poesy, whose charm whereon my love was born,
What know we in the world more fair than thee?
The voice of singing birds doth greet thy morn;
The home of song is every shadowed tree.
Thine is the rose, and thine the lily white;
Thine the bright sunlight, and the starry moonlight;
Thine is the hoary head of Time's high height;
Thine the cloud-garlands with its camera wreaths.
Sweet maiden-day, thou wedlock of perfect sense,
Yet one thing fairer than thyself I know—
The love of God, which is the deeper sense
Of Poesy, and the inner soul of song.
A life, then, more graceful, sweet, and fair,
Than ever flourished in the bloom of Poesy.

HEROINES AND CRINOLINES:
A TREND to the 1300th Anniversary of Shakspeare's Birthday. By Mrs. CLARKE, Author of "Shakspeare Characters," and "Girlhood of Shakspeare's Heroines."
"I will set Prior Aldwin to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Aldwin upon your dream."—Midsummer Night's Dream," act iv., scene 1.
Lapped in soft sleep, methought a golden haze
Spread round me, bewildering to my steadfast gaze,
And through it, beckoned by a glorious verge
My ravished sight its onward way did urge,
Till, as I gazed, the haze began to clear,
With radiant forms and visions, rich and rare,
With softest dawn celestial, yet sublime!
Such as my waken sense fain would have conceived,
Created, never more to die.

The Third Prize of Twenty Guineas was awarded to the following very unique and characteristic composition of a true son of Erin's isle.

FALLAS ATHENE and VENUS at breakfast with JUNO in one of her Majesty's Parks.
"Pallas and Venus," said the Queen of Heaven,
"Your breakfast is ready, and I'm in a twitter;
My watch says just a quarter past eleven,
And I'm famished, and I'm dying for my tea.
Pallas, you're always punctual, and Venus,
And do be quick and take away the things."
The above are the three successful efforts in the sonnet-like Shakspearian prizes, as per advertisement, "Ho, for a Shakspeare!" which have been the subject of considerable discussion! Prize Pencil in this and other papers.

JUST ISSUED—THE BOOK OF MONOGRAMS, by JOHN JOSEPH. Comprising 700 of the most varied combinations of every initial letter, with a selection of Crests, Cyphers, Rebuses, and Initials. Price 1s.
London: THOMAS DE LA RUE & Co., 110, Bunhill-row.

Price 1s., with 12 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 1s. 2d.,
DESIGNS for WINDOWS of different styles to be executed in DIAPHANIE, with full instructions. London: THOMAS DE LA RUE & Co., 110, Bunhill-row.

Eighth Edition, with 22 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 8d.,
STAINED WINDOWS: the Improved Treatise of Diaphanie, or Painting in Enamel, of small cost.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

DECALCOMANIE.—Boxes containing Designs Materials, and Instructions for this beautiful Art, price 10s. 6d., sent on receipt Post Office order.—J. BARNARD and SON, Sole Agents for the Improved Decalcomanie, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d., with 14 Lithographic Plates,
ALPHABETS and DESIGNS of different Periods, for the use of Illuminators and Draughtsmen. By C. WOOD.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Fifth Edition, enlarged, price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.,
HINTS on PAINTING and GILDING and ORNAMENTING IN GOLD and METALS. By HENRY CULLETON.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Second Edition, price 9s. 6d.; post-free, 3s. 10d., Illustrated with Drawings printed in Colours. Wood Engravings, &c.,
PLANTING and LANDSCAPE SKETCHING FROM NATURE. By JOHN CHASE. M.T.W.P. Edited by the Rev. CHARLES HARGROVE, M.A., late Fellow of Brasenose, and Vicar of Grasmere School, Chester.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Third Edition, price 2s. 6d., with 48 Diagrams, printed in Colours,
MIXED TINTS, WITH AN ESSAY ON LIGHT AND SHADE. By CHARLES CHASE.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

Price 3s.; post 3s. 4d.,
NOTES ON THE CAUSES AND CURE OF DISEASE OF HEART, LUNGS, AND LIVER, DEPENDENT UPON CONSTITUTIONAL TENDENCY. By JOHN HARVEY, M.D.—JOHN SMITH and CO., 52, Long-acre.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST of NEW MUSIC published this week.
Just issued, gratis and post-free, Fourth Gratuitous Edition of THEMATIC CATALOGUE of PIANOFORTE MUSIC, &c. &c. &c.
Another Edition (4th), HAMILTON'S TUTOR for the PIANOFORTE. Price 4s. net. Also, the 4th Edition of THE FIRST OF ALL LESSONS. Price 2s. net.
THE LIQUID GEM. By the Composer of "Her bright smile haunts me still." Price 3s.
O'F WHITE JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN. Sacred Song. Composed by the Author of "Sweet Spirit, hear my prayer." Price 3s.
A class of Three Lessons (Singing, Voice, &c.) by PIANOFORTES FOR SALE OR HIRE, upon easy terms. Full Lists forwarded on application.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, W.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.—The Self-Inking Printing Machine, price 5s., 10s. 6d., 21s., 42s., 63s., 105s., and upwards, for Amateurs, Tradesmen, and Clergymen. Printing Materials for the Amateur, Tradesman, and Clergyman. Every Description of Stamp Dealer in her Majesty's Post Office, 81, High Holborn, London, W.C.

TOURISTS derive additional pleasure in their rambles when supplied with the GEOLOGICAL BOOKS and FOSSILS. Mr. TENNANT, Geologist, 149, Strand, gives practical INSTRUCTION to Ladies and Gentlemen.—A. TENNANT and SON, Scientific Mineralogists, 149, Strand.

MAGNIFICENT PRESENTS.—MR. BENJAMIN, M.D., DESPOSES OF, much under the original cost, a complete Library of the above, elegantly bound in Morocco and Russia by Hayday, Rivière, Robinson, and gentlemen furnishing would do well to inspect this magnificent Library, which is replete with the purest taste, and richest magnificence. On view, at the SELGRAVE PUBLISHING OFFICE, 3, Hanover-square, Belgrave-square.

THE EQUILIBRIUM CHAIRS, SEDLEY'S PATENT, Non-Vibrating and Easy Rocking Chairs, so celebrated for comfort and economy, are now to be had at the Manufactory, 18, Conduit-street.—A. SEDLEY and Co. Illustrated catalogues free by post.

THE BURLINGTON FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 29, Conduit-street, W.—A. SEDLEY and Co. Upholsterers, have REMOVED to larger premises, as above, from Nos. 18 and 19, Conduit-street. Equilibrium Chairs, Sofas, Couches, &c.

TRELOAR'S COCOANUT MATTING and KAMPTULICON FLOOR CLOTH WAREHOUSE, 42, LUDGATE-HILL, LONDON.

COLMAN'S No. 1 INDIGO BLUE is the best article obtainable for laundry purposes.
36, Cannon-street, London.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL, prescribed as the most useful remedy for CONSUMPTION, RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, and INFANTILE WEAKNESS.
Pronounced by the highest medical authorities to be THE ONLY COD-LIVER OIL
Which produces the full curative effect.
PALATABLE AND EASILY TAKEN.
Sold ONLY in capsuled IMPERIAL HALF PINTS, 2s. 6d.; PINTS, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; by respectable Chemists;
SOLE CONSIGNEES,
ANSAR, HANFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, LONDON, W.C.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.
TOURIST TICKETS to the NORTH are now issued from PADDINGTON, Victoria, Hammersmith, Kensington, Notting-hill, Chelsea, Battersea, Putney-bridge-road, King's-cross, Somers-street, and Portland-road Stations, to the COASTS of SOMERSET, DEVON, and CORNWALL, to the Principal Towns in the Midland Districts, to Cheltenham, Tewkesbury, Malvern, Hereford, Ross, Monmouth, &c. Also Weymouth and the Channel Islands. North Wales—Aberystwith, Barmouth, Dolgelly, Llangollen, Rhyl, Llandudno Liverpool, Bangor, Carnarvon, Holyhead, &c. Also to the Isle of Wight, Portsmouth, Southampton, Dublin, Carmarthen, Fishguard, Milford, Torby, &c.
Tickets are issued for Circular Tours in North and South Wales by Rail and Steamer.
Buxton, Malvern, and the Tour of the Valley of the Wye, &c.
Tickets are issued for Circular Tours—Gloucester, Cheltenham, Furness Abbey, Ilfracombe, Torquay, Plymouth, Penzance, Yorkshire—Scarborough, Harrogate, &c.
Ireland—Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, &c.
Programmes, containing fares and full particulars, may be obtained at the Company's Town Receiving Offices—Corner of Bishopsgate-street, Fenchurch-street, Piccadilly, Nos. 28, 29, 30, Regent-street, and 485, Strand.
J. GREENISH, General Manager.

THE GRAND HOTEL, BRIGHTON, will be open to the Public on SATURDAY, the 23rd of JULY.
H. A. LEPPOER, Secretary.
36, Cannon-street, E.C.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE, Established 45 years. Specimens in Sculpture, and engraved on Seals, Rings, or Dies, by FOUR BROTHERS, Heraldic Engravers, 271, High Holborn, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE—send name and county. Arms found, 3s. 6d.; Sketch of Arms, 2s. 6d.; Engraving, 3s. 6d.; Painting, 5s. 6d.; Pedigree, 10s. 6d.—Apply at 271, High Holborn, W.C.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The established office of authority in England for furnishing Arms, Crests, Pedigrees, Illuminations, Manual of Heraldry, 3s. 6d. stamps.—FOUR BROS., Artists, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S two-guinea MACHINE SEALS of SUPERIOR QUALITY, recently improved by the addition of six extra glasses. This celebrated instrument is now constructed with twelve lenses, at the same price, and has the additional power, light, and field, and rendering it unequalled in magnifying power by any other instrument extant. Every Seal is warranted. A one solid, ordinary stylish size, ordinary stylish size, ordinary stylish size

NEW MUSIC.

NEW PIECES ON GOUNOD'S FAUST.

ASCHER'S PENSÉE DRAMATIQUE SUR FAUST. Opera de G. Gounod. Price 4s. Fourth Edition. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S FAUST.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia on favourite melodies from Gounod's celebrated and popular Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST.—The following are the most popular arrangements for the Pianoforte from the celebrated Opera of Mme. Gounod's Faust:—In three books. Each 5s. 6d.
Kuhe's Fantasia ... Illustrated with Portraits ... 5s. 6d.
Kuhe's Mirella ... ... 5s. 6d.
Calkott's Benefice of "Faust." In two Books. Each 6s. 0d.
Calkott's Mirella Waltzes. As performed in the Opera. 4s. 0d.
Calkott's Faust Waltzes. ... ... 4s. 0d.
Wilson's Favourite Airs. Duets. In three Books. Each 6s. 0d.
Wilson's Faust Valse ... ... 4s. 0d.
Wilson's Grand Valse. Duet ... ... 4s. 0d.
Wilson's Favourite Airs, arranged as "Faust," ... 4s. 0d.
Brinley Richards' Mirella Waltzes ... ... 4s. 0d.
Brinley Richards' Soldiers' Chorus. Duet ... ... 3s. 6d.
Brinley Richards' Fantasia ... ... 4s. 0d.
Kuhn's Fantasia ... ... 4s. 0d.
Kuhn's "Le Veau d'Amor (Flower Song) ... ... 3s. 0d.
Osborne's Fantasia ... ... 4s. 0d.
Osborne's Three Dirges ... ... 3s. 0d.
Benedict's Reverie de Salon ... ... 4s. 0d.
Faranger's Fantasia ... ... 4s. 0d.
Lysberg's Fantasia Etegante ... ... 4s. 0d.
Liutz's Grand Fantasia on the Waltz ... ... 4s. 0d.
Liutz's Faust Quadrilles ... ... 4s. 0d.
Cramer's Fat Pourri ... ... 4s. 0d.
Gounod's—The celebrated Waltz ... ... 3s. 0d.
Gounod's—The Kermesse ... ... 3s. 0d.
Gounod's Suite Dirges ... ... 3s. 0d.
Godfrey's Waltzes ... ... 4s. 0d.
Godfrey's Grand Selection (as played by Jullien's Band) ... 4s. 0d.
Rimbault's Guna, in Eight Numbers, each 3s.
No. 1. The Waltz. | No. 2. Soldiers' Chorus.
3. The Bijou Song. | 4. Mirella's Song.
5. The Serenade. | 7. Chorus of Old Men.
8. The Jewel Song. | 9. Garden Cavatina.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIG. GIGLIUCCI'S NEW SONG.

FIGLIA D'ERINA. Romanza. Composed by Benedict and sung by Sig. Giuglini with the greatest possible success. Price, in F or D, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE VALLEY (LE VALLON). New Song. Composed by Gounod and sung by Madame Dolby and Mr. Santley. Price, with English and French words, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIREUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S Popular Song, expressly composed for him by Signor Arditi, and rapturously encored, is now ready, in C, D, and E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS." Played by Mdme. Arabella Goddard at the Shakspeare Festival, and other Concerts, with immense success. Price 3s. 6d.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. 3s. 6d. One of the best Galops ever published, and beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Rotiffian, H. and J. Mortimer, Wells, Cannon, and Chifferee. From photographs by Mayso, of Brighton. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Prince and Princess of Wales. Just published, price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published, A new set of Lancers, composed on all the popular and merry tunes of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, Kirkman & Son, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the only Pianino to which the Prize Medal was awarded).—A very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass, check action, and all the latest improvements, in handsome Italian walnut wood case, 35 guineas. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be the best and cheapest Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements.

Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 25 and 26 guineas. A great variety cheaper and dearer.

CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—In cases preferring the finer English tone of the Broadwood or Collard quality, the English Model Cottage, 30 guineas, is recommended as a thoroughly good and moderate price. The action is of the same simple description as the above makers', and therefore especially adapted to the country, where the most occasional actions are objectionable in many of the tunes. In elegant rosewood case, with full fret, similar in every respect to the finer instruments at 40 guineas. Price 30 guineas; in walnut, 40 guineas.

Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES.—CHAPPELL and CO. have a large Stock of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by the best makers, for SALE or HIRE, which have been taken in exchange, in very excellent order. Also, New Instruments of every description.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany or plain walnut, the best Pianoforte manufactured, with perfect check action, the full compass, and all the latest improvements. Messrs. Chappell strongly recommend this instrument as the best small cheap pianoforte at or since the same price, whether for occasional or constant use.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas; other varieties at 35 and 45 guineas. Illustrated Lagloire and Alexandre and Harmonium Journal sent free on application to
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with two octaves two footboards, and in oak case. These instruments are lower in price and superior to all other cheap Harmoniums. Descriptive lists on application to
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG, JESSY GRAY, sung by Mr. Fielding, the Music by E. L. HIME. Sent for 18 stamps. A simple and touching story, beautifully told. The music, by the composer of "Pretty Primrose," is graceful and expressive.
DUFF and HODGSON, 32, Oxford-street.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for Piano. By E. L. HIME. Played by Madame Sainton-Dolby at Prince and Princess of Wales's Marlborough House Ball. One of the most exquisite romances we have ever heard.—Review. Sent for 18 stamps.—DUFF and HODGSON, 32, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, by STEPHEN GLOVER, for the Piano, one of the best of Glover's celebrated marches. Sent for 18 stamps.
DUFF and HODGSON, 32, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
"The music of 'Mirella' is as good as that of 'Faust;' perhaps in some respects better."—Daily News.
"The music of 'Mirella' is the most southern genuine and charming work."—The Times.
"The music of 'Mirella' will as surely make its way with the public as that of 'Faust.'"—Standard.
"A capital opera. No living man could write anything for the voice more grateful."—Morning Post.
"We have to thank Mr. Mitchell for giving us an opportunity of hearing the best work of one who certainly now is the greatest living operatic composer."—Saturday Review.
The whole of the music may be had of every Musicseller in the United Kingdom.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." The principal pianoforte arrists are the following:—
MDLLE. TITIENS—"Non mais il sera." 3s.
MDLLE. TREBELLI—La ringiovanita." 3s. 6d.
MDLLE. VOLPINI—Felice Pastorel (Shepherd's Song). 4s.
SIGNOR GIUGLINI—Ah, non credea mirarti, 3s. 6d.
MR. SANTLEY—O Ladies at an Regate, 3s. 6d.
MR. SIMS REEVES—Ah, non credea mirarti, 3s. 6d.
THE OPENING CHORUS AT A NOND—Pastian Carole, 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." The Pianoforte Arrangements are by Mr. Calkott (three books).
Kuhe.
Wallace.
Benedict.
Osmore.
Rimbault.
Godfrey.
Jeffries' Brinkerie.
Richardson.
Charles Coote.
Lindsay.
Ballman.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

KUHE'S MIRELLA FANTASIA on Gounod's new and immensely successful Opera. Price 4s. BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S MIRELLA. The Favourite Airs from Gounod's new Opera, as Solos and Duets, in 3 books, 3s. and 4s. each. BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MIRELLA.—Two pieces on Gounod's new Opera, by Brinley Richards:—1. The Serenade. 2. The Soldiers' Chorus. The most exquisite subject in the opera. Price 3s. each.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA QUADRILLES, on Gounod's new Opera, splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA WALTZES on Gounod's new Opera. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE SAVOYARD MELODY as published in Italian, "Ah, dostmi" (2s. 6d.); in English, "Ah, would that I were free" (2s. 6d.); and as a Pianoforte Duet, by Brinley Richards, 3s.; for the Pianoforte, by Nordmann (easy), 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE OPENING CHORUS ("One of the most delightful and fascinating Choruses ever penned."—Morning Telegraph) for Voices, 2s. 6d.; for Duet, 3s., also as a Song, 3s. 6d.; arranged for the Pianoforte by Brinley Richards, 3s.; and arranged for the Piano by Nordmann, 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S MIRELLA. Brilliant Fantasia on favourite Airs from Gounod's Pianoforte. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' MIRELLA. Fantasia on the new and successful Opera of M. GOUNOD. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' CAPRERA. Chanson Napolitaine, Dedicated to Garibaldi. A most fascinating little piece. By the Author of "Zappolla Tai." Price 3s. To be had everywhere.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' RAPPELLE TOI, a Romance for the Pianoforte, as popular as "Rosines Mot." Tenth Edition. Price 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

CLARIBEL'S BEST SONGS.

Maggie's Secret.	Although the Day be Never so Long.
Twin Four Ells.	Little Bird, Little Bird on the Tree.
Susan's Story.
The Blue Ribbon.	Nicola's Treasure.
The Broken Sixpence.	Nicola's Lament.
The Old Cloak.	Nicola's Home.
The Gipsy Child.	Five o'Clock in the Morning.
Through the Jessamine.	Won't you tell me Why.
Won't you tell me Why.	Remember Me.
You and I.	Jessy Dean.
Lowland Mary.	Jessy Gray.

HUMPHOTT'S ARRANGEMENTS.

Brinley Richards.—Daniel's Choice	3 0
Rubo.—Maggie's Secret	3 0
Dumas.—Janet's Choice	3 0
Dumas.—Susan's Story	3 0
Frank Mori.—Agnes Claire's Choice Waltzes ...	4 0
Harrison.—Claribel Quadrille	4 0

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

HARMONIUMS
BOOSEY and Co. 24, Holles-street.
The 6-GUINEA HARMONIUM (Cottage) has a soft and agreeable quality of tone.
The 20-GUINEA HARMONIUM (for Schools) has a rich, full, and powerful quality of tone, suitable for Churches.
The CHURCH HARMONIUM, 30 guineas, is a fine, an very powerful, and admirably adapted for places of worship.
The DRAWING-ROOM MODEL Harmonium by Messrs. Alexandre, new and accomplished, at greatly reduced prices, including a most instrumental work of Facility for Practice.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

PIANOFORTES
BOOSEY and Co. 24, Holles-street.
THE MINIATURE PIANOFORTE, 30 guineas, in walnut, has the full compass and an excellent quality of tone and touch. The repetition check grand piano Model, 35 guineas, have been distinguished by many cases and inferior construction. The Musicians, on its contrary, in the full compass, with the most advantageous style being of the very best manufacture possible.
The 50-GUINEA MODEL, in rosewood, or if guineas in Italian walnut, is a highly-finished, elegant case, with every modern improvement, and suitable for any drawing-room. The touch is elastic, and tone of the best quality, with quality that especially distinguishes first-class English pianos.
The 60-GUINEA MODEL, in rosewood, or if guineas in Italian walnut, is a highly-finished, elegant case, with every modern improvement, and suitable for any drawing-room. The touch is elastic, and tone of the best quality, with quality that especially distinguishes first-class English pianos.
The 75-GUINEA MODEL, in rosewood, or if guineas in Italian walnut, is a highly-finished, elegant case, with every modern improvement, and suitable for any drawing-room. The touch is elastic, and tone of the best quality, with quality that especially distinguishes first-class English pianos.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

NEW BOOKS.

MR. TYLER'S GYMNASTICS.
Just published, price 6d.; post-free, 7d.,
THE NEW SYSTEM OF MUSICAL GYMNASTICS AS AN INSTRUMENT IN EDUCATION. By M. Tyler, B.A., M.C.P.—W. CWERDIN, 97, Strand.

SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOOKS.

BUTTER'S READING AND SPELLING in Easy Syllables. 42nd Edition. Price 9d. bound.
BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING-BOOK and EXPOSITOR. 59th Edition. Price 6d., bound.
BUTTER'S GRADUAL PRIMER, with Engravings. 18th Edition. Price 6d., bound.
London: SIMPKIN and Co.; Whitaker and Co.; Longman and Co.

SHOOTING BY LADIES.—The first of a series of articles on SHOOTING BY LADIES appeared in THE QUEEN, the Lady's Newspaper. Also a supplement containing the Fashions for the month, and all the latest intelligence in the Fashion News of the Week, by correspondents. Price 6d.; a copy for eight stamps.—Office, 346, Strand, W.C.

DECALCOMANIE.—Instructions, 6d. Designs from in sheet. Every Material, separately or complete, in Boxes, 10s. 6d.; White Wood Slabs, extra fittings, 10s. and 20s. STAINED WINDOWS (DIAPHANIE). Instructions, 6d. Cases of Materials, 10s. 6d. and 21s. each.
WILLIAM RAWLINS, 39, Cornwall-street, London, E.

THE WAVERLEY ROUTE
Through the
MIDDLAND COUNTRY.
For Trains, &c., apply to Bradshaw's "Railway Guide," and North British Railway Time Tables.

CLOSE OF THE LONDON SEASON.
SEWELL and CO.
are now making their Annual REDUCTION of STOCK, and invite the attention of Ladies to many great bargains in FLAIN and FANCY SILKS,
GRENADINES, BAREGES and MUSLINS,
SEARFS, TRAVELLING, and YACHTING DRESSES.
Patterns sent free.—SEWELL and CO.,
Longdon House, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

ORGANDIE MUSLINS, GRENADINES, ETC.
GRANT and GASK are selling an immense purchase of the best French Organdie Muslins in every fashionable shade, at 1s. 6d. per yard, worth 2s. 6d. Also a beautiful assortment of Grenadines, at 1s. 6d. per yard, and other entirely new fabrics, proportionately cheap.
In the Mantle and Shawl Departments, including make-up Skirts, the prices will be found greatly reduced in consequence of the Stock being too extensive.
Patterns and Illustrations of Costume forwarded free on application.
58, 59, 60, 61, 62, Oxford-street; 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street, London.

RICH SILKS, MOIRE ANTIQUES, ETC.
GRANT and GASK respectfully recommend one of the richest Stocks of Silks which have been bought much under value, consisting of the newest and most effective costumes—viz., Superb Moire Antiques, in all the new colours, at 2½ guineas the Dress, usually sold at 3½ guineas; also Rich Plain Glacés, at 2½ guineas for fourteen yards, all trimmed. An immense purchase of Rich Striped Lyons Glacés, at 1½ guineas the fourteen yards, usually sold at 2 guineas. Also a large assortment of Fancy Silks, in a variety of quite new patterns, from 29s. 6d. the Full Dress.
In the Mantle Department, upwards of 200 pieces of the new make Black Drap de Lyon Glacé, strongly recommended to wear, from 2½ guineas. Patterns and Illustrations free.
58, 59, 60, 61, 62, Oxford-street; 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street.

INDIA SHAWLS.—FARMER and ROGERS respectfully call attention to their magnificent variety of CASHMERE SHAWLS, including specialities manufactured in India, and many fine specimens selected expressly for wedding presents.—India Shawl Warehouse, 171, 173, 175, and 177, Regent-street, W. and her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, 171, 173, 175, 177, Regent-street.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Checked Glacés, 12 yards,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 4, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Striped Glacés, 12 yards,
Also Patterns of Rich Silks.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 4, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Checked Glacés, 12 yards,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

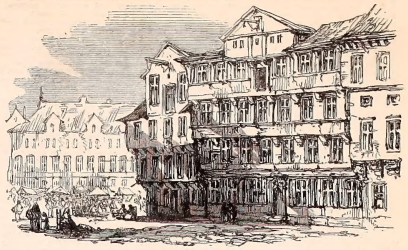
NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Checked Glacés, 12 yards,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

GLACÉ ALPACAS and STRIPED LAWNS, for Morning and Seaside wear.
Patterns free.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, Walking and Carriage Costumes, Scotch Serges, Plaid Tweeds and Linsey Woolseys for Ladies' Travelling and Seaside Dresses.
Patterns free.
JAMES LOCKE and CO.,
154, Regent-street, London.
By appointment to the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
157, 159, and 161, Regent-street, London.

SEWELL and CO'S MOIRE ANTIQUES, Splendidly manufactured, celebrated throughout the Kingdom. Patterns free.—SEWELL and CO.,
Longdon House, Fifth-street, and 15, Compton-street, Soho, W.

MARRIAGE TROUSSEAUX and BRIDAL OUTFITS.—CHRISTIAN and RATHBONE respectfully invite attention to their Stock of Ladies' Outfitting Goods, containing Fashion Dresses made with the excellence and durability of material which have given such high reputation for upwards of 70 years.—Christian and Rathbone, 11, Wigmore-street, London, W.



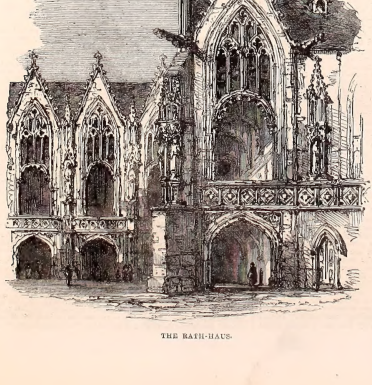
SANSPLEXTUM CRINOLINES,
16, 18, 20, 24, 30, 36, 42, 48, 54, 60, 72, 84, 96, 108, 120, 132, 144, 156, 168, 180, 192, 204, 216, 228, 240, 252, 264, 276, 288, 300, 312, 324, 336, 348, 360, 372, 384, 396, 408, 420, 432, 444, 456, 468, 480, 492, 504, 516, 528,

Leaves from a Sketch-Book.

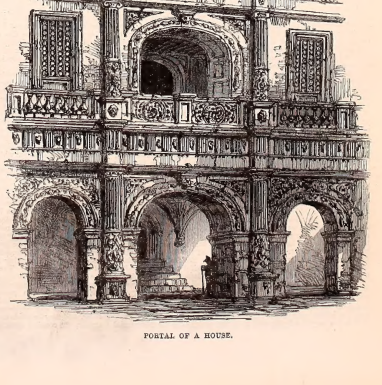
BRUNSWICK.

THERE are few cities in Germany which are better known to us by name than Brunswick; nor are its picturesque attractions much less interesting than the historical associations connected with the place. It is situated to the south of Hanover upon the River Ocker, which in the days of Brunswick's prosperity as a leading city of the Hanseatic League served to convey its commerce to the Weser, and thence to the German Ocean. As is well known, it is the capital of the Duchy which gives its name to the reigning houses of Hanover and England. It is the cradle of that race, which, when Queen Anne was ready dead, presented us with King George I., whose great-grandson thanked God in good vernacular that he had been born a Briton. It was a white day in our calendar when George of Brunswick-Lüneburg first set foot upon British soil as Sovereign of those realms, though he could not address his English subjects in their own language. From that crab-stock, as it then appeared, has sprung the fairest fruit of this present time; and, perhaps, if certain Scotch lords had been gifted with the second-sight peculiar to the Children of the Mist, and had looked forward to the reign of his descendant Victoria, they would not have shed their blood for the Jacobite cause. If any man were inclined to moralise, he could not do better than take his stand in some quaint old street of Brunswick, or under some rich portal, like that shown in our Engraving, and in as brown a study as the Black Brunswicker there portrayed. He might there reflect upon the comparatively small beginnings of all sublunary greatness. Hardly three centuries have elapsed since the head of the house of Brunswick might almost have seen half his dominions from his bed-room window, and now the sun itself cannot set upon the empire of one of his posterity.

Before we go further through the streets of Brunswick in quest of some picturesque objects for our Sketch-Book, let us take a glance at its history. The English reader cannot be supposed to be minutely versed in all the ins and outs of German divisions and subdivisions, and to be able at once to give the articulations of every leaf on every branch of every genealogical tree, from the houses of Hapsburg and Hohenzollern to those of Lippe-Schaumburg and Lichtenstein. The history of the city and duchy of Brunswick is practically that of its dukes. The house of Brunswick is reputed to be one of the most ancient in Germany. It derives its origin from Albert Azzo II., Margrave of Este, in North Italy. This Prince ruled also over Milan, Genoa, and parts of Lombardy. By his marriage with Kunegunda, heiress to Guelph III., Duke of Bavaria, he left a son, Guelph IV., who inherited both his Italian and German possessions. Hence our own Royal family, who are descended from him, are called Guelphs; and hence the son and daughter of the late Duke of Sussex, by his marriage with Lady Augusta Murray, took the names respectively of Sir Frederick and Mdlle. d'Este. The former, as our readers may remember, was, at the death of his father, an unsuccessful claimant for the dukedom of Sussex, from which he was precluded by the Royal Marriage Act; the latter became the wife of the late Lord Chancellor Truro. Henry the Black, son of Guelph IV., added to his dominions a large portion of Lower Saxony by his marriage with the daughter and heiress of the Duke of Saxony. Henry the Magnanimous, son of Henry the Black, again, by a judicious marriage with a wealthy heiress, increased his possessions by the addition of Brunswick and other territories, so that when he died, in 1139, he left to his celebrated son, Henry the Lion, a vast tract of country extending from Italy to the coast of the Baltic. This Henry the Lion, who married Matilda, the daughter of our Henry II. and sister of Richard Cœur de Lion—so that the "lion" element was strong enough in his family—endeavoured to take the lion's share of any available territory, and seized upon Holstein. He was in advance of his age, and might have done well for a German king or emperor of the present day. This act of spoliation, however, did not meet with the success it might have claimed in these more enlightened times, possibly because conferences to argue lions into disgorging lambs had not then come into fashion. A more summary and more effective mode of proceeding was adopted. The Germans Diet, virtuously indignant at this and other delinquencies of Henry, put him under the ban of the Empire, deprived him of the greater part of his dominions, and left him only Brunswick and Lüneburg. Otho, Henry's grandson, was formally recognised as first Duke of Brunswick, in 1235, when the duchy was made a fief of the Empire. He thus became the founder of the present House of Brunswick. But, as is the case with the French Royal family, his descendants eventually became divided into two branches—Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, so named from a town seven miles to the south-east of Brunswick, and Brunswick-Lüneburg from a town and district of that name in Hanover. From the latter, our Royal family are immediately descended: the former, or elder branch, still occupy the dukedom of Brunswick. Ernest Augustus, who married Sophia, the granddaughter of James I. of England, was raised, in 1692, to the dignity and title of Elector of Hanover, instead of Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg. His son, George Louis, George I.



THE MARKET-PLACE.



OLD HOUSES NEAR THE CATHEDRAL.

ON THE CANAL.

THE BATH-HAUS.

PORTAL OF A HOUSE.

of England, becoming, by the death of his mother, Sophia, heir to the British throne according to the terms of the Act of Settlement, is called the first monarch of the Brunswick rather than of the Hanoverian line, simply because the former is the more ancient title.

So much, then, for the family of Brunswick-Lüneburg. Let us now inquire the city, which is under the sway of the Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel line. And first to the cathedral, built by Henry the Lion in honour of that ardent saint, St. Blaize, the patron of the city, and a very appropriate patron too, as the bones were all certainly of wood. Had he been consulted as to the matter, it is not improbable that he might have transposed two of the letters in the name of his favourite saint. However, whether he has withdrawn himself for a while, or is reserving for a grand foredespite the fine old wooden houses, which with their projecting stories seem to be so very confidential to one another, and to whisper the secrets of the by-gone times over the heads of the stolid loungers in the streets below, certain it is that large numbers still remain, in spite, or perhaps by favour, of the good St. Blaize.

The cathedral possesses one very notable feature of interest beyond its antiquity; but what it lacks above ground is guns below in its vaults, where in the remains of the tombs of the Dukes of Brunswick who have fallen in battle. Among the most conspicuous of these warriors are Charles William Ferdinand and his heroic son Frederick William, who, when he had gained his military laurels so early as the Seven Years' War, was selected, in 1792, to lead the allied Germans against the French, in which he vainly hoped would be a mere "military promenade to Paris." But he had to face a tiger at last. It was on Sept. 19, 1792—the very day when the National Convention at Paris had met to answer his violent manifesto by a defiant proclamation of a Republic—that the Duke of Brunswick, the greatest master of the art of war in Europe, at the head of disciplined and veteran legions, was fiercely repulsed by the ragged and hastily-levied Carmagnoles of France on the heights of Valmy. The sans culotte was too much for pipeclay. Göthe, who served with the Germans, declared that he had been present at "the birth of a new era in the world's history." It was a baptism of blood, indeed—for the grim priesthood and sponsored by the rough hewers who soon even declined in this world to leave their work to be done in heaven any than theirs. A fatality seems to cling to the house of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. The old Duke was mortally wounded in the same battle against Napoleon in 1806, and fell mortally wounded on the fatal field of Jena. His son, Duke Frederick William, brother of the ill-fated Caroline of Brunswick, wife of George IV., was among the first hereditary sufferers of his family. Returning from exile after Napoleon's reverse at Leipsic, in 1813, he proved but a brief career of power, as he was called to put himself at the head of his Black Brunswickers and join the Duke of Wellington against the common foe. Amongst those who set forth to do battle at Waterloo none advanced with a more stern resolution to avenge his father's death and his own wrongs than Frederick William of Brunswick. Byron's lines upon him, though false in fact, with a sad presentiment of his fate, "rushed into the field and foremost fighting fell," are well known. Like so many of his race, he was struck down at Quatre Bras in this famous battle, on the "last Sabbath" of Waterloo. He has an honoured resting-place here, and the black flags that droop above him, and the white plumes that the loving hands have laid reverently upon his coffin, still witness how dear he was. Peace to him! His successor, nephew to Caroline, Queen Charles, who was a minor at his father's death, was from 1815 to 1823 under the guardianship of his uncle, George IV., who administered the affairs of the Duchy for him. But he was neglected by the saintly example and pious admonitions of this singularly well-chosen "guide, philosopher, and friend," may be gathered from the fact that Duke Charles, after a flagitious reign of some five years, was indignantly deposed by his subjects in 1830, and his younger brother, William, now reigns in his stead. The meaning of the "Fratzenthan in Europe" was not a very brilliant success. Though compelled to beat a precipitate retreat from Brunswick, Duke Charles had secured the feathering of a nice nest in the shape of an enormous quantity of gold and other valuables. This Duke of Brunswick was sufficiently notorious in London some thirty years ago. He has long resided in Paris, keeping watch and ward over his jewels in a fashion that "puts to shame and the blush" as Mr. R. Leighton sings. Mysterious hints are told of the sui- in which the Duke has contrived to secure his low that, if a thief should force it open, spring-guns are so arranged as to kill him on the spot. In spite of all these precautions, however, the precious gems were stolen within the last few months, they were speedily recovered by the vigilance of the French police. It is not likely that when the leaves has power to the thief and pesting-place in the tomb of his fathers. Near the remains of the warrior Dukes lie the ashes of Caroline of Brunswick, who, at least as sinned against as sinning, even if all be true that was alleged against her. The seven-branched brass candlestick in this cathedral, presented by Henry the Lion, is remarkable as being a copy of that which stood in the temple at Jerusalem. This might well be, as representations of the Jewish candlestick are said to be seen on some monuments at Rome. Not so with the other relics, which were palmed off upon the pious simplicity of Henry when he was in Palestine, such as a griffin's claw and a rib of Goliath, of which Professor Owen would be able to give an account slightly at variance with that of the ruthless slayer of the giant. But a square opposite to the cathedral stands a bronze lion on a high pedestal. This was brought from Constantinople by Henry, and is said to represent the tame lion which used to follow that Monarch wherever he went, and after his death to have died for grief at the doors of the Cathedral. Credat Judæus.

We next come to the Rath-haus, of which we give an Engraving. It is a truly magnificent specimen of architecture of the fifteenth century, and speaks of a time when the burghers of Brunswick had no need to count the cost before they sat down to build.

Amongst the many interesting churches are those of St. Martin, St. Catherine, and St. Andrew; the latter of which has a steeple 316 ft. high, and is ornamented on the south side with the figure of a lion, as though St. Cigulius had been called in to give his advice as to the final decorations.

Not far from the cathedral is the museum, which contains the usual collection of fossils, mutilated statues, majolica ware, silver plate, wood and ivory carvings, and other articles of virtù, besides the pictures of Frederick the Great and the Duke Frederick William of Brunswick. But amongst the curiosities none are more interesting and valuable than the skull and arm-bone of St. Blaize, with fourteen antique rings still remaining on his fingers, rather a large amount of vanity for a saint to have carried about with him. He must have been one lover of jewels: and as he is the patron saint of Brunswick one can easily see whence Duke Charles has derived his taste. Besides this relic an interesting cup, said to have been carved by Kosciusko in prison.

There is a tolerable collection of pictures in the museum, one of singular power, by Jan Steen, of Leyden, whose unfortunate propensity did not prevent him from holding his brush with a steady and vigorous hand; and a portrait by Holbein of the great friend and patron, Sir Thomas More. Whatever the merits of the pictures in the collection, a large number of them have undoubtedly made the journey to Paris after the Battle of Jena. Still, however interesting the curiosities in the museum of these old German towns as elsewhere may be, it must needs be confessed that one is rarely sorry to leave them and get once more into the open air. If the truth must be told, there is always a look of faded splendour about everything in general sensation of flatness, that detracts greatly from the flavour of the intellectual feast. And in Brunswick this is the more remarkable and agreeable. Probably in anticipation of the coming artillery, which would make very short work of the fortifications of the Middle Ages, the ramparts were levelled in 1794 and converted into plantations and walks for the inhabitants. The park and gardens around the new palace (the former one having been burnt down by the mob, either in honour of St. Blaize or in disgust at the Duke—the latter, most probably) are also open to the public. Besides this provision for the recreation of the people, there is a beautiful avenue of lindentrees leading from the town to the Duke's chateau at Richmond, the grounds of which are laid out in imitation of our own Richmond Park; so that, what with the magnificence of the public buildings and the quaintness of the wooden houses, the rich foliage of the trees, the beautiful promenades, and the tasteful parks, Brunswick possesses much to interest and charm the tourist, the antiquary, or the idler.

It is not easy in a flying visit to gather much as to the commercial prosperity of the city, but the trade of Brunswick is reputed to be considerable, and its two great fairs every year, with its wool and cattle markets, to be productive of a reasonable amount of wealth. In common with all the inland towns in Germany, which once belonged to the great Hanseatic League, it has, of course, declined since the Middle Ages. There was a time when the Princes of the Rhine and the Counts of Holland, the four great cities, of which Brunswick was one. No such prosperity is likely, or even possible, in these times; but there is no reason why Brunswick—whose sons have stood fast upon many a hard-contested field—should not be able to hold her own in the peaceful struggles of the world's industry, as well as she may hope will be the only antagonism in the "good time coming."

THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON.

MOST Londoners and visitors to London in the season have enjoyed an opportunity of witnessing some of the "sights" of the week including that gay and animated scene which is depicted in the large Coloured Engraving presented to our readers with the present Double Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Since July, 1860, when the Queen's own hand first fired the rifle-shot at the first meeting of the National Rifle Association, the annual gathering on Wimbledon Common, which has shown an increased degree of interest in the matter and a higher standard of proficiency in the use of their weapon. The concourse of performers, as well as of spectators, has been increasing every year. In 1862, 1863, and 1864 already become greater than the means for their accommodation. The Council have found that the space then inclosed and the number of targets at their disposal became inadequate to the requirements of competitors pressed forward eagerly, day after day and all day long, to compete in one class or another for the valuable prizes offered by Her Majesty, by the application of funds at the disposal of the council, and the interest shown all over the country in rifle contests, have compelled them to make further provision. The Prince Consort's Association according to the "ground to its right" to such an extent that the windmill, for a year or two, has been left in the centre of the ground, and forms as nearly as possible the centre of their position. Last year, also, there were only 200 targets in use, whereas there are now more than eighty-one. The attractions in money and articles of value, given away as prizes, amounted in July, 1863, to £4386; at the present meeting they will amount to a sum not far short of £5000. Regarding no account is taken of prizes such as the Elcho Shield and others possessing a value far beyond the intrinsic worth of the gift. In comparison with 1860, the rapid growth of the undertaking will be even more manifest. In that year the association had only sixty-seven butts, and the annual gathering was limited to the value of £2000; this year the prize list contains 326 items, of which the value, as already stated, is £5000. The necessity for the widening of the ground suggests itself to every mind. The great difficulty in the way of any such step is the fact that the position has been told off to fire at a range near the Wimbledon end of the common, and, after doing his duty in that quarter, finds that he is interested in other matters, and does not like to be called off to the other end to go back a mile and a half under a broiling sun, such as that of last week, to receive his prize. It may be added that a proportionate supply of ammunition. The Council, foreseeing this difficulty, and determined to advance with the times, procured, at an outlay of about £1000, a large number of targets of a new and handy pattern, but at present laid down from the site of the old Grand Stand to the "Queen's Prize" butts, on the western side of the rifle ground. The tramway is of the same elementary but serviceable kind which existed many years ago in a few rural and mining districts, where it was found necessary to supersede the existing system of railways. Its gauge is four in number, and intended to start at intervals of ten minutes, are drawn well under the hill, and, when loaded, will retain their speed unaided with the greatest ease. Their shape may be described as an elongated square box, the sides of which are formed of iron rails, and the side so to hide the wheels completely from view. Those who have never seen the vehicle in question can form a good idea of the Wimbledon tramway by imagining a long line of the ordinary iron rails of the stocks and the lower portion mounted upon wheels. At least six pieces of Stilton, or a proportionate quantity of packing sticks, can easily more in "the well" in the centre. The motive power is supplied by three horses and a driver, who, by the Monday next, will be protected from their ordinary duties. Another change consequent on the growth of these meetings at Wimbledon is entailed by the fact that the "Queen's Prize" is now fired for on the Friday, and that all the non-commissioned officers in charge of ranges to be quartered in one place, as heretofore, instead of in two, as has been the case, and are virtually be consumed in passing from either extremity of the line to the camp and back again. Two separate divisions or wings have therefore been formed, and the markers will in future retain their old position, while the others have had ground assigned to them in the rear of the firing-point.

The camp itself, which covers a space one mile in circumference, displays a spread of canvas which is the wonder of all visitors to it. In its appearance, as well as in the amount of accommodation it provides, there is a very great improvement. The old, unsightly, straight, uniform arrangement of the tents has always at present been removed, and its site is now occupied by a circular tent, in which the superintendent of the camp resides, and by a number of others in the rear, on the left, are two ranges of tents of the county volunteer associations, twenty-two in number. Each of these, containing four tents, is pitched in a semicircular form, and thus affords ample room to display on the poles of their tents flags bearing the arms of the different counties, and the banners of the various corps. Behind the extreme east, are the library and club-room for the use of the whole camp. On the west, at the extremity of the line of county tents, stands a handsome gigantic refreshment-booth, which, unlike last year's, has been substantially built of wood, tastefully painted, and roofed with tiles. On the south side with the usual bars, stores and other cooking apparatus at the back, by means of which it is intended to supply the camp every day. Standing altogether in upon a scale of sufficient magnitude to supply not only the army and the ground followers, but all the public who may be expected to patronise it, besides the quartermaster's stores, the building stand the electric-telegraph office and the post-office, erected expressly for the convenience of the camp. Behind the refreshment-booth, facing which, to the south, are an extensive circle of tents for the accommodation of the officers and their servants, and a number of others, canteens, and other officials; with the press-and the printing-tent, which will be used for putting in type scores, programmes, and such like documents. Immediately in front of this circle of tents a splendid clock has been fitted up by Mr. Bennett, with a dial which can be seen from all parts of the ground. Close by, over the camp. From this point on the right is the Exhibition-tent, in which many of the principal manufacturers and tradesmen of London have taken advantage of the present season to display. Here is also a tent belonging to Messrs. Watkins and E. Edwards, in which photographs may be taken. The Commissariat Department has in distance 340 bell-tents, which will be inhabited by the members of the association during the week. To each range a marquee has been pitched for the accommodation of the London Scottish; and across the ravine, to the left, are a similar number for the London Rifle Brigade. A shed capable of holding 400 persons has been built by the Army Company and the tents of the 1st Middlesex Artillery, while the commodious bell-tent of the "Victoria" stands in a pleasing relief on their accustomed site, the high ground to the north. The Queen's Westminster Rifles have also their encampment, the Inner Guards and the War Office have readily lent their assistance to its formation. The stores contributed by the military authorities are abundant for all purposes, there being no fewer than 420 government bell-tents on the ground, besides the hospital marquee, the tents for commanding officers, and the covering for the regular troops, police, and officials of various grades. The limits set upon each regiment in the matter of bringing forth their being fewer than twenty or more numerous than fifty under canvas; though the Victorias, who provide their own tents and all kinds of stores, exceed the prescribed bounds, and muster sixty at the least. Their means and appliances for outdoor existence are in the best order, and quite a model regiment in every particular. In particular, the cooking apparatus, devised by Lieutenant Alfred Savill Tomkins, is an invaluable adjunct of the camp. In this picturesque part of the common, overlooking a magnificent expanse of undulating and well-timbered country, the Victoria Rifles fraternise with their neighbours of the associated camp, and share with them the labours and associations of this free-and-easy state of life. Some idea of it may be derived from a glance at our two illustrations in the present Number. We may see in the Coloured Engraving, amidst the various groups of volunteers and their visitors, who are scattered in picturesque confusion over the field, a gallant cook of the Victoria Rifle Corps, who, thinking his grimace, at this hospitable kitchen-door, where he seems to be inviting some lady friends to taste a sample of his cookery, which he concludes behind him have already tasted and approved. A party of the Queen's Westminsters are "boarding" one of the successful competitors, belonging to their own corps, who has been hoisted upon their shoulders to bear him in triumphal procession through the camp. Others are practising with the rifle at various marks, telescopes in hand, are watching the progress of the game, and some are cleaning their rifles after the morning's work. In the distance we may observe that the stern pastime of mimic warfare is occasionally relieved by eating strawberries, flirting, and playing with children. Such are the humours and amusements of Wimbledon Common in the present week. As for the indoor life of the volunteers in camp, we refer to our Engraving on our front page, which represents the interior of their club-room, where an hour's quiet reading or social conversation may while away the evening before the appointed time of repose. We intend to publish next week other illustrations in our next, when we shall give some account of the shooting, which commenced on Tuesday, at one o'clock, and will be continued until Friday next. The camp was fully occupied on Monday, the Council and its Staff, as well as the Victoria and London Scottish corps, having arrived two days before. The Prince of Wales rode over from Richmond on Monday afternoon to witness the preparations. He was received by Earl Grosvenor, Lord Elcho, and the secretary, Captain Mildmay, who showed him everything. The Prince seemed much amused at the "Queen's Prize"—the iron figure of a deer which, by a simple mechanical contrivance, is made to bound across the ground at a distance of 200 yards. Highness took a few shots at this mark with his own double-barrel breechloader, and hit the deer in the right place, just beyond the shoulder. He next had a ride on the ground, and, after saluting the company present mounted his horse and left the ground.

The following are the regulations and the prize list of this meeting:—

A notice has been issued that "the five-grooved Enfield Government pattern rifles are henceforth to be considered the standard weapon, and that no other Government pattern as used by the rank and file of the volunteer force."

REGULATIONS.

1. There are to be six ranges—200 yards; B, 500 yards; C, 600 yards; D, 800 yards; E, 900 yards; and F, 1000 yards.

2. The date of the target to be 6 ft. by 6 ft., as in 1861.

3. There are to be square bull's-eyes and centres at all ranges; bull's-eye counting 4, centre 5 points.

4. For volunteers, the shooting at range A to be off the shoulder; at the remaining ranges, from the rest, or off the shoulder, at the option of the competitor.

5. For all comers, the shooting at range A, unless otherwise specified, to be off the shoulder; at the remaining ranges, from the rest only, no artificial rests to be allowed unless otherwise specified.

6. Unless otherwise specified, prizes open to all comers may be shot for with any description of rifle not exceeding 10 lb. in weight.

7. Unless otherwise specified, the following rights to be allowed.

8. No hair-triggers to be allowed.

9. In all shooting, the privilege to volunteers only the minimum pull of trigger to be 0 lb.

10. Prizes to be given for rifles classified as follows:—1. Large Bore.—A. Long Enfield; B, Any rifle of bore Rifle Government pattern, as used by the rank and file of the volunteer force; C, Any description of rifle not to exceed 12 lb. under 10 lb., which can carry Government 577-bore ammunition. 2. Any bore A, Any rifle under 10 lb., with metal sights and military sights. 3. Any bore A, Any rifle under 10 lb., with metal rearsights and military sights. Sights not to exceed in height those of the Government pattern. Rifles may be used on or before the 1st of June. The sights must in any case allow of the regulation bayonet being fixed without injury to the rifle. 4. Any bore under 10 lb. with telescope affixed, weight of telescope not included. D, Any rifle under 10 lb., with telescope affixed. 5. Any bore, Any description of rifle. 6. Distance 2000 yards, projectile solid bullet and shell. This competition to take place at Hythe, or at such other place as the committee may hereafter decide upon. No prizes to be given unless two competitors enter. 7. Breech-loaders. No artisans.

11. Ties.—1. Where prizes are competed for at one range only, ties to fire one shot each at the same range until the best score gets the first. 2. Where prizes are competed for at more than one range, and adjudged according to the aggregate scores made at each range, ties to fire one shot at the highest range until the best shot be returned.

12. In the competition for prizes restricted to volunteers, at ranges A, B, and C, the Government ammunition, as supplied on the ground from the Government stores, to be used. Any competitor detected using any other ammunition than competing for any prizes during the remainder of the meeting. 2. Every signalman, on payment of one shilling per shot. These shots to be fired in order, when practicable, as formed, and at the target next to that on which the competitor is shooting—that to be allowed after the squad has commenced the competition.

13. Sighting-shots.—Two shots to be fired in each competition.

15. Competitors, if required, to submit their rifles for inspection before, during, or after a match.

16. No competitor, unless otherwise specified to enter more than once for any prize.

17. All entries to close on the day and at the hour fixed for the commencement of each competition.

18. All competitors for open volunteer or all-comers' prizes, who enter their names on or before the 1st of July, to be supplied gratuitously with a card of entry, and due notice will be given of the probable day and hour when their squad will shoot. All subsequent entries to be squadded on the ground.

19. All winners of the Queen's Prize (second stage), all winners in the Albert, Prince of Wales's, Alexandra, Duke of Cambridge's, Duke of Cox, Wellington, Dudley, Derby, and Oaks competitions, and also the winners of first prizes at any of the meetings of the Queen in the "Any Rifle" Queen's" competitions, to be debarred from again winning the same prize or prizes. N.B. A 400 yard range will be added to the Albert, Prince of Wales's competitions.

20. The winners of money prizes, as in previous years, to have the option of taking them in money or in kind.

21. All winners of rifle competitions shall, on or before the morning of Friday, the 22nd of July, declare to the secretary their intentions to take their prize in money or in kind.

22. Those who wish to take their prize in money can be paid on the ground, on presenting at the secretary's office a receipt certificate, signed by the chief of the statistical department and countersigned by the secretary.

23. All winners of prizes in the competitions for rifles restricted to volunteers are required to appear in the uniform of their corps.

24. Any competitor who appears on the ground without previously obtained permission from the officer or person in charge of the firing-point to be fined 5s., and, in default of such fine being paid forthwith, disqualified from any of the prizes during the remainder of the meeting.

25. No paid volunteer or commissioned officer who has served in the Army or militia to be qualified to shoot for prizes open to volunteers only.

26. No alteration to be made in these regulations.

27. All disputed points to be decided by the umpire, whose decision shall be final and entered in a book kept for the purpose.

VOLUNTEER PRIZES.

First Stage of her Majesty's Prize.—1. To the best shot.—The silver medal of the association. 2. To the second best shot.—The silver medal of the association. (a) A Whitworth rifle, value £20; (b) The National Rifle Association badge; (c) £5 in money. 3. To each of the next thirty best shots.—(a) A silver medal of the association; (b) The National Rifle Association badge; (c) £5 in money. 4. To each of the forty next best shots.—(a) A silver medal of the association; (b) £5 in money. Each shot not entitled to shoot in the second stage of the Queen's Prize, and each competitor who has made a total of the ranges A, B, C, D, and E, less than 100 points, to be disqualified from competing for the Queen's Prize.

Second Stage of her Majesty's Prize.—A cup, value £200, or £200 in money, with the gold medal of the association attached to it. The cup to be won by the competitor who in each competition shall have seven shots at each of the ranges D, E, F, and the highest aggregate score made at those ranges, to count as a first prize at previous ranges A, B, C.

Prince of Wales's Prize.—The Prince of Wales's Prize.—A cup of the value of £100 in money.—This prize to be competed for by the winners of all silver medals in previous competitions of the National Rifle Association and were since the last Wimbledon meeting. Each competitor to have five shots at each of the ranges A, B, and C. No entrance fee.

The St. George's Challenge Vase—Value £250.—Presented for annual competition by Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. C. R. Lindsay, on behalf of the St. George's Rifles. The prize to be competed for with any description of rifle of bore Rifle Government pattern which is used by the rank and file of volunteer battalions, carrying the .577-bore Government ammunition, and with a minimum pull of trigger of 0 lb. It is open to all administrative and consolidated battalions of Great Britain, and also to independent corps which are attached to battalions. The vase, or the value of it, the following year to be awarded, and become the property of the ten best shots in the contest, viz.:—

A gold and enamelled jewel of St. George, to the winner of the challenge vase, and a purse of its sovereigns; a silver and enamelled jewel of St. George, to the second best shot in the contest, and a purse of five sovereigns; a bronze cross of St. George, to the third best shot in the contest, and a purse of four sovereigns; a purse containing four sovereigns, a purse containing three sovereigns, a purse containing two sovereigns, a purse containing two sovereigns, a purse containing two sovereigns, and a purse containing thirty shillings. A large photograph of the challenge vase and jewel, handsomely framed, will also be presented to the battalion which proves itself successful. Each competitor shall have to shoot (14) the position) at each of the ranges A and B. There shall be an entrance fee of 5s. required from those competitors only whose battalions have not subscribed 10s. per company or sub-division to the funds of the association.

The Lord Mayor's Challenge Shield.—Presented by Lord Ebrie for annual competition between the volunteers of England and Scotland. Eight will shoot on each side, at ranges A, B, and F, with any rifles used by the corps in the position, fifteen shots at each range.

The International Inshield Match.—England and Scotland. Twenty shoot on each side. Ranges A, B, and C. Seven shots at each range. Inshield rifle, Hythe position.

Mr. Dillwyn's Prize.—A cup, value £25, given by Mr. Dillwyn, M.P.—This prize shall be competed for with any rifle at long distance firing, entrance fee, as used by the rank and file of volunteer corps, carrying .577-bore ammunition. Each competitor shall have five shots, first without the aid of artificial rest, and such distance within 800 yards as the officer in charge of the squad may direct. Entrance fee, 5s.

Carlisle Prize.—£50 given by the National Rifle Association, and divided into nine prizes of £10, two prizes of £5, four prizes of £2, four prizes of £1, and eight prizes of £1.—These prizes shall be competed for by artillery volunteers. Five shots at 1,000 yards.

Mr. Bass's Prize.—£40 given by Mr. Bass, M.P., and divided into one prize of £20, two prizes of £5, and ten prizes of £1, matching the number of members who have never won a prize at Wimbledon or at any county rifle association meeting.—Any rifle of bona fide volunteer pattern used by the rank and file of volunteer corps. Five shots at range B. Entrance fee, 5s.

The Leslie's Association Prize.—Given by the Leslie's of England.—The competition for these prizes shall be restricted to one hundred of those volunteers who have won a prize at Wimbledon meetings. Five shots at range B, with any rifle of Government pattern used by volunteers.

Match between Lords and Commons.—Fifteen on each side. Ranges A and B. Seven shots. Any rifle under 10 lb.; any position.

Match between Oxford and Cambridge Universities.—Eight on each side. Seven shots at each of the ranges A, B, and C; long Infield rifles; any position.

Earl De Grey and Ripon's Prize, divided as follows:—One prize of £10, two prizes of £5, and ten prizes of £1.—Five shots at ranges C, D, and E; any rifle; any position.

City of London Prizes, value £600, divided as follows, at each of the ranges A and B:—One prize of £25, one of £20, one £15, five £10, sixteen £5, thirty £3, ten £2.—Seven shots at ranges A and B; any rifle of any Government pattern, used by rank and file of volunteer corps, carrying .577-bore ammunition; position, three-fifths kneeling, two-fifths lying down.

Chancellor's Challenge Plate, value £100, competed for by volunteers of the Oxford and Cambridge University Rifle Corps.—Eight on each side. Seven shots at ranges A, B, and C, with long Infields, in the Hythe position.

Monckton Prize.—£100, given as follows:—A prize of £10, two prizes of £5, and ten prizes of £3 ; aggregate value £50. These prizes competed for with any Government breech-loading rifle, at such distances and positions as may be told at the National Rifle Association magazine on the ground. Distance, 200 yards; position, kneeling and lying down; seven shots at each position.—Ten prizes of £5. These prizes awarded to the competitors who make the highest number of marks in the Association match. Entrance fee, 5s.—In the event of £25, two prizes of £5, and ten prizes of £3 ; aggregate value, £50. These prizes competed for with breech-loading rifles, carrying .577-bore ammunition, and with cartridges not carrying their own ignition. Distance 200 yards; position and number. These prizes awarded in the order to the competitors who make the highest number of marks in two consecutive minutes. Entrance fee, 5s.

ALL-COMERS' AND COUNTY MATCHES.

All-comers' and volunteer county matches shall be competed for on the following terms:—

1. All-Comers' Match.—Number of competitors, eight; rifle, any rifle under 10 lb.; position, kneeling or half-kneeling, at the option of the shooter; number of shots, ten, if possible; if not possible, seven. Sighting-shots, nine at each range, ranges A and B. Entrance fee, 5s. for each competitor.

2. Volunteer Match.—Number of competitors, ten efficient volunteers. Rifle and position same as first stage. Number of shots, seven, if possible; if not possible, five. Sighting-shots, two at each range, ranges A and B. Entrance fee, 5s. for each competitor.

ALL-COMERS' PRIZES.

First Stage of Albert Prize, any Rifle, All Comers—Sixty Prizes.—At range A twenty prizes, aggregate value £200; at range B twenty prizes, aggregate value £240; at range C twenty prizes, aggregate value £240—namely, one prize of £40, two prizes of £20, four prizes of £10, and thirteen prizes of £5. Each competitor shall pay £1 entrance fee. This shall entitle him to five shots at each of the ranges A, B, and C; but should he not fire and compete at more than one range, or at all these ranges, he shall be required to pay £1 for each range.

Second Stage of Albert Prize.—A cup, value £100, or £100 in money.—The competitors to be prize-holders selected from the winners of the above sixty prizes. Each competitor shall have seven shots at each of the ranges D, E, F. No entrance fee.

First Stage of Alexandra Prize, Enfield, All Comers—Ninety Prizes.—Restricted to rifles of bona fide Government pattern, carrying .577-bore cartridges; minimum pull of trigger 6 lb. At ranges A forty-five prizes, aggregate value, £300; at ranges B forty-five prizes, aggregate value, £350—namely, one prize of £30, two prizes of £15, six prizes of £10, sixteen prizes of £5, and twenty prizes of £3. Entrance fee, 10s.

Second Stage of Alexandra Prize.—A cup, value £50, or £50 in money. Competitors to be winners of the Enfield All-Comers' prize, after the Wimbledon meeting. Distance, 2000 yards. Entrance fee, £1.

Any Rifle Association Cup.—Value £50. Five shots at ranges A and C. No entrance fee.

Any Rifle Association Cup.—Value £50. Five shots at each of the ranges A and B.

Military Rifle, All Comers.—Seven prizes—namely, one prize of £10, one prize of £6, one prize of £4, ten prizes of £3. Five shots at range C. Entrance fee, 5s.

Telescope, All Comers (10 lb. Rifle).—A prize, value £20.—This prize shall be competed for with any rifle of Government pattern, carrying .577-bore ammunition. Entrance fee, 10s.

The Wimbledon Cup, value £50, given by the National Rifle Association.—Five shots, ranges A, C, and F. Any rifle. Entrance fee, £1.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge's Prize.—A cup of the value of £50, or £50 in money.—This prize shall be competed for with breech-loaders. Five shots at each of the ranges B and D. Entrance fee, 10s.

PUBLIC SCHOOL RIFLE PRIZES.

The Ashburton Shield.—Open to all public schools having volunteer volunteer corps. Seven competitors from each school. Distance, 200 yards, 500 yards, 600 yards, Hythe position. Five shots at each distance. No entrance fee.

Earl Spencer's Cup.—This prize shall be competed for by the best shots of each of the corps in the competition for the Ashburton Shield, and shall be the property of the winner. Seven shots at range B. No entrance fee.

EXTRA PRIZES.

1st Series.—Restricted to rifles used by the rank and file of volunteer corps; entrance fee, 5s.; and sixty-four prizes.—Any rifle under 10 lb.; entrance fee, 10s. 3rd series.—Restricted to rifles used by the rank and file of volunteer corps.—Any rifle carrying .577-bore ammunition; entrance fee, 10s. 4th series.—Any rifle carrying .577-bore ammunition; entrance fee, 10s.

Rifle Brigade Prize.—Restricted to half-inch rifles; any position. Five competition begins. Subscribers not shooting may be represented by substitutes. Neither volunteer can be entered more than once. More shall be three prizes. Half the sum totally subscribed shall form the first prize; one-third of the fifths of the sum shall form the second prize; the remaining two fifths shall form the third prize. Ranges A, B, and C. Seven shots at each range. Any rifle.

Rifle Clubs—Restricted to rifles used by rank and file of Government pattern. Entrance, 10s.; half-fortune if declared before the competition begins. Same conditions as for Rifle Derby.

The Earl of Derby's Prize.—A cup value £50 or £50 in money. This prize will be competed for by the winners of prizes during the meeting. This prize at Ranges B. Seven at Ranges C and D. Any rifle under 10 lb. Any position. Entrance fee, 10s.

The following are prizes are to be competed for on extra prizes:—

The Saturday Review Prize of £50, together with Count De Gendre's prize of four sets of medal bells with bugles complete, divided in four prizes, in separate squads of ten efficient volunteers from each administrative battalion; the squads to be the men, the officers commanding to be the judges of the match. Five shots at 400 yards, with long Enfield, Hythe position, ranks kneeling. Entrance fee 20s. each squad.

The Volunteer Service Gazette Prize of £25, the Army and Navy Gazette Prize of £20, Lord Vernon's Prize of £20, and £50 given by the association, divided into ten smaller prizes. Swiss target at Range B. Any rifle; any position; any number of shots on payment of 1l. for each shot.

The proprietor of the Daily Telegraph has given £50 to be competed for as a prize by efficient volunteers.

The prizes will be distributed by his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief, on the ground, at the review to be held on Saturday the 23rd.

Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Percy Douglas, Bart., has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Cape of Good Hope.

FOUNDATION OF THE NEW WING OF THE LONDON HOSPITAL.

THE foundation-stone of the new west wing of the London Hospital, in Whitechapel, was laid on Monday week by the Prince of Wales, who was accompanied by the Princess of Wales and by the Duke of Cambridge, president of that institution. We have engraved an illustration of these proceedings. Their Royal Highnesses, attended by the Marchioness of Carmarthen and General Eyelbys, having presented themselves on the platform, in the centre of which stood the foundation-stone, the National Anthem was sung by a choir selected from those of the Queen's Theatre, Whitechapel, the parish church, Cathedral, under the direction of Mr. Francis, and accompanied by the band of the Honourable Artillery Company—a detachment of which formed the guard of honour. An address from the president, vice-presidents, treasurer, house committee, and governors of the hospital was then presented to the Prince of Wales by the Duke of Cambridge, thanking his Royal Highness for his ready acquiescence in the request that he would lay the foundation-stone of the new building, expressing a few statistics of the progress and condition of the hospital. It was stated that the building had become totally inadequate to the increasing necessities of the neighbourhood; and, considering the fact that of the 4226 patients received into the house in 1863 no less than 2936 were cases of the poor, which, at the rate of 3s. 6d. per week, would cost 51,282 in ordinary nature, it was felt that the time had arrived for the extension of the premises. Such an extension has been duly and economically planned, and it was believed that the presence and co-operation of his Royal Highness on this occasion would contribute in no slight degree to the highly successful result which it was confidently expected would attend the labours of the day. The Prince of Wales, in acknowledging the address, said, "Your Royal Highness, ladies and gentlemen, I thank you for your kind expressions towards me. It is a source of much gratification to me to be present at the enlargement of an institution of which my illustrious relative (who is ever foremost in works of charity) is the president. We can all see the great need there is for this extension, by the increased numbers applying for admission that I most heartily subscribe to the wishes expressed in the address. The great attachment you have made known no doubt in my mind of a successful result, and it is a matter of congratulation that we have the privilege of contributing towards the funds requisite for the purpose." The prayer was then read by the Bishop of London, and the foundation-stone was laid. The Prince of Wales applying a silver trowel to the usual manner, and the Princess giving three gentle taps on the stone with an elegant mallet, both presented by Lord Ebrie. Finally the Bishop of London having invoked upon the undertaking the Divine blessing and pronounced a benediction, the ceremony was concluded by the performance of the National Anthem, after which their Royal Highnesses left the ground. The Royal party then proceeded to view the interior of the hospital, and Their Royal Highnesses' Governments. A visit was then proposed in the grounds of the hospital in a tent constructed for the purpose, by the house committee, to partake of the banquet. The Prince of Wales, in returning thanks for the toast of the health, said that, having taken the opportunity of looking through some of the wards of the hospital, he was pleased to see that the arrangements for the perfect state of efficiency observable therein. There could be no doubt that there was a great necessity for the new wing about to be built, and he hoped that it might never be full, and that the hospital might always have as few patients as possible. He then proposed "Prosperity to the London Hospital," and, the toast having been acknowledged by Mr. T. Powell Buxton (the chairman of the house committee), the Duke of Cambridge, in proposing the health of the Princess of Wales, briefly acknowledged the compliment, and the Royal guests took their departure. The architect of the new wing is Mr. Charles Barry; and the contractors are Messrs. Hill and Keddell, whose estimated charge for the work is £20,000; and to meet this claim no less a sum than £30,000 was promised on the day when it was proposed to commence, in the event of the day. The wing will be capable of accommodating 100 additional patients, and it is expected to be completed in 1865. By permission of her Royal Highness, it will be called the "Alexandra" wing.

NATIONAL ARCHERY MEETING AT ALEXANDRA PARK.

THE twenty-first annual meeting of the archers of the United Kingdom was held on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week in Alexandra Park. It was attended by a large number of ladies and gentlemen members of the Metropolitan and provincial societies with the National Archery Association. Not only were the English provincial societies represented, but Scotland, Ireland, and Ireland and Scotland sent a numerous contingent. The total number of archers were—ladies, 82; gentlemen, 100; who were to contend for money and gold and silver prizes. Of these 182 had been entered for the prize at Alexandra Park Company, and varying in amount from £4 to £25, the lowest being the "Lord Elcho" gold, and the highest for the first "grass score."

The shooting on the first day commenced at eleven o'clock, when the gentlemen shot the national round—namely, six dozen arrows at 100 yards, four dozen at eighty yards, and two dozen at sixty yards. After the 100-yards target had been shot, an interval was allowed for luncheon, which was served in a refreshment-room on the ground at half-past two o'clock, the shooting ceased firing the national round, of four dozen arrows at sixty yards and two dozen at fifty yards; and the gentlemen the four dozen at eighty yards and four dozen at sixty yards, the ladies shot their second round. The ladies, though wearing no distinctive costume, were dressed in a manner suitable for archery, and looked very well. With the exception of a green scarf, the gentlemen were dressed in the ordinary way. The shooting-ground, which was inclosed with a railing, was in excellent condition; and at the end those ladies and gentlemen who preferred to witness the shooting at some little distance. There were outside rows of seats, those of the latter being placed further apart than those of the ladies; and at the end of each round, as the ladies and gentlemen went to collect their arrows, the scene was one of animated and pleasing, as appears in the sketch we have engraved. A fancy fair was held at the same time in a row of fifty very picturesque tents in the centre of the Archery Ground, to which the band of the 2nd Life Guards played a selection of music during the day. The following is a list of the prizes awarded by the Alexandra Park Company, Mr. Aldred, of Oxford-street, had presented a Spanish silver bow and arrow, which was given to the archer who made the highest score, as three prizes for each on Friday, handicap day, to be awarded according to the actual score. Messrs. Howell and Co., of Regent-street, had given a gold and silver medal, entitled "The Alexandra Memorial Bust," mounted on a polished ebony pedestal, with oxamelled silver shield, to be shot at and played for as a cup, and to be dabbed as a page, by Felix M. Miller, mounted on a pedestal with ornamental silver shield, to be shot at and played for as a cup, and a "Portia," mounted on a pedestal with ornamental silver shield. There were some other handicap sweepstakes on Friday. The judges were Captain Peckitt, Frank Bowman, and Mr. Ashton Hall. The secretaries of Arden; and A. J. Wilkinson, Esq., Royal Toxophilites. Upon the result of the shooting on Friday depended the awarding of the most successful competitors. The winners were declared, and the prizes and gold and silver medals distributed in the pavilion on the ground on Friday afternoon.

The following is a list of the prizes and the successful competitors:—

LADIES' PRIZE, silver bugle, value £5, given by the Alexandra Park Company (Sherwood), 405; 325, Mrs. Hamilton (Grand National), 343; 4th, Miss S. Ellis (Grand National), 337; 5th, Miss Ellis (Grand National), 334; 6th, Miss Turner (South Devon), 311. Greatest Metropolitan score—Mrs. P. Becher (St. Lazarus), 325. Greatest Provincial score (South Devon), 311. Greatest number of Golds—Mr. J. Ward, 12. Best Gold—Mrs. H. B. Have (Grand National), 29 Yards—Mrs. Becher, 29 Yards—Miss Mackenzie, Hits 89 Yards—Mrs. Everett (Tyberby Park), 67. Score at 80 Yards—Miss S. Edwards (Cotswold), 219. Hits, 80 Yards—Mrs. Lister (Grand National and Cheshire), 41. Greatest Number of Golds at 60 Yards—Mrs. Hele (Sherwood), Greatest Number at 50 yards—Miss M'Kenzie, Kettle (Merle). Best Gold at 60 Yards—Mr. Morris (Bath). Best Gold at 50 Yards—Miss Edwards (Cotswold). Metropolitan Greatest Number of Golds—Miss Lewis (South Herts). Best Gold—Mrs Whitcombe, who tied with Miss L. Chad (South Herts).

GENTLEMEN'S PRIZES.—1st, Mr. Edwards (Aston Park), 892; 2nd, Pr. Muir (Edinburgh), 851; 3rd, Mr. Walter (Royal Toxs.), 811; 4th, Mr. Atkinson (Dublin), 781; 5th, Captain Bertram (Dublin), 766; 6th, Mr. Spedding (Sea of Thos.), 761; 7th, Mr. Bethune (Dublin), 687; 8th, Mr. Chisholm (Clifton), 687; 9th, Mr. St. J. Coventry (West Somerset), 686; 10th, Mr. Tawney (Royal Toxs.), 684. Greatest Number of Golds at 100 Yards—Mr. J. H. Chance, 4. Greatest Number at 80 yards—Mr. Elliott (Aston Park). Greatest Number at 60 Yards—Mr. Rogers (Grand National). Best Gold at 100 Yards—Mr. Everett (Bath). Best Gold at 80 Yards—Mr. Baines (Lancashire). Metropolitan First Grass Score—Mr. Best (Royal Toxs.), 300; 2nd, Mr. Rogers (Metropolitan Archers), 289. Greatest Number of Golds—Mr. Bacon (Dunlop), 10. Best Gold—Mr. A. F. Moore (Warwick Valley). Greatest Score at 100 Yards—Mr. Best (Royal Toxs.), 247. Hits at 100 Yards—Mr. Hare (West Somerset). Greatest Score at 80 Yards—Mr. Ollier (Chesham-hill), 264. Hits at 80 Yards—Mr. Hare (West Somerset). Greatest Number at 60 Yards—Mr. J. Morris (Acton & St. Leonards), 225. Hits at 60 Yards—Rear-Admiral Lowe (Cornwall and Devon), 45.

THE DUBLIN INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

We have engraved a View of the Interior of the Agricultural Hall, the Exhibition-annex, in which the International Exhibition of Arts, Manufactures, and Industry has been opened during the last week. This hall is a portion of the extensive buildings lately erected by the "Dublin Exhibition Palace and Winter Garden Company" within the ornamental pleasure-grounds which they have formed. This company's buildings consist of several portions, suitable for concerts and public meetings, the largest being capable of containing upwards of 8000 persons; picture-galleries, lecture-rooms, and a polytechnic museum; while surrounding these is erected a structure of iron and glass, 640 ft. long, varying from 84 ft. to 120 ft. wide, and 65 ft. high. The number of superficial feet available for exhibitors in the permanent building, exclusive of annexes, was 187,453 ft. ground space, and 100,460 ft. wall space. The Agricultural Hall, so-called from the horse show of the Royal Agricultural Society having taken place there, in 1853, was specially fitted up and erected for this exhibition. The central portion was divided from its smaller adjuncts by wooden partitions, and the general floor, suited for oxen and horses, was replaced by a strong deal flooring. The orchestra used in the decoration of the building are red, blue, white, and cream colour, and these are carried out in the flags and other adjuncts so as to present a cheerful and brilliant aspect. The principal entrance at the hall is, however, distinguished by the erection of a number of large cases for the exhibition of goods, as well as by the intrusion of a huge iron structure, which is the top of a lighthouse constructed for the use of the Ballast Board. This overcrowding of the central hall may, no doubt, be ascribed to the limited space at the disposal of the committee; but it would, perhaps, have been better to have excluded some of the contributions than to run the risk of the appearance of so important a portion of the exhibition as the nave. Here, and in the galleries which run up under the galleries, are displayed the exquisite poplins of Messrs. Pim and Co., of Dublin; the delicate lace, beautiful in design and perfect in workmanship, from the Limerick factory of Messrs. Richard Atkinson and Co.; Messrs. Todhunter and Owden, Messrs. Dunbar, Dickson, and Co., Messrs. Johnston and Carlisle, Mr. Girdwood, and other manufacturers, of Belfast. These fully sustain the reputation which the capital of Ulster has long enjoyed for the excellence of its linen fabrics. In this department Messrs. Robinson and Cleaver, of Belfast, exhibit no fewer than fifty varieties of calicoes and linens, proving that this important branch of industry can be distributed quite as successfully as the south as in the north of Ireland. Amongst the manufactures of woollen goods is Lord George Hill, who sends from the wild and picturesque district of Glenties, in Donegal, a large and varied display of good serviceable flannels and hose made by the people in that locality. Messrs. Atkinson and Co. also forward rugs and other goods from the factory of Mr. Nicholls, of Cork; tweeds, manufactured by Messrs. Mahony, of Blarney, but dressed in England; and a great variety of dyes made by Messrs. Read and Co., of Dublin. Messrs. Scott, of Island Bridge; and Messrs. Read, of Ballybrandon. Cloths of a fine description, made by Messrs. Scott, of Cork, are exhibited by Messrs. Logan and Son, of New-row South. The south Dublin contributors to the manufactures-annex are numerous, and are exhibited by Mr. Lennan, Mr. Hudson, Mr. Wilkinson, and others; furniture, by Strahan and Co., Cantock and White, Ross and Co., and other firms; culinary articles by Messrs. Brandreth and Co., Bridge and Son; and a variety of ornaments and chimneypieces of Irish and foreign marbles, some of the specimens of which evince great taste in the designs and in the execution of the carving. The articles in the galleries are of a more miscellaneous and ornamental character. They include specimens of Limerick embroidery, Carrickmacross vellum, photographs, carvings, embroidery, embossing, and other matters which have no direct connection with art as with manufactures. In the rear of the Agricultural Hall, the space known as the Shelbourne-yard, is covered with glass, and inclosing an area of 22,000 square feet, has been appropriated to machinery. The north side has been set apart as a picture-gallery, and is divided into two departments, one of which is devoted to the larger paintings and the other to cabinet pictures. The lighting of the gallery is excellent. The works contained in the two hundred pictures, many of which are works of the highest merit. The landscapes of Mr. Von Thoren, Allenbach, Ruffaen, and other foreign painters are singularly fine. Her Sing-room has been contributed to the Dublin Exhibition of 1861 an immense picture representing Jean Jacobson following up the vessel to the conclusion of the sea-fight, and now sends a smaller work, but one of equal power, "Michael Angelo Attempting the Life of Raphael." The gallery contains many pictures by Etty, Cooper, Taylor, Erskine Nicoll, Hardley, and other modern English artists. The Lord Lieutenant and Sir Robert Peel are contributors of pictures to the gallery. The latter, who, has may be regarded as the best, though not the largest, collection of pictures that has ever been held in Ireland.

THE HORSE SHOW AT ISLINGTON.

OUR last Number contained some Engravings, from drawings by a Special Artist, representing several of the prize horses at the Great National Horse Show, which was opened the week before last, in the Agricultural Hall, and closed on Wednesday week. We now present a general View of the interior of the Hall, during the period of horses which took place at certain hours every day whilst the exhibition was open. Another Illustration represents a Lady of Hunters jumping over a framework of hurdles covered with furze-bushes to represent a hedge. The Hall is 400 feet long, and has an area which covers an acre and a half, and is, therefore, admirably adapted for such an exhibition as the least touch; so that there was no fear of throwing down the horse whose feet should come against them. The central area of the Hall had been inclosed and covered with tan, so as to form a safe and convenient circus for the performance of these equine feats, and for the promenade of the different animals before the judges, whether on driven—walking, trotting, or galloping in their turn. The floor outside this circus, as well as the seats in the galleries and boxes was usually crowded with spectators, of whom a fair proportion were ladies. On the Monday, the first shilling day, when the trial of the hunters took place at half-past three in the afternoon, there were five or six thousand persons in the building, and the scene was a very gay one. The Royal box was occupied at the time by the Duchess of Wellington, the Duchess of Beaufort, and many other ladies of the aristocracy; another interesting contest between a number of celebrated trotting horses and ponies; and the admiration of the spectators was brought to a high pitch when the magnificent steeplechasers of the Duchess of Beaufort and her late Grace competitors in the carriage-horse department entered the arena and executed many leaps. During the five days a large number of sales of valuable horses were effected, realising excellent prices, and amongst the purchasers were many foreigners. We reported last week the performances of the Arabian horses and the award of the prizes, which were declared on Friday, the 1st inst., when the hall was first opened to the public. The total number of animals in the show was 419, and they included forty thoroughbred race stallions, twenty roadster stallions, sixty-nine hunters, thirty-two weight-carrying cobs, ninety ponies, and a number of Arabs, Barbs, Turks, chargers, hacks, state-carriage horses, and dressers. Upon the whole, the Islington Horse Show has proved a decided success.

A telegraphic cable between the Gulf of Spezzia and the nearest promontory of Corsica has been laid.

"THE COMBE FARM," BY G. CHESTER, IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.—SEE PAGE 56.

"STARTLED," BY HARRISON WEIR, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE PAGE 57.

"A SOVEREIGN FOR A DAY IN NANT-FRANÇON," AT J. C. REED, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE PAGE 72.

RUNNING THE BLOCKADE INTO THE PORT OF WILMINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA.

We have received from our Special Artist, who, after a short interval of repose in England, has returned to the seat of war in America and safely arrived at the camp of General Lee, a Sketch of the scene on board the blockade-running steamer Lilian as she entered the port of Wilmington, in the Confederate States, passing unharmed the squadron of Federal cruisers, on the morning of June 4. The special correspondent of the Times was a passenger on board the same vessel, has contributed to that journal a narrative of the run from Bermuda to Wilmington, which may be quoted as a commentary upon the Illustration we have engraved :—

"Upon the evening of Wednesday, the 1st of June, the Lilian and the Flash, two of the fleetest and most powerful of the blockade-defying vessels, started simultaneously from Bermuda upon the first trip inward which either had ever made. Both belong to the same company, but there is an emulation between the two rival vessels which is not satisfactorily allayed by their exceeding speed, but which waits the solution of further trial. The weather was lovely; the sea like a millstream, and favourable beyond expression to light draught and low steamer craft, such as we have blockade-breakers, which lightly scratch the surface instead of clutching the ribs of old ocean, and which in summer seas have no more to fear from heavy marine craft, like the Rhode Island or the Vanderbilt, than has the Irish night-express from the lumbering freight-train which leaves Euston-square two hours before it. Passengers have been known to pay extravagant prices slipped through the meshes of the blockade than the two vessels of which I am writing. It is not alone that they will undoubtedly, from the ocean a flag which, three years ago, might have been seen upon every sea of every zone.

"My experience on board the Lilian leads me to anticipate for Captain Coxetter and his vessel—as also for the owners, Messrs. Thompson, of Glasgow—a long and prosperous career. An incident which occurred 200 miles from Wilmington, in a portion of the ocean which is constantly swept by Federal cruisers, proves the point at once. Upon our port bow was descried a sail enveloped in a dense canopy of smoke. Since it is needfully prudent to observe, in the case of a suspect Yankee guile, which is said to be nowhere more fertilely exhibited than in the capture of the blockade; but it was deemed possible, after careful scrutiny, that the vessel might be our friend. Briefly reasoning, "The ship which leaves a companion at sea in distress must be accursed. Captain Coxetter ordered our course to be altered, and we steered upon the stranger. It soon became evident that she was a Federal cruiser, making a dense white smoke with her forward coal, and heavily and spitefully eastward in apparent pursuit of another delinquent. The helm was rapidly changed, and our course resumed. Dusk and inscrutable came on the heels of flying all possibility of close observation. It is believed that ere the morrow's dawn should break we might reach Wilmington, and our speed was pressed. The night was favourable to our progress, a fine cloudy, half past three o'clock, half past three o'clock in the morning came, but by no eye peering through the thick gloom could the looked-for light at Fort Fisher be discerned. Then, as the morning grew, we continued to lay-to for the day, between the outer and inner cordon of the blockaders, being hardly to be distinguished that we should for sixteen hours unobserved; but it was a signal instance of good luck that from four in the morning until half-past one p.m. we were unmolested. Then the tall masts of a huge Federal cruiser, and her immense paddle-wheels and lofty black hull were visible for the first time. Then our engines were immediately put from the direction of Wilmington, the 'airy fairy Lilian' prepared to give us assistance. That speed was all we all felt she possessed. Then a slight delay there was before steam could be fully got up, and for some minutes our pursuer seemed to gain upon us. But as the pressure of steam ascended, the distance between us, twenty, from twenty to twenty-three, from twenty-three to twenty-six, and as the revolutions of the paddle quickened, from twenty-six to twenty-eight, from twenty-eight to thirty-three per minute, the Lilian flew out to sea, swift as arrow from a bow. In little more than two hours the chase of our pursuer was invisible, and her topgallant sails a speck upon the distant horizon. But as she still lay between us and Wilmington it became necessary to round her. The ship of the light-hearted Yank had little difficulty in accomplishing; but as the sun dropped into the sea, and our pursuer, although distant, still kept upon our port bow, we knew that, reckoning little the speed of our advance, we had sighted the inside blockade squadron before the close of day. There was nothing for it but to persevere, and fortunately, before we could accomplish the third, darkness had completely set in. Silently and with bated breath we passed, every object completely visible to every eye, and the suggesting the flashing out of a blue or Drummond light, and the rush of speedboat and shrapnel through our rigging and bulwarks. But it was not destined that upon this occasion the Lilian should receive her baptism of fire. Just as we approach Fort Fisher a dark spot is seen on the bar, it is a blockade-runner, and the order to the pilot Captain Maffit to indulge the anxious wish of his heart and to run her down. We pass her within twenty yards, and again the ineffectual volley of musketry is wanting. Another moment and we are under the mound upon which stands the fort, and are questioned for news. The news is good all round. 'Three times there the Lieutenant Johnston!' 'six times six for General Lee;' and in mirth and laughter and song the night wears away. The Lilian is now lying at anchor off Fisrto, and is heavily fired at as she wears inwards. But morning finds both vessels and their cargoes safe, and what that cargo is, whether or it is rash to predict for them both the probability of many returns. At least it may correctly be augured that it will take no ordinary amount of speed and courage to circumvent the devices and experiments which the Captain Maffitt, and that in his new career his skill and success will be not inferior to those which distinguished his old."

"As an illustration of the facility and certainty with which the blockade is now defied, I will conclude with the following facts. Between the 1st of May and the 1st of June no less than twenty-four vessels made the port of Wilmington safely, without disaster befalling a single vessel. No wonder that piles upon piles of Government goods are stored here, awaiting, when there is less strain upon the railroads, transportation to Richmond. Indeed, I am informed that by the Government agent best than in his whole experience he has never felt a more earnest-bound letter. A gentleman at Bermuda, the agent of an eminent English firm, told me that during the month he had sent an average of three mails per month from Bermuda and Nassau into Secessia, and that in the whole time only two mails had been lost."

ASCENT OF MONT BLANC IN A SINGLE DAY.—We have another addition to the record of tourists' exploits for this season. Mr. A. W. Moore writes from Chamouni that, on the 10th inst., he left the village of Chamouni can be effected in a single day, and this is what he narrates of his own strenuous performance. "At 2.30 a.m. accompanied by my guide, Christian Almer, I left the rough but clean little inn known as the Auberge du Montanvert above the Col de Voza, and at 4 a.m. reached the Aiguille du Gouté at 10.10 a.m., and the summit of Mont Blanc, viâ the Rosse du Dromadaire, at 2.30 p.m. The descent to Chamouni was effected by the ordinary route of the Corridor, Grand Plateau, and Glacier des Bossons, at 9.30 p.m. we were back at the inn on the other side of Chamouni, but, in the darkness, missed the way through the lower part of the forest, and although, as we subsequently saw, the track was close to us, were unable to extricate ourselves till daylight. But for this unfortunate contretemps Chamouni would have been reached by 10 p.m. The excessive time occupied by the expedition (20 hours, including halts to the extent of only one hour and a half) was caused by the unusually dangerous condition of the Aiguille du Gouté, the ascent of which took two hours longer than usual, in consequence of the rocks being coated with ice. Under ordinary circumstances, a pedestrian, in good condition, might fairly hope to accomplish the entire "course" in eighteen hours. I may mention that my provisions for the day, including three bottles of wine, cost the sum of 8jf., and that, although the mountain had not been before ascended this year, Almer had no difficulty in finding me up and down unaided.

THE SAVOY CHAPEL DESTROYED BY FIRE.

THE old Royal Chapel in the precinct of the Savoy was destroyed by fire in the middle of the day on Thursday week. The carelessness of workmen employed that morning about some repairs or alterations of the gas-burners under the organ appears to have been the cause of this disaster. The fire was discovered soon after two o'clock, when no person was in the building; the deacon of the parish some short time before they could be opened the interior of the chapel was filled with a mass of flames, which burst out of the large window and caught the back of a house in the Strand, This house (No. 100), occupied by Mr. Francis Bedford, with the Pyx office, which adjoins it, were the only private houses much damaged. We have engraved on page 69 a Sketch of the burning of the Savoy Chapel, which was one of the most interesting monuments of historic antiquity in London.

The Chapel Royal of the Savoy was built, in 1505, of squared stone and rubble, with a tower at the south-west angle. It was a small edifice, standing in a small burial-ground, amid a few trees and evergreens, it resembled the Virgin, and St. Andrew's, in the Strand, as that remained of the Hospital of St. John the Baptist, built upon the site of the palace of Peter de Savoy, magnificently rebuilt by Henry, first Duke of Lancaster. Thither, with the Princess Blanche, he brought home from Poictiers by Edward the Black Prince; and there, in his "antient house in the Strand," he himself died, two hundred years ago, in 1361. The Savoy was burnt by Wat Tyler's rebels, and lay in ruins until 1505, when Henry VII. commenced erecting St. John's Hospital, "to receive poor lame people and sore impotent folk." The Savoy was rebuilt, and completed by Henry VIII. The chapel was originally dedicated to the Virgin and St. John the Baptist, but, after the fire, in 1864, the old church of St. Mary-le-Strand was destroyed by the Protector Somerset. The parishioners united themselves to the precinct of the Savoy, and the chapel, being used as their church, acquired the name of St. Mary-le-Savoy; though before the householders beyond the precinct were formidable enough to dispute the title. The Savoy was a privileged sanctuary, renouncing all clean to say right or property in the chapel itself. There is a tradition that when the Duchess Anne brought a message from Richard III. to Elizabeth, the chapel of the Savoy was the first church in which divine service was performed. It was in this chapel also that the memorable conference between Laud, Juxon, and the old Puritan divine, Dr. Anthony Horneck, the favourite chaplain of King William, was held. The chapel possessed the privilege of sanctuary, and coffee-pury with traffic. Several persons of note are buried here, and had figure monuments. Among them are Sir Thomas Wyatt, the poet, and Sir Robert Douglas and his lady (seventeenth century). In a painted niche on the north wall of the lady kneeling—Jocea, daughter of Sir Alan Apsley, Lieutenant of the Tower, and wife of Sir Robert Douglas, Knt., who died in 1661. Among the altarpiece, was an ornamented recess, in the back of which had been placed a monument to the memory of Sir Balthazar Gerbier, and the memory of Anne Killigrew (1685), daughter of one of the Masters of the Savoy and a niece to the well-known jester. This was the lady described by Dryden as "Virgin of the sky," and a likeness of her by Over the door was a small kneeling figure, with a skull in her hands, inscribed "Mrs. Anne Killigrew, ob. 1710." A mutilated figure of Charity, it is thought, improperly named the Countess Dowager of Nottingham. Here, also, is a tablet to the memory of the Rev. Edward Douglas, who translated Virgil; of George Withers, the poet, without a monument; and the Earl of Feversham, who commanded King James II.'s troops at the battle of Sedgemoor (1685). Here, also, is a monument to the memory of Sir Robert Cotton, the founder of the celebrated library, which was destroyed by fire in 1731. The Savoy was last used as barracks and a prison for Scotland after the rebellion of 1745. Hogarth, and a Mr. Serres, who lived in Little Savoy Gate, where now are Savoy-steps. The first manufactory of flint-glass for optical purposes was established in the Savoy, by Guinand and Feretz's ground-plan shows the Middle Savoy Gate, where Savoy-street now is, and the Little Savoy Gate, where now are Savoy-steps. The first manufactory of flint-glass for optical purposes was established in the Savoy, by Guinand and Feretz, a Swiss and a Frenchman, in 1802. The Savoy was last used as barracks and a prison for Scotland after the rebellion of 1745. Hogarth, and a Mr. Serres, who lived in Little Savoy Gate, where now are Savoy-steps. The first manufactory of flint-glass for optical purposes was established in the Savoy, by Guinand and Feretz, a Swiss and a Frenchman, in 1802. The Savoy was last used as barracks and a prison for Scotland after the rebellion of 1745. Hogarth, and a Mr. Serres, who lived in Little Savoy Gate, where now are Savoy-steps. The first manufactory of flint-glass for optical purposes was established in the Savoy, by Guinand and Feretz, a Swiss and a Frenchman, in 1802.

CHANGES IN LONDON.

THE mutations in this "province covered with houses"—the new designation for our metropolis—are as sundry and manifold as the changes of the world itself. Change is the characteristic of Nature, and of Art also in this age of Titanic power and lightning speed; and adornment, hitherto the work of ages, in rapidity of execution is now attained by means which resemble the feats of enchantment rather than the slow pace by which our forefathers arrived at excellence.

Among the most striking changes in this closely-packed province of ours is the fast disappearance of ancient edifices and memorials of the past, regardless of sacrifice of sentiment, such as never entered into the calculations of Adam Smith. An old street in our city of twenty centuries of antiquity is now a rarity. We are covering with palace-like piles for our business purposes. Wide street, one of the long grand Roman ways in Britain; our new banking houses and the companies' houses seeming to aim at characterising commercial solidity in their architecture. Public edifices are raised on a scale for the gigantic railroad; and the once fishful Thames bids fair to have its entrance hidden by viaducts for the latest steam horse. Almost like the traffic of the metropolis at its centre has increased to an almost perpetual "block;" and the Court of Aldermen have been ludicrously twitted with failing to effect such a reform as, nineteen hundred years ago, the mighty Cæsar accomplished with ease—the regulation of the street traffic of Rome. The Londoner frets as regards one, since we all have seen how difficult it is to interfere with the life-stream of business; and how unpopular is such interference is the policeman driving an old apple-woman from her corner, and the heavily-laden hansom being stopped for the "City-stuff."

Before we leave "the province" or rather Cannon-street, we may state that nearly opposite the Roman sudarium (the London Stone) the railway will here strike into the heart of the City, in superb manner, by a grand hotel and station, in the Italian style, treated somewhat in the manner of the Palazzo Pandolfini at Florence, by pure rood and towers at each end of the elevation; the hotel being built over the station, as in the Charing-cross terminus and station. How the old clock of Dowgate (where Sir Francis Drake, "that famous mariner," lived) has been swept away for this great work we need not tell.

Another change will be made in the railway-station at Farringdon-street, in the place of the gloomy Fleet Prison. The other day the roofs of the lower street were all agape at workmen aloft pulling down Green Arbour-court, Farringdon-street, which, when he pawned his gab-coat to pay his rent and lend his landlord the remainder, was taken down thirty years ago.

Amidst this rush of utilitarianism there is a pleasing approach to sentimentalism observable in the increase of trees in the metropolis, and the greater care taken of the gardens of our squares, and every opportunity of adding "something green" to gladden the eyes and heart of the wearied Londoner. Thus, through the narrow streets and luxuriance of the lawns, and shrubs, and shady trees of the squares; just one of the latter of which this week was held the fourth Bloomsbury Flower Show, when some 800 plants were exhibited by working people of the parish, and 204 persons competed for prizes for "clean and tidy rooms." It is said that the First Commissioner of Works has purchased for the country the arcades and galleries of South Kensington, in hope to secure for the Nation the Crystal Palace contents. For the profusion of flowers and shrubs in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens we are indebted to Mr. Gowper; and to this and the thousands of summer visits to Kew Gardens, and to Temple Gardens, and countless shows in the suburbs, is partly to be attributed this improved taste in the Londoner's love for flowers and plants. Probably owe some of this improvement to the Smoke Act of Parliament, and to the better understanding of the Sanitary question.

A pleasing employment of flowers in civic processions has been more frequent of late years. The Serjeants-at-Law, we read, walked to St. Paul's Cathedral carrying bouquets of flowers; and the Aldermen and Sheriffs at the election of Sheriffs, on Midsummer Day, in the Guildhall, where the Lord Mayor's state-crown was hung with green baths. How much execution that the Alexandra Park is progressing well; and the good people of Southwark have memorialised the Metropolitan Board of Works for a public park, which the Streets Committee recommend, and the Finance Committee are to provide for by loan. In this quarter a new thoroughfare has been opened, as we mentioned, eastward, into the populous districts of Bermondsey and Rotherhithe, of the main street recently opened from Cannon-street to Commercial-road and the western parts of the metropolis, by way of Stamford-street. The new street, which connects Bermondsey with St. Thomas's-street, is about 1000ft. long and 40ft. wide, and has been made by the London and Brighton Railway Company, at a cost of about £7000, exclusive of allowances for compensation. The street, it is expected, will be of great benefit to intersected until now by little narrow and tortuous alleys, and must be a great relief to the traffic.

Akin to flowers is the sentiment of fountains—not the much-abused fines of Trafalgar-square, but the drinking-fountains of the metropolis, which are a sort of refinement upon the cocoa-nut shells of Arabia, as Lamb's Conduit, of nearly 300 years since. Our fountains have been set up by an Association which was duly incorporated under the title of Fleet-street and the Strand, thus giving increased convenience to the neighbourhood of the Courts of Law and Equity. There will be an ornamental frontage to the Strand and Fleet-street. The bill for giving power to the commissioners for acquiring the site specially excepts Temple Bar; it is not to be taken or sold without the consent of the Common Council of the City. This clause is, however, but to save the dignity of the City Corporation, for it has been abused gate will, doubtless, be taken down. Meanwhile, there has been a thorough repair and restoration of the present gate. The Lord Chancellor is empowered to sell out from the Suitors' Fee Fund, duly, and the other half million is to be provided by a Parliamentary grant, equal to the value of the property and offices, and the decision is to be made up by stamps for a period of fifty years. This measure, it is expected, will become law during the present Session; and then the concentration of the courts, which has been agitated for the last twenty years, will be carried out. We rejoice to have saved the noble arcs of Lincoln's-inn-fields, and hope to see the Government to make the site of the new courts.

The bill for an underground railway from the Great Northern lines to Charing-cross has just passed the House of Commons. The company have undertaken to make a line from Farringdon-street, near Fotenham-court-road, through St. Giles's (or such as remains of it), to the end of Bedford-street and King William-street, terminating at the north of the Lowther Arcade.

Between the Strand and Wych-street, the site of old Lyon's Inn is being covered with buildings for the new Law Institution, of which all to be seen at present are ranges of arches; the greater part of crazy old Holywell-street and the picturesque end of Wych-street remain. Another novelty in this quarter, the Strand Music Hall, is now rapidly rising, and is, we understand, originally in "an overdone design." If it be a merit that the general design of a building should bespeak its object, this is evidently a mistake.

The new Kingsway Holborn is rapidly progressing; the lower story, a lofty Italian arcade, with patera in the voussoirs, as seen from Charles-street, promises solidity. Should the picturesque old Holywell, or rather its remains, what a rookery has it become in contrast with the new buildings in Victoria-street!

Of the Thames Embankment we as yet see little but bear much. The mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch—gaining height by its picturesque Mansard roof—is a noble commencement of the line between Westminster and Hungerford Bridges; whence, to Black-friars, the Adelphi Terrace and Somerset House are fine instalments, the latter being, perhaps, the best-placed public building of the metropolis. The Middle Temple, with its new Library and the gardens, increased nearly 200 ft. in depth, will be a delightful addition for the lovers of flowers.

REFORM OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

MANY circumstances and causes combine to render the present the most important time in regard to the interests of British art since the foundation of the Royal Academy—nearly a century ago. Last year a Royal Commission presented a report and a large bluebook of evidence on the state of the Academy. To this the Academy, availing itself of its personal connection with the Crown, in virtue of its institution under the special protection of George III., has issued a reply in the shape of a letter addressed to her Majesty, under the title of "Observations of the Royal Academy on the Report," &c. This letter, "Her Majesty," according to the statement of Lord Granville in the House of Lords, "feeling as strongly as she always had done with regard to the privileges of the Academy, was glad to receive," and to it she deemed it right to return an answer through her responsible Ministers, and both the report of the Commission and the "Observations" made upon it were, as Lord Granville said, under consideration of the Government." The result of this consideration must and should be formally effected by a special vote in the House of Commons. The lower House is the less decided, in opposition to a proposal of the Government, that the National Gallery shall be retained in Trafalgar-square; and, as the whole of this site is occupied by that institution, there is scarcely the smallest doubt that the Royal Academy will (on many claims to assistance from Government being generally recognised) have given to it the plot of ground behind Burlington House which the Ministry had intended for the erection of a new National Gallery and that on this site the Academy will, as it has expressed itself prepared to do, expend the £80,000 accumulated from the proceeds of the annual exhibitions on the erection of a building suitable for all the purposes of its schools and the requirements of its exhibitions. The statement of Lord Granville was made in a discussion in the Lords principally on the "Observations" of the Academicians, which discussion took place subsequently to the vote in the Commons. The internal fill the statement of the conclusions of Government must, then, ripen the crisis which will affect the destinies of the Academy, and still more the welfare of the general body of artists for, probably, another century. It therefore behoves all interested in art to give the best attention to every proposition for reforming the Academy, and it would ill become a journal owing so much to art and artists as the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS to fail at this conjuncture in discussing the views on those points under consideration which it may deem of importance. If in any particular of these views any comment or vote be made on our observations, we can hardly be suspected of partisanship, for we have on several occasions acknowledged the services the Academy has rendered to art, and we would be among the first to vindicate and uphold its dignity and prestige. We may in particular mention our disapproval of the commissioners' plan for introducing lay members, believing that, although extremely plausible in theory, it was likely in practice to do little good, and might lead to much evil and foreseeing, moreover, that (as the event has proved) it would be almost unanimously rejected by the Academy, and would not be desired by the great majority of artists.

Before discussing differences let us, however, hasten to state what we believe are the Academy's claims on which we can appeal for what we can give it credit. In the first place, then, the greatly increased price which will be at once paid for the ground, as well, there can be little doubt, remove two of the limitations of late years most invidious to the functions of the Academy. There will be an opportunity for providing ample accommodation for the schools, and for the power to credit the Academy with a sincere desire to perform the office it has assumed of giving the fine-art education perfectly than any other agency. We are disposed to recommend, prospectively only, and upon its educational power becoming greatly developed, that it should undertake or associate itself with the teaching of the arts of design; but, seeing how the fine and industrial arts flow into each other, some provision should be immediately made for giving the requisite training to finishing instruction than can be obtained in ordinary schools of design, and whose proficiency should be rewarded with prizes and certificates. But we trust that, at all events, the Academy will, at the earliest opportunity, adopt all reasonable suggestions for rendering its strictly teaching body more effective and for giving it a popular character. With, practically, almost unlimited space available, there will also, we cannot doubt, be ample room for the full exhibition of all paintings of real merit within a convenient distance from the schools. It is, however, of the highest importance that a most liberal view should be taken of the proportion of space for exhibition that may ultimately be required. Really inferior works should not, of course, be sent as a national display; on the contrary, a standard of excellence almost as high as it is of necessity at present should be maintained. But large halls will be required on the ground to meet the rapidly-growing requirements of art, and also for the exhibition (perhaps in connection with the architectural designs) of cartoons and drawings. To these suggestions we would add the following, our artists are at length giving earnest of great things to come. Besides, it is desirable to encourage an extension of the Academy exhibition similar to that of its teaching. A limited number of representative examples of the highest excellence of each manufacturer would assuredly increase the attractions and interest of the great art-gathering of the year, and with it the influence and revenues of the Academy. In the exhibition at Trafalgar-square in the present year there are only 1062 works exhibited, against very nearly triple that number in those of these at first rejected in the "Year of Salon, and at the latter there are several classes of art-productions which are simply or not at all represented among ourselves. We are convinced it is impossible to overrate the importance of exemplifying all the fine arts and their chief application in association. It was the fact of their admirable association that rendered the ancients so harmonious development to the arts and art-workmanship of the later Middle Ages, and early Renaissance, and it has been the want of this which renders our sculptors and architects unable to work together, and so many of our painters incapable of realising the requirements of mural painting. Our mural decoration, these views suggest, must prematurely it may be thought—is, we must confess, because we appreciate fully the strong Conservative spirit of the Academicians, that they will not take a sufficiently broad view of their extended responsibilities in relation to the public, and that they will not aspire to render their Academy the comprehensive and representative institution and the grand palace of art it might be made.

The principal wish amongst the body of Academicians from forty-two to fifty could scarcely have been resisted. But we do not understand that the Academy, administered by the Council, is capable of increasing the number of Associates, should wish, instead of fifty, to progress to less the number undefined. Surely fifty is not too large a number if we are at all to regard the Academy as a body means of working and rising talent in this country; and surely the Academy does not wish to be guided by its own admission, by the shocking principle which fixes the future number of Academicians must absolutely equal to the Associates, unless the latter fill up a vacancy among a mere honorary acknowledgment of merit. That the Academy really wishes to confine, as to an empty distinction seems, we regret to say, intimated by other portions of the "Observations," in which Academicians are unwilling to allow the Associates the right of exhibiting each two works, while they object to placing in the hall of Associates more than four; each of themselves. Moreover—and to this we beg to call especial attention—they seem resolved to maintain their exclusive privileges to the General Assembly, or to allowing them the power of voting in elections either into their own body or into that of the R.A.'s themselves. A liberty of membership common to all artists would be permitted to them in common with the Academicians; but as this is not sought by freedom of vote, or any legal right of influencing the elections, and as the Academicians will be actually free to disregard such nominations, the boon can only confer an important moral force, and, without other guarantee, can be considered little short of a mockery. Some of the opponents of the Academy have, we think, gone too far in claiming for the Associates equal power, if not equal privileges, with the Academicians. For our part, we would only ask for the Associates a degree of privilege and influence reasonably, logically, let us say, proportioned to their subordinate Academic grade: for instance, let the Associates have the right to exhibit two pictures to the four by an Academician, and let him have one vote on all subjects to two for a full member. But, on the other hand, if this be refused; if the Academicians refuse to retain all the important power they at present enjoy entirely in their own hands, if they refuse the fair and moderate measure of reform we have sketched out, they will, we are constrained to say, undoubtedly set at defiance that public opinion to which (and this the Academicians seem to have forgotten) the Royal Commission owed its origin, they will entirely disregard the opinion and feeling of the great body of working artists, all of whose varied interests their institution should represent, they will totally fail to attract to their numerous exhibitions the principle of art since the foundation of the Academy, and they will leave unrenewed the principal cause of that odium and invidious comparison which, though often to some extent unjustly, has led in some quarters to the title of Royal Academician being deemed little better than an epithet of reproach. Such a result would be hopeless and ruinous, and want of confidence to overshadow what should be the bright and unsullied fame of the Academy of the country.

In view of the apparent indisposition of the Academicians to enter upon a new and more liberal course of action, the question has been raised in the House of Commons as to what is to be done if not less than £60,000, the Government should not stipulate for a right of interference. In the first place, this question, we think, on full reflection will, we think, convince those who understand the peculiar nature of art and artists, and who reflect how undesirable it would be for members of the Legislature to have the power of deciding purely professional details, that, provided the Academy re-established on satisfactory principles, the less chance the Parliament has for meddling and muddling in matters of art, perhaps, the better. However, we quite agree with Lord Granville's suggestion that, if the Government gave additional facilities to the Academy, they ought on grounds of public interest to endeavour to render the governing body satisfactory not only to the artists, but to the body at large in connection, and that it is, perhaps, desirable, by means of negotiations between the Government and the Academy, to seek to secure some popular representation in that institution." But if the Academy were at the outset to make itself thoroughly representative no other pledge should be asked for its proper working. We earnestly trust the Academicians will reconsider the whole of their observations on the subject of their constitution in the "Observations."

A memorial (alluded to by Lord Stanhope) against the exclusion of the Academicians, and setting forth that the Academy scheme is "unsuited to the wants of the profession and incompatible with a liberal constitution," and which has been signed by many of the leading artists of the day, is in course of signature. We need not, however, give this document in extenso, as on the questions at issue nearly all the signatories to the Academy have given their own views. Nevertheless, there are two or three paragraphs we deem it necessary and manly in tone that they can scarcely fail to be generally interesting. Thus, "Considering the notoriety of the fact that each nomination-paper must be signed rightly contents by the Academicians, the Academy can hardly be considered," and thus the so-called "right of nomination 'are have, of course, called it by the name of 'permission') is rendered a mockery and a misleading on opinion." "That this is a correct view of the question," continues the memorial, "appears from the following paragraph :—The right of nomination, whether by individuals, societies, or constituencies in elections, is an important privilege as such (); but its great utility would be to a large extent destroyed if the persons nominated might sometimes differ from their own." Whether the apparent vagueness of the latter part of this proposition in the "Observations" is the result of design or accident we cannot say, but it is one of the moralists is most natural. "We cannot refrain from remarking,' say they, 'that the mode of expression adopted by certain members of the Academicians does not, in our mind, constitute an important privilege." "That is a correct view of the question," continues the memorial, "appears from the following paragraph :—The right of nomination, whether by individuals, societies, or constituencies in elections, is an important privilege as such ()'

"SUNRISE ON THE KÖNIGS SEE, BERCHTESGADEN, BAVARIAN ALPS," BY W. C. SMITH, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

THE visitors to the present exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours owe, we think, grateful acknowledgments to Mr. Collingwood Smith for the large and effective drawing we have engraved, representing, as it does, a view which, though one of the most magnificent in Europe, has been very seldom painted by English artists. There is plenty of romantic scenery along the whole of the south of Bavaria, close under the high wall of the Alps, though the mountains do not belong to the principal chain. There are, in particular, numerous beautiful lakes, which, though generally somewhat inferior to those of Switzerland, Austria, and Italy, vary in character from the pleasing to the sublime. Of these, however, the last lake eastward, the famous Königs See, on the borders of Salzburg (situated in a narrow strip of Bavaria almost inclosed within the Austrian territory), the subject of our Engraving, is scarcely to be surpassed for grandeur. The view the artist has selected is taken from the Berchtesgaden territory, looking towards Sanct Bartholomä—a Wallfahrts Kapelle, or chapel to which pilgrimages are made (after which the lake was formerly named the Bartholomäus See), and which is seen on a tongue of land to the right about an hour's row up the lake. Close to this chapel is the Jagdschloss, or hunting-seat of the King—which gives its modern name to the lake. During the Royal battues forty or fifty chamois are often collected together by a circle of peasants, who encompass the woods for this purpose, and drive the animals into the water, where (contrary to our English notions of fair sport), they are shot from boats. At the Jagdschloss travellers are furnished with refreshments, including, among other delicacies, the char of the lake and sometimes chamois venison.

The really sublimely-impressive character of the scene is due not merely to the height and magnitude of the surrounding mountains, but to their precipitousness. They fall on all sides in a sheer and sometimes almost perpendicular descent of 5000 ft. and upwards, and then plunge into the fathomless depths of the dark-green lake, so as to leave no foreland at the water's edge, and scarcely even a landing-place. The lake is rendered still more sombre and black by the dark fir-forests which clothe the sides of the less precipitous hills, and are mirrored in the still lake, save where a distant cataract traces a keen line of silvery sky reflections; this, and the glittering snow of the highest peaks serving, however, only to intensify the several contrasts. Fantastically-shaped clouds, wreathed in tangled masses around the summits of the mountains, are again in picturesque contrast with the sheltered quiescence of the lake, which, as we have said, is only ruffled by some light and partial air current, or, perhaps, by the oar of a solitary boatman, or the wing of some wild bird. Far above the lonely buildings at its base rises (8600 English feet) the gigantic Watzmann, with its snow-clad double horner, and trackless clefts. The distant bells of the cattle feeding on the alpine meadows are alone heard in this solitude, whose pinnacles and ridges are the peculiar haunt of the eagle and the chamois. Mr. Smith has, with true artistic instinct, represented this scene in the light of early day, when the pale sun-beams fall athwart the dark lake from the shoulders of the eastern mountains—and he has appropriately quoted the lines—

> That sacred lake, withdrawn among the hills—
> Its depth of waters flank'd as with a wall
> Built by the giant race before the flood—
> Where not a cross or chapel but inspires
> Holy thought, lifting our thoughts to God.

"SEATED," BY F. W. TOPHAM, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—SEE PAGE 76.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

As we presumed to say last week, writing in advance of the event, the Tory cavaliers scattered the Ministerial party in the Lords, but were themselves thoroughly beaten in the Commons. The success in the Lords was gained without their dashing leader, Lord Malmesbury making but a very sorry lieutenant; and the Palmerston Bishops, in a firm phalanx, fighting boldly for their chief, and sitting as unconcernedly on their benches as did the Conscript Fathers when the Gauls were at the gates. The success in the Commons was not unexpected, the talk at the clubs giving, according to the wishes of the speakers, a majority of four or of twenty-three. Something between the two, eighteen in fact, was the reality; and old sticklers to the records of the House, when party feeling and impatience, long grumbled at this shabby majority and quote instances of eighty, ninety, or 120. The Tories have the true timidity; dare not on a defined policy even when they hardly for war, and as little for peace; they bore the same charges on their shields, but with "a difference," as the heralds say; they were neither hot nor cold, and have been rejected by most thinking men, and notably by Mr. Ruskin, who has given an utterance solemn and deep to his feelings, "I am through the Seventies of Venice" might be one of his hieroglyphs. "What true words," he asks, "are worth any man's utterance while two English gentlemen can stand up in the English Commons and quote Virgil at each other's round sentences, and show their pretty little venomous 'carte and tierce' of personality, while even as they speak eternal silence is wrapping the have massacred Denes?" Elsewhere he notes, as we did, the curious fate which led Mr. Kinglake to forego and forget his "History" and to "now like a mosquito cat going to be made a mummy of for Bubostis. Now, the nation of our future Queen calls upon us in its last agony, and we turn our backs." Our future Queen! Mr. Ruskin is not alone about poor women! The Times and Mr. Bernal Osborne have boldly alluded to this great difficulty in the English mind, of which we more than once have spoken.

Time is rather rapidly filling in certain memorable instances for History. If we are to credit a very circumstantial rumour, Denmark, to save herself from destruction, seeks admission into the German Federation, and has proposed to herself the task of organising and keeping up the great German fleet, part of which is already built. If so, we shall find that we have made a great blunder in not helping the Danes. In America, History records much the failure of Grant's expedition and the struggle for the presidency as the first influential cry for a further division of the once great Republic. Colonel Anderson, brother to Major Anderson, who defended Fort Sumter, writes a letter full of Americanisms and plain sense. "Rumpant war has yoked her wagons to her star and is now about getting her harness under foot. Our generals blush behind the bucket of Mars, and that she-devil Bellona lights us on. I am for peace; for a total and immediate cessation of war. I am sick of the contemptible game I hate their selfish measures. Let us have a Western Confederacy!" Elsewhere Colonel Anderson wishes to know if "the bright sparkling river of the Ohio, down to the father of the waters—down to the ocean of peace," adding, "the original Union is dissolved." This is a fool enough to doubt it. The Union is dissolved." Now, although this may remind one of Elijah Pogram, and the bright house of the American eagle being in the dirt, yet, still it is a good sign of the times. Many men must think with this honest gentleman, and, if so, the beginning of the end, although a long end, perhaps, of the American war has commenced.

Mr. Lumley's "Reminiscences of the Opera" the author tells a story to the effect that when Prince Louis Napoleon heard of Cavaignac's firing on the people after an encuente in 1848, he said earnestly to a friend, "that man will be president." It is a great many men have been clearing the way for his Imperial Majesty, and the French people have even now reached with a strange rapidity the way in which Prussia is clearing away all kinds of dynastic scruples—scruples of treaty and of conscience—so that in a short time there will be no Europe to be called the concert of Europe, but simply "Brobdignag, Lilliput, and the old Napoleon;" "why hesitate? Fate always works for him who strikes for wrong." I am sick of the word peace. Everybody knows that, during the last year, ten thousand titlepages have been added to the list of books. How many titlepages the attack on Christianity by Messrs. "Essays on Jesus" have added to we hardly know, but certainly to more than a hundred. Nor, in the matter of books, has England been less busy. Messrs. Sampson Low, Son, and Company have just published the "English Catalogue of Books for Twenty-eight Years, from Jan. 7, 1835, to Jan. 7, 1863." It is of 518 pp., and contains the publisher's name and date of publication of 47,000 distinct works; and it is calculated that 21,900 books have been published during the last eight years, or an average of 2,737 per year, exclusive of reprints. As in our books we do not count titlepages of reprints, or second editions and the like, so we do not claim for our authors and printers an industry nearly equal to that of Paris, which city has, however, been for 200 years celebrated for its literary activity.

The Dean of Westminster has consented that a monument to Thackeray shall be put up in the Abbey. Fielding, who died abroad and alone in Lisbon just one hundred and ten years ago, was indebted to the attention of a foreigner, the French Consul, Chevalier de Meyrionnet, for the last tribute of respect. He raised his friend, wrote his epitaph, and urged the English factory to build a monument. How good Parson Home, Allen Bonnycastle, and Samuel Pasquel Thackeray, his brethren of the Garrick Club, led on notably, we hear, by Mr. Wakley Brooks, the Dean of Westminster deserves for the first. Whilst upon the subject of monuments, let us serve another dish of poetical tongues per force again. Shakspeare is to have a monument on New York. Part of the money was, and is, long past due, has been subscribed, and the monument will "embrace a statue," the suggestion of the ingenious author of the "Life of Lord Clarendon," from the Droeshout print and the Stratford bust. Nor have we done with the immortal William yet. In this year's number of the Anthropological Review we find him "considered ethnologically and phrenologically." Finally, Mr. Hunter, late secretary of the Stratford committee, has published a very full history of the movement in that town; a book curious to all Shakspeare collectors.

Has anybody in the House for the last six weeks a grammatical correspondence on the phrase "It's me"? It is well known that Lindley Murray, in his "Queen's English," defended this vulgarism. Mr. Moon, in his lively book, "The Dean's English," has handsomed him very soundly for this and other solecisms. Let us give him a quotation in aid from Pope's "Rape of the Lock," "he" new to earth and sky, who has never thought that 'this is I' ":—

But so he grows he gathers much,
And learns the rules of Logic and of "me."

Surely the "old party in the shovel-hat," as Dean Alford humorously styles himself, has learnt it by this time, and will not say again to every answer, when asked who is there, "Please, Sir, it's me?" This controversy in the Reader is well worth reading, and should be reprinted.

Two celebrated personages have been distractedly placed in the obituary. The abstraction is The Owl, which, after No. 1000 (it began at No. 1001), ceases to be. It contained early information of marriages, and picked up the whispers of the Foreign Office. The other is "Manhattan, the New York correspondent of the Standard, a writer who always amused, but never to cructed. He held a dashing pen, which many will miss; he threw new alike personality and gossip, and his vivid pictures were life those figures which pass before a concave mirror—you saw them pir ity enough, but the next moment forgot them. Peace be to his ait es! A rabid Northerner at one time, he had honestly thought his self round to General Scott's opinion, and wanted to let the "ways and sisters go in peace."

Abd-el-Kader has returned to Damascus from his pilgrimage to Mecca.

The Great Eastern left the Mersey for the Thames, on Saturday last, to take on board the Atlantic telegraph cable.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Life and Times of Caroline Matilda. By Sir C. F. Lascelles Wraxall, Bart., (3 vols. Hurst and Blackett & Co.) Chivalry is modest; it is only metamorphosed. Gallant gentlemen no longer don their armour, mount their horses, and challenge all the world to single combat in vindication of the virtue of departed beauty; but they put on their dressing-gowns and slippers, go privately among the manuscripts and printed pamphlets, and at the point of the pen defend the reputation of long-buried loveliness from what they consider unmerited aspersion. Sir Nicholas Wraxall has left behind him memoirs, but Caroline Matilda he found a fresh champion. There is a cry of "Sir Lascelles to the rescue!" and three huge volumes issue from the press to clear the name of a repeated adulteress. The time is certainly not ill chosen for reviving a memory. The Queen of Denmark plays a prominent part, even were the story of her beauty and her misfortunes not inventive and her guilty love (as rumour has it), and her only sorrow, as familiar to the English public as the sorrows of Mary Queen of Scots. But it is a question, whether, novels and operas to the contrary notwithstanding, the majority of English readers have not a hazy acquaintance with the history of the life of George III.'s sweet sister. They may have a dim recollection that she is said to have been divorced, and that she died young, but unmistakely concerned in the tragic fate of Struensee; but, with respect to the events which led to her marriage with an idiotic debauchee; with respect to the memories of her married life; with respect to the intrigues at work against her; with respect to her inexperience, her friendlessness, and her free-and-easy manners, which she carried so far as to ride man-fashion on horseback; with respect to the circumstances which led to her imprisonment in Stromberg; with respect to the proofs on which the charge against her of adultery rests; with respect to the alleged confession to the surrender of all her ties with Denmark, to her residence at Celle, to the projects to have recourse to the petition she had lost, to the suspicious suddenness of her death—with these memories can we profess to be refreshed. But our author has better motives than the refreshment of memories of the days of gallantry long forgotten. Sir Nicholas "with a very recent period a perfectly new light has been thrown on the whole subject by the discovery among the State papers in the privy archives of Copenhagen," another, that he has been enabled to procure a copy of the "Mémoires de mon Temps," written by the Queen Dowager Juliana Maria of Hesse-Cassel, widow of Christian VII., which the late King of Denmark allowed to be printed for private circulation." Sir Nicholas, in the course of discovering or transacking the private journals, correspondence, &c., of the late Sir N. W. Wraxall, who was much employed in the interest of the Queen of Denmark, "has also had the good fortune to obtain from a source of the never-yet-published letter (of the genuineness of which he says there is no doubt) which Caroline Matilda addressed, and which wrote to her brother, George III. Our author does not seem to be quite positive that he has discovered the real motive of publication of his protégée, but leaves the decision to his readers; and we must beg leave to follow his example, for there is, no doubt, great weight in the circumstances which surround the letter. Among the books which was "discovered in the secret archives of Hanover" some years ago, as well as in the correspondence of Horace Walpole, are "secrets" of innocence; and so there is in a joint confession on the part of two living persons of their guilt. That a Queen, a wife, and a mother should make a confession of dishonour to her brother is not been guilty, merely from a genuine desire to shelter the dastard who must evidently have been the real seducer, from the penalties of her selfish motives, is more than we can believe of Queen, wife, mother, or sister. Women constantly do strange things, but they do not stop short at confessions of uncommitted crimes. Such things occasionally confess the sin, and that without the slightest shame; but, you may be sure, not to the "dearest dear." Bah!

The Art-Workman's Position. By A. J. B. Beresford Hope. (John Murray.) A pamphlet on the Exhibition of Industrial Art of the South Kensington Museum some months ago. Mr. Hope's object is unexceptionable; he is well acquainted with the subject of which he treats, and his remarks are characterised by much sense and moderation. The place which the art-workman has hitherto occupied is that of an inferior, and consequently unsatisfactory one. The generic may thus have been overlooked; but his merits have run the same chance. Mr. Hope wishes to see the artist-workman in the same, claim in competition the distinction which is justly his, and avoid by publicity the temptation to carelessness which at present besets him. Every one interested in the question should read what Mr. Hope advances.

Three Lectures on Shakspeare's Sorrow. From the French of Felix Bungener. (1 vol. Smith, Elder, and Co.) This is a little book which requires the gentlest treatment. One may consider it morbid, another sacred; but it is always very delicate. Our own sentimentality contained in it is very naturally and very simply expressed. A father has died, and his son, the apology for a man, mourns the loss will blame the loss if he sets down upon paper and publishes for the benefit of mankind the sorrow of his heart. The author, considering the reflections which came upon him from time to time during the short period which elapsed from the moment when the little face, so dear to him as a child, was hidden from him after death, and expressionless, until the awful hour when the little body, which had been the environment of the beautiful spirit, was consigned to the "cold obstruction" of the grave? The book is intended for consolation rather than for mere lament; and its exquisite simplicity in the original French is the apology for its publication.

Monte Tribbio. By Holme Lee. (1 vol. Smith, Elder, and Co.) Miss Holme Lee has written a pretty tale of Italian peasant scenes both grave and gay, which, by graphic description and truthfulness to nature, will please all readers. The characters are well contrasted, the delicate shafts of pathos and the stinging lash of satire. The portraiture, too, is for the most part excellent, and herein is the chief defect of the book. Where the author has over-elaborated her portraits, the interest of the reader is divided and weakened, instead of being concentrated upon the principal figures. The plot, and the story, so far as the heroine is concerned, is exceedingly simple. It is the tale of "blood," not in the sense of "gore," but of "ancient lineage." A dead scene, a mushroom-but in all other respects a most worthy—gentleman, loves the believe of the Talbots and is loved in return by one of the Talbot family, a daughter of Talbot. Hence arises a breach between them, which results to him in premature death, and to her in a broken heart. She has a sister, a selfish sister who does not share her views about "family," and the contrast between stately Maude, with whom pride swallows up even love, and sweet Letitia, the child of love, is drawn with much skill, in a very charmingly worked out. That dogs should enter largely into the circumstances of a tale like this, and into the scenes which are described, is no more than one would have expected from the author of "Four Months." Of the large, sensible, and humane views which the author holds on all matters, especially on those which are towards the poor, the landlord towards the tenant, the employer towards the employed, we have had ample proof in former tales.

Mattie: a Story. By the Author of "No Church." (3 vols. Hurst and Blackett.) A very pleasant, unpretending story, with a slight drawback of garrulousness and diffuseness. The incidents are simple, and the characters are strong without the exaggeration of unselfishness of one Mattie Gray, who is the heroine, and the superlative position of an orphan child straying upon the streets of London, from whence she is taken by the kind benevolence, and, at last, sacrifice, owing to her impulsive nature and want of early training; sometimes, indeed, in a form which has the effect of a too great pleasant suspicious, and which even the reader, who is behind the scenes, occasionally views with reprobation; but, on the whole, she behaves as a heroine. As for the lovers, for whom her chief sacrifice is made, they (especially the lady) raise one's bile to a wonderful extent, so little acquaintance do they seem to have with their own minds. They go up and down, and round and round, after the manner of a seesaw or a weathercock; and the only occasion upon which they both at once command our admiration is when Sidney confides to Harriet the startling secret of his coming blindness, and Harriet vows that her love is strong enough for that or any other trial: the situation is almost sublime. Sidney, no doubt, displays exactness himself throughout the piece; but his blindness and temporary of his sight is not to his credit, and proves him to have been fit mate for nobody better than Harriet Wesden. And she was a vain, selfish, coquettish little fool.

Tales and Traits of Sporting Life. By Henry Corbet. (1 vol. Rogerson and Tuxford.) We have here a reprint of articles which have already appeared in a more periodicity sporting—periodicals. They appeal almost entirely to the sympathies of "sporting men," and are written in sporting strain. One of them, however, called "The Thistle Down," might be read with great advantage even by those square-toed persons who imagine that every keeper of race-horses is a son of Belial, and that to get children employment in a man's stable is a shade worse than making them pass through the fire to Moloch. It is a very interesting sketch of Mr. Merry's racing-stable at Russley, and we are therein informed that the lads "go to the village church regularly every Sunday; and there is a chapel-room at the Grove, which is a school-room every evening in the week and a place of worship on the Sabbath." There is, also, a paper on "The Breeding of Hunters and Hacks," which seems to be worthy of attention; for the writer writes as one having, as he no doubt has, authority upon such matters, which are just now in everybody's mouth.

MUSIC.

The production of Gounod's new opera, "Mireilla," at Her Majesty's Theatre, has been attended with that degree of success which his countrymen indicate by the phrase succès d'estime. It will not exist, nor will it attract from, the reputation of the author of "Faust." Considered only as a musical work, perhaps the preference may be given to "Mireilla," as being more simple, more melodious, and less deformed by overwrought harmonies and modulations than the more successful precursor. But, as a drama, "Mireilla" is unmeasurably inferior to "Faust," and hence its comparative failure. We have more than once pointed it out as a fact to which musical composers pay too little attention, that the success of an opera depends less on the merits of the music than of the drama to which the music is united. It will be found that no bad drama has ever been a successful opera. What can be more ridiculous than the libretto of the "Zauberflöte"? And yet the "Zauberflöte" has never been even tolerated on the stage. It is to bear its enchanting melodies it is only in our concert-rooms or drawing-rooms that we can enjoy that pleasure? Why has the "Faust" of Spohr been superseded by the "Faust" of Gounod? Because no association of poignant will compose for a moment the latter piece to the chef-d'œuvre of the illustrious German. But the "Faust" of Spohr is a piece of operatic concert; the "Faust" of Gounod is the grand and pathetic poem of Goethe. As to "Mireilla" it is a simple pastoral, rather pretty, and not devoid of interest; sufficient to form the subject of a light three-act opera or of two rather three acts. But wire-drawn as it has been by the Parisian playwright, it becomes a story of the existence even of a public interest to the ponderous tragédies lyriques of the French opera stage; and that it should have a successful career at the Académie royale, a thing to be expected as a matter of course. The libretto of "Mireilla" is founded on a popular tale by Mistral, a Provençal poet. The incidents are few and simple. Mireilla is the belle of a village of France. Mireilla, the daughter of a wealthy farmer, is a rustic belle, whose hand is sought by many young men of the district. Mireilla has given her heart to Vincenzo, a poor but handsome young basketmaker; but her father favours the addresses of a herdsman called Vitas, whose brutal strength alone makes him a source of general terror. Then Raimondo (her father) is solicited to consent to her union with Vincenzo he sternly refuses, and commands her to wed Vitas. As the latter has passionately declares that she loves the poor basket-maker, and will wed no other. Vitas, in his brutal rage, escaped at his rejection, vows vengeance against his favoured rival. Waylaying Vincenzo in a solitary place, he attacks him, strikes him down with his club, and leaves him for dead. The treacherous incident, however, is frustrated, for Vincenzo's wound is not fatal; he receives assistance and is saved. Meanwhile, Mireilla, overcome by grief, succumbs to a tenderly treated by her father, who now repents his cruelty. In this state of mind the outrage suffered by her lover, and determines on a pilgrimage to the Camargue, that she might pray for his recovery, she sets out on her weary journey, but grief and exhaustion make a hapless end necessary. She sees an ecstatic vision, a chariot of a splendid city, which she believes to be Jerusalem, and which, though existing only in her imagination, is represented by the scene-painter as a reality. She arrives at length at the end of her pilgrimage. A procession of pilgrims is entering the church, and she is entering with them when her repentant father and her lover appear. They have followed her, but arrive only in time to witness her death. Sinking into the arms of her father, she expires in a paroxysm of religious joy, while her apotheosis is represented by a pictorial exhibition like that of Margaret at the conclusion of "Faust." Such is the original déboucher, but it has not been adopted at Her Majesty's Theatre, where the curtain drops, leaving the conclusion to the imagination of the audience. The author of the libretto, at the moment when Mireilla expires "the church at the back disappears, and the celestial city, guarded by a bright glory, is seen blessing Vincenzo and Mireilla." At Her Majesty's Theatre this clap-trap display, worthy of a Christmas pantomime, is judiciously avoided. Mireilla has formed in the arms of her lover; and, as she appears to be returning to consciousness, the sudden fall of the curtain allows us to suppose that her life is never to be restored. As for the music, it is redolent of Gounod. The stamp of mannerism is strongly impressed on it. Everywhere we recognise the good qualities, as well as the faults, which are apparent in "Faust." The composer possesses no great variety of musical phraseology. In the one opera, as in the other, there are pleasing and pleasing themes, the offspring of a musical mind; but the artistic power required in order to work out these themes into a finished and symmetrical morceau is absent, and consequently the most melodic beginning simply and accurately, are spoiled by harsh modulations and unnatural resolutions. Yet, as an instance, the air sung by Mireilla as she falls at her angry father's feet, "Qui sait si mon amour dans ton âme," and the duet between Mireilla and Vincenzo, "Mireilla" has derived every advantage from the manner in which it has been produced and is performed at Her Majesty's Theatre. Titiens may be said the Adini of the opera; its whole weight rests upon her shoulders. She is scarcely ever absent from the stage, and in every phase of the character—in the grief of the gipsy, the impassioned woman, the martyred pilgrim, hopeless and distracted—she is simply charming. Nicolini, the young lover, is a feeble character; but Giuglini creates interest by his tenderness and feeling. Junca's Raimondo, the stern father, is a powerful piece of acting; and Santley, as the savage Vitas (a kind of Caliban), displays his usual dramatic and vocal excellence. Gassier's able performance, too, of Ambroise, Mireilla's father; is to be welcomed. There are three other parts—Tavena, a fortune-teller (Mdme. Trebelli); Vincenzo's sister (Mdlle. Rudersdorff); Andreino, a shepherd-boy (Mdlle. Volpini)—of no dramatic importance, but which show to great advantage the vocal talents of the performers. The scenery is new and beautiful, and the opera is put upon the stage in a way which does the highest honour to the management of Her Majesty's Theatre.

The only remarkable occurrence of the past week at the Royal Italian Opera has been the performance, after an interval of seven or eight years, of the best of Donizetti's comic operas, "L'Elisir d'Amore," cast with unprecedented strength, Adelina Patti being the Adina; Mario, Nemorino; and Ronconi, Dulcamara; and Faure, Belcore. We need scarcely add that it has been fully successful. It is announced that "L'Etoile du Nord," the last novelty of the season, will be produced on Saturday, the 23rd of this month.

The first general meeting of the College of Organists was held, on Tuesday week, at Freemasons' Hall—Sir George Smart in the chair. This institution, founded only a few months ago for the cultivation of the organ, the noblest instrument, in the country, already numbers nearly 150 members. It was announced that ninety-three compositions had been submitted to competition for the two prizes offered by the council, and that these works were under consideration. Several of the members and their friends afterwards dined together, and during the evening a number of glees and madrigals were sung by the company, assisted by young gentlemen from the choirs of the Temple Church, St. Michael's, Cornhill; and Christ Church, Kensington Park; under the direction of the respective organists, Messrs. E. J. Hopkins, H. Lunn, and E. H. Lott. The new institution enjoys the co-operation of several of the most distinguished organists, both metropolitan and provincial, of whom this country can boast.

Mdlle. Isabelle Schuster gave a Matinée Musicale, on Thursday week, at the Assembly Rooms, South Belgravia, to a crowded audience. The pianist was assisted by Mdlle. Rudersdorff, Mr. G. Bond, and Signor Naspi, vocal performers; by Mr. Robeyn Reeves on the harp, Herr Liebe on the violoncello, and Signor Guido Regondi on the guitar and concertina. The entertainment was quite successful.

Miss Helen Hogarth gave her first matinée on Thursday the 7th inst., at the Hanover-square Rooms. This young lady is a vocalteacher of rising reputation, but does not profess to be a public singer, and therefore did not take part in the performances on this occasion. She was assisted, however, by a host of the best artists, including Mdme. Saunton-Dolby, Mdme. Weiss, Miss De Courcy, Miss Lascelles, Signor Tagliafico, Signor Arditi, Mr. Lindsay Sloper, and Mr. Wells as vocalists; Mdme. Arabella Goddard and Miss Madeleine Schiller (pianos), Mr. Sainton (violin), and Mr. George Howell (violoncello). The programme presented an elegant and refined selection of music. Signor Giuglini sang Benedict's song, "Figlia d'Egitto," and the air, "Spirto gentil" from "Lucrezia." Signor Gardoni gave Mendelssohn's romanza, "Al sasso' di tua melodia." The air, "Nobil Signor," from the "Huguenots," was sung by Miss Lascelles; Balfe's song, "The Sirrup-cup," by Mr. Santley; Duggan's "To find thee a servant-girl," by Mdme. Saunton-Dolby, accompanied by the composer; Hatton's "The lark now leaves his watery nest," by Mdme. Weiss; Weiss's "We were boys together," by Mr. Weiss himself; and Arditi's bolero, "Il segreto invisibile," by Miss de Courcy. Mdme. Arabella Goddard played Benedict's fantasia, "Where the bee sucks," with M. Sainton's ("Faltero") and De Beriot's duet for the piano and violin on airs from the "Huguenots." Miss Schiller played Liszt's "Ricordi," and an andante of Rummel. M. Sainton played his own fantasia on airs from "Faust;" and Mr. Edward Howell (a young violoncellist of the highest promise) his "Souvenir de Bellini," an elegant arrangement of airs from the "Puritani." The room was crowded to the doors with brilliant and successful company.

THE THEATRES.

ST. JAMES'S.—Fewer theatres are now open than at this period in many former years. At the West End we have but the Adelphi, the Princess's, the Olympic, the St. James's, and the Lyceum. We had a novelty on Saturday—a burlesque by Mr. Burnand on the subject of "Faust and Marguerite." Not that the subject is at all novel, though the burlesque is—albeit somewhat anticipated by Mr. Isaac writer's extravaganza lately performed at the Greenwich Theatre. How that theatre took in hand the burlesque-opera of Satan's third curtain, and Arditi's bolero, "Il segreto invisibile," by Miss de Courcy. Mdme. Arabella Goddard played Benedict's fantasia, "Where the bee sucks," with M. Sainton

BOY ASLEEP.

It is impossible to imagine a more exquisite theme or "motif" for sculpture than that of a child sleeping. To the natural innocence, beauty, and grace of childhood—for everything that is very young has all these—there are superadded the mysterious sweetness, the almost preternatural purity, and the sanctity of sleep. If a sculptor, painter, or poet would embody or shadow forth his conceptions even of the pure spirits of a happy and sinless world, where can he obtain an image so appropriate for angel or cherub as those of a child, and especially that to be derived from the expression of a sleeping child?

This most charming, but at the same time most difficult, subject has been treated by Mr. Alexander Munro, in the statue we have engraved, with rare feeling and delicacy, yet without false refinement; but, on the contrary, with close adherence to nature. The body and limbs of the child generally express the consentaneous relaxation of sleep. The left arm—with the hand filled with flowers placed across the bosom—is especially happy in its indication of perfect repose. The slight protrusion, too, of the soft cheek, through the pressure of the falling head on the arm and shoulder, has been closely observed and imitated from nature. The sculptor's chief success is, however, in the eyes. It is very seldom that perfectly unconscious and deep yet placid sleep is so admirably rendered. Even Mr. Millais's little girl seems to have closed her eyes, in some degree, voluntarily, rather than to have quite unconsciously fallen into deep slumber. The representations of sleep by painters commonly fail in this way, or else they convey an impression of blindness. We would invite the reader to observe, also, that Mr. Munro has added to the inherent charm of his subject by the graceful fancy shown in the accessories. He has suggested by the bunch of wild hyacinths (flowers sometimes employed, if we remember rightly, as emblematic of sleep) which the child holds in its chubby hand, and by the soft couch of ferns and flowers on which it lies, that it has tired itself out gathering its simple posy of "blue bells," and that, finding an inviting spot in its little ramble, it has thereupon given itself up to sleep. We have only to add that the modelling of this figure has the soft rotundity and fleshiness which, in our opinion, are alone suited to the subject; although the Palgrave-Wodiner sect would, it seems, have us look, even in sculptures of children, for a rigidity of definition which would degrade what should be a work of art to the level of an anatomical preparation.

"BOY ASLEEP," SCULPTURE, BY ALEXANDER MUNRO, IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

"FLUFFY."

SINCERELY depreciating the angry lightnings of any feminine dark eyes which may perchance flash over these lines, it is yet not to be concealed that the whole race of painters (especially those distinguished chiefly as colourists), from Giotto down to the present day, have shown (and the poets, too) a decided partiality for blue-eyed, yellow-haired, brown-haired, or even red-haired—women. As such, our "great mother, Eve," the Greek Helen, the Madonna of the Christians, and a host of heroines, Christian and Pagan, and female personages of sacred and "secular" story, have always been represented. It may be alleged that the mediæval type and "temperament" of the Madonna were in accordance with a very ancient and not improbable tradition, saying that the same characteristics, though rarely found among the Jews of England, are very common among the contemporaneous Hebrews of Palestine, as well as those of Poland and Germany. This will not, however, explain the fact that La Fornarina" of Raphael, "La Cenci," the so-called "Mistresses" of Giorgione and Titian, and an unquestionable majority of the most favourite models of the painters, have been more or less fair beauties. We might add to similar examples in the works of nearly all the living painters, alike in the Academy and out of it, to prove our position. But it is time to confine ourselves to Mr. Joplng and his fair and fascinating "Fluffy," which we have engraved.

"FLUFFY," BY J. M. JOPLING, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

What a title for a picture! We give the painter the benefit of the assumption that he intended this odd designation to refer only to the tiny toy terrier which this fair girl holds so daintily and caressingly, and whose smother of white worsted hair may have provoked such an appellation. But we fear there are some persons so devoid of all sense of gallantry as to be capable of seeking to fix the name "Fluffy" on the lady herself, under pretence of its being applicable to her tangled warm golden—we dare not say red—hair and to the long pile of her dark sealskin jacket. Leaving such persons to the contempt they deserve, we beg to compliment the artist for the courage he has displayed in painting the profile view of a lady's face with a turned-up nose. Noses of this sort, in our judgment, have not sufficient justice done to them by the common run of painters. For, mark you, this is not a Greek, or straight nose—a Roman, or aquiline nose—a Jewish, or hawk nose—a "cognitative," or wide-nostrilled nose; but it is the delightful slightly-celestial nose feminine. French writers alone have done justice to the irresistible piquancy and animation of le nez retroussé—that is to say, in a woman; in a man it is detestable. Marmontel says, "Un petit nez retroussé renverse les lois d'un empire;" and we are not disposed to dispute the dictum. We confess, with the author of the very amusing "Notes on Noses," to a lurking penchant, a sort of sneaking affection for the feminine turn-up, vulgarly called the snub. "It does not command our admiration and respect like the Greek to which we could bow down as to a goddess, but it makes sad work with our affections."

We would gladly expatiate on the beautiful colouring of this drawing—altogether the best and most important work (it is life-size) which the artist has exhibited; and we would in particular call especial attention to the pure and lovely hues and tender gradations of the flesh-tints or "carnations." But we have already exceeded our allotted space. We must not, however, in conclusion, forget to remind the reader that Mr. Jopling is a first-rate shot as well as a good artist, he having carried off the grand Queen's prize at Wimbledon some three years since, and also one of the most coveted secondary prizes at last year's meeting. We trust to again hear of him from the same quarter this year, and that he will support his well-earned reputation both with his pencil and his rifle.

"SAVED."

THE subject of the water-colour drawing by Mr. F. W. Topham (sen.), engraved, has a simple directness of appeal which requires little comment. We must, if we have any imaginative and humane sensibility, feel the pathetic interest of the situation represented. We say "pathetic," because the sight, merely, of great joy, immediately succeeding deep distress, is often more apt to start a tear than grief itself. We must sympathise with the terror through which these hapless Irish have passed, and with the agony of suspense which has wrung that young mother's heart, as well as with the indescribable joy with which, at the first intimation of her darling's rescue, she now raises her hands and eyes to Heaven. But it should be noted, although a thing for which the painter is not specially recommended—it might possibly be overlooked, that Mr. Topham has chosen for his picture that moment in which the dramatic, in contradistinction to the mere sensational, interest culminates; and which is, therefore, best fitted for artistic representation. By painting an earlier period of the episode, the artist would have produced a too purely painful or a sensational picture. As it is, he intimates—notwithstanding that there appear to be no evidences of consciousness in the pallid face of the poor child just dragged from the water—that he is restored to life. This intimation is, of course, given in the emphatic title, "Saved!" But it is also conveyed in the representation itself: in part by the satisfaction with which his gallant young rescuer is drawing on his coat, though he must know how long the little fellow has been immersed; but far more by the ecstasy of gratitude with which the mother pours out her thanks to Heaven. Incidents such as this of dements drama seem to demand—in order to answer the requirements of good taste—that they should point to a happy termination, especially when there is no great moral to be enforced: a painful finale is more properly reserved for high art tragedy.

We have called the painter's figures Irish, and of this their physiognomies leave us no room to doubt. Besides, all who are familiar—and who is not?—with Mr. Topham's works will know well enough that he has almost invariably confined his pencil to the delineation of the Celtic race and its characteristics, whether in Ireland itself, in Brittany, or in Spain. Judging from the black hair and black-grey eyes of the young mother, we should say she is one of the ravishing beauties of the Claddagh, and we should place the site of the pier in Galway Bay. The apparent youthfulness of the kneeling woman (to be the mother of the rescued boy) favours our assumption, for the Claddagh girls are notorious for marrying early; and, as a natural consequence, they look aged at an earlier period than women of less precocious temperament—a remark that, in all likelihood, applies to the grey-haired crone in this picture, the mother, probably, of the young woman.

"STARTLED."

MR. HARRISON WEIR'S drawing (engraved on page 68) of a blackcock "startled" and flying, evidently "strong on the wing," though cunningly keeping near the ground to escape observation, and thus affording less chance of a shot, is a representation which will awaken in the mind of the sportsmen who frequent our northern moors many a recollection of the keenest pleasure, which has, however, often been dumped by baffled and disappointed pursuit. Some shots are particularly dexterous at the "skimming" blackcock or grouse, as it is called when flying in this way, but others seldom hit it from flurry, particularly at its change of position from its occasionally perpendicular rise. The blackcock, as regards his intimacy with man, is an uncertain bird; for he may sometimes be approached very near, and at others he is altogether as shy. Of the shyness and the wiles, both in running and flying, of this class of game, and the caution it is necessary sometimes to employ, especially when on foot, literally to circumvent red and black grouse (and even, though in a much minor degree, the white grouse, or ptarmigan), when they are wild from wet and other circumstances, this is not the place to speak. But we may remind the reader of the high standing of black game—which is evident from its protection as Royal game, an honour never, we believe, conferred on any other winged game. Indeed, as it is not well fitted to evade the attacks of artful poachers, or, in fact, at certain periods, of enterprising sportsmen, it is well that it should have such protection; and, for the same reason, it is fortunate that its principal breeding-place is Scotland, whence it can be procured to re-stock the preserves of the English counties. Again—as with regard to pheasant-shooting, especially in scarce seasons—it is not thought fair sport to kill black grouse unless the hen is mostly spared. Yet, with every precaution, so tame do they become in the dead of winter from cold and scarcity of provisions, that, were it not that black game are specially preserved by law from slaughter after a more early time than is allowed to red grouse shooting, they would be annihilated. Towards the end of October or the beginning of November, however, when they have bred freely, and the poults are strong, and it is a plentiful country for them, they collect in large flocks of a hundred or more; but in this case they are with difficulty reached, having sentinels posted (as this "startled" fellow in our Engraving may be), and are not to be reached within 150 yards. It may be remembered that in former times the shooting of black grouse was, by law, fixed to commence on the 20th of August, as regarded the northern parts of the kingdom; but the Earl of Carnarvon, who had some black-game preserves in the west of England, had sufficient interest to get a bill passed to limit the shooting of these birds in England from the 1st of September to the 1st of December; and "he well deserves," says Blaine, in his "Encyclopædia of Rural Sports," "the thanks of every rational sportsman, as well as every lover of his country, who wishes still to see it adorned with these and other winged gems."

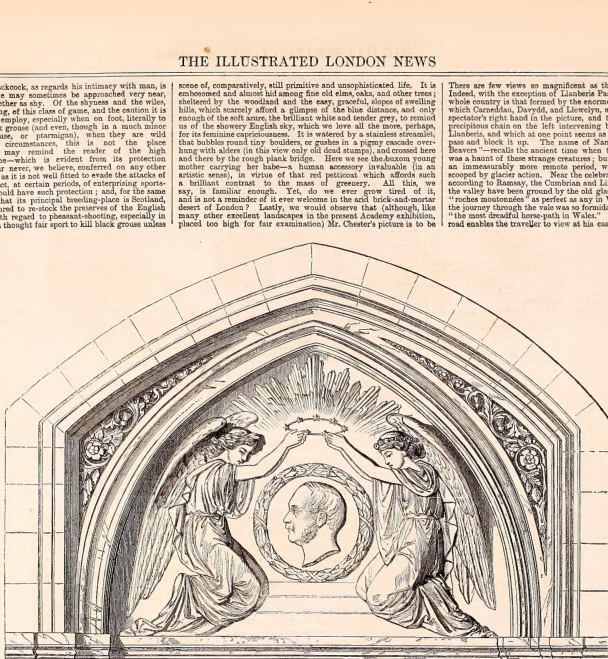
The drawing engraved, like that of sheep by Mr. Weir, is not so advantageously placed as the charming little pictures of birds by the same artist (all in the Exhibition of the Water-Colour Institute), which we have already noticed. To represent a blackcock in flight is the most difficult subject; but this is, perhaps, the best in execution of the artist's works exhibited this year.



"THE COMBE FARM."

THE word "combe," applied to a valley inclosed on each side by hills, is a term which, though, according to Richardson, of Anglo-Saxon usage, and the same in French, has, we believe, long been only employed generally, and in common parlance, in the west of England. That the word was localised in the west as early as the seventeenth century may perhaps be inferred from the following passage in Browne's "Britannia's Pastorals:"—

> O, if the roomes,
> The walks, and arbours in their fruitful coombes
> Have famous been through all the western plaines,
> In being guiltless of the lasting staines
> Heard on us by lust and murther: keep them free!

Of late years, however, though the word is still confined in its application to the common designation of the glens and valleys of the western countries, it has been rendered familiar by many literary allusions, especially since the widely-spread desire of amateurs to search for and cultivate ferns—Devonshire combes supplying a great many of the most beautiful varieties of what were till recently regarded as useless, if not unsightly, weeds. The reader will, in particular, remember Mrs. Chanter's charming little volume on the "Ferny Combes" of North Devon.

The "Combe," which is the subject of the admirably-painted landscape by Mr. George Chester (senior) engraved on page 68, is, however, not, we understand, actually in Devonshire, but on the neighbouring borders of Somersetshire. Nor is it a ferny combe. It is simply one of the many similar homely hollows—but picturesque enough to be haunted by pixies—in that favoured and luxuriant part of our native land. Its features are all familiar—the comfortable farmstead, which is the retreat of the true "sons of the soil," and the scene of, comparatively, still primitive and unsophisticated life. It is embosomed and almost hid among fine old elms, oaks, and other trees; sheltered by the woodland and the easy, graceful, slopes of swelling hills, which scarcely afford a glimpse of the blue distance, and only enough of the soft azure, the brilliant white and tender grey, to remind us of the showery English sky, which we love all the more, perhaps, for its feminine capriciousness. It is watered by a stainless streamlet, that bubbles round tiny boulders, or gushes in a pigmy cascade over-hung with alders (in this view only old dead stumps), and crossed here and there by the rough plank bridge. Here we see the buxom young mother carrying her babe—a human accessory invaluable (in an artistic sense), in virtue of that red petticoat which affords such a brilliant contrast to the mass of greenery. All this, we say, is familiar enough. Yet, do we ever grow tired of it, and is not a reminder of it ever welcome in the arid brick-and-mortar desert of London? Lastly, we would observe that (although, like many other excellent landscapes in the present Academy exhibition, placed too high for fair examination) Mr. Chester's picture is to be

MONUMENT TO THE LATE PRINCE CONSORT IN WHIPPINGHAM CHURCH, ISLE OF WIGHT, BY W. THEED.

MONUMENT TO THE LATE PRINCE CONSORT.

THE parish church of Whippingham, where the Queen has been accustomed to attend Divine worship during her residence at Osborne House, is about two miles from East Cowes. It has been gradually rebuilt, during the last ten years, at the expenses of her Majesty. The chancel is divided from the side aisles by a range of small-pointed arches, richly decorated with zigzag and other mouldings, which, standing on a plinth, form a screen to the portion of the church occupied by the Queen and her household. Mr. Theed is the sculptor of the monument to the late Prince Consort, which was erected in February last. The architectural parts are by Mr. A. J. Humbert, who designed and superintended the rebuilding of the church. We have engraved a representation of this monument. As the design requires no words of explanation; but, with regard to the materials, it should be stated that the figures of angels (in relief) holding the crown of stars over the medallion of the Prince are of pure white marble, while the cornice of rue (forming a part of the Prince's arms) has been executed in alabaster, and the ground in gold. The spandrils and diaper-work are also of alabaster, with the ground in gold. The four small columns of polished red marble, the four outer columns are in Irish and Genoa green marble, and the arms of the Queen and Prince Consort are proper. The whole height of the monument is 9 ft., by 7 ft. 3 in. in breadth.

A NOVEMBER DAY IN NANT-FRANCON.

FEW, if any, countries of such limited area present so much diversity of landscape scenery as North Wales. Here the lofty snow-clad peak, the long, jagged mountain-spine, the elevated lake, the rushing torrent, with other characteristics of Alpine scenery, are found combined with the precipitous cwm, or glen, and the terraced vale, the grim, gloomy ravine, and black, barren moor, or the green pasture and the wooded slope. Hence North Wales is the most favourite resort of the English painter as well as tourist. At certain localities—as that central station at Bettws-y-coed, the head-quarters of the late David Cox, and whence may be conveniently explored the eastern district of Snowdonia, the courses of the Conway and the Llugwy, and the wild valleys of the Lledr and the Machno—there is quite a colony and encampment of artists all through the summer and autumn; and we never remember to have seen a London exhibition without something to remind us of their pleasant labours. The grand vale represented in the drawing by Mr. J. Reed, (of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours), which we have engraved, is another favourite haunt for artists, and we need not say very deservedly so.

There are few views so magnificent as those afforded in this vale. Indeed, with the exception of Llanberis Pass, the finest gorge in the whole country is that formed by the enormous block of mountain of which Carneddau, Daryeld, and Llewelyn, are the centres, seen on the spectator's right hand in the picture, and the still more savage and precipitous chain on the left intervening between Llyn Ogwen and Llanberis, and which at one point seems as if about to close over the pass and block it up. The name of Nant-Francon—"the Glen of Beavers"—recalls the ancient time when the stream of the Ogwen was a haunt of these strange creatures; but the geologist takes us to an immeasurably more remote period, when the whole valley was scooped by glacier action. Near the celebrated Penryn slate quarries, according to Ramsay, the Cumbrian and Lingula grits striking across the valley have been ground by the old glacier of Nant-Francon into "roches moutonnées" as perfect as any in Wales. In Pennant's time the journey through the vale was so formidable that he described it as "the most dreadful horse-path in Wales." Now an excellent terrace-road enables the traveller to view at his ease the vista of mountains on each side. Ever since the present road has been formed dangers have nevertheless arisen; for in 1831 a mass of rock weighing a thousand tons was detached from the mountain near the falls, and blocked up the way for a considerable time. The terrces of the scene depicted in Mr. Reed's fine drawing are aggravated by the snows and rains of early winter, which are already whitening the slopes of the mountains, hanging murkily in the sky, swelling the streams into angry, foaming cataracts, and imparting to the whole scene a deeper and more sombre aspect of desolateness.

THE NEW GARRICK CLUB.

THOUGH a London club is a private institution, the addition of a handsome building to the ornaments of London is a public fact. We have, therefore, pleasure in presenting our readers with a view of the new Garrick Club, just erected by Mr. Frederick Marrable, late architect to the Metropolitan Board of Works, and a few words respecting the new building, and that which is a about to supersede.

The Garrick Club is rather a remarkable one. It was instituted for the purpose of bringing together the "patrons" of the drama and its professors, and also for offering literary men a welcome table, and the managers of the club have kept those general objects steadily in view. Nearly all the leading actors are members, and there are few of the active literary men of the day who are not upon the list. The large majority of the association is composed of the representatives of all the best classes of society. The number of the members is limited, and the character of the club is social, and therefore the electing committee is compelled to exercise every vigilant care, for it is clear that it would be better that ten unobjectionable men should be excluded than that one terrible bore should be admitted. The prosperity of the club and the eagerness to obtain admission to it are the best proofs of its healthy management; and few of the cases of grievance alleged against the direction will bear looking into.

The house in King-street, Covent-garden, which the club is about to abandon, has previous to its occupation by the Garrick men, a family hotel, "Probatt's." It was rendered tolerably commodious, but, though the principal rooms are good, the kitchens and other domestic apartments are bad, and there was far too little room for the increased number of members. But the old place, inconvenient as it is, will long preserve the interest of association for the older members of the Garrick. From James Smith (of "Rejected Addresses") to Thackeray, there is a long roster of names of distinguished men who have made the Garrick their favourite haunt, and whose memories are connected with those rooms. The visitor who has had the good fortune to be taken through those rooms by a member with the unequalled collection of theatrical portraits, will also retain a pleasant remembrance of the place. He will recollect that he went up one side of a double flight of stone steps from the street and entered a rather gloomy hall, in which was a fine bust of Shakspeare, by Roubiliac, and some busts of celebrated actors, and he may have noticed in the hall a tablet recording the obligation of the club to Mr. Durrant, who bequeathed to it the pictures collected by the late Charles Mathews. Conducted to the left, the visitor found himself in the strangers' dining-room, which occupies the whole of the ground floor. This apartment, where, perhaps, more pleasant dinners have been given than in any room in London, is closely hung with pictures. The newest is Mr. O'Neil's admirable picture of Mr. Fechter, which hangs over the fireplace in the front room, near Sir Edwin Landseer's portrait of Charles Young. There are numerous other interesting pictures in this room, among them a Peg Woffington, Lee (the author of the "Bedlam Tragedy," in character acts), Mrs. Pritchard, and Mr. Garrick, an admirable illustration of Pritchard's genteel, and Garrick six feet high;

a most gentlemanly cast of Pope for actor, Garrick's version as Macbeth in the Court dress, two charming little paintings of Miss Poole when a child-performer, the late Patrick Murray, Mrs. Davison (of mere beauty), Miss Lydia Kelly, and a dish stone bodies. Mr. Fechter's picture would probably be next conducted through a long passage until he reached the smoking-room. This is not a room for entertaining by daylight, and empty; but which at night, and full, is thought the most cheerful apartment in town. It is adorned with gifts from artists who are members of the club. A Mansfield has given a splendid seapiece, with a wash of waves that sets one coveting an excursion; and Mr. David Roberts has given a large and noble painting of Baalbec, one of his finest works. These great pictures occupy two sides of the room, and the other walls are covered with engravings. Mrs. Stirling's bright face looks down upon the smokers, and there is a statuette of one who loved the room—the author of "Vanity Fair."

The visitor was then brought down to the hall, and taken up stairs to the drawing-room floor. On the wall as he passed he would observe a vast picture of Mr. Charles Kemble (long a member of the club), and a Miss O'Neil as Juliet. He entered the coffee-room, as it is called, which is the front room, looking into King-street, and behind which is the morning-room, the card-room, and writing-room, and in which is the small but excellent library, rich in dramatic works. The coffee-room is devoted to the members' dinners, and to the few meals served in this Journal, the late Mr. Thackeray dined for the last time away from home at a table in a niche which hangs the portrait of Miss Kelly as "Clandestine Marriage" where Lord Ogleby is preparing to join the ladies. Over the fireplace is another scene from the same play, and on the mantelpiece are Garrick's candlesticks, and a number of some other relics of interest. The paintings in this room are very valuable. There is Foote, by Reynolds; a Macready as Werner; and Edmund Kemble as Charles II. (under which picture he often sat in advanced life, when he in no degree resembled the audacious, stalwart King in the painting); Mrs. Charles Kemble, a noble artist; Mrs. Fitzwilliam (by Charles Mathews, pere); a fine, roystering Woodward, reminding one of the rollicking times of stage-playing; "victorious" Macready, and in which in the morning-room is a delightful Kitty Clive, another Garrick, and, near the ceiling, a row of strong faces of by-gone days—Cooke the strongest.

On the second floor the stranger would find a front room, with the easy-chairs and couches on which members love to lean back, like the reading of reviews and magazines in to question. Here are numerous small water-colour characteristic pictures, and in a recess a choice folio is one of the completest and most valuable of collections of theatrical prints. In the card-room, behind this, are some very quaint and curious likenesses, one of Mrs. Lane, as Dollalolla, which quite explains the retort of the Irishwoman whom the lady rebuked, saying: "Do you want to wear out the life of me?" "Faith, ma'am, I would be aisier to walk over ye than to walk round ye." There is a sweet face of "the Sisters" Perdita, which contrasts his indolence and repose unites his treachery. When the visitor had seen these things and a few busts, among them one of the late Justice Talfourd (an old member), he was informed that he had seen the collection and he could go away, unless he were lucky enough to have an invitation to dine in the strangers' room.

Such, we may say, sans the Garrick, and the brief sketch will be interesting to many; for Mr. Marrable's new house is finished, and on Wednesday week an inauguration dinner took place. Mr. Alderman Trollope being very fittingly selected to fill the chair. The removal of the club will at once be a social and old "Probatt's" will be a commercial purposes.

The new club is a little more westward than the old one, but not much, the Garrick having resolved to cling to the classic region around Covent-garden. In the new street (to be called, we believe, Garrick-street), from the west end of Bedford-street, Strand, eastward, and on the left hand as you go west, is the new Garrick Club. It has a frontage of 58 ft. to that street; but the site was very difficult, and required the ingenuity of the manage, and Mr. Marrable has dealt very cleverly with the quaint form over which he had to lay out his design. The building is Italian, and is imposing from having been judiciously and not over enriched. The entrance is by a recessed porch, not in the centre, but nearer west, so as to give the club a splendid dining-room on the left, 36 ft. by 24 ft. The smoking-room (28 ft. by 32 ft.) is to the right, and in the rear are strangers' dining-rooms and morning rooms, the former being 24 ft. by 17 ft. The latter 20 ft. by 17 ft. In the hall is a very beautiful Italian screen. The noble staircase is of carved oak: at the top a landing-place of 26 ft. by 18 ft. From this it enters the drawing-room (42 ft. by 26 ft. by 26 ft.), the card-room (26 ft. by 23 ft.), and the library (27 ft. by 18 ft.). All the apartments demanded by the habits of the club are provided for, and the thought necessary in the days of Garrick—are, of course, provided—two baths, one lighted. The hall and the corridor on the ground floor are paved with beautiful encaustic tiles, and the centre of the coffee-room is laid with parquetrie. The kitchens and all their arrangements are sumptuous, and the latest sanitary improvements are introduced. The system of sunlights appears to be very complete, and devices for a perfect ventilation have not been neglected. The contract for the work was taken at £9880, and the entire expense, including the fittings, will be about £13,000. The unwholesome pictures will also be immediately re-hung, but will be placed away until the last suspicion of any vestige of damp shall be dispelled. It only remains to be add that those who have had the invitation to pleasure of examining the collection of works of art at the old Garrick, and have had the additional satisfaction of partaking of the hospitality will join with us in the wish that all may go on as prosperously under the new roof as all has gone on under the old.

At the meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works, yesterday week, a report was brought up from the Thames Embankment Committee recommending that the demolition of the Temple Gardens commence after the last on Wednesday, the 20th inst., and that it be referred back to the committee to make the necessary arrangements. The report was received and adopted.

A beautiful memorial tablet to perpetuate the memory of the late Dr. C. Barry has just been erected in the nave of Westminster Abbey, over the spot where the distinguished architect of the Houses of Parliament lies buried, and nearly adjoining the grave of the late Mr. Robert Stephenson. The memorial, which has been placed in the abbey by the family of the late Sir C. Barry, consists of a large cruse let into a massive slab of black marble about twelve feet in length by five feet in width, and the inscription on the cruse is as follows:—"Sacred to the memory of Sir Charles Barry, R.A., F.R.S., architect of the New Palace at Westminster and other buildings, who died on the 12th of May, 1860, aged sixty-four years, and lies buried beneath this brass."

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Admiral Sir Edward Tucker, G.C.B., of Dover-street, Piccadilly, was proved in the London Court, on the 19th ult., by the executors, Martin Tucker Smith, his nephew, and George Robert Marten, Esqrs. The personalty was sworn under £30,000. The gallant Admiral, who attained the age of eighty-seven, had seen much actual service on the Mediterranean, Baltic, and coasts of France and Spain, during the wars ended in 1815. He was the son of Colonel Tucker, 5th Dragoon Guards. His will bears date 1862, and a weekly, 16th August, 1861, being the month following the decease of his wife, Lady Tucker. His estates in Ireland, together with his personal property, he left to his nephew, Martin Tucker Smith, late Indian Civil Service, he paying £1100 to the testator's nephew, Cecil Tucker.

The will of Admiral Andrew Kershaw, Esq., M.P., late of Oaklands, Manchester, and Streatham, Surrey, was proved in the London Court, and the personalty sworn under £60,000. The executors and trustees therein nominated are Mrs. Kershaw, the relict; Frederick T. Elworthy and Samuel Armitage, Esqrs., of Manchester; and Thomas Kershaw, Esq., of Streatham. Thomas Kershaw, Esq., who are also guardians of the children, who are minors. A legacy of £100 to each of the testator's executors, except Mrs. Kershaw, and a liberal provision for his relict, and to the two sons of his late son James he leaves as a gift and bequest "all my plate, linen, china, glass, and wines." and £2000, appointing them also residuary legatees. The will bears date 1862. The testator died on the 27th of April last, aged sixty-nine. Mr. Kershaw was partner in the firm of Kershaw, Leese, and Sidebottom, manufacturers, at Manchester; was a magistrate; was elected Mayor of Manchester in 1841, and had been M.P. for Stockport since 1847.

The will of Colonel Richard William Astell, of Everton House, Bedfordshire, formerly commanding the 3rd Battalion of the Grenadier Guards, was proved in the London Court on the 1st inst. by the testator's brothers and executors, John S. Astell, Esq., M.P., and the Rev. Augustus Astell, Esq., the personalty was sworn under £60,000. The will bears date 1857, and a codicil, September, 1862, and are in the testator's own handwriting. The testator has named Lord Overstone, Mr. Astell, M.P., and a active service. He was a magistrate and Deputy Lieutenant for Bedfordshire. His will contains many liberal legacies. To his eldest son, Lady Fowler he leaves an annuity of £500 and a legacy of £500; to his sisters Louisa St. Aubyn and Harriet Parslow, each £10,000; and to his brothers Henry and Charles, each a like legacy of £10,000 (one half of these legacies on their decease to go to their children), and liberal bequests to many of his friends. The residue, real and personal, is left to his brother John Harvey Astell, Esq., for his trouble in acting as executor. The Astell Arms, in Everton, and the Grenadier Guards) an annuity of £25, and to each of them a legacy of £50, and bequeaths to the Bedfordshire Infirmary, the Bedford Dispensary £100; and to the Middlesex and Westminster Hospitals, the Bedford Infirmary and the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's-inn-road, each £100. All legacies are to be paid free of duty.

The Quebec Gazette reached the hundredth year of its existence last month.

A handsome Jewish synagogue has been erected at Melbourne, in Australia, capable of seating 1,000 persons.

One hundred and fifty employés at the West India Docks have subscribed to the National Life-boat Institution £5 7s. 10d., in sums varying from 6d. to 5s.

Cape Coast Castle advices of the 14th ult. give a deplorable account of the crops in the Gold Coast territories. Famine fruitier. It is asserted that "hardly four out of ten men were fit for duty."

Port Elizabeth, Algoa Bay, Cape Colony, has a population of 20,000. It has seven churches, a commodious theatre, fifteen public schools, a theatre, an opera, a public library, a college, two literary institutions, and an excellent market-house, and railways in posse. There are seldom less than thirty ships in the bay.

HOUSE OF JOHN MILTON, IN BARBICAN.

DR. JOHNSON, somewhat abating his "paltry acrimony against Milton," says, in his Life of the poet, "I cannot but remark a kind of neglect, perhaps voluntary, perhaps accidental, in his biographers: every house in which he resided is historically mentioned, as it is even an object of curiosity to see the inn in which a king lodges by his presence." There has been abundant opportunity for this tribute of respect. Although Milton was a republican statesman,

Thy soul was like a star, and dwelt apart;

yet he did not regard "life's common way" from such a distance, but painted even the social aspects, the recreations, and pastimes of London with loving interest. He knew that these things will be, and must be; but how they shall be least hurtful, how least enticing. Milton wisely as a statesman, and piously as a student. To sequester out of the world into Atlantis and Utopian politics, which can never be drawn into use, will not much advantage mankind; but to govern wisely as a statesman, and civilly, in the midst whereof God hath placed us unavoidably."

Milton was a Londoner, and, from first to last, a lover of London; yet he felt an affection for our proud suburban shades

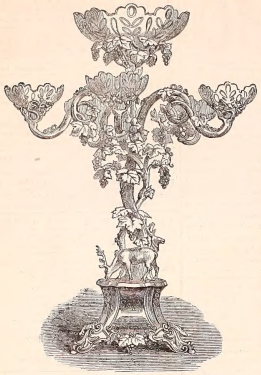
Of branching elm, that never sun pervades.



Then he would return to town life:

Nor of cities please us then,
And the busy hum of men
and elsewhere he addresses

Too blest abode! no overlinese we see
In all the earth, but it abounds in bliss.

He is even thought to have had a mental pictures of "L'Allegro" from the "suburban shades," though he was much then with his father at Horton, in Buckinghamshire, and afterwards at Chalfont, both, in most cases, a garden-house—that is, a house in a garden, of which there were, especially in the north suburbs of London, very many in Milton's time. The young poet was born in a house in Bread-street, his father's roof in Bread-street, "in some retired back room, looking north probably," as Mr. Masson supposes. The poet, we may imagine to have existed in the Bread-street of two centuries and a half since. His lodging is now in the New-churchyard, and the poet's father must be made no long stay there, but took, Phillips tells us, a pretty garden-house in Aldersgate-street, which was in existence a few years since, and was probably one of "the rural parts" which, in 1625, and 1863. The dwelling was but a cottage, with insufficient room for his study, although "a pretty garden-house." The poet farmers did not grow enough to keep the colony from starving; the Hon. Mr. Van Breda, M.P.; Mr. Advocate Barry, and half a dozen other gentleman of the Cape, discoursing their best on Cape affairs, while drinking of their best Cape wine. The testimonial of which we have spoken was then presented to Mr. Murray, with a few emphatic speeches in his praise, and the reading of a letter from Mr. P. B. Borcherds, of Wynberg, for thirty or forty years chairman of the society, who was unable to be at Swellendam, but willingly assented to join in this expression of personal regard. Mr. Murray, of course, returned thanks. The entertainment was kept up till two hours after midnight. Next day there were races and a ball.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. R. W. MURRAY FROM THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

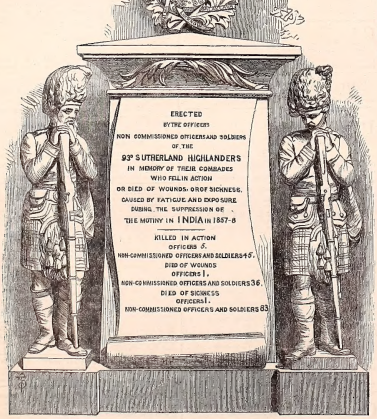
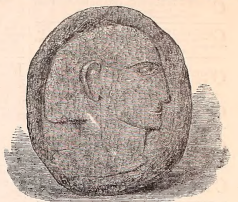
FUNERAL MONUMENTS ERECTED BY THE 77TH AND THE 93RD REGIMENTS TO THEIR COMRADES.

We have engraved a representation of the memorial lately erected in St. Paul's Cathedral by the officers of the 77th (East Middlesex) Regiment to their comrades in arms who lost their lives during the Crimean campaign of 1854-6. It is an alto basso-relievo, designed and executed, in white Carrara marble, by Mr. Matthew Noble. The sculptor has here, in the central figure, embodied an idea taken from Longfellow's poem of "The Two Angels." The following is the concluding stanza of the poem alluded to :—

> Angels of Life and Death alike are His,
> Without His leave they pass no threshold o'er;
> Who, then, would wish or dare, believing this,
> Against His messengers to shut the door?



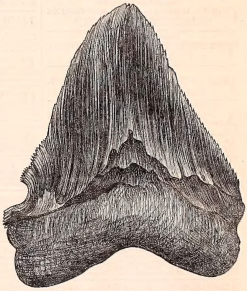
The Angel of Life is here represented as hovering over the Valley of



MILTON'S HOUSE IN BARBICAN.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Death and consoling the survivors upon their farewell visit to the final resting-place of their departed comrades. The 77th Regiment served with the Light Division throughout the Crimean War, and the numbers here recorded speak silently of the prominent position occupied by the division during that arduous campaign.

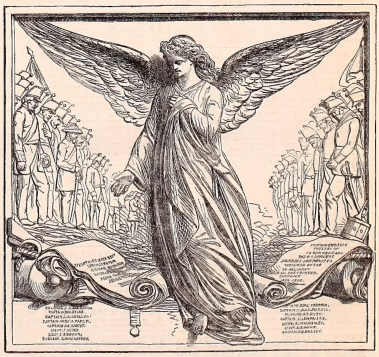
As a companion illustration to the above, we present an Engraving of the memorial erected in St. Giles's Church, Edinburgh, by the officers and soldiers of the 93rd Highlanders to their comrades who fell in India in 1857-8. The sculptor is Mr. William Brodie, of Coate's-place, Edinburgh. The design requires no explanation.



MONUMENT IN ST. GILES'S CHURCH, EDINBURGH, TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 93RD HIGHLANDERS KILLED IN INDIA.

INDIAN ROCK SCULPTURE FOUND NEAR LAKE UTOPIA, NEW BRUNSWICK.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

from the strong and serrated character of its teeth. This shark seems to have infested the miocene seas, inasmuch as its teeth are found in abundance in the deposits of that age in Malta, where the specimen above delineated was procured, and is now in the collection of Captain Strickland, R.N. The teeth of this and all other fossil sharks are called by the natives "St. Paul's tongues," from a superstition that they were connected in some way with the Apostle's visit to that island. In Belogulius' account of Malta a tooth of this species is recorded which measured 7 in. at its largest part; but such



TOOTH OF A GIGANTIC FOSSIL SHARK FOUND ON THE COAST OF MALTA.

FOSSIL SHARK'S TOOTH FOUND ON THE COAST OF MALTA.

THE shark tribe seem to have made their first appearance in the cretaceous period, and subsequently, in greater numbers, in the lower, middle, and upper tertiary epochs. Although many of their various forms have since died out, their fossil teeth often resemble those of species now met with, especially thegrey, blue, and white sharks. With reference to the last-named, there is an allied form to which the name Carcharodon has been given, on account of the solidity and great size of the teeth, which, when compared with the white shark's, if the body of the fish bore a like proportion, would lead to the belief that one or more of the species exceeded sixty feet in length. The largest species has been named the great-toothed shark (Carcharodon megalodon), doubtless a formidable and ferocious monster, judging must be extremely rare. Neither the very large one in the Hunterian Museum, London (also from Malta), nor any in the numerous public and private collections in the island, exceed that shown in our Engraving, the dimensions of which are as follow:—Extreme length, 6 3-10; greatest thickness, 1 3-10; greatest breadth, 4 5-10; perpendicular height, 5 8-10 in. As in the generality of specimens, the outer hard coat is particularly well preserved. It should be remarked that, from the cartilaginous and perishable nature of the skeletons of sharks, it is a rare occurrence to find fossilised any relic of the animal except its teeth.

MONUMENT IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL TO THE OFFICERS OF THE 77TH (EAST MIDDLESEX) REGIMENT KILLED IN THE CRIMEA.

NEW MUSIC.

NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and all the best Editions, at half the published price, and post-free for postage-stamps or Post Office order (bought works exempted).
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE,
COOTE'S TUILERIES QUADRILLE, Price 2s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INNOCENCE VALSE. Price 4s. "This single and beautiful Valse has become quite the rage of the season."—Review.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND,
COOTE'S PRINCE ALFRED VALSE. 4s. With a capital Portrait in Colours of the Royal Duchess.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE FAVORITE GALLOP OF
COOTE'S PRINCE IMPERIAL GALOP. Price 2s. Redescended nightly at all the balls.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET EVER COMPOSED.
COOTE'S POLLY PERKINS QUADRILLE. Price 2s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Song, "Polly Perkins of Walsercoxes," "Hoop'sown the Ghost!" "Polly Perkins," &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT THE STATE BALL.
COOTE'S HUMMING-BIRD VALSE. 4s. Considered the best set of Valses by the popular Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pilgrim of Love," "Pretty Polly Oliver," "Ah, non giunge," "Ah, che la morte," and other popular Airs. A real music set. So dance progressively as possible without them. Always redemanded.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, Introducing "Kathleen O'Moore," "Thomas Farewell to Kathleen," "Kate Kearney," "Successors Deadish," Solo or Duet, 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHRISTY SONG. 2s. 6d.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, That I might fly to thee.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE FRESHEST SONG IN
COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. By FRED BUCKLEY. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.
THE NIGHT IS CALM AND CLOUDLESS By C. M. S. OUDIN. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SONG OF THE DAY.
POLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON. Price 2s. 6d. Sung everywhere.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

UTHOROUS SUCCESS OF MR. TOOLE'S NEW SONG.
A NOBBLE TALE; or, The Suicidal Family. Price 2s. Encored five times nightly in "The Area Belle."—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by CLACHENAL, Full Compass, with all the latest Improvements, manufactured for her clientele, and to be sold only in town, from Two guineas, with case, lock and key, 6s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ITALIAN OPERAS.—Boxes and Stalls in the best situation for both the Opera. Tickets for every Concert, and Season Tickets for the Crystal Palace, may be obtained of the Agents.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

POPULAR SONGS OF THE SEASON.
HOME SWEET HOME. Sung by Miss. Lemmens-Sherrington 3s. 0d.
Ditto, Fantasia. Ditto 4s. 0d.
Ditto, Italian Fantasia. Sung by Mme. Sainton-Dolby ... 3s. 0d.
The Hayrack. Sung by Herr Reichardt ... ... 3s. 0d.
A Will I Wish. Sung by Miss Poyner ... ... 3s. 0d.
Ave Maria Stella. Prayer in "Guarolla" ... ... 3s. 0d.
Ditto, Fantasia. Ditto ... ... 4s. 0d.
Lady and Love Sparrows Duett. Sung by Mme. Guarolla ... 3s. 0d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FRANCLIETTA. Italian Bolero. Sung by Mme. Rudersdorff with the greatest success. With Portrait. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

GASTON DE LILLE. "NINA." Serenade Espagnole, for the Pianoforte. The most successful morceau of the day. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC BY
GASTON DE LILLE.
A Summer's Night. Polka Mazurka ... ... 3s.
Les Fleurs. Valse ... ... 4s.
Pearl and Ruby. Galop ... ... 3s.
Spirit of Fun. Polka ... ... 3s.
Bright Eyes. Valse ... ... 4s.
All Illustrated in superior style.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 36, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

PLAYED AT THE STATE BALLS
THE LOCOMOTIVE GALOP, by T. BROWNE, with wood in perspective by the same Composer's "Train-de-Plaisir Valse," with effective Illustration in Colours 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

BANTING! BANTING! BANTING! The Celebrated Song of the Day. By HOWARD PAUL. With a most amusing separate Illustration. Price 3s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 36, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

MENDELSSOHN'S ATHALIE. Just ready,
A new cheap Edition for Voice and Piano. 4s.
London: EWER and Co., 67, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and Co. PICCINI, New Pianoforte Study, combining the best and cheapest in Europe, and which unites the price of the much advertised French pianos with the best principles of construction in this trade. Cost in the Violoncello marked with price; piano wants changes.
Facetious, 1st, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, to be walnut cases, 7½ octaves, warranted,—141, Regent-street. Floss cheaper the solid-ox.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and Co. PIANO GRAND COTTAGE, never-sonorous, new compound scale, 30 to 38 guineas. These instruments are beautiful in touch, quality of tone, and elegant in appearance.—141, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S INDIAN PIANOFORTES, made expressly to resist damp, heat, and insects. Invaluable for ship-board.
Shipped in best cases, for Calcutta.—141, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES AND HARMONIUMS. OETZMANN and PLUMB have all descriptions for Hire, Repure with Purchase. 141, Regent-street. The only cab device to good instruments at moderate prices, by instalments if desired. Old pianos taken in exchange. Lists free.—141, Regent-street. Warehouse, Buckingham-street, the only address.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPÔT for the Sale of MESSRS'S celebrated Musical Instruments is REMOVED from 56 to 11 and 12, Cornhill, London. A large consignment of all sizes from Geneva has arrived. Lists of Tunes and Price gratis and post-free.

PHOTOGRAPHIC BATHS, TRAYS, DIPPERS, FORCEPS, DEVELOPING CUPS, SENSITISING DISHES, &c., &c. PATENT RECOILS, very light, and not easily broken. N.B.—An Elective Bath filled with mixture of silver 1 oz. to 1 pint, 10s. 6d. Instructions for Photographic Operations, 1s. 6d. To be had of dealers in Photographic Apparatus, and, wholesale only, of the Patentee—OLIVER'S, Bridgewater Works and Voltaic Battery Factory, Cumberland Market, and 1, Bishopsgate-street Within, London; Works—Silvertown, Essex.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, patented free, 10s. 10d.—This TOURIST'S FAVOURITE shows landscapes distinctly at thirty miles, small windows ten miles off. Jupiter's moons, &c. The unequalled excellence and cheapness result from extraordinary size of glass and power. Navy, army, and all sporting telescopes, compasses, &c. Most useful.—Lord CLYDE writes, "Invaluable."—Sir COLIN CAMPBELL writes, "Admirable."—Lord GOUGH, "Especially good."—Lord CARDIGAN, "It gives me complete satisfaction, and I shall recommend it to my friends."—Lord RAGLAN, "Quite as powerful as that for which I paid five guineas."—Major SHADWELL CLERKE writes, "Astonishing for its size and power."—Sir JAMES OUTRAM, "Astonishing that opticians can get up makers into single lens." Last testimony, a glass combining as much power, for distance, as the most expensive.—C. P. DARTER, 27, Panton-street, Haymarket. "We have carefully tried it, and found it fully equal to the description given of it."—Field. "Astonishing power."—Bell's Life. "Most amazing power."—Sporting Gazette. "Quite a wonderful pocket companion to a pleasure-trip."—Notes and Queries. The "Reconnoiterer" is a most valuable present. Sent free for 10s. 10d. stamps. Size 6d. The above glasses are only to be had direct from SALDEN and CO., 79, Princes-street, Edinburgh. Established 1760.

FOR FAMILY ARMS, CREST, or PEDIGREE, send name and county, and in three days you will receive a correct copy, with description, from the Heralds' College. Fee, 1l. 1s. Plain sketch of Arms, 5s. Painting of Arms, in whom and when granted, the origin of the family, traced from authentic records at the British Museum, 2l. 2s. Fee 2l. 2s. Also a book, containing the names of all persons who are entitled to use Arms, and ordinary of Arms, 1l. 1s. Fee 1l. 1s. Search in the Heralds' Office, 5s. Crest on seal or ring, 7s. Arms painted on vellum, 12s. Heraldic Office, 23, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

HERALDIC LIVERY.—The proper Colours for Servants' Livery, what Buttons and Horse-cloths to use, and Engravings of Arms, Crests, &c., for Seals, Dies, Rings, Books, Carriages, Harness, &c., at moderate charges. 2l. 6d. By T. CULLETON, 23, Cranbourn-street, London, W.C.

SEAL ENGRAVING.—Arms, Crests, and MONOGRAMS engraved in steel for Seals, Dies, Rings, &c., on Steel Die, &c. Book-Plate, Arms, and Crest, 10s. Solid Gold Signet Ring, from 1l. Small cyphers, 5s. Arms, 10s. Crest, 5s.—CHEQUE, CULLETON, Engraver to the Queen by appointment, 25th April, 1838, 23, Cranbourn-street, London, W.C. Established upwards of 50 years. Arms found, 3s. 6d.

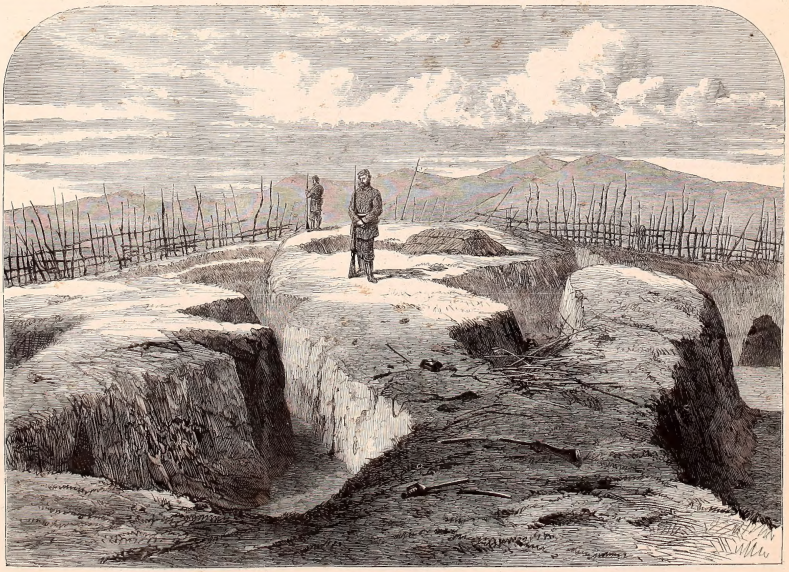
NO CHARGE FOR ENGRAVING DIES with Arms, Crest, Monogram, or Address, if an order be given for Stamping Paper and Envelopes. Arms found, 3s. 6d. Crest on seal or ring, 5s. Arms painted on vellum, 12s. Sketch and estimate free.—T. CULLETON, 23, Cranbourn-street, corner of St. Martin's-lane.

VISITING CARD-PLATE ENGRAVED, and 50 best Cards Printed, in one hour, 2s.; wedding or dinner cards, note and adhesive envelopes, best quality.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 23, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S PLATES for MARKING LINEN and for Visiting Cards, and never-wearing Initial-plate, 1s.; Name, 2s. 6d.; Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d.; Crest, 5s. Arms, 10s. Business Dies, Stamping, Steel Pens, Rings, Arms found, Engraver, 23, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and TRAVELLING WRITING CASES, in rich or morocco, of the best and newest fashion, fitted with Ivory and Silver Brushes, Bottles, Jewel Cases, Dressing Bags, Desks, Writing Cases, and Despatch Boxes; together with their unequalled Portmanteaus of Homide and Solid Leather, and Waterproof Tweed paper. Lists free.—Junior and Knowsley (two Prize Medals awarded 1862), 12, Piccadilly, corner of Air-street, Regent-street.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and Jackonets, as KERRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.



CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS. The splendid Binding from Nos. 1 to 6 patterns 21s. Extra Morocco Elegant Patterns, 30s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6 patterns, 42s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6, 63s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6, 84s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6, 105s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6, 126s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6, 147s. Ditto, Nos. 1 to 6,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1270.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1864. TWO SHEETS, FIVEPENCE

NEW ZEALAND.

A BUSY man has the Secretary for the Colonies been in his place in Parliament the last week or two. The policy of our colonial system has been heavily impeached, and, though no formal verdict has been delivered against it, it has been practically condemned. The venue has been various, but, though the facts of the cases have been technically different, the issue has been identical and the damaging result the same. The Home Government may be said to have given up the case of the Western Coast of Africa and the Ashantee War; but they have held on stanchly to what, looking to the greater magnitude of the interests involved, is perhaps the worse case of New Zealand. Whatever may be adduced by way of special argument to show that the existing hostilities in New Zealand have been excited immediately by acts of the Maoris, which, as being the deeds of dark-skinned men whom we are pleased to designate savages, are assumed to be at once treacherous and gratuitous, it is impossible to talk away the fact that the real or the occult cause of the war is to be found in the coveting of their neighbours' land by the English settlers; in that territorial lust which we at home denounce in Frenchmen, Germans, and Russians, but to which we give free license when we come in contact with the "brown man." For what, after all, are we maintaining ten thousand troops in the northern island of the New Zealand group, but that, in such time as British troops can subdue a very slippery and dangerous foe, the colonial speculators in land may confiscate the heritage of the natives; the delay being made pleasant by the interim profits, large and continuous, of contractors for the matériel of warfare! In truth, just as was the case at the Cape during the Kaffir War, the impartial trader very readily supplies arms and ammunition to the Maoris, which they use so skilfully and with such deadly effect against our soldiery. The latest accounts of the military operations need no detail in this place. Suffice it to say that troops which have the reputation, and deservedly, of being able and willing to stand before any odds in the civilised battles of Europe, with all modern appliances and means of destruction to boot at their command, skilfully disposed and gallantly led, fell into an ambush devised in the manner which one reads of in romances as being peculiar to the savage, and retreated in confusion, leaving most and the chief of their officers dead or dying on the ground, amidst the ironical yells of the Maoris to come on and renew the fight. In a few hours an empty pah and the bodies of the slain and wounded, mercifully left by the natives untouched, is occupied, the wily enemy having deserted it as soon as it had well served his conceived purpose. From all that we now know and hear, it seems as if this chosen body of soldiers whom we have sent to New Zealand are destined to a long and inglorious duty—to a contention with foemen in the abstract not worthy of their steel, but who contrive to outwit the commanders and to massacre officers and men with little or no loss to themselves. The plan of the campaign seems to necessitate a slow advance—every mile, perhaps, to be fought over—until the Maoris are driven into a position which will be, as it were, inclosed by a great military road running across the island which is the scene of the operations, and forming a cordon some 120 or 150 miles southward of the town of Auckland, so as to protect the outlying settlers of that province from any futuro incursion of the tribes inhabiting the mountainous district further south. When this object is attained—the "when" being the main question—the war will assume a new feature, and, as it were, a state of siege will be maintained, with the probabilities of starving the natives into submission; which, being interpreted, means the yielding quiet possession of all the land that is coveted by the "enterprising" British settler.

THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND: INTERIOR OF PUKE WHARANGI PAH AFTER THE CONFLICT OF APRIL 29.—SEE PAGE 91.

It is in such a state of things that Parliament is asked to pledge the public credit of this country to a loan of a million to the colonists of New Zealand, being an instalment of the modest demand of a guarantee of three millions. It is not disguised that the proceeds of the loan are intended to be applied to the prosecution of the unrighteous war—unrighteous, at least, in its objects and origin—which is being carried on for the future benefit of settlers who find the ordinary process on of money-making a new country affords too slow. They are tempting the Colonial Office with specious inducements to obtain their ends. With curious audacity, they adopt the device of the case-hardened borrower, and offer to pay a debt long due to the Treasury of this country if, as Mr. Cobden observed, we will go with them into the money market and become security for a sum double the amount. Then, guessing that if this war goes on, with its concomitant cost of a million a year, the British taxpayer will begin to grow restive at being charged with the whole expense; they have offered to take on themselves so much expense of each soldier now under arms in the colony—stated at £120 per annum—as will be covered by a capitation payment of £40. This, as applicable to the force now in the field, will amount to £240,000, leaving a balance of £300,000 of the revenue of the colony, which is estimated at £700,000 a year, to pay the interest on a loan of three millions and to meet the ordinary civil expenditure of the settlement. The nature and value of the security are thus easily calculated and as readily appreciated. In dealing with this question it is important to note the source from which the revenue of the colony, the only security available to cover the guarantee of the public credit of this country, is derived. It is obtained chiefly from a high tariff of customs duties levied on imports from the mother country; so that, in point of fact, these astute colonists are desirous of playing a game of financial see-saw, by which the industrial classes of this country are to guarantee them a loan, and, practically, to provide the means of defraying the interest. But, say the advocates of the Loan Bill, there are revenues derivable from the transactions in land which will also be applicable to this charge. This seems to us to bear strongly on the moral question involved in the policy which is being pursued in regard to New Zealand.

By enabling the colonists to obtain this sum of money we not only assist them with funds necessary to carry on a war which reasonable concessions on their part would bring to a speedy termination, but this country actually acquires a great pecuniary interest in the adoption of the policy of confiscation of the lands of the natives, from which are to be derived a portion of the means adequate to meet the engagements that have thus been entered into. As to the argument that this country cannot in justice allow the colonists to bear the whole weight of the burden which this war entails, the simple answer is that it is purely a colonists' war, originating in a purely colonial policy, for which the Home Government is not responsible, since it has been adopted in spite of the Governor, who is the agent of the Home Government; and therefore still less are the taxpayers of this country liable to be called on to meet any of its exigencies. According to a severe political economist, the colonists are obeying a law of Nature, which decrees that wherever the white man appears—the Anglo-Saxon white man, it ought to be said—the brown man must disappear. The colony of New Zealand is essentially a political term. It deals with the mother country, in all fiscal arrangements, just as it would deal with any foreign European country. It is so completely self-governing that it has resolved itself into a federation and early provinces in a manner stands alone in its internal government and its financial relations—much as that great province passing from one district to the other pays a customs duty. The legislature of the colony is strictly popular and democratic in its character, and would flash into revolutionary rage if the mother country were to insinuate an idea of taking for itself from the resources of the so-called dependency any remuneration for the expenditure which she has to bear in giving aid to the attainment of a strictly colonial policy. It may be that the colonists are not numerically strong enough to carry out Mr. Roebuck's plan of theft and sharp extermination of the natives; but that is no reason that England should contribute a man towards that object. If the pace be not fast enough for the white man in New Zealand let him pursue a policy of conciliation towards the natives until he becomes strong enough to carry out that which he, in common with the disciples of Jeremy Bentham, who are also members of the Colonial Parliament, believes to be the inevitable law of English colonisation!

It is quite clear that the anomalies, not to say the absurdities, of our whole colonial system will ere long become one of the leading questions for consideration in Parliament. This question is at present in the hands of two or three gentlemen, who bring to the discussion great perseverance, much earnestness, and no little knowledge of the subject; and in the present Session it has made so much progress as to have fastened itself on the attention of the House of Commons. This being so, the time is not far distant when Parliament will have to decide whether we in this country are not paying too dearly for those bright gems in the Crown of England, as our self-governing and powerful half-rebellious colonies are fancifully termed. The question of the right of Great Britain to tax her colonies has long been settled; and now the matter for settlement is, whether the colonies are to continue to tax Great Britain.

The Emperor of Russia and suite have left Kissingen for Schwalbach, where the Empress is to take more cold baths, after which they proceed to Ems. The Czarewitch, who accompanied his father to Holland, has left Cologne to go after his wife to Schwerinsg, near La Hague, for an haiie. They will visit the Emperor on their way to Ems.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs has been summoned for a few days to Vichy, to confer with the Emperor. His Majesty is in perfect health. The Emperor will not this year attend any public concerts or theatrical representations at Vichy. His Majesty has decided on availing himself of a complete repose. He intends only to hear the most important Bands of State, which are got over at an early hour in the morning, with the assistance of M. Rouher.

The King of the Belgians arrived in Paris on Monday, and paid a visit to the Empress at St. Cloud. His Majesty on a later day left for Vichy, to see the Emperor. Much gossip and speculation, of course, about respecting the purpose of this journey, it being generally thought that monarchs never pay merely friendly visits.

Princess Clotilde, wife of Prince Napoleon, gave birth to a son on Saturday last. The infant was baptised on Sunday, under the names of Napoleon Louis Joseph Jerome, all after members of the Imperial family. The Empress and Prince Imperial were present at the registration of the birth. Both the Princess and the infant are doing well.

The Empress Josephine, Napoleon's first wife, is to have a statue in Paris, on the square before the Alma Bridge.

The Government has addressed a circular to the various Powers, inviting them to participate in an international congress, to be held at Geneva, with the purpose of regulating telegraphic communications in Europe.

The Academy of Sciences have chosen M. De la Rive, of Geneva, as a foreign member, in the room of the late Baron Alexander Humboldt.

The appeal of the Duke d'Aumale and his publishers before the Imperial Court of Paris was decided on Saturday. The original suit was brought against the Prefect of Police for having seized the first volume of the Duke's "History of the Princes of Condé" before publication. The Civil Tribunal of the Seine decided that the Prefect, having acted under Ministerial instructions, could not be sued without permission of the Council of State. The Court of Appeal, having heard the case argued, confirmed the previous judgment.

The Paris Bourse was closed on Saturday, on the 24th inst. The programme comprises eleven events. Prince Napoleon has got a special yacht, called, to be run for by steam-yachts, with only one two screws, belonging to any nation.

The Confederate cruiser the Rappahannock is still at Calais, watched by the Custom-house officers and police.

The revolt in Algiers having been completely put down, the Imperial Government is occupied in a strict investigation as to its origin.

FRANCE.

The Chamber of Deputies held its last sitting of the Session on Sunday. Six deputies have resigned their seats.

The Government has sent a corvette on a scientific expedition to the Pacific.

A Royal decree has been issued regulating the legal position of the stockbrokers of Turin, and authorising the constitution of a corporation of stockbrokers.

The Pope has left Rome for Castel Gandolfo. General de Montebello paid his respects to his Holiness at the station.

Garibaldi arrived at Genoa on Saturday morning, for Caprera, on board the mail-packet, accompanied by his sons and several friends.

BELGIUM.

King Leopold is on a visit to the Emperor of the French.

Thursday being the thirty-third anniversary of Leopold's accession to the Belgian throne, there was the usual display of commemorative rejoicing in the capital.

A Royal decree appoints the 11th of August for the elections, which are expected to be of considerable use of the curious Parliamentary deadlock into which it had lately fallen.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The rumours of pacific negotiations current last week are confirmed. The Danish Government sent a proposal to Berlin, and it was sent on before to Vienna in order to cause the Danish Plenipotentiaries to repair to London. The Federal Executive has resolved to raise the blockade from the 20th to the 31st inst. They at the same time requested Austria and Prussia to send Plenipotentiaries to Vienna in order to come to an understanding relative to the terms on which there is to be little doubt that Denmark is ready to enter the German Confederation on the condition of keeping personal union with the duchies, but the German papers will hear of nothing but the complete separation of Schleswig and Holstein. And from the tone of the French Ministerial press, the notion of the a-binding of Denmark to Germany by the Federation would meet with the most serious disapproval on the part of France.

The Danish fleet is active use of the interval preceding the suspension of hostilities. Several engagements have taken place between the little island of Fohr, on the west coast of Schleswig. All the Danish ships of war are now in the Baltic.

The Austrian Government has appointed Baron Hallenbach, Consul-General, Consul Commissioner for Jutland.

The Faculties of Law at Vienna and Munich have declared in favour of the hereditary rights of the Prince of Augustenburg to the crown of Schleswig-Holstein.

Baron von Beust has been received in the Saxon Upper Chamber with a reception—which amounts to welcome. The President of the house delivered an address, to which the Minister and the Ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, in sentences, in which he pointed out the signal progress the German nation has made since the opening of the last Federal Conference.

On Tuesday and Tuesday a violent collision took place at Rendsburg between the Prussian troops there and a portion of the Hanoverian contingent in the Federal army of execution. The Hanoverians are said to have been the aggressors, and Berlin complains of certain affiuns that these fresh symptoms of animosity will engage the most earnest attention of the King's Government.

AMERICA.

The Confederates are not acting wholly on the defensive. An advance—by no means successful in invasion, by others a raid for horses, forage, and other plunder, but at all events an advance—has been made into Maryland by a Confederate force. One information respecting this movement has been received and confirmed, that it has got safely and is that a body of Southern troops, estimated by Mr. Lincoln at from 15,000 to 20,000 precisely, at last accounts 24,000 strong, and represented to be led by General Ewell, had passed over the Potomac at Harper's Ferry and Shepherdstown in Maryland, throwing out in various directions what are described as marauding parties. So opposition appears to have been offered to the progress of the invading column, which does not seem precisely aiming for the Shenandoah Valley until it reached Martinsburg, which was occupied by General Sigel, with his small army consisting of nothing took place, but the Federals were obliged to fall back to Harper's Ferry, which they had previously apparently without striking a blow for its defence. General Siegel retired to Maryland Heights, and his position was reported as strong and been preparing to attack that position. Our present advices throw as little light upon the movements of the Confederates as those that preceded but Mr. Lincoln had called upon the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio to furnish and about 30,000 militia into the field to meet this unexpected attack upon the soil of the Confederates. General Hunter is moving northwards to attack the invaders. Their object, it would seem, was to threaten Washington, render respecting the position of General Hunter, to whose force the people of the North had been taught to look for protection against the Confederate invasion. A New York telegram of the 19th states that General Hunter reached Parkersburg, and that he was hurrying on to Maryland. A telegram dated the 20th affirms, on the other hand, that the latest accounts from that officer's command left him at Charlestown, with his army dispirited and weakened by long marching. Governor Seymour is said to have instructed the General commanding the militia of New York not to allow any of his men to leave the State for Washington until further orders.

From the neighbourhood of Petersburg there is no news of importance, although it was expected that General Grant was actively ready for another demonstration. General Smith on the 30th ultimo an attempt on one of the Confederate works; but owing, it is stated, to a misunderstanding of his orders, the troops were so disposed that the enemy's artillery cut them up and they were obliged to retire. Next day the Confederates made an attack on a position where the Federals were planting a new battery, but they were repulsed with great loss. General Wilson had succeeded in regaining the army of the Potomac, but with the loss of a considerable number of men and twelve pieces of artillery. He is said to have destroyed sixty miles of the Danville Railway.

Turning to the campaign in Georgia, we find that General Johnston evacuated Resaca on Monday and Marietta on the 3rd, and that General Sherman was following him.

At New York the dispute between the Federal and the State authorities was not closed. The President, it is said, had ordered General Dix to disregard the civil actions against him in respect of the seizure of the Ariel and the Circassian, and that Governor Seymour, on the other hand, was reported to be resolved on enforcing the civil process and ordering General Dix's arrest. The Governor had called for 75,000 additional militia, probably to secure the State against any possible attack of the Confederates.

President Lincoln has appointed the 8th of August for a day of humiliation and prayer.

Martial law has been proclaimed and the Habeas Corpus Act suspended in Kentucky.

On the 3rd inst. died, at the venerable age of ninety-three, the Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Boston, Massachusetts, a distinguished statesman, a patriot, and a British subject, five years older than the Declaration of Independence, which his countrymen celebrated on the 4th inst. for the eighty-eighth time, and sixteen years older than the Union and the Federal Constitution.

Mr. Fessenden has definitively accepted the post-mastership to the Treasury at Washington.

At the last accounts gold was quoted at 275.

LATEST FROM RICHMOND.

An English gentleman who left Richmond on the 1st inst., having previously visited Petersburg, and who, passing unchallenged by the Federal territory, accomplished the journey between Richmond and Queenstown in four days, gives a most lively picture of the latter city, the following particulars of the military situation in and around the Confederate capital:—

The troops detached by way of the Shenandoah Valley towards Maryland consisted of the whole of Ewell's corps (late Stonewall Jackson's) under the personal command of the General, and numbered 25,000 men.

It was known that another smaller detachment, with heavy artillery, would be or had already crossed the Rapidan Arpidan with a view of creating some diversion in favour of Lee on the Potomac, blockading that river, and thus interrupting the water communication between Washington and Harper's Ferry, and thus cutting off the latter from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and thus cut the main line of communication with the capital.

Ewell's force was considered amply strong enough to cope with any troops which the North in its present exhausted condition could send against him, and it was believed that the movement of the Confederates became developed in its true character, the Federal Government would leave behind on embarking could not be in force sufficient to cope with the numerical attack to which Washington would be exposed.

Nearly 3000 prisoners had been brought in from Wilson's corps, so that his entire force could not be less than between 4000 and 5000. He had lost all his artillery, ammunition, and stores; in fact, only 2000 men had escaped out of the twenty miles of road between Ashland and Richmond. Wilson himself, after he there are no important bridges on the line of the Central Railroad, and that

MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NEWCASTLE.

ALTHOUGH Durham hit its glove moodily at her and declined to subscribe to the local fund, Newcastle has managed to survive and to hold a very excellent, if not a very memorable, meeting. Considering the great distance from their localities, the Hereford and Devonshire cliefs very fairly, and the shorthorns pretty well stomed for any shortcomings on the part of the horses, as very few indeed of the 175 were absent. It was called by many a marvellous show of shorthorns; but duliere incline, and we think justly, to the belief that it was not more than a good level one, with the yearling-heifer class decidedly in the front. The North-Eastern Railway ran unusually attentive, and the local committee went so far as to lay down a tan path for the accommodation of the heads along all the paved part of the road from the station to the Moor. The accident which occurred to the express on Saturday, about fifteen miles out of Newcastle, to obtain no one of the party to the show or the meeting. No one was killed or actually injured in limb. Still, two or three had to get away, for safety's sake, by the window, and the sufferers appeared in the showyard, some of them with black eyes, and others with scars about the head or with their arms in slings. The town, and the shopmen more especially, were quite alive to the occasion; Sir William Armstrong's banquet was one of if not the finest dining of its kind in the memory of man, and the Mayor entertained a large party on Tuesday night. Flags were flying all over the streets, the ships hoisted their colours, and cannons were fired from embrasures on the river with the most praiseworthy but deafening perseverance. An encouraging and a multiplicity of canvas on the Town Moor recommended to their champs; there were also a poultry and pigeon show, helped out by a "piping bullfinch," and a dog show, wild strong, in which the Norfolk hound and Ben, an own brother to Cunarder, won in the fox-hound and grey-hound dog competition, while Mr. M'Intosh's Cheviot ewe, Queen Mab, had a repeat triumph over with Mr. Booth's Major. The ploughing experiments at Heaton were well attended, and Fowler and Howard were quite masters of the situation—the latter especially, who had remarkable success with heavy and light tackle, and working his engines at such an incredible pressure that a man in the fly-wheel pit was lost to the air like a rocket. Some of the professional bystanders declared that they were working at five or six times their nominal power, taking wonders of engine into account. The Howards and Ransome and Sims were also in great force with their hand-ploughs; but there was not much room for choice in the judgment put in any one of the three sets, which, as compared with previous years, and not very much business was doing.

In the shorthorn classes it was rather a case of discordant concord among the judges, some of whose decisions, making every allowance for keen and well-directed criticism, met with anything but general acceptance. It was said that in the bull-calf class each judge had got a separate beast at first, but that one of them gave way at last, and Justice Unthank could be summoned from outside the ropes as arbitrator. The aged bulls were a good average lot, and those of them might have handled better, and the first and second prizes went to Scotland with Mr. Cruickshanks' Forth and Lord Strathallan's Peeress. The former is well known as the first-prize and champion winner both in England and Scotland, and the latter is a bull with a deal of style and neatness, but a little deficient in his middle. Mr. Thomas H. Havies, who made his first bull essay in the lists, was a capital third with Ebor, one of the finest hended bulls we ever saw—with a general breed, powerfulness, and quality even his rather large neck could be forgiven by reason of being so well covered. The reserve number, Lancaster, was second at Worcester, and has since been sold at an index to the comparative strength of the years. Mr. Stirling, M.P., had the rare honour of breeding Field, and winning with him the prize in the two-year-old class with the 400-guinea Royal Butterfly 11th, purchased by his factor, Mr. Young, for 400 gs. at the Towneley sale. The competition was quite a decorative, we might say a Hoodoo Valley one, as Mr. Peel's Abbot of Knowlmere, with such a beautiful head, but rather a shy feeder, and Mr. Hope's judges wanted to have fourth, was at the head of the yearlings; Scotland next, with Mr. Bulloch's Prince Rath, a bull with views, and Mr. "The Baron" might have fairly changed places; and Mr. Richard Booth's Crown of Buttercups, a cow of Prince plan by the sire of Pecan; the Buttercups gold-medal cow, third. He was not "up for show at all," and seemed to be quite enough on leg; but it is said that a 500-guinea bid has been refused for him. The second prize went to Mr. Lawkes's Lord Surrey, might have been a little better behind the shoulders, but on other points he satisfied nearly everyone except when he did the majority of the judges. Lord of Warlaby, the Bristol prize bull, was not even noticed, and went straight home; Lord Lovat had a non-attributable herd; and Mr. Gaine's Pizarro, whom he defeated at Bristol, turned the tables on to him here, and got a commendation. The bull-calves were no fives; and how such a one as the Royal Agricultural Crown, with no Booth rib about him, ever got in for second place was a university question. For the best Warbaby certificate we have to look into the pedigrees of some of the winners. Mr. Fawkes's first-prize Marquis looked remarkably well out; but although his coat is hardly what we look for in a first-class shorthorn, it handled delightfully.

Mr. Douglas made a gallant display in the cow class with The Lady Ythan Queen, and The Maid of Athelstane, as well as Baron Hill Booth rave one cross of Crusade; but, although one judge fancied her extremely, Lady could not get over Miss M. M. Hutchison's, which was not a very high class one, and so uncommonly like a Smithfield medallist. The unfortunate Queen was the reserve number once more, and lost the third place to Mr. Stratton's Luna, which had been improved by having twins a fortnight previously. Mr. Douglas sold his Queen, Duchess, and Pride of Aldbar, as well as Baron Hill Booth rave one cross of Crusade; but, although one judge fancied her extremely, Lady could not get over Miss M. M. Hutchison's, which was not a very high class one, and so uncommonly like a Smithfield medallist. The unfortunate Queen was the reserve number once more, and lost the third place to Mr. Stratton's Luna, which had been improved by having twins a fortnight previously. Mr. Douglas sold his Queen, Duchess, and Pride of Aldbar, as well as Baron Hill Booth, the Hon. D. Christie, of Canada West, and The Maid to Mr. Stirling; but none of them will be delivered till after the Highland show. In the next class Pride of Athelstane, who looked quite a new thing everything, won very easily; and Mr. Foljambe headed the yearlings with a Grizy Queen, a pleasantly attractive young about the eye and tail, but getting 7 ft. 5 in., and weighing upwards of 80 st. Mr. Mitchell's friend had been stranded to death in the interval between Bristol and Home or the very ripe and very neat little Blue Bell was best; but the roan was placed second, and many had inward doubts as to whether the high-caste beast would not be found to possess another first wealth to Scotland. Mr. Eastwood's very lengthy and dashing Royal Butterfly 2nd—at 600 guineas bid—at Towneley—was by her third place of last year; and it will be long before we look on such a true again. Sir Antony de Rothschild's Lancaster Lass was also perfect as a whole, and Lord Feversham's second was one of the most lovely-coloured cows in the yard, but perhaps her shoulders was her weakest point; while the third—Baroness of Athelstane—was a very good one, but hardly of her mother's stamp.

The Bulloch tents entered largely in the next forty, and Tamburlaine, who was third at Battersea, first at Worcester, and nowhere at Bristol (a judgment-puzzle just as judges could confess to a puzzle-cake rather hard touch), with pretty generally the same animals against him, finished in front again among the old bulls, and, like Vaucan, will be a rare force. Battersea, another Royal regular and a great hero in the Hereford district, looked in beautiful form, and fairly regained the distinction published him as formed of late in the yard. Mr. Duckham's Commodore had a much larger class to meet, but he was not to be denied at Bristol, and, despite a slight darkness near the tips of the horns, his beautiful open head and neck and massive fore combined to make him one of the very best bulls in the yard. The bull-calves were not remarkable, and only a fair average, and the greatest feature in this part of the show was the brace of first and second prize cows, Spangle 2nd and Ida 3rd, sired by the widow of the late Mr. James Rea, of Westonbury, whose sire Benjamin blood was as busy as ever among the prizes. Mr. Baldwin's Duchess of Bedford 2nd, which ran Mr. Monkhouse's Clementine such a sharp heat last summer, succeeded to the first place without my opposition from her then victrix, who was snug in the pastures of The Stowe; and Mr. Robbwin's Miss Hastings 2nd kept her first Worcester place, with General Hood's Crown Princess a heifer of less size for her months but beautiful quality, next to her. Mr. Knight sent some of his grey, bull into this and the calf class, and in the latter he was a fair second to Mr. Monkhouse's Fairy Queen, another of the old breeder's cherished "Chieftains." Mr. Monkhouse who is in his eighty-third year, and has been blind almost since he was fifty, was unable to come such a distance, but his trusty Sam was on duty, with good hopes for Hereford Fair.

The judging was very much liked in these as well as the Devon classes; and it is noticeable that Mr. Brackin was on the Stage at both places, how terribly the Bristol decisions in the two-year-old heifer class were knocked about.

There were some very fair specimens of Devons, one of them the monster Viscount, with the wonderful forest. There has been a deal of discussion about this bull since he was at Leeds, seeing that he was put aside at Worcester and Battersea on account of being so markedly "out at the pasterns," and that Mr. Dugdale, the doyen of the North Devon men, bore off the £25 for Mr. Farthing, who had four firsts and two seconds in all. Mr. Turner's Viscount, 11, and Audley travelled, like his Leicester name, their 400 miles across country to some purpose; and Mr. Azariah Smith was first with his three-year-old bull, and his cow, the latter a Wonderful, Young Heire, was by Lord Feversham and not noticed in this class last year. Another year has done much for her, but she still wants condensing and the two Mr. Farthing's were represented by two winners out of three nominations; Rose of Devon, a remarkably sweet heifer, following up her Worcester firsts among the yearlings; and Prince Alfred, a first at Worcester, being obliged to bow to Mr. Smith's Constitution in the two-year-old class, who was second to him here.

Messrs. Heenanan contributed nothing to the Sussex ranks; but the Duke of Richmond's The Earl, was beat by three and sold to Mr. George Jenner, who, with some aid from Mr. William Marshall, swept the whole sweet prizes. The latter gentleman's second-prize cow, Fresh, Fellah old and fail to attract notice "out of" full mile service;" and Lady Pigot's Lady of Jersey was a perfect wonder in her class, which, with Mr. Hallett's Constance, was very well try to drive water uphill as dry here." The Channel Islands were well represented at Bristol, but entered nowhere else in England, and Jersey could have gone to destroy their Ilfuntian charter. Lord Rendes took three firsts with his beautiful cherry Norfolk polls; the Duke of Richmond's sheep and a very good lot they were before, the show of which, as a whole, was not what we hoped for; and the Duke of Buccleuch's Highland cattle, Mr. Blair Athol's Highland reigned supreme, Fox Maule, a capital bull, and the first at Kelso, was head of the Angusses, a breed in which Mr. Combe had no competitor, although he gave Mr. Cruickshanks full value for 2,270 Once again, as at Battersea, Charlotte and her daughter, Pride of Aberdeen, were the Aberdeen-Angus heroines; the latter is just thirteen years and a half old, again just failed, blooming as she is, to give away the heifers. Those of the Hon. Captain Ward were also one. The vicinity of the Galloway districts brought out the heavy blacks in good numbers and very fair strength. Bob Burns, once the pride of the Kirkcudbright men, has had his day, but gentlemen of late years had either broken his back, and he had to resign his pride of place to Mr. Stewart's Sir Colin, Mr. Quintin Dick Lauder's young Hero, the winner in the bears of the large white breed, was a regular jumper; and Mr. Hope's Bonnie Lass, the first in the white bear class, in which Mr. Findlay, the Scottish pig champion, was second with a good-looking young sow. Mr. Findlay's Lady Ythan was reserved at least "Four Georges" at Basterhill. Except a slight changeas in the hair, there was no exception to be taken to Mr. Scaife's Lord Lovat, who was first at Worcester and Bristol; and Blair Athol; and, curiously enough, the Derby decision was reversed, which Lord Feversham's Lord Lovat was placed second to Mr. Duncombe. The Rev. H. E. Bully was alike lucky among the Berkshire boars; but we are not sure that, if it had been a few months older, the third, Mr. Gaisford's Lord Lovat, would not have been placed higher. Mr. Wainman's Perfect Cure, the winner of the middle-breed boars, had plentiful lashings of quality, but Mr. Findlay's Lord of the Isles had again to be content with second place. Mr. Wainman's Rival Duchess and Mr. Findlay's Lady Ythan Queen, the first in their class, but as their guardian, Mr. Fisher, had placed them, and were followed by quite a monster in height. Mr. Findlay's Emily, who is better since the Bristol show, and Mr. Wainman's Princess Branch in the small white sows, and separated from her by one of Mr. Stearn's with a wonderful deal of length, but not of the most valuable quality, the ful substance of Mr. Hatton's Queen of the West, which had a special prize at Worcester, and looks like a rare useful pig. Mr. Sexton's Portland Hackney Pilot—Ouslen 1, Cutter 2, Zeloo, 3, Rufford Abbey Stakes—Ouslen 1, Cutter 2, Zeloo, 3.

WINCHESTER RACES.—TUESDAY.

Chiefest Plate.—North-Bell, 1; Durham, 2. Gallon, 3.
City Members' Plate.—Belmont, 1; Mistletoe, 2; Mistletoe, 3.
Hampshire Stakes.—Maurice, 1; Aurelian, 2; Bishop, 3.
Railway Plate.—Box Boy, 1; Bell of the Ball, 2; Talmore filly, 3.
Grange Park Stakes.—Missionary, 1; The Grappler, 2; Purity, 3.
Her Majesty's Plate.—Maurice, 1; Aurelian, 2.

SOUTHAMPTON.—WEDNESDAY.

Trial Stakes.—Knight Templar, 1; The Dodo, 2; Bob, 3.
Voluntary Stakes.—Mistletoe, 1; Knight Templar, 2; Lovelace, 3.
Innkeepers' Plate.—Attraction, 1; Gunsdman, 2; Anti-Macassar, 3.
Southampton Two-year-old Plate.—Vivacity, 1; Stanford, 2.
South-Western Stakes.—Comet, 1; Knight Templar, 2; Sparue, 3.
Hurdle Handicap.—Lovelace, 1; Knight Templar, 2; Bob, 3.

THURSDAY.

Stand Plate.—Deerfoot, 1. Gamecock, 2. North End, 3.
South Hampshire Stakes.—Invellen walked over.
Hurdle Handicap.—Knight Templar, 1; Victoria Cross, 2.
Surrey Handicap.—Deerfoot, 1. Llangollen, 2. Bonnie Glen, 3.
Stewards' Plate.—Eugenie, 1. Ada, 2. Bingen, 3.

CRICKET.—A match between eleven of Surrey and fourteen of Hampshire, played on the Oval, Kennington, on Monday, was finished on Saturday, Hampshire winning by 86 runs. The following is the score:—Surrey, 1st inns., 84 and 271; Hampshire, 224 and 106.

At Lord's, on Friday and Saturday last week, the Marylebone Club and Ground played the County of Middlesex by 171 runs. Scores:—Marylebone Club, 85 and 202; Norfolk, 96 and 20.

At the Oval, on Monday and Tuesday, a match was played between Westminster School and the House of Commons. The School won in one innings, with 88 runs over. Score—Westminster School, 189; House of Commons, 47 and 86.

Autumn-meeting there kept by 150 the Eleven of All England in a match played on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last week—Adkins scoring 116 and 101; All England, 85 and 151.

A well-played and closely-contested match between the Oval and Clapham was played on the Oval on Monday and Tuesday, the latter winning by eighteen runs. Score—Cambridgeshire, 116 and 116; Notts, 96 and 118.

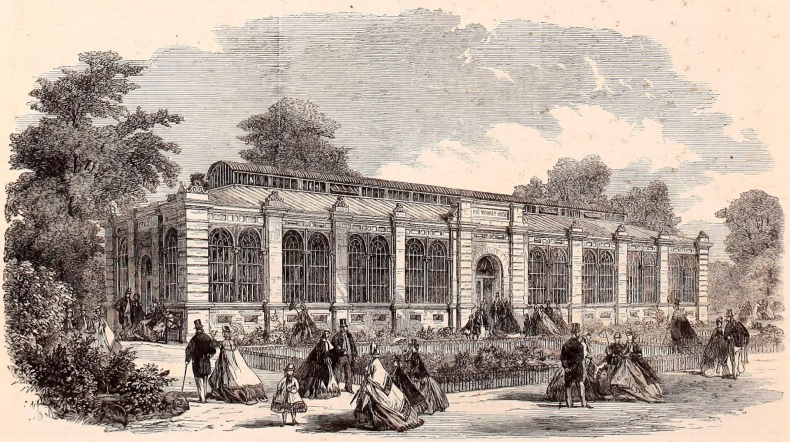
A match between Surrey and Sussex was played on the grounds of the latter at Brighton, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last week, and was drawn after forty-four hours over. Score—Surrey, 417; Sussex, 213 and 142.

Damage will fly-four hours over. Score—Surrey, 417; Sussex, 213 and 142.

The Queen has approved of M. A. Cazenove as Consul at Stuttgart for the King of Wurtemberg, of M. E. A. Gumpert as Consul at Bombay for the King of Hanover; and of Don Manuel Calvillero de Rodas as Consul at Singapore for the Argentine Republic.

The Seaman's Associations at Deutschein, Christiansund, and Nakskjöl, have received from the Admiralty, through Mr. W. Smith, the Queen's Consul-General, forwarded £50 13s. to the National Life-boat Institution for important services which the crews of those associations rendered to their countrymen shipwrecked on the coasts of the United Kingdom.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS AT THE SEAT OF WAR.



I was writing in my hut yesterday when a Music ballet came whizzing through the canvas, passing just by Captain Brady. Captain Brady, of the Commissariat Department, is a very old friend of mine, and was attached to Lieutenant Dawkins, of General Wood's Staff, who were all three inside. Another struck completely disturbed my reflective powers for the time being. Another struck me lately in the breast, passing through my coat and waistcoat, but, fortunately for me, I had my portfolio full of paper inside, which stopped it also pierced my life preserver home with but did me no serious injury. I intend carrying my portfolio shot the night to me. Mr. Bacaley, of the Cincinnati Times, lost his life, was at supper, when an Armstrong shell, and Mr. Dyer, of the Cincinnati Gazette, by having him a dark unceremonious shell came and took away his head. Only a few days ago, I was myself, and we are accustomed to such things.—New York Tribune.

THE BLOOMSBURY FLOWER SHOW IN RUSSELL-SQUARE INCLOSURE.

THE BLOOMSBURY FLOWER SHOW IN RUSSELL-SQUARE.

We give an Illustration of the annual flower show held in the gardens of Russell-square with a view to encourage the taste for cultivating flowers among people of the working class in the parish of St. George's, Bloomsbury. This pleasing exhibition took place on Wednesday week. A large tent, as shown in our Engraving, had been erected in the grounds, and this was abundantly decorated with fuchsias, geraniums, annuals, and various other flowers and plants. The company consisted, for the most part, of the poorer inhabitants of the parish; but among the more distinguished visitors were the Earl of Shaftesbury, Sir S. Morton Peto, Bart., M.P., Mr. Payne, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P., Miss Twining, the Hon. Misses Ashley, Mr. W. Hawes, and the Rev. Emilius Bayley, Rector. All present seemed to enter most heartily into the pleasures of the scene; and the laudable arrangement which caused the customary barriers of exclusiveness to be thrown down for the time, and the gardens to be opened to the poorest parishioners, was evidently much appreciated. It appears that the system of exhibiting flowers under the present circumstances has rapidly increased in public favour; and whereas in the first year only 140 plants were entered, nearly 800 were now registered, and 400 persons had given in their names. The prizes, varying from 1s. to 10s., were distributed by the Earl of Shaftesbury, who delivered an address expressing the delight he felt at the character of the exhibition and pointing out the many advantages that must arise from it. But it was not alone for the best display of flowers that prizes were awarded. The owners of clean and tidy rooms were also honoured, and these competitors received rewards varying from 10s. to £2. Lord Shaftesbury, in presenting them, congratulated the parishioners on the progress they had made in adopting measures for the preservation of their own health, and for the extension of a salutary example to others. For the prizes in respect to the possession of clean and tidy rooms, 300 names were entered, and the Rev. Mr. Bayley and his curate had paid no less than 600 visits in the space of six weeks, in order to ascertain who amongst the occupants were best deserving of rewards. The competition was confined exclusively to the inhabitants of the parish, both as regarded the exhibition of flowers and the prizes for clean and tidy rooms. It should be observed that none of the flowers were cultivated in conservatories or elaborately-trimmed gardens, but in bow-pots and wooden boxes fixed on the window-sills of the humblest parishioners. Two bands of music were in attendance—that of the E division of the Metropolitan Police, and that of the 37th Middlesex volunteers—and when the distribution of prizes had been completed many of the younger part of the company amused themselves with dancing.

THE NEW MONKEY-HOUSE IN THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS, REGENT'S PARK.—SEE PAGE 97.

RECENT ADDITIONS TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S COLLECTION, REGENT'S PARK.—SEE PAGE 97.

BIRTHS.

On the 2nd of April last, at Roslin, Inver-Cargill, New Zealand, the wife of William S. Trotter, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 9th inst., at Dera Ismael Khan, the wife of Colonel G. W. G. Green, C.B., of a daughter.

On the 7th inst., at Lawrie Park, Sydenham, the wife of Lieut.-Col. W. Jervis, of a daughter, still-born.

At the Rectory of Lacon, the Hon. Mrs. Mostyn, of a daughter.

At Cleveland-row, the Hon. Mrs. H. Byng (née Countess H. Dannesksiöld), of a daughter.

At Clifton-place, Lady E. L. M. Cartwright, of a daughter.

On the 15th inst., at Chorleywood, the wife of the Hon. A. Y. Boller, of a son.

At Withington House, Ryde, the Hon. Mrs. W. Quin, of a son.

At Upham, Bishop's Waltham, the wife of the Hon. W. L. H. A'Court, of a daughter.

At Bridgewater House, St. James's, the Hon. Mrs. A. Egerton, of a daughter.

On the 17th inst., the wife of Frederic Heritage, Esq., of St. Leonard's House, West Ashill, Turner-heath, of a son.

On the 16th inst., at No. 4, Hyde Park Gate, the wife of Francis Barrow, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 7th inst., at the parish church, Brighton, by the Rev. W. Brook, M.A., the Melville, Esq., of Spring Cottage, near Chesterfield, to Harriet, youngest daughter of the late T. Gaskell, Esq., of Ingersley, Cheshire.

On the 14th inst., at Edgbaston Old Church, by the Rev. P. Browne, incumbent of St. James's, assisted by the Rev. Isaac Spooner, Vicar, Bilston, son of T. Jacomb, Esq., of Moseley, to Amy Hilton, eldest daughter of Thomas Hecler, Esq., of Edgbaston. No cards.

On the 16th ult., at Gourock, N.B., by the Rev. George Brown, M.A., John Edward Morgan, Esq., M.B., and M.A., Oxon, of Manchester, second son of the Rev. Edward Morgan, Vicar of Conway, to Susan Louisa, daughter of Duncan Darroch, Esq., of Gourock House.

On the 14th inst., at St. Christopher, Earl's Court, Kensington, by the Rev. Charles Sutherland, M.A., assisted by the Rev. H. F. Mackay, M.A., Major Jackson, Esq., of Bedford-gardens, Campden-hill, to Lucy Berriman, only daughter of James Berriman Tippetts, Esq., of Earl's Court-terrace, and Sizergh Castle, Westmoreland.

On the 16th inst., at St. George the Martyr, Queen-square, by the Rev. W. M.A., the Marquis of Hastings to Lady Flora Cecilia Paget, youngest daughter of the Marquis of Anglesea.

At St. James's, Holloway, Albert, son of the late H. Minchiner, Esq., of Cannon-street West, to Ada Murray, daughter of the late Thomas Hall, of Lee Priory, Canterbury Park, East Kent.

On the 5th of April, at Gayndah, Queensland, by the Rev. Father O'Donohoe, Thomas, eldest son of Thomas Major, Esq., of Cregagan, Kilrainey, in the county of Derry, Ireland, to Mary Teresa, fourth daughter of the late Richard Reilly, Esq., of New Ross, Ireland, and of 12, Gloucester-terrace, Campden-hill, Kensington.

DEATHS.

At Richmond-terrace, Whitehall, the Hon. Mrs. Arthur Arundell.

At Bath, Lady Mary Keith, aged 87.

On the 7th inst., at Chelsea College, Lady Wilson, wife of Sir J. M. Wilson.

On the 13th inst., at Warwick-square, W. B. Beverley, Esq., Colonel of the 1st or Count Rifle Volunteers, late Captain 1st Dragoon Rifle Brigade.

On the 15th inst., at Erlaugh House, in the county of Clare, Admiral H. Grierly, aged 77.

At Dublin, Lieut.-Col. B. Bender, late of the 82nd Regiment, aged 71.

At Bracted Rectory, William Bracken Holland, M.A., Rector of Bracted, in his 73rd year.

On the 7th inst., at the residence of his friend, the Rev. Thomas Holmes, Warmer, third son of the late Wyndham Knatchbull Wyndham, Esq., of York-terrace, Regent's Park, and Stanwell, Middlesex. R.I.P.

On the 16th inst., at 31, Lower Grosvenor-street, Claudine Stanley Errington, eldest daughter of Sir Rowland Stanley Errington.

At Vienna, the Hon. Fanny Vavasour Fermanagh, daughter of Lowther, third Lord Muncaster, aged 54.

At Hartham, Agnes, daughter of the late Hon. and Right Rev. Hugh Percy, D.D., Lord Bishop of Carlisle.

On the 12th inst., at Bolton Rectory, the Hon. and Rev. Richard Cust, Prebendary of Lincoln and Rural Dean of North Grantham, aged 79.

At Upper Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, Harriet, wife of the Hon. Henry Hely Hutchinson.

At Lethington, Lady Bruce, widow of Sir James B. Bruce, Bart., of Downhill, Londonderry.

Emily, daughter of the late Sir John Gibbons, Bart., of Stanwell-place, Middlesex, aged 39.

Joshua, relict of Vice-Admiral James Nelson, aged 68.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is five shillings for each announcement.*

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 30.

SUNDAY, July 24.—Ninth Sunday after Trinity. Gibraltar taken by Sir George Rooke, 1704. The Prince of Wales Island, in the East Indies, discovered, 1762.

MONDAY, 25.—St. James the Elder, Apostle and Martyr. The English fleet, under the Earl of Huntingdon, defeat the Genoese off Hardicar, 1417. Birth of the Duchess of Cumberland, 1797. Mount's last quarter, 5h. 36m. p.m.

TUESDAY, 26.—St. Anne. Battle of Edgecote, near Banbury: the Lancastrians, under the Earl of Pembroke, totally defeated by Edward IV., and their leaders slain, 1469.

WEDNESDAY, 27.—Charter granted to the Bank of England, 1697. Victory and death of Graham, of Claverhouse, at Gillicrankie, 1689. Breaking out of the French Revolution, 1830.

THURSDAY, 28.—Battle of Agincourt, 1415. Manuel defeated and taken prisoner by Tatoseliotes, 1402. The Athenians Conderatic steamer sails from Liverpool for Australia, 1852.

FRIDAY, 29.—Mary Queen of Scots married to Darnley, 1565. Death of Andrew Marvell, the eminent political writer, 1678.

SATURDAY, 30.—Ingredion of the defeated Spanish Armada, 1588. Death of the great William Penn, founder of the colony of Pennsylvania, 1718.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 30, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
0 30	0 58	1 27	1 57	2 28	3 0	3 34

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL METEOROLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18″ 42″ W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOMETER.			WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours.	DAILY MEANS OF
	Barometer Reduced.	Temperature of Evaporation.	Dew Point.	Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum in the Day.	Minimum at Night.	General Direction.	Movement in Miles per Hour.	Force.		Ozone.
	Inches.	°	°			°	°		Miles	Inches.
13	30·010	67·6	59·0	·72	6	69·9	57·3	N. ENE. E.	227	·000
14	30·141	67·8	48·8	·55	4	67·9	52·4	N. NE. NNW.	165	·000
15	30·078	65·4	46·7	·53	8	65·6	75·4	NW. E.	142	·000
16	29·713	61·4	51·1	·71	8	65·6	56·2	ESE. E.	259	·000
17	,,	,,	,,	,,	,,	69·3	73·7	,,	75	·000
18	30·017	64·5	57·3	·80	7	69·1	55·3	S. SW. NW.	161	·000
19	30·068	72·1	59·8	·65	6	87·8	59·7	NW. NNW.	193	·000

The following are the readings of the mean results of the observations taken at the Observatory at 9 a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches corrected to 32° Fah.)	30·041	30·121	30·055	30·144
Temperature of Air	66·1	59·61	67·61	58·61
Temperature of Evaporation	52·9°	51·9°	53·6°	50·1°
Direction of Wind	S.W.	S.W.	S.W.	S.W.

30·137	30·206	30·224	30·276
67·61	58·61	62·61	57·61
54·1°	44·9°	49·2°	42·7°
S.W.	S.W.	S.W.	S.W.

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS FOR THIS WEEK (JULY 23), CONSISTING OF TWO WHOLE SHEETS.

Canada, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward's Island, Newfoundland, Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Ceylon, Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, Australia, Tasmania, Victoria, New Zealand, Queensland, Vancouver's Island, Chili, Peru, Mexico, Panama, Jamaica, Honduras, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Bahamas, Barbadoes, Trinidad, Demerara, Gambia, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast, Lagos, Gibraltar, Malta, Corfu, Ionian Islands, Alexandria, Egypt, Constantinople, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Hanse Towns, Prussia, Germany, Austria, Poland, Russia, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Heligoland, Spain, Portugal, Madeira, Azores, United States, Cuba, Hayti

The Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster entertained the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a select circle at dinner on Monday evening at Grosvenor House.

Earl and Countess Spencer gave a banquet yesterday evening week at Spencer House, St. James's, to the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a select circle. Later in the evening her Ladyship had an evening party. About 250 members of the aristocracy were present. Dancing commenced at eleven o'clock with a quadrille, the Princess of Wales giving her hand to Earl Spencer and the Prince of Wales dancing with Countess Spencer.

The Earl and Countess of Malmesbury entertained a distinguished company at dinner at their house in Arlington-street yesterday evening.

The Earl and Countess of Chesterfield entertained a select circle at dinner on the evening of their residence in Grosvenor-square.

The Right Hon. Chichester Fortescue and Frances Countess Waldegrave entertained the Duke and Duchess de Chartres and a select circle at dinner on Saturday evening last at Strawberry-hill, Twickenham. Her Ladyship held a drawing-room after dinner.

On Sunday evening Frances Countess Waldegrave and the Right Hon. Chichester Fortescue received their Royal Highnesses Francis Duke of Teck and Duchess d'Amalfe, Prince de Candé, and a small party at dinner.

Viscountess Strangford has issued cards for a reception on Friday last at Cambridge House.

Lady Bateman's second representation of the series of tableaux took place on Monday evening at her residence, Montagu House. The Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and a distinguished company were present.

Lord Londesborough entertained his three regimentals of volunteers yesterday at Grimston Park, Tadcaster.

The Right Hon. the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone entertained a select party at dinner on Saturday evening at their residence in Carlton House-terrace.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.

The marriage of the Marquis of Hastings to Lady Florence Coelia Paget, only daughter of the Marquis of Anglesey, by his second marriage, was celebrated on Saturday last at St. George's, Hanover-square.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

By an order just issued, an increase of 1s. per week has been granted in the pay of 180 sergeants of the Metropolitan Police.

Mr. Barnum is delightfully entertaining the whole of the city authorities—almost 40 in number—at Trent Park, yesterday week.

The Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution will hold their annual festival in the Freemasons' Tavern on Tuesday evening next.

The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress will entertain her Majesty's Ministers at a grand banquet in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House on the same night.

As Mr. Bowman, of Twickenham, was last week getting out of a train on the platform before it had stopped, he fell, and was dragged and dragged thence under the carriages. Fortunately, however, he fell on his hands and knees, by the guidance of which, and his usual pedrian, escaped with his life, the wheels of the carriages grazing his body.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Travaites, Chairman of the Metropolitan Board of Works, laid the foundation of the embankment on the north side of the Thames. Mr. Thwaites was assisted by Mr. Bazalgette, the chief engineer, who were dressed in the usual style of masons. A cavity was excavated after preliminaries. The stone is placed a short distance west of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Bridge.

The first of a line of merchant steam-ships intended for the Australian trade was built and owned by a Scotch firm, and was launched on Wednesday from Blackwall yard. Miss Wyndham, daughter of Colonel Wyndham, of Petworth, christened her the London. The length is 170 tons register, and she will sail for Melbourne in October next, under the command of Mr. Martin, an experienced commander in that trade.

A magnificent diamond bracelet and a pair of diamond earrings, of the richest and costliest design, with an appropriate inscription recording the occasion of the gift and the names of the donors engraved on vellum, were presented on Monday to Mdlle. Titiens, at her residence in Regent's Park, by the distinguished party who made the gift presented a large body of nobilitation in the fashionable world.

At the Mansion House on Tuesday the draught of a bill prepared by the President of the Poor-Law Board was read. The bill is intended to provide for the penal use of London water. It is to be confined basselves in the streets between eight in the evening and eight in the morning. Persons are to be levied by an inspector of the Board, and fines to be collected with the Metropolitan Board of Works rate. Several members of the board expressed their dissatisfaction with the bill, the consideration of which, however, was deferred.

A chairmaker, aged sixty-three, has died in Spitalfields from neglect. His wife and her two children are in the workhouse infirmary, and at throughout the widow explained that she had not the money as follows:—Half-pint of gin, 2½d.; a pennyworth of beer brewed in the room (enough for a tenpenny); 1d.; half a pound of sugar, 2½d.; half a quarter of a pound of butter; 2½d.; half a loaf, bought at the alehouse, 2d.; one pound of bread and half a loaf, 5½d.; half an ounce of tea, 1½d.; bundle of wood, 2d.; coals, 2d.; candles, 1½d. Total, 23d. Three of them had been without food. Watson applied five years ago to the workhouse, but they treated her so badly that she would not go again.

Last week the births of 1874 children—935 boys and 919 girls—were registered in London, in the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number (corrected) was 1845.—Thirteen hundred deaths were registered in London last week. Of these, 627 were of males, and 631 of females. The average number of deaths for the twenty-eight weeks of the years 1854-63, is, with a correction for increase of population, 1212. The deaths from diarrhœa increase steadily but slowly, and, after having risen to 42 respectively in the two previous weeks, to 57 last week: 84 of the cases occurred to infants less than two years old. 97 deaths from zymotic diseases exclusive 1,844. The average number in the last two months. It was fatal in 81 cases in the week, the average for corresponding weeks in the last eight yrs. A widow died last week—aged 97.

The Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts closed its sixth session on Saturday evening with a conversazione held at the South Kensington Museum, by permission of the Lords of the Council on Education, and the temporary Art Museum Gallery. The attendance was numerous, including several members of the Legislature and other persons of public prominence. Mr. Alexander Beazley, of Redcliffe, made a brief address, in which he took an encouraging view of the progress of the society and indicated its claims to consideration and support. The following are the awards and notices. The principal business of the evening was the distribution of prizes for the current session, which were as follow:—Painting—Henry Hickmott, Jun., of Bath, £10 10s.; Arthur Hughes, of 1, Bentinck-terrace, Hamilton Road, N.W., Royal Academy, £5 5s.; George; Mr. R. Hoyle, for his "Waiting for the Train;" Royal Academy, No. 1,000, £5 5s.; Alexander Cole, for his "Morning in Spring;" Society of British Artists, No. 199, Water-colour painting: Mr. Walker, for his "Spring;" Society of Painters in Water-Colours, No. 1,000; Bitte: Mr. G. Shalders, for his "Evening, near Dorking;" Institute of Painters in Water Colours, No. 1,000; Architecture—Mr. R. W. Edis, for his design for a "Gentleman's Residence;" Architectural Exhibition, No. 228. Poetry: Mr. Robert Buchanan, for his "Book of poems," 1,000. The musical performances during the evening were under the conduct of Messrs. Benedict, Gaae, Lehmeyer, and Vincent Wallace.

The murder of Mr. Briggs in a carriage on the North London Railway, on Saturday week, has been arrested by the police. Franz Muller, a German tailor. The manner in which the crime was traced to him is curious. He was in the habit of frequenting a public-house in the neighbourhood of Whitechapel. Two days after the murder he visited this house, and produced a bag containing a gold chain, which he said he had just purchased. Mr Isaacson, the landlord, saw the watch and gave the box to Matthews's little daughter. Matthews, who was in the habit of purchasing articles of the kind, saw inside the box the name and address of Mr. Death, the jeweller, at whose shop he was aware Mr. Briggs's chain had been bought. The box was given by Mr. Death, who identified it, and a photograph of Müller having been produced, he at once recognised the man's features as those of a person who had left for the purchase of the watch. Müller is said to be the one which he had himself bought for Miller some months ago. Miller left the Thames for New York in a steamer on Thursday week. That fact was ascertained by means of a letter which he wrote from on board the vessel, and addressed to the police-station he resided at Worthing. Last Wednesday Inspector Tanner, of the metropolitan force; Mr. Death, the jeweller; and Mr. Isaacson, of Liverpool to the American steamer and identified Müller as the person of Miller. Mr. Tanner is armed with the necessary warrants for his extradition from America, and will bring the prisoner from Mr. Archambeau, Mr. Isaacson, and Mr. Death, the jeweller, at whose shop Mr. Briggs's chain had been bought. The City of London Police Court, on Tuesday morning, before Alderman Lusheington, when the prisoner was brought up, and the evidence of the witnesses was taken. Müller was then committed for trial at the Central Criminal Court.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Archbishop of Canterbury will hold his primary visitation in Canterbury Cathedral on Thursday next.

The Lord Bishop of Chester intends to hold his next Ordination at Chester, on the 25th of September.

The Rev. Thomas Pelham Dale, Ditchling Church was reopened on Wednesday week by the Bishop of Chichester.

The Archbishop of York preached on Wednesday week at Bishopthorpe Church, on the occasion of the new nave of the church being rebuilt.

On Thursday week the Bishop of Ripon consecrated St. Stephen's Church, Rishcliffe, Huddersfield, erected at a cost of £2000, for 690 sittings, 300 of which are free.

The Rev. William Conway, M.A., has been nominated to the canonry in Westminster Abbey, with the rectory of St. Margaret, Westminster, vacated by the appointment of Dr. Jeune to Ely.

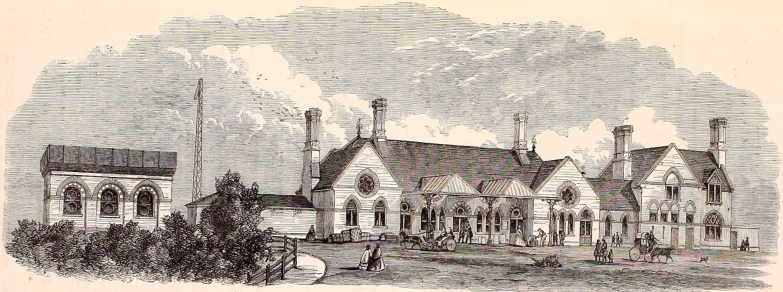
St. Saviour's Church, London-street, Fitzroy-square, formerly called Fitzroy Chapel, St. Pancras, was consecrated on Tuesday by the Bishop of London.

The Hon. and Rev. Richard Cust, brother of the late Earl Brownlow, has been appointed to the rectory of Grantham, vice the late Rectory, Bedon.

The parish church of Crayke, the chancel of which was restored some time back by the Rector, Archdeacon Churton, was reopened on Thursday week by the Archbishop of York after extensive repairs and the addition of an aisle, at a cost of £1000. The Archbishop of York preached in the morning, and the Archdeacon of Cleveland in the afternoon.

A choral service was held in Wimborne Minster on Thursday week, when seventeen choirs contributed 374 voices.—On Tuesday week the Lord Bishop of Salisbury held a confirmation in the nave of the church, when 300 candidates were presented.

On Thursday week the Bishop of Ripon consecrated St. Stephen's Church, Rishcliffe, Huddersfield, erected at a cost of £2000, for 690 sittings, 300 of which are free.



The Rev. William Conway, M.A., has been nominated to the canonry in Westminster Abbey, with the rectory of St. Margaret, Westminster, vacated by the appointment of Dr. Jeune to Ely.

The Lord Bishop of Chester intends to hold his next Ordination at Chester, on the 25th of September.

The Rev. Thomas Pelham Dale, Ditchling Church was reopened on Wednesday week by the Bishop of Chichester.

The Archbishop of York preached on Wednesday week at Bishopthorpe Church, on the occasion of the new nave of the church being rebuilt and the station master's residence; on the left are the third-class waiting-rooms and station offices. The elevations of the building show a judicious employment of red and yellow brick, with ornamental arches; the roof, likewise, has a tasteful arrangement of slating. On the extreme left is the tank-house, and to the right are the buildings attached to the locomotive and carriage departments (Margate being the depôt for that end of the line), the whole forming an effective group. From Margate to Broadstairs is but a short distance; but until this line was made the latter-named town had no railway, and was, consequently, but little resorted to. This summer, however, its fortunes appear to be rapidly rising. From Broadstairs the line proceeds to Ramsgate, emerging close to the station from a tunnel through the chalk, over the entrance to which the footway is seen carried by a girder of 126 ft. span, surmounted by tasteful panelling and railway, and supported by two piers 60 ft. high, the whole presenting, with the large roof over the station platforms (which is one of peculiarly effective design) an imposing coup-d'œil, as may be seen by our second Engraving. Our readers will observe that this Illustration closely resembles Mr. Frith's celebrated picture of "The Ramsgate Sands" in most respects. In the background only is there any very important difference between our view and his, and this is caused by the new railway station, which is seen immediately beneath the cliff, and which occupies what Mr. Frith has undoubtedly made a kind of "classic ground." The amusements of the pleasure-seekers are not, however, in the least interfered with by the new arrangement; on the contrary, the embankment beneath the station affords the loungers on the beach a pleasant resting-place, and a full view of all that is going on. No more prominent example of the new fashion of carrying railways into the very heart of a town could possibly be found, even in London, than is afforded in this instance. No longer contented with bringing its passengers to the outskirts of a town and there dropping them carelessly, leaving them to find their way into it as best they may, railway authorities have discovered that they serve themselves most when they provide accommodation for the public in the most convenient form. The public, on the other hand, no longer jealous of the approaches of the railway, instead of opposing its entrance into a town, have found out that keeping the railway-station in the suburbs causes a vexatious waste of time, and results chiefly in transferring the seat of business from old situations to new and less convenient places. In the course of a short time it is probable that at the Ramsgate station will be introduced a new feature which will afford considerable comfort to the visitor. It is proposed to make a refreshment-room at the station, which is to abut upon the promenade in front, and will provide articles of light refection both for those who travel by the railway and for the many hundreds of person who crowd the sands below daily during the bathing season. This will be another improvement upon the arrangements at the date of the great Frith picture, and possibly may suggest to some coming artist a new treatment of the very capital subject of "Ramsgate Sands."

THE MARGATE STATION OF THE EAST KENT (LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER) RAILWAY.

THE RAMSGATE STATION OF THE EAST KENT (LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER) RAILWAY.

THE MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON.

THE TRAMWAY.

THE VOLUNTEERS AT REST.—SEE PAGE 97.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

[The following abstract of the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 15th inst., appeared in our Town Edition last week.]

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, JULY 15.

The Street Music (Metropolis) Bill, the Accidents Compensation Act Amendment Bill, the Railways (Ireland) Acts Amendment Bill, and the Drainage and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Bill went through Committee.

The College of Physicians Bill, the Inland Revenue (Stamp Duties) Bill, the Inclosure (No. 2) Bill, the Treasury (Secret Service) Bill, and the Judgments, &c., Law Amendment Bill were read a second time. The last named was ordered to be printed, as also the Select Committee.

The Factory Acts Extension Bill, the Indemnity Bill, the India Stocks Transfer Act Amendment Bill, and the Revenue Act Amendment Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Lunacy Amendments to the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries (Ireland) Bill were considered and agreed to.

ESSAYS AND REVIEWS.

Lord HOUGHTON asked her Majesty's Government whether they were taken, or are willing to take, the opinion of the law officers of the Crown as to the powers of the Governors of the Archbishop of Canterbury to act on the recent judgment on books written either by clergymen or by laymen; as to the summoning of a Convocation of that body from provincial synod to take judgment on such judgments, and as to the forms according to which such judicial power must be exercised if it belong to that body. He said the question because of the verdict that had been passed upon the volume called "Essays and Reviews." Having regard to the origin of the "Essays and Reviews," he remarked that it was a matter of regret that a book of that description should have been selected by the Convocation of Canterbury at the commencement of the "Index Expurgatorius" with which English literature, it seems, is for the future to be favoured. If the proceedings of Convocation in earlier times, in respect to censuring books, were kept in check by the Upper House of Lords, Parliament, having controlled those several steps, especially upon Dr. Watson's, he thought he had demonstrated the dubiousness of the law upon the subject, and therefore he considered it necessary, before asking his first question, whether the Government had taken or intended to take any opinion of the law officers of the Crown as to the power of the Upper Houses of Convocation. Remarking that some of the essays of Rugby School, established by the late Dr. Arnold, by Dr. Temple, Head Master of the School, of whom the Royal Commissioners had spoken so highly, and to whom a see who has on consequence lately been raised, were defined in such a manner as to gain their Lordships, he asked if it was not likely that the eminent men who were to be nominated in their progress for the future, the Government ought to be careful to see that the persons who are to be appointed to the ordinary places of vacancy in the Church are not going through the ordinary forms of subscription with a mental reservation in favour of their own opinions. Therefore, he wanted to know under what power or restrictions the Government had acted in the appointment of the Bishop of Oxford in connection with the case which must be most repugnant to his feelings as a Prelate. The Bishop of Oxford was strongly implicated in the volution into an exercise of authority which was beyond its power. There was no intention on the part of the Government to interfere with the case referred to.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY said the object of Convocation was not to persecute any one, but to vindicate the Church of England from all sympathy in the doctrines of the work in question. He had taken the opinion of counsel, and for that purpose they had applied to the Government for the opinion of the law officers of the Crown. That opinion was refused, and they had to take the opinions of Sir Hugh Cairns and Mr. Bolt, by whom gave it as their opinion that the proceedings were regular and legal.

The Bishop of LONDON thought Convocation had a right to complain of the Government's refusal to supply the opinion of the law officers of the Crown. It was not a case for rubicles; and in religious disputes, however trifling, it was desirable to have them before the public for discussion.

After some remarks from Lord Wensleydale,

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY thought his right reverend brethren could not complain of the manner in which the motion had been brought forward; but they still complained of the amendments which had been made by the Lord Chancellor. He then proceeded to define the difference between the Royal license and its extent and the Royal assent. Upon the former occasion, the former had but an authority on which they acted, and the latter being only a letter accompanying the opinion of the judges. That was the constitutional view of the matter, which the noble and learned Lord had spoken on the motion. The noble and learned Lord had made him if he took the course he was going to take, he had not, but would be perfectly willing to give it to him at any time. They had been accused of attempting to prevent the liberty of thought, but that charge he repudiated. They did, however, object to persons holding office in the Ministry of the Church of England and teaching doctrines directly opposite to that which they had professed and upon the profession of which they had been appointed. The right rev. prelate proceeded to contend that the man himself had not been condemned, but the book had, because it was the book that had been attacked, and could not be explained away. If they had intended to censure the man, he would have been entitled to be heard. That judgment was the way to restore peace to the Church, and he hoped they would had done it.

The Lord Chancellor disclaimed any intention of giving pain to the Bishops. He had spoken in the kindest manner possible of them, but he had not misapprehended the law of Parliament.

The subject then dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, JULY 15.

At a morning sitting the Cattle Diseases Prevention Bill was taken in Committee, but, when the House resumed, it was withdrawn for the present.

The Improvement of Land Act (1864) Bill occupied the remainder of the sitting, Mr. Ayrton chasses up to it on several occasions.

THE IONIAN ISLANDS.—At the evening sitting, Mr. B. COCHRANE called attention to the recent disturbances which appeared to have been occasioned by her Majesty's Government and the advisers of the King of Greece; and also to the correspondence between her Majesty's Government and Berlin respecting the claims of British subjects and others, signed at London on the 13th of March, 1864.—Mr. LAYARD said he expected that matters would have been again revived after the repeated discussions on it in the house. The subject was one of very great difficulty and delicacy, and had been made by her Majesty's Government to arrange the matter in a manner that would be satisfactory to the people of this country and the King of Greece, after a short discussion, in which Colonel Dunne and the Chancellor of the Exchequer took part, the matter dropped.

SUPPLY.

The House went into Committee of Supply on the Civil Service Estimates, taking the vote for Scientific Works and Experiments, which was agreed to, as were those for the Geographical Society and the Royal Society.

On the vote of £400 for the Royal Academy of Music (a new vote), Mr. GREENHILL moved that the question, and a long, always unanswered, and be omitted, ensued. On a division the vote was carried by 52 to 42.

The remaining supreme departments were taken, and the House resumed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The resolutions on Works and Buildings were reported.

The Drainage and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Supplemental Bill, the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Acts Amendment Bill, the Railways (Ireland) Traffic Bill, the Turnpike Trusts, and the Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Bill were read a second time.

The Scottish Episcopal Clergy Disabilities Removal Bill, and the Bank Notes, &c., Engraving Bill passed through Committee.

The Ionian States Acts of Parliament Repeal Bill, the Harwich Harbour Act Amendment Bill, and the Turnpike Trusts Arrangement Bill were read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The Mutual Surrender of Criminals (Prussia) Bill, the Isle of Man Harbours Act Amendment Bill, the Militia Ballots Suspension Bill, and the Admiralty (Ireland) Bill were severally read a third time and passed.

The College of Physicians Bill and the Burial Registration Bill passed through Committee.

The Street Music Metropolis Bill, the Inland Revenue (Stamp Duties) Bill, the Railways (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill, and the Drainage and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Bill were read a third time and passed.

The CRIMEAN DEBT (Ireland).—Lord Stanley strongly urged upon the question of the Spanish slave trade, and pointed out the systematic manner in which Spain, in the face of treaties, had from 1817 to 1862 made laws which only permitted but fostered that traffic: the importation or diminution of importation of slaves depending not on the action of the Spanish Government, but on the personal character of the Governor of that colony. While not desiring to advocate anything like a return to the principles of protection, he believed that the only effectual way for this country to check the slave trade would be to place a heavy duty on slave-grown sugar from Spanish colonies. The conduct of Brazil contrasted most favourably with that of Spain in this matter, the slave trade to the former country having been suppressed; and there was now a strong case for repealing the Aberdeen Act.—Earl RUSSELL stated that frequent representations had been made to the Spanish Government by British Ministers for Foreign Affairs, and that Government had expressed its willingness to unite in putting down the slave trade, but it seemed that they had been unable to overcome the difficulties connected with colonial interests which lay in the way of their success in that object.—The Earl of MALMESBURY confirmed the statement that the Brazilian Government had effectually acted in putting down the slave trade.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

In a Committee of the whole House, the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved a resolution authorising a further advance, not exceeding £350,000, upon the security of local rates for carrying out the Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Act. The resolution was agreed to, and leave given to introduce a bill founded upon it.

The order for the second reading of the Charitable Trusts Fees Bill was discharged, and the bill withdrawn.

The Scottish Episcopal Clergy Disabilities Bill was considered as amended, and ordered for third reading.

The Fortifications (Provision for Expenses) Bill, the Armagh Archiepiscopal Residence Bill, the Clerks of the Peace Acts Amendment Bill, the Medical Service Bill, the Corn Accounts and Returns Bill, the West Indian Incumbered Estates Act Amendment Bill, the Exchequer Bills (£1,050,000) Bill, and the Metropolis Management Act (1862) Amendment Bill were read a second time.

The Westminster Improvement Bill was considered in Committee, after a statement from Mr. Cowper that he proposed, if there were no engineering difficulties in the way, to remove the iron gates at the north side of the roadway, and to abolish the fastings. The Drainage and Improvement of Lands (Ireland) Supplemental Bill, the Railways (Ireland) Acts Amendment Bill also passed through Committee pro forma.

The Metropolis Local Management Act, the Bleaching and Dyeing Works Act Extension Bill, the Turnpike Acts Continuance, &c., Bill, the Fortifications (Provision for Expenses) Bill, the Armagh Archiepiscopal Residence (Ireland) Bill, the Poisoned Flesh Prohibition, &c., Bill, the Justices Proceedings Confirmation Bill, the Militia Pay Bill, the Militia Ballots Suspension Bill, and the Bank Notes Signature Bill were read a third time and passed.

The Government has given to Sir Fitzroy Kelly charge of a bill to consolidate the Lands and Works Bill, and the Limacy (Scotland) Bill were agreed to.

Mr. Fitz Gerald has given notice that he will call the attention of the House, on Whitweek, in Leicestershire, and to the recent outbreaks in that establishment; and that he would move the necessary inquiry by the House. Mr. Fitz Gerald's motion was carried by a majority of 34 to 23.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE NEW ZEALAND WAR.—Mr. A. MILLS gave notice that, on the recommending of Parliament, he would move, in the event of the war in New Zealand not having ceased, for a return of the cost of supplying ammunition for Majesty's forces from further interference.

THE NAVY.—Lord C. PAGET, in reply to Mr. C. Berkeley, said he had heard of no complaints from officers, and he did not know that there was any reduction on the part of the Admiralty in the supply. The Government had contributed the subject of pay, and were not disposed to re-open that question.—Mr. C. BERKELEY said he should give notice of a motion on the subject.

RESERVOIRS.—Mr. FERRAND asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it was in contemplation to introduce a bill next session to fill it with water and keep it full, or nearly full, for several successive weeks, without having had it fully emptied; and to state his reasons.—Sir GEORGE GREY said the question had been put to him by the Metropolitan; if the Secretary of State having declared that he had no official authority to interfere, whether he would not be willing to take the responsibility upon himself to recommend the filling of the reservoir until duly certified, for the purpose of securing their being emptied of the water from them deteriorated by the hot weather. He (Sir George) had been consulting the matter; but he would advise persons affected to seek redress under the Nuisance Act.

THE MINISTER OF DISCOURAGEMENT.—Mr. HENRY called attention to the notice given by the noble Lord at the head of the Treasury on Monday last, respecting the appointment of a Minister for Education, and to the bill introduced in the House of Lords by the noble Lord relating to inspectors' reports. He urged that such a resolution ought not to be pressed on the House at the present moment, and he hoped that the noble Lord would not press the bill next to Japan.—Lord PALMERSTON said, with reference to the first question, he had no intention of moving a resolution to appoint a Minister for the Education force on that station. Whilst reference to the other question, he thought it his duty to bring the matter under consideration. The report was in the hands of members to do justice to the right hon. gentleman, the member for Oxford, to whom the appointment which he belonged. He appended that there would be as many members present on Monday, when he should make his motion, as there were on the present occasion. He pointed out, which time there were not more than 200 members present.—Mr. LAYARD, in reference to the bill introduced by the noble Lord, protested against Lord HOTHAM regretted the decision at which the noble Lord had arrived, and earnestly advised him to reconsider the matter.

EAST INDIA REVENUE ACCOUNTS.—The House went into Committee.—Sir C. WOOD proposed a vote of £1,000,000 sterling, to meet the charges of India.

The House resumed, and the following resolutions:—

That the several sums of money to defray the charges of the civil services to be entered at the Government of India for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £5,421,277 sterling, and the charges thereon, for the same period, exclusive of the military charges, amounted to £3,949,301 sterling.

That the several sums of money to defray the Home Establishment for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £1,471,976 sterling, and the charges thereon for the same period, other than military charges, amounted to £1,099,712 sterling.

That the several sums of money to defray the Furlough Provisions for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £3,762,491 sterling; and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £3,762,491 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

That the several sums of money to defray the Interest on Debt, Exchange, and Remittance for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £5,902,891 sterling, and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £5,902,891 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

That the several sums of money to defray the Territorial and Political Charges for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £1,000,000 sterling, and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £1,000,000 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

That the several sums of money to defray the Public Works charges for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £6,000,000 sterling, and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £6,000,000 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

That the several sums of money to defray the Marine Establishment for the year ended the 30th day of April, 1865, amounted to £1,000,000 sterling, and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £1,000,000 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

That the several sums of money to defray the Military charges, including the military charges on the capital of railway and other companies, after deducting net traffic receipts of railways, amounted to £6,745,000 sterling, and the charges thereof for the same period amounted to £6,745,000 sterling, leaving a nothing to be provided.

After a prolonged discussion the resolutions were agreed to.

ELECTION INTELLIGENCE.

Sir S. M. PETO, Bart., has accepted the invitation of upwards of 3030 Liberal respectfully to stand in their interest at the approaching election.

There is an end of doubt respecting Mr. E. Akroyd's candidature for the representation of Halifax in the House of Commons. On Wednesday night, at a meeting of electors, a requisition was presented to him, which he stated he would be put in nomination at the next general election. He accepted the invitation, and intimated that he would go poll to the last man in a contest between him. The requisition, after a canvass said to be complete, contained 634 signatures. The Conservatives remain quiet.

The Hon. F. Walpole, the Conservative candidate for the seat which will be vacated by the death of Mr. Ewart, has issued a brief address acknowledging his thanks for the reception which he has met, and his confidence of success at the poll. Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., has also been canvassing, and proceeding with his canvass, and more than one meeting has been held on his behalf.

The contest for the Borough of Lewes between Mr. Blaker Hodgson Rochdale with Mr. Coburn turns out to be incorrect. Mr. Brett's committee have issued a placard contradicting the report.

The Liberals of East Sussex have adopted Lord Edward Cavendish as their candidate in place of Mr. Gilbert Heathcote.

The Liberals at Tynemouth have succeeded in securing a candidate in the person of Mr. G. C. Grey, Barrister-at-Law, a son of the late Rev. Dr. Grey, and of Sir Charles Trevelyan, the well-known Indian financier.

Mr. Ayrton has addressed a letter to the electors of Marylebone declining his intention to retire from public life, four candidates are in the field—Mr. Jacob Bell, Conservative; Mr. Ayrton, Liberal; Mr. Alexander Beresford Hope, Independent; Mr. Lycett (of the firm of Dent and Co., London, glove manufacturers), and Mr. Cowell (Mayor of Westminster), Liberal Conservative. All these candidates, except Mr. Lycett, have made a personal canvass of the electors.

A letter from Vienna states that a congress of German architects is to be held in that capital in the month of Sept. next. More than 600 have already announced their intention to attend the meeting.

The office of Chester Herald, vacant by the decease of Mr. Edward Stephen Dendy, has been granted to Henry Murray Lane, Esq., Bluemantle Pursuivant of Arms.

A Baltimore paper says:—"Our harbour has been on fire for the last twenty-four hours literally on fire. The surface of the water for thousands of square yards has been in a blaze, caused by the burning of the Rainbow ship Juliana, which took fire whilst lying at the wharf and loading with petroleum. She had on board about 1,800 barrels, and had to be towed over to the opposite side of the basin to save the surrounding property. As a natural result, the oil spread to a great extent on the water."

A New York paper relates the following singular occurrence at the sale of the effects of a bankrupt:—"A gentleman who had purchased a number of bankrupts the names of members of his regiment who had been killed in the late fight. There was one which he had a great wish to get, and he bid up with a lord-jamill his own name upon it, and the date of his demise, June 20, 1865. The auctioneer had thrown open the lot, was about to cover the bonus. A day or two after, while bidding his companions farewell, he was struck in the head by a 20-pounder from one of the forts, and killed. The gentleman who had unthinkingly inscribed with his own name was placed over his grave, which, we hope, will be a long time in filling up."

A Parliamentary return gives some statements of the funds and effects of industrial and provident societies in England and Wales for the year 1863. It seems that the number of members on the 31st of December last was 169,988. The number admitted during the year was 73,732, and the members withdrawn 11,556. The total amounts received for or credited to shares from the commencement of the societies to the end of last year was £6,625,356. The amount received on shares during the year was £216,815, and the amounts withdrawn by members £117,471. The amount of shares capital paid up, and of loan capital, £71,645. The amount received on loans during the year was £31,107; of bonus repaid, £19,701; amount paid for interest, £27,978; of cash paid for goods bought during the year, £3,389,159; of cash received for goods sold, £3,826,741. The profit realised in the year was £213,023; the amount of expenses, £176,564; and of cash in hand, £107,158. The total value of land and property in the societies at the end of the year was £795,696, and of their liabilities, £737,009.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

WITH the thermometer standing at ninety degrees in the shade, the interest of the political struggle dead or dying fast, with a determination on the part of Conservative and Opposition alike to abstain from abstract questions and anything approaching a noble action, with one perfectly ready to rest and be thankful and the other to stand at ease and be very outlandish, one cannot be surprised at the avidity with which the public and the newspapers have fastened upon the only excitement left—a murder in a railway-carriage, of the bad, old, mysterious, and cruel sort. With a fascination, far surpassing, as reality always does imitation, the feeble interest of the Lady Audley school of fictionist, the newspapers have spun their yarn out of the thinnest materials and has exhausted the dictionary in complimentary allusions to the "artful and intelligent detective"—a police-man—and in words of loathing horror at the murderer. Happily, too, the mystery has lasted long enough, and just as the public began to share those doubts which we expressed months ago as to whether our "detectives" were the intelligent beings sensation novelists and Mr. Dickens paint them, a little stick dropped from the window, a bandy-leg calman, who had purchased the hat for the murderer (a peculiar hat, well described and with the maker's name given), reads the bill, which had been stuck up for a week at the corner of every cab-mews in London, and gives such evidence that even the most stolid and short-sighted detective must have at once jumped at it. Two and two make four, says an "officer" who looks something between a turn-tipped and a serious butler. "Gifted creatures" are the sensational novelists and the writers of detective note-books, "how he has fastened upon the minutest and subtlest web of evidence!" It is quite time this nonsense were exploded. For all the police have done, whether from Bow, Bow-street, Hackney, or Scotland-yard, the murderer would have escaped. We want a far more intelligent, far more energetic, better-paid set of men at the head of this force.

It is curious that, with the Anglo-German feeling which the success of audacious Austria and predatory Prussia has excited, the murderer should be a German; yet, that is the very man the police announces the "clue" to the "miscreant" (the word is employed by the journals, and is an alarmingly strong one improperly forced into the service) is another native of that land which has given us Kinkel and murderer in attempt. In New York the Germans and Irish have earned a very bad name for the most murderous attempts and riots, and the most philosophically irreligious people in the world run an even pace with the most superstitiously religious in their open defiance of law and contempt of human life. Of one thing we have a list of the assaults and crimes of violence reported each morning and tabulate the criminals in nations, we believe we shall find the Germans appear far more free than any other people in the world. A very perceptible portion of the influx of our London population is taken up by foreigners, upon crimes committed by foreigners in London, this "common sewer of Paris and of Rome," as a satirist elegantly terms our chief city.

It is peculiarly difficult to reflect on any crime with a slight balm to all those who have felt humiliated by the conduct of England, that public opinion has not been almost that of Austria, Prussia, and that, having obtained everything she could possibly demand, she will allow the Danes to retreat with a small remnant of their lands, and with a debt for damages that the Danes of no one would receive by the burghers to pay. Happy Denmark! Peace and honesty have to save her country. Our inquiries are taken up with regard to cannon, per tax your people for the support of an army which was for beyond your means, and you are left to your own resources. Rich, happy, content, and peaceful, you, like the inoffensive Mr. Briggs, have been knocked down and plundered by the countrymen of his assistance. Happily, you are not dead yet. The work is not complete. Our ally feels just as we should if all England south of the Thames and Bristol Channel were torn from us by the Scots, and then in a lesson to us, the folly of the peace-at-any-price party—a party now of great power, and which deserves at least honest study, its very innate simplicity and honesty make it the more dangerous.

How naturally young Englishmen fall into an opposite feeling to that of universal peace might be seen by the excursion of the week to Wimbledon, and watching the firing, the camp-fires, and listening to the often-expressed wish that some more exciting work in the realities of war could be for a little while attained. The different corps all show well; the men are more soldierly and bear themselves better than formerly, although a little more "settling up" and a few hours at position-drill would not be thrown away on some of our fast, semi-gentlemanly, lazy corps. But the pluck, determination, jollity, and hospitality shown by all is something to see. One of the most interesting sights, long since loved lovely, was the shooting for the "owl" prize—owls-eye bulls-eyes, if we can use the phrase, having been manufactured for night-shooting. This is a healthy way of silvering the existence of an exceedingly little contemporary, which, by-the-way, has not died out-right, as we stated last week, at present, so far as we can ascertain, the announcement made in the last number, it is not so much a case of actual death as of suspended animation. The sheet of printed letter-paper will reappear some Sunday, the owners having hoped at present gone away to the German baths, Switzerland, the East, the resorts of the Continental and other places of amusement and health. This amount of humorous pretence evidently charms the purchasers of our inter-val entertainment and comfort.

The new Conservative paper, the Rotten, which started as a protest against all kinds of "newspapery" verbiage, and which hoped to hold its own with a staff of nineteen writers, is dead. Its death is sincerely to be mourned.

A murder in a railway-carriage so mysterious as the one alluded to above has, of course, produced the usual crop of letters from persons offering advice to the various companies as to the management and construction of their carriages. We have insisted that the whole rolling stock of Great Britain and Ireland should be altered. As many communications are absolute heroics, and as we expect not one per cent on capital employed, these requests must be refused point blank. When the companies renew their carriages, then some improvement will be made. There is no positive reason that the old coach form of carriage, which demands exclusive separation, should be continued. Carriages will be ventilated and hot as an oven in summer, they are yet cosy in our usual easterly winds and wintry weather. The opening at the top of the carriage, which is always at a high enough to rest the head, would give all the necessary security. The Kingstown and Dublin line have second-class carriages on models in this way, so much so that few people—except the Lord Lieutenant and Vister King-at-Arms—ever travel first class—a fact which at once explains them in the eyes of the railway bosses.

A trial between two publishers reveals an unwholesome feeling between the trade and authors. Mr. Murray, the Duke's publisher, who hated his publishers with a reason, has a burlesque line which will here apply—

Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.

Messrs. Sampson Low, Son, and Marston buy an American book, probably, mere Americana, rubbish. Nevertheless, it is theirs, and they have the benefit of the work. Another publisher purchases from an American copy of the work, and forthwith issues the book at an eighth of the first publisher's price. Hence an injunction, and, of course, irritated feelings; and, through the stupidity of the lawyers engaged, the case breaks down, again to be taken up, however. "Haunted Hearts" is the name of the prize for which these gentlemen contend. Would not all hearts have been more at ease if publishers made a point not to touch books which others have announced, and, while the Americans deny us the right of copyright, to encourage English authors and leave Yankee rubbish over the sea?

It is cheering to find that we have those amongst us who yet believe in the possibility of mediating in America. A deputation of gentlemen, with whom were Admiral Anson and Mr. James Spence (the "S" of the Times), waited on Lord Palmerston to urge the propriety of such a step. The jaunty Minister spoked a Bathbreatic couplet about the common result of interposing in quarrels, and said that, although England was not afraid of the "bloody nose" therein promised, still the time of mediation was not yet come. Surely, a message from over the sea by the Queen herself, or a letter in her own Royal hand expressive of her own and her people's sorrow at the excessive destruction of human life, would not meet with insult, and might form a basis for the more party in America to stand upon. There is nothing so heartless as red tape; could we not in this extremity do without it?

COUNTRY NEWS.

It was resolved at a public meeting held in Dublin on Thursday week to establish a Veterinary College for Ireland, in Dublin.

Lord Wood, formerly one of the Judges of the Scotch Court of Session, died at his seat in Haddingtonshire, on Monday.

Wednesday, Sept. 14, has been fixed as the opening day of the Irish Exhibition of British Association; the Right Hon. Chichester Fortescue, Vice-President, will be Lord Portman, the Marquis of Bath, Messrs. Tite, Way, Dickinson, and Samuda.

A barge, with a woman and three children, was upset at Workington Hall week. In the scramble to get into boats, each of the inmates were rescued by a boat-builder named Monk, who in twenty minutes went a mile through the heavy sea with his crew.

During a discussion at the meeting of the Mersey Dock Board on Thursday week, it was stated that Liverpool is becoming the great grain market of the world. The estimated value of the grain, flour, &c., in Liverpool at the present time is £2,500,000.

Mr. Lucas, of Hereford, was destroyed by a mob at Leicester a few days since, made an application before the Leicester magistrates on Monday, the object of which was that an indictment will be preferred at the Sessions against certain persons who assaulted him.

A quarryman employed at Brixham, in Devon, perceived a dog or two going into a hedge, an operation which he was informed was soon found to lead to an extensive stalactite cavern, which extends considerable distance in several directions.

Last week an insurrection broke out among the convicts at Portland, three of them being the ringleaders. Four or five of them were shot, receiving, however, only slight wounds, and this was the end of the matter.

It is stated that the cotton famine has made the fortune of Dundee. The manufacture of jute, the staple of the place, has increased in five years from 30,000 to 80,000 tons per annum; the material has scarcely increased, while that of the yarn has doubled, and the manufacturers are buying up the whole of the spinning mills, so that the supply of yarn will be driven in the hands of the Tay.

Mr. Henry Bolton, late President of the Royal Society of Musicians, has presented a park to the local board of the "freedom and recreative enjoyment of the inhabitants of the district of Farnworth," near Bolton. The park, which is above eleven acres, is laid out, bounded, and planted, and will be opened by Mr. Bowman, the local mayor, on Saturday next. £12,000 and £15,000 in value. The local board have to keep it in order and to pay for the police who will be the guardians of the property.

Blackpool, Lancashire, was on Wednesday week the scene of unwonted animation, the occasion being the visit of the Duke de Polo Welor Company, the story of their mains for the first time by the new fire brigade, and the laying of the foundation stone of the new Victoria Pavilion. Large numbers of persons visited Blackpool upon the occasion, and they were joined by the native population in a general holiday.

A thunderstorm burst over a part of Wiltshire on Sunday afternoon. At Corsley, a village between Frome and Warminster, an old woman was struck dead by the lightning as she was sitting at her cottage door, while the storm, when the lightning struck her to the ground, and severely injured another. The storm was accompanied by heavy rain, and there is little difficulty that the poor woman was extricated by her neighbours. The storm spread from Wiltshire into Somersetshire, and there was great damage done.

The foundation-stone of a large gymnasium, which is to be erected in Bolton, was laid on Monday by the Right Hon. the Mayor of that borough, who highly lauded the project and expressed a hope that it would become a permanent institution. Mr. Alderman Ashworth, M.P., and Mr. Melly gave a favourable account of the prospects of the institution. Addresses were also delivered by the Rev. Canon Slade, the Rev. J. Wright, the Rev. H. S. Brown, Mr. Alderman Gardner (ex-Mayor), and other gentlemen. The entire cost will be £3,000, and subscriptions to the extent were already presented by the Mayor to the successful competitors.

A man with several aliases, including Goodenough, Smith, and Wilson, was brought before Mr. Arnold at Winchester on Thursday week for five burglaries committed in different parts of Hampshire. He had been employed for twenty years as a gamekeeper by Mr. Sawyer, the late police magistrate in the county, and then apparently went into a fit and lay on the floor for a long time. He was found in this state by a servant, who on coming to her mistress told her that he had been dead. It was shown in evidence that he was captured at Bristol on the 15th of last month, and that he was in the act of picking the lock of a desk which contained one of the officers. He was surrounded in the dock by a strong force of police, and it was stated that he was a man of great strength and resolution, and is not to be tried for being at large before the expiration of a former sentence of fifteen years' penal servitude.

Mr. D. H. Morrison, second officer of the Cunard steamer Europa, which, on her last voyage from Liverpool to New York encountered a wreck presented, at the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, the former with a gold and the latter with a silver watch, as a reward for their humane proceedings to save human life after the wreck of the Happy Return, a vessel which was totally dismasted in the Atlantic on the 19th of last month. The British Queen was passing at the time of the wreck, and the master asked if any passengers would volunteer to go off in the boat to the wreck. Almost the whole of the crew were eager for the generous duty, and of these seven were selected, but the boat was swamped in the heavy sea which was running, and had to return for a more powerful boat. Ultimately they reached the vessel, and with incredible labour and risk succeeded in saving every soul on board the wrecked vessel, when the boat veered round and was almost instantly swamped. Five of the boat's crew had to be rescued from the waves and Lieutenant Morrison was the only person saved. Before the swamping of the boat, Morrison, finding that the engine-room was flooding with water, and that there was every chance of a life-preserver lot, before the poor fellow had time to avail himself of the generous offer, he was drowned. The Rev. Canon Stowell, Mr. Wells (in the water, Morrison and Jones had repeatedly to dive in order to escape the suction caused by the sinking of the vessel. In the course of the Chairman presentation it was intimated that a subscription had been opened for the families of the crew who had perished in the boat, the sum of £1,000 having been given by those of the men of the British Queen who had volunteered but were not selected to form the rescue crew.

A meeting of the Central Executive Committee for the cotton districts relief fund was held at the house of Mr. Mowbray, Manchester, the Right Sheriff, presided. Mr. Maclure, the hon. secretary, reported that £4,000 had been received during the week, and that the total amount to the bank was £754,764. The £4861 included £4183 bank interest from July 1, 1863, to June 30, 1864. The last, he observed, was the first interest passed at the last meeting for obtaining an extension of the loans granted for public works, and for the better distribution of the fund over another year, president of the Poor-Law Board, who had brought into Parliament a bill for that purpose, and then moved a resolution to the effect that the meeting, thanking the president of the Poor-Law Board for his courteous attention, was adopted. Mr. Rylands moved and the meeting unanimously, that Mr. Villiers and prepared by Mr. Farnall stated that 92,091 persons were receiving relief from public works and from the relief committees, and that the most favourable even than had been supposed, in preventing the fourth balance-sheet of the Committee of which the amount was £1,000,000 sterling. Mr. Murray, and Co., the honorary secretary called attention to the expenses which had been incurred in the administration of the fund, and moved a resolution to the effect that the thanks of the meeting be given to the Committee of Management, the total amount of which (upon a receipt of £892,157 and a distribution of £739,393) was £11,000 (a small sum for the work done), and the total audit per cent. Letters were read announcing the closing for the summer months of the relief committees at Stockport, Cheadle, and Hyde, and that votes of thanks had been passed by each to the Central Executive Committee for their liberality. Mr. Alderman Ashworth stated that there had been a decrease of 3719 relieved in twenty-seven unions on the 9th inst., as compared with the 2nd inst. A final resolution, returning the thanks of the persons. Grown from the general fund were made to the amount of £6000.

A gathering of a number of representatives of the Archæological Institute at Warwick has been issued. The inaugural meeting will be held in the Shire Hall, Warwick, on Tuesday next, at one o'clock precisely. The Earl of Warwick will preside, and will be supported by the Mayor and Corporation of the town. On Wednesday there will be meetings of sections at ten o'clock; Thursday, Kenilworth Castle; and, later in the day, Stoneleigh Abbey, and made to Kenilworth Castle. On Thursday there will be an excursion to Stratford-on-Avon. On Monday a meeting of the sections at ten; in the evening a conversazione in the Museum at nine. On Tuesday, the general meeting of the members of the institute—for the choice of the next place of meeting, for the election of officers, and for other business—and the final place in the Courthouse at 8.30 a.m., and afterwards the general concluding meeting. The museum will be formed in the Corn Exchange, and the meeting of sections will be held in the Courthouse, the whole of which has been placed at the disposal of the institute during the meeting.

The Windsor Association, established by the late Prince Consort in 1859, for improving the condition of the labouring classes in and around Windsor, held its annual meeting under the Royal trees in the Home Park on Thursday week, when the prizes were distributed by the Prince of Wales, the president. The Prince, in presenting the prizes, said that there were 114 prizes, varying from £3 to 10s., awarded in six classes to families distinguished for honesty, orderly conduct, cleanliness, and time, and as the best cultivators of allotments. Fifty-four prizes were distributed for specimens of needlework, twenty-six prizes for vegetables, twenty-five prizes given for specimens of handicraft. The sum of £20 is thus annually distributed. In the evening the committee and a large party of their friends dined together at the Townhall, the table being graced with a fine buck sent from the Great Park, and a handsome dessert from the Royal gardens, by special command of her Majesty.

THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

We have in the last twelvemonth been abundantly supplied with illustrations of the Maori War by the courtesy of many of our correspondents belonging to the military or naval services employed in that feeless and difficult campaign. Our thanks are due to all the skilful draughtsmen and amateur photographers who have found time amidst the labours of their profession to furnish us with sketches of subjects for engraving. Mr. Montagu Higginson, of H.M.S. Curaçoa, has favoured us with a number of photographic views on the Waikato, some of which have been engraved. It has not been possible, however, with the urgent demands upon our space occasioned by the war in America, the siege of Charleston, and other interesting occurrences nearer home, to make use of all these contributions from New Zealand. Not a few of them still remain in our hands, and we are this week enabled to avail ourselves of a sketch by Brigade-General G. A. Carey, an officer well known in New Zealand, which the news brought by the last mail has rendered more valuable than when we received it two months ago. It is a view of the Harbour of Tauranga Bay of Plenty, on the eastern coast of the North Island, and of the camp at the Church Mission village of Te Papa, occupied by the headquarters of the 68th and part of the 43rd Regiments, with detachments of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, and Waikato Militia. Lieutenant-Colonel Carey, of the 18th Royal Irish, (now Brigadier-General) then commanded the Tauranga expeditionary force, by whom this important military establishment was formed about the beginning of the year. We find in one of the Auckland newspapers a letter from a gentleman who visited Tauranga in January last. The writer bears testimony to the excellent arrangements there made for a new basis of General Cameron's operations in the interior. It should first be explained that, since the rebellion of Kingi Tauranganui, the last remaining stronghold of the Maoris on the Upper Waikato River, General Cameron has determined on his campaign in the eastern side of the country, where a large part of the hostile forces now appears to have collected itself. The plan which the General has conceived with Governor Sir George Grey for the ultimate subjugation of all the Maoris is to construct a great military road across the entire breadth of the island—from the Bay of Plenty to Tauranga on the east, inclosing the spacious plains of the Waikato, and forming a north-eastern line of communication with the town of Auckland, so as to protect the outlying settlers of that province from the future incursions of the wild Maori tribes inhabiting the mountainous district further north. The plan is, we believe, with a view of partly made to the Waipa, a tributary of the Waikato, is situated in the neighbourhood of some fertile districts, and is the residence of numerous chiefs. Tauranga, on the other hand, though its territory, when forfeited by the Maoris, will fall into our possession without resistance, was occupied in the full expectation of a hostile attack. We now learn that this attack has been anticipated by the assault which was made by our troops on the 29th of April upon the formidable pah or fortification at Puke Whairangi, or "The Gate." That stronghold, consisting of a series of formidable earthworks, commands the principal road of land forming one side of Tauranga Harbour. Some of our troops were quartered on the peninsula, which is connected by this isthmus with the mainland. The Maoris, on the 28th of April, made their usual up intrenchments across the Puke Whaangi isthmus. They even sometimes advanced as far as Te Papa, which they fired, but fell into at night. This state of things at Tauranga being reported to General Cameron, he immediately left Auckland, with strong reinforcements, and, upon his arrival, made preparations to dislodge the enemy from the Puke Whaangi pah. The Engraving on our front page is from a drawing made by Lieutenant Bayly, of the 43rd Regiment, on the day after the attempt to storm the pah. It represents the scene of that fierce conflict. Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Booth, C.B., and the 43rd; Captains R. P. Hamilton, R. C. Glover, C. R. Muir, Edwin Utterton, and Lieutenant Langlands, of the same regiment; Lieutenant Hill, of R.M.S. Cowpen, Captain Mayne, of H.M.S. Esk, and about twenty other British soldiers and sailors were killed, whilst Commander Hay, of H.M.S. Harrier, Lieutenant Bayly, of the 43rd, Lieutenant Duff, of the Esk, Lieutenant F. G. Glover, of the Ensign, and W. Clarke, of the Curaçoa, were most severely wounded. The total number of wounded was not less than eighty, besides thirty killed—a large proportion, especially of the officers, who were engaged. The fatal error on the part of the attack was, that the Puke Whaangi is not considered to have done much credit to our arms. The assault, though preceded and supported by a fire from the artillery, was not was a disastrous failure. The enemy was not defeated or expelled by the valour of our troops, but allowed to retreat quietly in the night.

It seems that General Cameron has determined to continue his position of the Maoris, and laid his plan of attack. A force composed of the land-quarter guard of the 43rd Light, Light Infantry, under Colonel Booth, 68th under Colonel Greer, and Naval Brigade, came out of Te Papa at nightfall on the 30th of April, and took up their position in a series of earthworks or redoubts, on the crest of a hill, connected with each other by a perfect labyrinth of trenches and subterranean passages, which the Maoris had made on the ground. The officers and men of our ships of war, during the same night of the 28th, having landed two 12-pounder howitzers and two 6-pounder guns, placed them as a siege battery within range of the enemy's fortifications, while two 6-pounder guns (under Lieutenant Armstrong) were set in position behind the earthworks we constructed on a hill to our right; and a small breastwork, with two 8-inch mortars, another 6-pounder (Armstrong), and a Coehorn mortar, were also erected in front of the pah. They must have worked hard, for many hours, to complete all these formidable preparations. When the morning dawned, General Cameron gave orders to open fire from our batteries. It was kept up without cessation from seven o'clock till four in the afternoon. Still the enemy did not show themselves; there was no sign of life in the pah. A rumour then arose in our camp that the enemy had retired during the night. The order to "cease fire" was sounded, and the 68th advanced in skirmishing order, and took possession of the line of the pah. It was apparent that a breach had been made in the enemy's works. The evening was wearing on. It was at length resolved upon to storm the pah, and two columns of the firing column marched out to the right, under cover of the batteries. They lay concealed in the fern until the storming party and the Naval Brigade and 43rd Light Infantry, were formed into line and advanced from the centre battery. Lieutenant Bay, of the Harrier, led the storming party. The covering party advanced in front of the pah, within 100 yards of the outer face, not opened fire. The defenders of the pah replied almost instantly. The Maoris had kept from their cover to defend their works, and gallantly and well they fought. While the fire was kept up from the rifle pits, they advanced in column at the double, and with a cheer carried the breach. The storming party had to pass a dangerous conflict in the ditch. The General, who was in the advanced trench of his position, ordered up the supports while the storming party rushed into the breach. The second division of line jacked up and followed, led by Captain Mayne, of the Esk, advanced with a cheer. They arrived at a critical moment. The storming party, exposed to a murderous fire on all sides, and from hidden assailants beneath, and without an officer left to lead them, were wavering in the pah. Captain Mayne, of the Esk, mounted, sprung upon the parapet, and, shouting, "Follow me, men!" fell dead, with a bullet through the brain; many of his officers shared the same fate. One half of the supports stood outside the works. There was a momentary lull, broken only by a dropping shot. The next moment both English and Maoris poured out of the pah through the breach, while a destructive fire was opened from the pah and rifle-pits. The storemen were repulsed in front with severe loss, and in the rear the 68th had also been compelled to retire. Thrice the 68th attempted to charge up to the proper right of the enemy's position to take it in reverse, and thrice they rocked and fell back. Our men partially rallied several times in front of the pah, and returned the enemy's fire; they were then ordered to retire on the trenches under cover. The General rallied the broken column; the ground in front was occupied by skirmishers, and a small mortar was advanced within short range of the ditch. Two 32-pounder guns and supplies of ammunition were sent for, as well as every available man in Tauranga. Meantime, the Maoris were exulting at their success, and challenged the troops to advance. They were heard to boast that a great number of pakehas were slain. The bodies of many of our killed and wounded remained in the enemy's works; but many wounded men had been carried into camp. The pah was evacuated, however, during the night of the 29th of April, and the great body of the enemy escaped. The pah was entered at daylight on the 30th, when the bodies of Colonel Booth, Captain Hamilton, and other British officers, were recovered. About twenty dead or wounded Maoris were found there, accompanied by several of their dogs. Lieutenant Robley, who had carried his sketchbook in his bayonet while marching and fighting on the previous day, then made his sketches of the interior of the pah. He describes it as consisting of a large and a small inclosure, connected with each other, containing a maze of trenches and covered passages, running a length of ninety paces; the whole surrounded by a wooden fence, in which were apertures close to the ground, at intervals of about five paces, so that the garrison could fire through. The inner space was full of hiding-holes dug in the ground, from which the Maoris had shot down our soldiers. One of these holes is shown in the foreground of our View, on the extreme left. In the centre are the ruins of a small house, with the flagstaff that bore the fighting flag of the Bay of Plenty natives.

THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND: TAURANGA HARBOUR, WITH THE CAMP OF THE HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE 68TH AND 43RD REGIMENTS.

TAURANGA AND THE TE PAPA STATION.

We will now give some description of the place shown in our larger Engraving, which is from Colonel Carey's sketch of Tauranga as it appeared in February. We may quote, from the Auckland newspaper above referred to, a paragraph which attests the value of this Illustration:—"Colonel Carey," says our Auckland contemporary, "as he did during the Thames expedition, has likewise done in this. He has made graphic illustrations of every bay, post, and redoubt. His panoramic picture of Tauranga is superb, accurate, attractive, and lifelike; and as we have reason to suppose that it and others are to be sent to the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS (which in a recent issue has treated the New Zealand question in a sound and sensible manner), the British public will be afforded the opportunity of beholding one of the finest natural havens and one of the greatest future cities of the north island of New Zealand." In his letter of explanation which accompanies this sketch, Colonel Carey says:—"The Durham and Monmouth Redoubts appear here at opposite angles of the ground taken up for the encampment, inclosing the buildings of the Mission Station. H.M.S. Miranda is seen lying at anchor, having disembarked a portion of the Tauranga field force; vessels of 300 or 400 tons may come up at all sides to the landing-place in front of the camp. The surrounding country is extensively cultivated, the principal crops being wheat, Indian corn, and potatoes; peaches also abound, and abundance of fish is caught in the harbour." The singularly-shaped mountain which overlooks the water is Mount Monganui—a landmark visible far away. The entrance of the harbour is much obstructed in certain states of the tide by a reef of rocks, over which the sea "fumes and foams like a boiling cauldron" when the ebb is running strongly. This reef, however, is to be removed by blasting, some day. The harbour itself is magnificent, with accommodation for an immense amount of shipping. Te Papa, which in 1857 contained only the house of Archdeacon Brown, with the chapels and schools of the Church Missionary Society, besides a few scattered warehouses of the traders, has now assumed the character of a thriving village. Several substantial and handsome houses have been erected, the central edifice, with a rather imposing front, having some architectural pretensions. It was built for a mission schoolhouse, but is at present occupied as a commissariat store. The camp is pitched in a commanding situation. The tents of the soldiery are placed on the incline of a fine clover-clad bank. The brush and scrub have been cleared and burnt off all around. Ditches have been transformed to lines of rifle-pits, communicating with the Durham and Monmouth Redoubts, which are constructed to command and support each other and sweep the outer approaches. The Monmouth Redoubt has been formed from an old Maori pah. It is situated on the edge of the cliff that overhangs the beach, three of its faces being surmounted with parapets with bastions, on one of which a 12-pounder Armstrong gun is posted; the fourth face, being on the edge of the cliff, has been left open. The ditches are be deepened and widened. Lieutenant Talbot, 43rd Regiment, commands the Monmouth Redoubt. To the left of this redoubt, looking seaward, there are the rugged and broken remains of an old native work called The Tombs. They are situated near Archdeacon Brown's orchard and dwelling, are full of old potato holes, and bordered by numerous ditches and whitethorn fences, some of them very close and upwards of twenty feet high. Besides these, there are clumps of willows and elms, which, beautiful as they are, it might be well to clear away, as they could not but afford cover to a crawling, creeping foe, stealing from various points of the surrounding creeks and water-courses. The Tombs have been appropriately named, for hard by is the burying-ground where, underneath a large and handsome willow-tree, are deposited the remains of the first Mrs. Brown; beside her lie those of the wife of the Rev. J. A. Wilson. The Durham Redoubt is to the rear of Colonel Carey's quarters, the rifle-pits which line the cook's inclosure of the garden communicating with the work. The redoubt is like its fellow. It faces the ranges, and commands the creek and tidal basin in the rear. It has pretty deep ditches, and has flanking angles, on one of which a 12-pounder Armstrong gun is mounted. Lieutenant Marshall, 68th, is in command."

We have just received from Brigadier General Carey a letter of April 22, with a Sketch of the scene of another conflict fought at Orakau, in the Waikato country, on the 2nd of that month.

THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT AUCKLAND.

As a companion to our Illustrations of the New Zealand war we present a View of the Government House at Auckland, the capital of the colony, where Sir George Grey, the present Governor, usually resides, and where the General Legislative Assembly, composed of the elect representatives of the several Provinces of Auckland, Wellington, New Plymouth, Nelson, Canterbury, Marlborough, Otago, and Southland, is accustomed to meet. There is, however, an increasing agitation for the removal of the seat of government to Wellington or some other place with a more central situation than that of Auckland. The building represented in our Engraving is one which has been erected, within the last three or four years, to replace the original Government House, which was destroyed by fire. It is surrounded by a public pleasure-garden.

EDWARD WILLIAM WATKIN, ESQ., M.P. FOR STOCKPORT.

MR. E. W. WATKIN, M.P. FOR STOCKPORT.

MR. EDWARD WILLIAM WATKIN, whose Portrait we have engraved, was lately elected, not only without opposition, but apparently with the concurrence of all parties, member of Parliament for the borough of Stockport, to fill the vacancy caused by the decease of the late Mr. Kershaw in May last. Mr. Watkin had previously been in the House, having been chosen for Great Yarmouth at the general election of 1857. He also contested, in 1859, the representation of the same borough, but unsuccessfully on that occasion. Mr. Watkin is a Liberal, and an independent supporter of the Government of Lord Palmerston. He is the son of the late Mr. Absolom Watkin, for many years a well-known and active magistrate for Lancashire and for the city of Manchester, who resided at Rose Hill, Northenden, near Stockport, where the member for Stockport now resides. Mr. Watkin is largely connected with the manufacturing and commercial industry of Lancashire. He has for several years past had much to do with the extension of public works in that county and the north of England. He is chairman of the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway; a director of the Great Western Railway; and president of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. In early life Mr. Watkin rendered important services to the promotion of popular education on the plans of the Lancashire Public School Association, founded at Manchester some twenty years ago. He was one of the originators, and the most active promoter, of the movement which led to the provision of public parks and places of recreation for the working people of that city, who, up to the year 1846, had no open space which they could call their own in which to breathe the fresh air and take healthful exercise. Mr. Watkin was also one of the earliest members of the Free-trade Association of Lancashire, whose labours served to educate the public opinion of this country upon the question of unrestricted commercial intercourse before and after the repeal of the corn laws. Of late years he has lent his aid to an important movement, which has made much progress, without perhaps yet exciting marked attention in this country, for the establishment of overland telegraphic and postal communication, and the means of transit across British North America, connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. He is likely to attain yet higher distinction in public life, and his past services have fully earned him the place we have allotted him in this Journal.

Our Engraving is from a photograph by Messrs. J. and C. Watkins, of Parliament-street.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of John Hamlin Smith, Esq., of Brighton, wine merchant, was proved in the London Court on the 5th inst. by his brother, Harry Smith, Esq., the sole executor. The personalty was sworn under £50,000. The will bears date March 11, 1861, and was attested by J. C. Lethbridge, solicitor, Alsiaphin-street, Westminster, and C. L. Lethbridge, his clerk. The testator has bequeathed the whole of his property, real and personal, amongst his brothers, in equal proportions. Mr. Hamlin Smith was the brother-in-law of the Brighton racecourse.

The will of Thomas Fentham, Esq., late of Montagu-square, and of Weybridge, was proved in the London Court under £120,000. The testator was formerly of the firm of I. and T. Fentham, wharfingers and coal merchants, Surrey Wharf, Wandsworth, who left business in 1859, and there are two codicils, the last dated September, 1863. The executors are his sons, Thomas Fentham, Esq., and the Rev. William Fentham, M.A. To his son John he leaves his estates in the parish of Chertsey. There are annuities, chargeable upon them, to his brothers, his brother, sisters, nephews, and nieces, amounting to £1300 per annum. The residue of his estates, real and personal, is to be equally divided amongst his children. Annuities are also left to his clerk, Mr. Leach, £50; his carman, Lucas, £50; and his lightman, Sharp, £20, free of legacy duty.

"T. P. Cooke," the popular actor—Thomas Potter Cooke, Esq., of Thurlow-square, Brompton, and 26, Vincent Villa, Ryde, Isle of Wight—who died on the 6th of April last at an advanced age, has left personalty estimated at £25,000, besides freehold estates. He has made the following bequests:—To his wife, during the remainder of her widowhood, £1000 and his late dwelling-house; to his son, the Rev. W. S. P. Meadows, M.A., Vicar of Cosgrove; Warren Hastings, Esq., Bloomsbury-place; and Augustine Sargood, Esq., Temple, barrister-at-law, £500 each; to his son, Cumming, who was residing with him, he has left his real estate and the residue of his personalty. There are a number of small legacies to personal friends; amongst them are the names of Brighton Mayor, John Buckstone; Henry Wills, editor of All the Year Round;—Bagley, editor of Sadgrove's Racing Times, Paris, to each of his executors £100. To the nurse, who has long lived in the family, he leaves an annuity of £35. All legacies to be free from duty. There is one very prominent bequest in his will. He leaves to the Royal Dramatic College a sum of £2000, in perpetuity, for a price for the best drama on a musical or national subject, to be called "T. P. Cooke's Nautical or National Dramatic Prize" to be competed for in progressive years. The first day of April, the birthday of "our immortal dramatic poet Shakspeare, on which he my own natal day as a public holiday or treat shall be given to the pensioners of the college; and, after the decease of the day—"To the memory of the immortal bard Shakspeare"—shall have been duly honoured, the terms and conditions of this "my gift" shall be read, and announcement made of the successful candidate, as regards the title of the piece, and the theatre at which it is to be performed; and thereafter a further sum of £1000 for the purpose.

A collection of ancient Buddhist remains, discovered by Mr. E. Harris at Sultangunge, on the Ganges, which is designed in some respects to eclipse what has just arrived in England. Among the objects of interest discovered in the ruins referred to are supposed to be a Vihar, or Buddhist monastery in a colossal image of copper, 7 ft. 6 in. in height, weighing upwards of a ton, and supposed to be upwards of two thousand years old. There are also several smaller figures, both in brass and in copper, the letters on some of which show that they must have belonged to Nepal and not to third century; some coins; a copper vase, the metal of which has quite the appearance of some found by the Nineveh explorers with writing, &c. The collection is at present placed in the museum of the Royal Asiatic Society, where plans and sections of the excavations have also been deposited.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

INCREASED quantities of stock having been disposed of for delivery, and the demand for accommodation having improved, all National Securities have been in very inactive request, and in some instances the quotations have had a drooping tendency. In the Unfunded Debt the business done has been of a limited character.

The only supply of money on offer in the open market at most comfort, yet holders of capital are firm, and the lowest rates for the best commercial paper are as follow:—

Thirty days bills	3½	per cent.
Sixty days bills	3½	...
Four months bills	3½	...
Six months bills	4	...

In the Stock Exchange the quotations for short loans are from 4½ to 5 per cent.

No change of importance has taken place in the value of money on the Continent. Generally speaking, the demand is steady. The leading markets the latest dates:—

	Bank rate	Open market
	per cent.	per cent.
Paris	4	3
Vienna	5	4½
Berlin	5	4½
Amsterdam	3½	3
Turin	7	6
Frankfort	4	3½
Hamburg	3	2½
St. Petersburg	7	6

Several half-yearly instalments of various public companies have fallen due during the present month, and the Bank of England has been highly remunerative. The dividend of the London and Westminster Bank is at the rate of 20, and of the City Bank 30 per cent per annum. The progress in the amount of deposits in the former currency, and yet money has continued high in price, owing to the large demand for accommodation.

Only considerable activity of the discount houses has prevented the demand for gold for export purposes has been on the increase. The amount for India has taken off £97,973. The arrivals of gold and silver have been made from Australia to India and China, £1,000,000 sterling, and from the United States.

The exports of bullion to the extreme East of England from the Indications are estimated at about £900,000.

The Bank of England has received £48,000 in bills on the various Presidencies, at previous rates. The speculations within the Bank Parliament have been limited.

On Monday, the Consols for Transfer closed at 90¾; Ditto, Last Account, 90⅞; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Enfield and New Three per Cents, 101 to 102; Ditto, Old Three per Cents, 101 to 102; Ditto, Paper, 101 to 102; and 114 to 116; India Stock, 220 to 222; Ditto, Bonds, 1866-74, 101 to 102; Ditto, Bonds, 1874-84, 101 to 102; Ditto, Transferable, 101 to 102; Exchequer Bills, 1865, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, Small, 1 to 3 pm; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90¾; Ditto, Last Account, 90⅞; Consols, 90¾; Ditto, for Account, 90⅞; and 114 to 116; India Stock, 220 to 222; Ditto, Bonds, 101 to 102; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, Small, 1 to 3 pm. On Tuesday, Consols, 90¾; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90¾; India Stock, 222 to 224; Ditto, Bonds, 101 to 102; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, Small, 1 to 3 pm. On Wednesday the market was heavy; Consols, 90⅝; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90⅝; Consols for Account, 90⅝; and Exchequer Bills, 6s. 0s. to par; India Five per Cents were done at 103½ 102. On Thursday, Consols, 90⅝; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90⅝; Consols for Account, 90⅝; Three per Cent. Annuities, 87, Terminable Annuity, 7 5-16; Bank Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90⅝; India Stock, 222 to 224; Ditto, Bonds, 101 to 102; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, Small, 1 to 3 pm; Bank of England Stock, 238 to 240; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90⅝; and Indian Five per Cents, 103.

The market for Joint-stock Bank Shares has ruled firm, and prices have been well supported. Australasian, 85 ex div.; Bank of Egypt, 11 to 12; Bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan, 40; Imperial Ottoman, 19; Australasian, 84; Bank of British Columbia, 12½; Bank of Egypt, 11 Paid to Paid; Bank of Hindostan, China, and Japan, 40; Chartered of India, Australia, and China, 43; Ditto, New, 2nd; Consolidated, 5; Hong Kong, 50; Imperial Ottoman, 19; London Chartered of Australia and Japan, 36; Imperial Ottoman, 19; London Mortgage of India, 3½; London and Colonial, 2½; London and County, 24; London Joint-Stock, 21; London and Northern, 23½; London and South African, 2¾; London and South-Western, 10; Ditto, Deferred, 5; National of India, 3; Ditto, Deferred, 1½; National Provincial, 19; Oriental, New, 3½; Standard of British South Africa, 3½; Union of Australia, 66 ex div.; United Kingdom of London, 45 to 46; and Union of London, 11½.

The Railway Share Market has been rather inactive business has been transacted. Canada Six per Cents have sold at 109; Ditto Five per Cents, 103; Ditto Four per Cents, 102; Hamburg Six per Cents, 105; New South Wales Five per Cents, 97½; and Victoria Six per Cents, 104.

The Miscellaneous Market is tolerably firm. Australian Agricultural, 2½; Freiln Mobilier, 11½; Crystal Palace, 20½; Discount Corporation, 1½; Electric Telegraph, 4½; Financial Reversionary, 3½; General Credit, 2½; International Financial, 2½; Joint-Stock Discount, 2½; London Financial, 2½; Madras Irrigation, 1½; Natal Land, 1; National Discount, 1½; National Financial, 1½; Peninsular and Oriental Steam, 81; Ditto, New, 36; Royal Mail Steam, 11; Ditto, Preferred, Limited, 8½; Van Diemen's Land, 1½; and Waterford Finance, 2½.

About an average business has been transacted in the Railway Share Market, and prices have been rather supported. The dividend of the London and Brighton Company will be £2 19s. for the past half-year, and £5 18s. per annum, being at the rate of £11 per cent.

Ordinary Shares and Stocks.—Bristol and Exeter, 97½; Great Eastern, 56½; Great Northern, 104½; Ditto, A Stock, 120; Great Southern and Western, West Midland, 114; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 119; London and Blackwall, 7½; London and Brighton, 109½; London, Chatham, and Dover, 30½; London and North-Western, 124½; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 72½; Metropolitan, 120½; North British—Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee, 51; North Eastern, Berwick, 91½; Scottish Central, 120½; Shrewsbury and Shrewsbury Stock, 99; South Devon, 35½; South Eastern, 79.

Preference Shares.—Caledonian, 109½; Ditto, 10 Central Ditto, 102; Eastern Counties, 15½; Great Northern, 5 per Cent, 130½; Ditto, 3 per Cent, 98; Madras, Five per Cent, 109½; Scinde, 105½; Ditto, Delhi, 101; Western, 109½.

Foreign—Brighton Eastern Junction, 1½; Great Luxembourg, 4½; Great Western of Canada, 15½; Namur to Liege, 7½; Sambre and Meuse, 10½.

The return of the Bank of England for the week ending July 20 shows the following results, when compared with the preceding statement:—

Increase of circulation of	£141,760
A decrease of public deposits of	292,151
A decrease of other deposits of	1,674,297
A decrease of the proportion of the reserve of	69,300
A decrease of other securities of	1,096,494
An increase of other notes of	1,000,000
A decrease of reserve of	66,752

The total circulation is for 28,782,598. Public deposits amount to £4,462,439; and private deposits to £13,899,975. Securities are £29,571,981; and the stock of bullion to £23,717,266.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE, July 18.—A fair average supply of English wheat was on sale this morning, and the trade was steady, at prices fully equal to those of last week. Foreign wheat was in moderate request, at full currencies. Barley came forward in good condition, and was in steady demand. Floating cargoes of grain met a fair sale. Malting qualities were in request, and the turn in favour of improvement in value of 1s. per quarter. No change took place in the value of oats. Beans and peas were in steady demand, at full prices. Flour was in good request, at the late advance in value.

Arrivals.—Wheat, 1,000 qrs.; barley, 1,000 qrs.; oats, 1,000 qrs.; beans, 500 qrs.; peas, 500 qrs.; flour, 1,000 sacks

NEW MUSIC.

PRETTY COLETTE. Ballad, written and adapted to a popular French Air, by HENRY FARNIE. 3s. cheerfully recommended. The most popular air of the day. The above, arranged for the Pianoforte by Arnold de Pue. 3s. CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

POPULAR SONGS OF THE SEASON.

Sweet Nightingale. Sung by Miss. Lemmens-Sherrington. 3s. 6d.
Dreer. Duboo Romance. Sung by Miss. Emmas-Delby .. 3s. 6d.
A Wish. Sung by Miss Poland .. .. 2s. 6d.
A Wish. Sung by Miss Poland .. .. 2s. 6d.
Awe Marie Stella. Prayer to "Graziella." .. .. .. 2s. 6d.
Farewell, Dark. Cadenza Song to "Graziella" .. .. .. 3s. 6d.
Baby, and When Summer Build. Virginia Gabriel. 3s. each.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

FRANCILETTA. Italian Bolero. Sung by Miss Milly Carolina Distelhorst with the greatest success. With Portrait. 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

GASTON DE LILLE. "NINA." Serenade for Harp and Pianoforte. The most successful morceau of the season. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC BY

GASTON DE LILLE

A Summer's Night. Polka Mazurka .. .. .. 3s.
Tender Tones. Valse .. .. 4s.
Pearls and Toys. Galop .. .. 3s.
Tender Tones. Valse .. .. 4s.
Bright Eyes. Valse .. .. 4s.
All Illustrated in superior style.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

PLAYED AT THE STATE BALLS.

THE LOCOMOTIVE GALOPE, sung by T. BROUGH; will equal in popularity the famous Conjuror's "Fear-in-Hand." With an effective Illustration. Price 3s.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

BANTING! BANTING! BANTING!
The Comic Song of the Day. By HOWARD PAUL. With a most amusing Illustration. Price 3s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Gt. Marlborough-st., London, W.

NEW SONG — "HOME ONCE MORE." Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Sung with great success. The ballad, by the composer of the celebrated "Good-bye at the Door," will be found one of the most charming songs of the day, both pleasing and effective.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-st.

ROBERT COCKS and COS. CUS ITE HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the PIANOFORTE. 150th Edition. Price 4s.
"Words are wanting to say anything which has not been already said in praise of this remarkable work. The 150th Edition is before us, and, after a careful perusal of it, we have come to the conclusion that it is the best work of the kind extant. It is the result of the author's matured experience, and all that time has hallowed and consecrated with this result, we feel persuaded that they would find every page of it (though we have done double justice of the whole series)."—Christian World.
HAMILTON'S 25th Edition. 5s.
HUNT'S NEW, BRILLIANT GALOPE, and CO. respectfully beg to intimate the profession generally, and the heads of schools, that they are now in possession, prepared to fill ORDERS for the above and GUT PARCELS of MUSIC on APPROBATION. Terms greatly reduced for Schools and Families.—6, Princes-street, Hanover-square. Rooms to be let for the occasional use of country friends.
A Catalogue of 8000 Pianoforte Works; also a Catalogue of 2000 Songs, Duets, Trios, with keys, sent gratis and post-free.
ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S IMPROVED PIANETTE, Pianino Model, Trichord Compass, Check Action, Repeater, Full Trichord, perfectly in tune. Full compass, 7 octaves. A great desideratum. Is well adapted for the use of schools. In rosewood or walnut-tree case, £21.—20, Hurlington-street, London.

CHISSHOLME and SON'S (from Messrs. Brodwood's), TRICHORD COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, in rosewood or walnut-tree case, 7 octaves, with all the improvements of the season, in solid cases, 29 guineas.—91, Berners-st., Oxford-st., W.

PIANOS FOR HIRE.—CARRIAGE-FREE. Pianofortes, by all the eminent makers, Lists of terms, and the nearest warehouse in London at every description and price.
CRAMER, BEALE, and CO., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Westbourne-st., Hyde-park-corner.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPOT for the Sale of NEW and SECOND-HAND Musical Instruments is REMOVED from No. 11 to No. 56, Cheapside, where a large assortment of every size from Boxes has arrived. Lists of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free.

THE BURLINGTON FURNITURE GALLERIES, 31, Cornhill-street, W.—In MODELS and CO.'s Upholstery, have REMOVED to larger premises, as above, from No. 30, Regent-st., Corner of the Quadrant.—Cornhill, July 23, 1864.

THE BURLINGTON FURNITURE GALLERIES, 31, Cornhill-street, W.—First-class Furniture, Carpets, Decorations, Curtains, the Manor and Monthly Tapestry. A splendid selection of the above-named goods, at extremely moderate prices, for Cash or Credit, at MODELS and CO.'s, 31, Cornhill, and 30, Regent-street, Corner of the Quadrant. Estimates, as above.

HOWARD and SONS' ELEGANCIES and SOLES.—The Public will find these Goods of the highest quality and fashion, at moderate prices, at 26 and 27, Berners-street, Oxford-street. Designs and Estimates free.

DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE En suite, in Rosewood and Silk, Inlaid Tripod Tables, so much admired and patronised by the Emperor of the French. The suite consists of a splendid couch, a very handsome walnut and rosewood chair, with silk to match, a pair of pretty pedestals, a large vase chimney-glass, and a handsome Inlaid Tripod Table, complete, £25 10s. A handsome Couch and Chair, to match, may be had separately. LOCKE, 155, High Holborn. The above are of the best quality, and to be sold for the first time at the reduced cash price. On View at the MANUFACTORY, NURSING COMPANY, 157, Strand, Belgrave-square.

BATHS for all DOMESTIC PURPOSES. An extensive and complete stock. Hot, cold, shower-baths and toilet ware. DEANE and CO.'S PAMPHLET on BATHS and TOILET WARE, with Engravings, sent free by post. Also Engravings of the Guinea and Record Kitchen Ranges, Register Stoves, and every description of Bath for family use. Shower Baths of Improved construction. Patent Gas Stoves, ovens, cooking apparatus, economical. Ventilation given for fitting up Bath-rooms. DEANE and CO., 46, King William-street, London-bridge.

BATHS and TOILET WARE.—WILLIAM S. BURTON has One large Showroom devoted entirely to the display of BATHS and TOILET WARE, so that purchasers may be at no loss to make a selection, and that useful cost unfruitful to the public, and marked at prices proportionate with those that have only a portion of the space. The most extensive assortment in existence of Sponging Baths, Hip Baths, Nursery Baths, Slop Pails, Sponging, Hot, and Shower Baths, and every article connected with the Bath, Toilet, and Lavatory. Also a large Assortment of Tea Urns, Kettles, and Cold Plunge, Vapour, and Camp Shower Baths. Toilet Ware in great variety, from 5s. 6d. to £20 the set. Portable Gas Fittings for Dressing-rooms.
WILLIAM S. BURTON, 1, 2, 3, and 4, Newman-street; 4, 5, and 6, Perry's-place; and 1, Newman-yard, London, W.

ORIGINAL AND SUPERIOR ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, SAUCES, PICKLES, &c., pure and good, as supplied by CONS BURGESS to the Queen, Royal Family, and Nobility, 1830—96, Strand, Corner of Somerset-house, London.

J. S. FRY and SONS, Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE and COCOA. The superiority of J. S. Fry and Sons' articles has been attested by universal public approbation during a century.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE, IN STICKS and BOXES, for EATING,
Also in Fancy Boxes in great variety.
DELICIOUS, ECONOMICAL, AND NUTRITIOUS.

CANDLES.—Price Medal.—Paraffine, Sperm, and Wax. Her Majesty's Government for the Military Stations, 5, 6, and 7, 1863. Prize Medal, London International Exhibition, 1862. Price Medal, various Metropolitan systems and gas-house installations. Their label is on all packets and boxes, sold by all Dealers throughout the United Kingdom. Patentees and the operatives in the Wicks Upper-North London Improvement Company, 1, Wharf-road, City-road, E.C., who are also by appointment their Parliamentary Candle Makers.

FIELDS'S CELEBRATED UNITED STATIONARY SOAP TABLETS, 6d. per lb. each, sold by all Chandlers and Grocers throughout the Kingdom. Manufactured by Arnold and Sir Fields, and see that the name of J. C. and J. Fields is on each packet, box, and tablet. Wholesale and for exportation, 12, Cross-street, Hatton-garden, London. N.B.—We are also by appointed their Parliamentary Candle Makers.

THE GRAND HOTEL, BRIGHTON, will be open to the PUBLIC THIS DAY, 23rd JULY, 1864.
36, Cannon-street, E.C. H. A. ADAMSON, Secretary.

FISHERIES OF RIVER AND LOUGH ERNE AND RIVER BANN, IN ULSTER, IRELAND.—The Commissioners of the Irish Church Fund will let by Auction, on the 7th day of September next, Tenders for a Lease or Leases of the undermentioned Fisheries for the term of Ten Years, from Michaelmas Day next, determinable at the end of the first four or seven years:—
The Commissioner's Fishery of Salmon, and all other floating fish (excepting Eels), in the River Bann, from Lough Neagh to the sea, with the Weir of Ballinrees, and the Dwelling-house, Office, and Boat-house thereto belonging, in the occupation of Mr. Thompson, and fee-house, and land adjoining at Ballycastle, near Coleraine.
The Fishery of Salmon, Trout, and Eels, in the Lower Lough Erne, with the Weirs and Eel-Pots, from the Grandtown, near Enniskillen, to the high and deep sea.
The Fishery of Salmon, Trout, and Eels in the River Bann, from Lough Neagh to the sea.
Further particulars may be obtained of JOHN B. DAVIES, Secretary.
Irish Church Fund Office, Dublin-castle.
London, July 20, 1864.

A GENTLEWOMAN RESIDING at BRIGHTON, in good Society, and having a Lower Story Establishment, wishes to meet with a Lady to Board with her. She is a Young Widow, and has no family. Terms would be very comfort. The highest references given and required, and Double terms only would be accepted. Address—DELTA, 18, Manchester-street, London, W.

SMART'S SOLE WRITING INSTITUTION, 31, corner of Foubert's-place, Regent-street.—Gentlemen from the Civil Mean daily. Persons of all ages received (privately) and taught Writing in the Shortest Possible Time.—Prospectuses forwarded on application. No extra. Terms moderate. Private instruction at Residence in Twelve Easy Lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which department (if preferred) Miss SMART will attend. For prospectuses, terms, &c., apply to Mr. SMART, as above.
N.B.—Agent to the World and Regional Insurance Company.

NO. 7, BANK-BUILDINGS (corner of Old Jewry, London) is the Chief Office of the ACCIDENTAL DEATH INSURANCE COMPANY. Capital, £250,000 Sterling.

TOURISTS derive additional pleasure in their rambles when acquainted with MINERALS, ROCKS, and FOSSILS. By JOHN MOGFORD, Author of "The Rambler's Companion to Derbyshire and Matlock," &c. Price 1s. 6d. Post-free, 1s. 8d.
RIFLE GLASSES. Burrows' (Malvern) are the best.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price £5 5s. SMITH, BECK, and BECK, 31, Cornhill, and 6, Coleman-street, London. Catalogues sent on receipt of two postage-stamps.

THE GLORIES of the HEAVENS seen by the NAKED EYE.—The Rev. T. W. WEBB, F.R.A.S., Author of the features of a man four miles, and time by a church clock ten miles. Also, Observations on the Planet Mars, Jupiter's Belts, Satellites, and eight Quick Double Stars, with the Colours of the principal and other gentlemen, including Lord Rosse. Sent free by book post.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Foubert's-place, Regent-street, Optician, Telescope, powerful Opera, Race, Field, and general Outdoor Glasses.

TWENTY-SHILLING TOURIST and RACECOURSE GLASS.—SOLOMONS and CO. have completed a small and very powerful glass, well adapted for Racecourses, Tourists, Yachting, &c., and which they can recommend as a most valuable instrument. Price 20s. 39, Foubert's-place, Regent-street.

A NEW High-power BINOCULAR GLASS, the cheapest, lightest, most powerful, and portable ever produced. Will show the features of a man four miles, and time by a church clock ten miles. Price, mounted in ivory and gilt, in velvet bag, 3ls., sent post-free. This glass is especially recommended to Tourists, Travellers, for the opera, race, and general outdoor use.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Foubert's-place, Regent-street.

A CHROMATIC MAGIC and DISSOLVING LANTERNS LENT OUT and sent into the country, with the necessary Slides, Gas Bags, and Oxygen complete, for Schools, Lectures, and Schools. Lists sent on application.—SOLOMONS, 39, Allendale-street, Finsbury. Catalogue gratis.

SPECTACLES.—TINTED SPECTACLES recommended by the most eminent Oculists, and supplied by Vincent Pellamore. They give extraordinary relief to weak, dim, and sore eyes, and are the best preservers of sight ever invented, which by experience proves to be indeed, of such universal benefit to the Firm, who has had great experience and practice, already to this effect.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Foubert's-place, Regent-street.

DEAFNESS.—The SOUND MAGNIFIER and INVISIBLE VOICE CONDUCTOR, for Deafness. It fits into the ear entirely out of sight, and is unfelt when in use. It enables deaf persons to hear distinctly at church and at public meetings.—S. and H. SOLOMONS, 39, Foubert's-place, Regent-street.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. W. HAWLEY manufactures Thomas Hawley's many-year watches, and Astronomical Regulators, Turret Clocks, Church Clocks, Electric Clocks, Chronometers, Watches, and Chronometer Escapements. W. Regent-field Watches, £3 15s. to £20; Silver Watches, £2 15s. to £12 12s. High-class Watches, Gold Keyless, Chronometer, and half-chron., £2 2s. and upwards.—Frederic Hawley, Watch-maker, Clock-maker, and Optician, 37, Gracechurch-street, Established nearly a century. Illustrated price-list sent free by post.

GOLD CHAINS and FINE JEWELLERY.—A very elegant STOCK of GOLD CHAINS, Bracelets, Brooches, Lockets, Rings, Studs, Sleeve Links, Albert Bracelets, &c., to 15-gn., Gold Bracelets, 5s. to £20; Wedding and Keeper Rings, 5s. to £10; Lockets, 5s. to £10; Gold Earrings, 5s. 6d. to £10; Jet Jewellery, Gold Lockets, 9s. to 30s.; Gold Brooches, 5s. to £10; Gold Studs, 5s. to £10; Gold Albert Chains, 30s. to £10; Engraving, Chasing, Repairing, and Manufacturing. Previous Stones purchased or taken in exchange. Jewellery repaired and Diamonds reset.—Frederic Hawley, Watch-maker, Clock-maker, and Optician, 37, Gracechurch-street.

DENT. Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, to the Emperor of Russia, and to the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, 33, Strand (adjoining Coutts's Bank), and 34 and 35, Royal Exchange.

THE PRETTIEST GIFT FOR A LADY is a Gem of Jewellery, and the best Gem of all is a Gentleman, at £10 10s. Rewarded at the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862. Illustrated Pamphlet free by post.—JOSEPH GILLOTT, 37, Gracechurch-street, London.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—"The movements are of the finest quality which the art of horology is at present capable of producing."—Morning Advertiser, July 19, 1862. Watches, adapted for every clime, climate, and country, from 5 to 500 guineas.

	Gold Cases.		Silver.
Benson's London Made Lever Watches.	Gen. Face.	Hunters.	Open Face.	Hunters.
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Patent lever, lever fall, 4 holes	10 10 0	11 11 0	5 5 0	6 6 0
Patent lever, full jewelled	12 12 0	13 13 0	7 7 0	8 8 0
Patent lever, eight jewels	14 14 0	15 15 0	9 9 0	10 10 0
Patent lever, chronometer	16 16 0	17 17 0	10 10 0	11 11 0
Do., extra jewelled	18 18 0	19 19 0	12 12 0	13 13 0
Do., extra, ten jewels	21 0 0	22 0 0	15 15 0	16 16 0
Do., chronometer balance	25 0 0	26 0 0	18 18 0	20 0 0
Do., highly finished	30 0 0	32 0 0	21 0 0	22 0 0

Benson's Illustrated Pamphlet (free by post for two stamps) contains a Short History of Watches, and Directions how to choose a watch who live in any part of the world to select a watch and have it sent safely by post. Benson's Steam Factory, Old Bond-street, and Ludgate-hill, London. Established 1749.

SLACKS' SILVER ELECTRO-PLATE is equal in wear to sterling silver.
Per Dozen. Fiddle Pattern. Full Per
Table Forks .. £ s. d. £ s. d. Pattern. Fiddle. Thread. Shell.
Table Spoons .. 1 16 0 .. 2 12 0 .. 3 0 0 .. 3 10 0
Dessert Forks .. 1 6 0 .. 1 16 0 .. 2 0 0 .. 2 10 0
Dessert Spoons .. 1 6 0 .. 1 16 0 .. 2 0 0 .. 2 10 0
Tea Spoons .. 0 12 0 .. 0 16 0 .. 1 0 0 .. 1 4 0
Tea Trays, Kettles, Cruets, Liqueurs, Cake Baskets, &c.
Richard and John Slack, 336, Strand, London. Established 1818.

ICE for TOWN or COUNTRY.—Refrigerators, Ice-cream Machines, Freezing Powder, and everything connected with freezing, of the best, most modern, and reliable character. Specimens, Illustrated Price-lists, with full particulars, free.—WYMARK BROS. ICE COMPANY, 166, Strand, London.

COVERS for FAMILY JARS, or Jars and Covers complete, for Preserves, Pickles, &c. Illustrations and Prices sent free.—WILLIAM POWELL, Crane-road Wharf, Lambeth, S. Empty zinc tops free for your address.

NEW CHÊNÉ SILKS, 22 9s. 6d. the Dress, 11 yards. Patterns free.
Rich Glacés, in 41 new colours, 42s. 6d. Full Dress.
PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 106, Oxford-street, W.

NEW FOULARDS.
His season's patterns only.
Chalet, Checked, and Striped, from 29s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

MOIRE ANTIQUES,
Black, White, and Coloured.
A Large and Choice Assortment at all prices.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

A PURCHASE OF
20750 METRES OF FRENCH GRENADINES.
Last Lot—5000 Metres Only .. .. 12s. 6d. Full Dress.
Last Lot—5000 Metres Only .. .. 18s. 6d.
Last 5—7750 ,, (Rich Brochés, all silk) 35s. 6d. ,,
Bought under the most favourable circumstances, are perfect novelties, and well adapted for dinner, evening, or summer wear; purchased at less than half their former value. Also, 2000 Pieces, A large assortment of Patterns sent free to any part of the country.
PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

MOZAMBIQUE BAREGE,
9s. 9d. to 18s. 6d. the Extra Full Dress.
Also, Embroidered Robes, from 21s.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

ALL LAST YEAR'S FRENCH ORGANDIE MUSLINS perfectly fresh, and many of the patterns equal to those now sold at double the price.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

WATERPROOF and TRAVELLING CLOAKS.
The Paletot, Chesterfield, and Guards.
PETER ROBINSON'S.
Illustrations, with prices and patterns of material, sent free.
103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, Oxford-street, W.

DURING JULY
PETER ROBINSON will offer for Sale the Stock of ALEXANDRE BERGOUNIOUX of a Paris manufacturer, Greatly reduced in price, consisting of 1000 pieces of rich Glacé Silks, in the most elegant styles of the season, and in every variety of fashionable colours. These beautiful Manufs, usually priced at 2l 5s to 3l Dresses, will be sold for 1l 19s 6d the Full Dress. Patterns sent free, with Illustration of Mantles and Dressmade in fashionable wear.
PETER ROBINSON'S,
103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

WASHING GRENADINES (Pure White), 9s. 9d. to 18s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Also, Embroidered Robes, from 21s. to 2 guineas.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

FAMILY MOURNING.
Families about to adopt Mourning Apparel will find
100 and 101, REGENT-STREET,
General Mourning Warehouse
the most economical House in the trade.
The largest stock in London of Ready-made and Ready-trimmed, suited for immediate wear; also, the most extensive stock of goods in Crape, and other fabrics, and textures, made on the shortest notice.
Dressmakers and French Milliners of known reputation are always engaged.
Orders by note or telegram from any part, however distant, will be faithfully and promptly executed. Patterns and outline sent free. Goods forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, accompanied by a Tradesman.—Address
JAMES LUCKE and CO.,
General Mourning Warehouse,
100 and 101, Regent-street, London.

BLACK SILKS—IMPORTANT to Buyers of Black Silks.—Owing to the great advance now being made in Silks, the Proprietors of PETER ROBINSON'S would respectfully invite the attention of Ladies to his very large Stock of the best description of Black Silks, purchased before the advance, when the markets were at their lowest, feeling sure he can save them considerably in the present purchase of Silks.
Rich Black Glacés, at 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, 3l 5s, 3l 10s, 3l 15s, and 4l 4s. For 14 yards.
Rich Black Glacés, at 1l 19s 6d, 2l 2s 6d, 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, and 3l 5s. For 14 yards.
Very Rich Black Antiques, at from 2l guineas to 3l guineas.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, London.

INDIA SHAWLS.—FARMER and ROGERS beg to call attention to their magnificent variety of CASHMERE SHAWLS, including every description manufactured in India, and which they have imported direct from the Looms of Wellington persons.—India Shawl Warehousemen by Appointment to her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, 171, 173, 175, 177, Regent-street.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS!
ANOTHER PURCHASE OF FOREIGN and BRITISH SILKS
Several lots of Rich Glacé Silks, Checks, and Stripes,
Suitable for Dinner, Evening, or Morning Wear,
At 2s. 6d. per inch, both sides alike.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, in 1854, 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, from 2s. 6d. per yard.
Wide-width FIGURED GLACÉS (very bright), in the New Colours, 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
MILLINERY SILKS in the Newest Colours, SATINS, TURKEY SATINS, and VELVETS.
Patterns free.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., 76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and 76, 77, and 78, Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

GREAT SALE of LINENDRAPERY. SHEETINGS, TABLE LINENS, and LINENS. IMMEDIATE SALE OF THE ENTIRE STOCK, amounting to over £100,000, selected from the Manufacturers' Stocks, Cheap Linens, Calicos, Flannels, Ribbons, Laces, Hosiery, Gloves, and Fancy Goods in great variety.
Upwards of 15 Acres of Goods.
Thousands of this Season's new Prints.
French Jackets and back-top goods half price.
Linen Collars and Cuffs, 1s. per dozen.
Linen for Shirts, 1s. per yard.
Ladies leaving town will find bargains.
Country Orders carefully executed.
Patterns of the Silk Stock and Catalogues post-free.
Address—JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and
76 and 78, Paul's-churchyard.

RICH SILKS and SUMMER STOCK, AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
PETER ROBINSON'S
respectfully invites the attention of Ladies to their usual sale at the season of the year, they are SELLING the WHOLE of their SUMMER and FANCY STOCK at greatly reduced prices, in order that they may effect the immediate sale prior to the close of the season.
Rich Glacé Silks, in all the New Colours, at 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, 3l 5s, 3l 10s, 3l 15s, and 4l 4s. For 14 yards.
Rich Glacé Silks, in all the New Colours, at 1l 19s 6d, 2l 2s 6d, 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, and 3l 5s. For 14 yards.
Mantles, &c., will positively be sold at half their former prices.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.
N.B.—The cut lengths of Silks being marked at about half their former price.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS!
ANOTHER PURCHASE OF
Moiré Antiques, Brocades, Checks, Stripes, and Plaids,
Suitable for Dinner, Evening, or Morning Wear,
At 2s. 6d. per inch, both sides alike.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, in 1854, 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, from 2s. 6d. per yard.
Wide-width FIGURED GLACÉS (very bright), in the New Colours, 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
MILLINERY SILKS in the Newest Colours, SATINS, TURKEY SATINS, and VELVETS.
Patterns free.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., 76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and 76, 77, 78, and 79, Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

GREAT SALE of LINENDRAPERY. SHEETINGS, TABLE LINENS, and LINENS. IMMEDIATE SALE OF THE ENTIRE STOCK, amounting to over £100,000, selected from the Manufacturers' Stocks, Cheap Linens, Calicos, Flannels, Ribbons, Laces, Hosiery, Gloves, and Fancy Goods in great variety.
Upwards of 15 Acres of Goods.
Thousands of this Season's new Prints.
French Jackets and back-top goods half price.
Linen Collars and Cuffs, 1s. per dozen.
Linen for Shirts, 1s. per yard.
Ladies leaving town will find bargains.
Country Orders carefully executed.
Patterns of the Silk Stock and Catalogues post-free.
Address—JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and
76 and 78, Paul's-churchyard.

RICH SILKS and SUMMER STOCK, AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
PETER ROBINSON'S
respectfully invites the attention of Ladies to their usual sale at the season of the year, they are SELLING the WHOLE of their SUMMER and FANCY STOCK at greatly reduced prices, in order that they may effect the immediate sale prior to the close of the season.
Rich Glacé Silks, in all the New Colours, at 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, 3l 5s, 3l 10s, 3l 15s, and 4l 4s. For 14 yards.
Rich Glacé Silks, in all the New Colours, at 1l 19s 6d, 2l 2s 6d, 2l 5s, 2l 10s, 2l 15s, 3l, and 3l 5s. For 14 yards.
Mantles, &c., will positively be sold at half their former prices.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.
N.B.—The cut lengths of Silks being marked at about half their former price.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS!
ANOTHER PURCHASE OF
Moiré Antiques, Brocades, Checks, Stripes, and Plaids,
Suitable for Dinner, Evening, or Morning Wear,
At 2s. 6d. per inch, both sides alike.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, in 1854, 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
Wide-width BLACK GLACÉS, in the new shades, from 2s. 6d. per yard.
Wide-width FIGURED GLACÉS (very bright), in the New Colours, 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 3s. 11d., and upwards per yard.
MILLINERY SILKS in the Newest Colours, SATINS, TURKEY SATINS, and VELVETS.
Patterns free.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., 76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and 76, 77, 78, and 79, Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

GREAT SALE of LINENDRAPERY. SHEETINGS, TABLE LINENS, and LINENS. IMMEDIATE SALE OF THE ENTIRE STOCK, amounting to over £100,000, selected from the Manufacturers' Stocks, Cheap Linens, Calicos, Flannels, Ribbons, Laces, Hosiery, Gloves, and Fancy Goods in great variety.
Upwards of 15 Acres of Goods.
Thousands of this Season's new Prints.
French Jackets and back-top goods half price.
Linen Collars and Cuffs, 1s. per dozen.
Linen for Shirts, 1s. per yard.
Ladies leaving town will find bargains.
Country Orders carefully executed.
Patterns of the Silk Stock and Catalogues post-free.
Address—JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
76, 77, 78, and 79, Old Bond-street, and
76 and 78, Paul's-churchyard.

END OF THE SEASON.
KING and CO. are SELLING OFF
The Ancient Machine at 3s. 11½d., the Full Dress.
Worth treble the money.
Finest Organdie Muslins, in every broad grace, 12s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to King and Co., 243, Regent-street.

KING and CO.—ROBE and SKIRT DEPARTMENT.
Richly-trimmed Black Lyons Silk Robe.
Bodice and Trimming complete, 21 guineas.
Rich Drap de Lyon Robe in all Colours, of elegant design.
Bodice and Trimming complete, 21 guineas.
Ball and Dinner Dresses, in Tarlatan, Tulle, and Crape.
Designed for the present season, in patterns.
Travelling and Seaside Costumes, of Arabian Cloth and other fabrics, tastefully arranged, complete, 25 7s. 6d.
Patterns of Materials and Impression of style of above sent post-free.—Address as above.

NEW AUTUMN SILKS.
KING and CO., Silk Department, Regent-street.
106, 6d. the Full Dress.
Checked Silks, 4l 4s.
Striped Silks, 4l 4s.
Checked Silks, 4l 4s.
41 10s.
Moiré Antiques,
Brocaded Drap de Lyons,
4l 4s.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address as above.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
KING and CO., BLACK SILK DEPARTMENT.
Black Glacés,
96, 6d. the Full Dress.
Black Brocaded Silks,
Checked Silks,
Black Glacés,
Black Gros Grains,
£2 2s.
Black Drap de Lyons,
£2 2s.
Rich Black Brocaded Silks,
£2 12s.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address as above King and Co., Regent-st., London.

LOTS OF LAST AUTUMN SILKS, all at £2 2s. 6d. Single-dress lengths of Rich Chêné, reduced to £1 15s. 6d. Rich Black Corah Silks, all at £2 2s. 6d.
Patterns free.—LEWIS, Silkmercer, Oxford-street.

WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, Waterproof Clothing Jackets, Scraps, Fine Tweeds and Linsey Woolseys for Ladies' Travelling and Seaside Dresses.
Illustrated Price-list sent free.
JAMES LUCKE and CO.,
Waterproof Manufacturers,
By appointment to the Queen and the Princess of Wales,
117, 119, and 127, Regent-street, London.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRT.—Patterns of the Fifty Varieties kept in stock for immediate choice, and to measure from Stock, sent to select from on receipt of three stamps.
Illustrated Price-list sent free.—FORD'S EUREKA, London, E.C.

SCOTT ADIE, by special Appointment to her Majesty and H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, has on view the Largest Stock of Tartan Shawls and Dress Fabrics and confidentially has selected, after full enquiry and attention, the most approved Tartans for Ladies, Gentlemen, Children, Pipe Bands, Fife Bands, and Regiments, and the above must be ordered.—15, Regent-street (entrance, corner of Vigo-street).

NOTICE.—PROFESSOR BROWNE respectfully begs to inform Gentlemen in search of an improved System of Hair Dressing, Parades, Scalps, and Ornamental Hair of every design, equal to Nature, to visit PROFESSOR BROWNE'S Lower Establishment, 47, Piccadilly-street, City. Specimens can also be seen at his Residence, 20, Hanover-square, Regent-street. Invigorating Mixture, Curling and Beautifying Fluids, with the strong guarantee of the first quality for self-recommendation.—See "Punch."

KNAPSACK.—THE PATENT YOKE, 1s. Each. Knapsacks, Valises, Portmanteaus, Travelling Bags, Straps, Leather Goods, and Waterproof Clothing of every description. Illustrated Price-list sent free.—WILLIAM and SIR WISEMAN, 4, Bishopsgate-street Within, E.C.; and Works, Silvertown.

JENNER and KNEWSTUB, to the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and to all crowned heads, continue to make the finest-toned Breathing-organs; Travelling, Dressing, and Writing Bags; Dressing-cases, Work-boxes, Envelope-cases, Tablets, and every description of Morocco and Mounting Pocket-Book and Purse-maker. Lists free.—Jenner and Knewstub (two Prize Medals awarded 1862), 33, St. James's-street, and 1, Piccadilly, London.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST IN HAIR. DEWDNEY beautifully makes and mounts in fine gold HAIR BRACELETS, BROOCHES, RINGS, and LOCKETS, and thereby saves the same at about one half the usual charge. An elegant selection of Hair Jewellery always on view and for sale. Hair Jewellery, the assortment of which is unrivalled, at 2, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square. Hair Pendants Bold with pat-free.—Dewdney, 19, Finchurch-street, London.

CREAM OF LILIES, for beautifying and improving the Complexion, Neck, and Shoulders, 2s. 6d. per bottle.—NAPOLEON PRICE and CO., 27, Old Bond-street.

NAPOLEON PRICE'S REGISTERED GOLDEN OIL is the only article that really possesses the extraordinary property of restoring the hair to its original hue. Price 6s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. per bottle. Sold by all Perfumers and Chemists, and at 27, Old Bond-st., 96, Sackville-st., and 24, Regent-circus, Piccadilly.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
Awarded Prize Medal, 1862.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN PLASTER, in box, 7½d.—YOUNG'S ARNICATED BUNION PLASTER, in box, 7½d. Sent post-free for 8 and 14 stamps. Observe the trade mark, H. X.—31, Shaftesbury-place, City.

DYSPEPSIA.—MORSONS' PEPSINE WINE is a powerful, palatable, and wholesome tonic for popular remedy. Manufactured by T. Morson and Son, 124 and 86, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W.C. Sold in bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 9s. each. Pepsine Lozenges, in boxes, at 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. each.

DR. DE JONGH'S (Knight of the Order of Leopold)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL, prescribed universally by the Faculty throughout the Kingdom, as the purest, most efficacious, speedy, and only safe remedy for CONSUMPTION, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, ASTHMA, CATARRH, BRONCHITIS, GOUT, GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, CHILDREN, AND ALL CONSTITUTIONS WHERE A PURE COD-LIVER OIL is unsurpassably superior to every other variety.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.
"It is, I believe, the purest Oil."—Dr. de Jongh's Medical Officer of Health to the City of London.
"It is, I believe, the purest Oil."—Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil is the best I have ever taken, after very investigation, I have no doubt of its being a pure and unadulterated article."
DR. LANKACRE.
Physician to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, Chelsea and Goslen.
"I invariably prescribe Dr. de Jongh's Cod-liver Oil in preference to any other, feeling assured that it is a genuine and unadulterated article, and not a manufactured compound in which the chemist of the present day is so frequently skilled."
DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in capsuled Imperial Half-pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; and in sealed Flasks, with Capsule and Label, bearing the name of the sole Consignees, ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON

NEW MUSIC.

MEYERBEER'S L'ETOILE DU NORD. The Opera complete, with Italian and English words, and Pianoforte Accompaniment. Price 36s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CALLCOTT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD.—All the favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera, arranged for the Pianoforte, in three books, price 3s. each; ditto, as Duets, 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S POLKA MAZURKA, or VARSOVIENNE, from "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SCENE MILITAIRE, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord," Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA PRIÈRE DE CATHERINE and Barcarole, from "L'Etoile du Nord." Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA MARCHE DU SACRE, or Peter the Great's March, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord," Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FANTASIA BRILLIANT. For the Pianoforte. On favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's great Opera "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CONRADI'S GRAND MARCH from "L'Etoile du Nord." For Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S LA BELLE CATHERINE WALTZ. On Airs from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 4s. Solo or Duet.
CHAPPELL and CO., New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Solo or Duet. Beautifully illustrated. On favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera. Price 4s. Solo or Duet.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GALOP FROM L'ETOILE DU NORD. Price 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIECES ON GOUNOD'S FAUST.
ASCHER'S PENSÉE DRAMATIQUE SUR FAUST. Opera, by Ch. GOUNOD.
Post 2s Piano. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S FAUST.—Just published, a Selection on favourite melodies from Gounod's celebrated and popular Opera. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. Just out, Part of the Cavé Galops ever published, and beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Fordham, H. and J. Mather, Wells, Custance, and Chaloner. From photographs by Mayer, of Brighton.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Prince and Princess of Wales. Just published. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS, Just published. A new set of Lancers, composed on all the popular airs of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s. Solo; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIG. GIGGLIN'S NEW SONG.
FIGLIA DERINA. Romanza. Composed by the Sole Author and sung by Sig. Giuglini with the greatest possible success. Price, in F or D, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE VALLEY (LE VALLON). New Song. Composed by Gounod and sung by Mme. Sainton-Dolby and Mr. Santley. Price, with English and French words, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S New Song written by H. F. CHORLEY, and composed by Signor ARDITI, in C, D, or E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MENDELSSOHN'S ATHALIE.
Just ready,
A new cheap Edition for Voice and Piano. 4s.
London: EWER and CO., 390, Regent-street.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LES HUGUENOTS Brilliant Fantasia. Decidedly the best that has been written on Meyerbeer's magnificent Opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GOLDEN BELLS. A most attractive, elegant, and brilliant piece, calculated to become a favourite. "La Harpe Eolienne." Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PAS REDOUBLÉ. A very spirited and highly effective martial piece. Played by the military bands with great success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE NUIT ÉTOILÉE, Brilliant and charming Study. One of the most successful pieces by this unquestionably popular composer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MARTHA. A new and most admirable piece on the best airs in Flotow's melodious and popular opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season."—Illustrated London News. 28th Edition. Price 4s.; Duet, 5s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA VIVACITÉ. Polka de Concert. "Displays the composer at all the principal requisites of the season with immense success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING.—GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdme. Parepa, with unparalleled success. For Soprano or Tenor. Price 3s.
KUHE'S brilliant Transcription for Pianoforte Solo. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for Piano. By E. L. HIME. Played by Master Willie Pape before the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House. "One of the most completely romance we have ever heard."—Review. Post 24 stamps.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, by J. PITTMAN FLOYER, for the Piano, one of the best of Diver's celebrated marches. Sent for 15 stamps.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
"The music of 'Mirella' is as good as that of 'Faust;' perhaps in some respects better."—Daily News.
"The music of 'Mirella' will add another gemmine and charming work."—The Times.
"The music of 'Mirella' will as surely make its way with the public as that of 'Faust.'"—Standard.
"A capital opera. No living man could write anything for the stage more suitable than 'Mirella.'"—Sunday Times.
"We have to thank Mr. Harrison for giving us an opportunity of hearing the last work of one who certainly now is the greatest living operatic composer."—Saturday Review.
The whole of the music may be had of every Musicseller in the United Kingdom.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." The principal pieces of the entire work are in sub. books, price 1s.
MIRELLE: TITIENS.—"Non mais il sera." 3s.
MIRELLE: TREBELLI.—"Il adagino sempre." 2s. 6d.
MIRELLE: VOLPINI.—Father Passient (Shepherd's Song), 2s. 6d.
MIRELLE: SANTLEY.—Vincarlo (Fisherman's Song), 2s.
MR. SANTLEY'S VINCARLO and RIGHIN, 2s. each.
MR. SANTLEY'S "Ah, doutai" (Mirella), Nos. 1 to 7, 2s. 6d.
THE OPENING CHORUS at 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40,

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, K.C.B.

THE opening of Japan to English commerce is a most beneficial achievement of the last ten years. No small part of the merit of this result is due to the exertions of Sir Rutherford Alcock, formerly the British Consul at Simoda, and now her Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of the Tycoon. Captain Sherard Osborn, in his pleasant little volume of "Japanese Fragments," relates the events of 1853, when the American squadron of Commodore Perry had so intimidated the rulers of Japan, that they were fain to grant access for foreign vessels to the ports of Hakodadi and Simoda, though no relaxation was yet allowed of the jealous restrictions upon foreign trade. It was, we believe, by the efforts of Mr. Harris, the American Consul, and of Mr. Rutherford Alcock, the English Consul, previous to Lord Elgin's mission, in 1858, that the hostility of the Japanese official authorities was overcome, and a way prepared for the conclusion of the international treaty. Sir Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., having received the honour of knighthood with his present diplomatic appointment, during his sojourn at home last year, has lately returned to Japan; and we published two months ago, from the sketch by our own Artist, an Engraving which represented the ceremonial of his landing at Nangasaki. We now give his Portrait from a photograph by Signor Beato, a photographer residing at Yokohama.

SCENES IN JAPAN: A PARTY AT THEIR MEALS.

WE give another Illustration of the daily life of the Japanese people, from a sketch by Mr. Wirgman, our Special Artist. It represents a Japanese dinner-party kneeling at their little tables, one of which is set before each guest, and helping themselves, by the use of a pair of chopsticks, to such fragments of meat as they can fish up out of their soup-basins; whilst we perceive that one gentleman, having done with his chopsticks, is raising the bason to his mouth that he may drink its liquid contents. The lady at the head of the table, with characteristic politeness, refrains from eating till her visitors are served. A couple of handmaidens are bringing in some addition to the repast.

THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S GARDENS.

THE RECENT ADDITIONS.

WE have engraved, in six compartments, on another page, some graphic illustrations of a few of the minor novelties recently added to the Zoological Society's extensive collection of living animals in Regent's Park Gardens. These have all been imported from various parts of the American continent, and the greater part of them represent species which had previously been brought alive to this country.

The blue tanager (Orchesticus ater), and the pileated jay (Cyanocorax cyanopogon), are both from the forests of Brazil. The tanager belongs to a large group of fruit-eating birds, which forms one of the most characteristic families of these regions. This jay, though a member of a different group from our familiar English bird, possesses the same lively habits, and much of the same bright colouring as his well-known congener of this country. The woodpecker, on the other hand, is from the more northern forests of the New World. In the backwoods of the United States this bird is one of the best-known and most widely-distributed species of its tribe. It is generally known as the "Flicker" from its peculiar flight, or the "Golden-shafted" woodpecker, from the brilliant golden colouring of the stems of its wing-feathers. In the centre of our Engraving are two species of mammals, both of which, likewise, are essentially forest-loving creatures, as are nearly all the animals of the New World. The Brazilian monkey (Pithecia Satanas) is from the banks of the Amazon; the opossum (Didelphys virginiana), which is represented with its numerous family of young ones clinging around it, is from the Southern States of the great Northern division of the American continent. The species portrayed in the lower figure are all from the tropical part of the New World. The cuckoo (Guvia piririgua) is of very lively and peculiar habits, and may be seen continually running about—for it is essentially a terrestrial bird—with a piece of gravel or stick in its mouth. The troniel (Cacicus pericus) is one of a singular group of American birds, remarkable for their ingenuity in weaving long pendent nests. The whistling duck (Dendrocygna arbores), from Jamaica; and the little green bittern, from Para (Ilutorides virescens), do not differ materially from their well-known allies of the same groups in habits, but are both of them ornamental additions to the society's series of living animals, which now embraces upwards of 1700 individuals from all parts of the world.

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, K.C.B., OUR ENVOY PLENIPOTENTIARY IN JAPAN.
FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY F. BEATO, OF YOKOHAMA.

THE MONKEY-HOUSE.

The new monkey-house is now completed as regards its internal fittings, and will henceforth be occupied by their large collection of individuals of the lively and amusing tribe of animals for whose special accommodation it is intended. It is shown in the Illustration on page 84. The building, which has been constructed for the society by Messrs. Lucas, the well-known contractors, was designed by Mr. Anthony Salvine, jun. It is in the form of a large and airy conservatory; the back, towards the north, is brick, but all the remaining sides and the roof are entirely of iron and glass. This new house, which has been erected on one of the best sites in the society's premises, will replace that which was, perhaps, one of the most defective buildings in the society's establishment. The closed, windowless place which has been for some years devoted to the exhibition of monkeys has long been condemned as objectionable in many respects, and that building is, moreover, fissured in a dangerous way, from having been erected upon imperfect foundations. The present building is constructed upon entirely different principles. The chief object aimed at in the new monkey-house has been to give the animals as much light and sun as possible; and though it has been objected that a building of glass and iron is likely to prove hot in summer and cold in winter, it is believed that both these inherent defects will be remedied in the present instance—the first, by the introduction of creepers and plants and by the great care taken to ensure ventilation; and the second by the use of the same hot-water warming apparatus that has been found so efficient in other of the society's buildings. It is also hoped that the new monkey-house will be free from the bad odours which no amount of care had succeeded in removing from the building formerly inhabited by the monkeys.

THE MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON.

IN our last Number, with which was issued a large Coloured Engraving, to form a special Illustration of the picturesque and lively scene on Wimbledon-common, we described the arrangements of the Volunteer Camp, and the conditions of all the shooting-matches appointed for this year's meeting. We now present one or two other Illustrations; a view of some groups of riflemen listening to the band of the London Scottish during their noonday interval of repose; and a view of the conveyance field railway which we mentioned last week, with the passengers seated on each side of the car, which is drawn by a single horse of the Military Train. These Engravings do not seem to require much comment or explanation, and we may proceed to report the practical business of the meeting, which commenced on Tuesday week. Guided by the experience of former years, the Council had adopted a plan comprehensive as well as perfect in all its details. We may remark, especially, their introduction of Captain Hill's admirable system of disc-marking, to avoid the continual breaks-down which occurred to some extent the success of the meeting of last year. Another feature of the present year's competition is that the rival systems of the target and board targets now have a fair trial. In Captain M'Gregor's 200 and 500 sweepstakes targets, card-board and the concentric system are both on their trial. The Moving-Man target was liberally patronised, and promises to be very popular; while the time of ten seconds allowed from the "Ready!" to the "Present!" is calculated to produce quick as well as sure marksmen. The Running Deer had also lost none of its popularity; and there was a new and more satisfactory system of pool targets, approved by the rapidity with which white gained tiles were dropped behind the aperture, instead of the old white plates placed in a fork in front of the targets.

The competition for the Association's Enfield Prize Cup at 200 and 500 yards was commenced in the afternoon of Tuesday week. The Middlesex bronze medal, which, together with the medal and £3, entitles the winner to compete for the Prince of Wales's prize, was also contested at ranges of 200, 500, and 600 yards. It was won by Lieutenant Hopkins, 41st Middlesex. The Oxford and Cambridge bronze medal was won by Ensign R. Thompson, 3rd Cambridgeshire (University), with a total of 44, Captain Edward Dowson coming next with 42 marks. The ranges were 200, 500, and 600 yards, and the highest score on the side of Oxford was 34 marks. Another well-contested match on Tuesday week was the All-Comers' County Match, ten men from each county, with seven shots each, at 900 yards. Four counties entered—viz., Lancaster, Middlesex, Gloucestershire, and, for the first time, Derbyshire. The result of the shooting was—Lancashire, 495; Middlesex, 482; Gloucestershire, 480; and Derbyshire, 425. The weather was fine, and a large number of visitors was present.

On the second day (Wednesday week) the Common was on a very gay appearance, flags of all nations fluttered from the tall flagstaffs and the summits of the tents, and all was bustle and excitement. The first match decided was that for the Prince of Wales's prize of £100, competed for by all winners of silver or bronze medals of the Association since the last Wimbledon meeting. The competition, restricted to bonâ fide long Enfield rifles, was at ranges of 200, 500, and 600 yards. The fortunate winner was Sergeant Dodd, 2nd Hereford, who made 15 at 200, 16 at 500, and 15 at 600 yards, an aggregate of 46 marks. The next highest scores were Lieutenant Mackenzie Ross, 16, 13, 16—total, 45; Lieutenant Hopkins, 41st Middlesex, 16, 14, 14—total, 44. The shooting for the Queen's prize, at 200 yards, was commenced on this day; but the highest scores made at that range were but 18 marks, whereas last year one competitor made five consecutive bull's-eyes, or 20 marks. The first-stage of the Alexandra prize competition, with centers, with the Enfield rifle, and the first stage of the contest with breech-loading rifles, five shots at 500 and 600 yards, for the prizes given by the Duke of Cambridge and Mr. Wetley Richards, were also commenced. The competition for some extra prizes began, and there was some good shooting made during the day at the Swiss targets. Lord Bury made eight consecutive bulls'-eyes after getting the elevation. So great has the general skill in rifle-shooting now become that pool-shooting does not offer the same amusement to crack shots as formerly. On the first day running-deer bulls'-eyes were scored. 21 10s., 200 yards Enfield pool-eyes 8s., and 300 yards 12s. 6d.; but they have been much reduced. During this day the "Coming-Man" target was almost inconveniently crowded.

JAPANESE PARTY AT MEALS—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

The attendance of visitors on Thursday was very numerous. The band of the London Scottish Rifles attended and played at intervals in front of the encampment. A large party of the men marched out of one of the cars on the tramway, causing a contused sound to one of the mules of Captain Sawyer, of the Hawkchurch Rifles, before the person was injured. Some excellent shooting was made at the Swiss targets; Captain Heaton, out of 27 shots, at 500 yards, made 26 bulls'-eyes, of which 15 were centers, and the central circle of seven inches diameter; Dr. Goodwin made out of sixteen shots fifteen bulls'-eyes, of which seven were cartons; Colonel Hilton Green made consecutive bulls'-eyes at 800 yards, Mr. Wells made sixteen consecutive bulls'-eyes, Mr. Rawson five consecutive cartons, and Captain Beattie Rose three consecutive cartons out of six bulls'-eyes. Lord Bury, Count de Gozzire, and others also made some good shooting. The "Coming Man" target was also crowded, and no rapidity was attained quickness for hitting him acquired that the size of the centre had to be reduced to make the pool more valuable.

The competition at 500 yards for the first stage of the Queen's prize was continued vigorously all day, till nearly half-past seven. The highest score made at this range was 19, three and two. Corporal Richardson, 3d Cambridge; Corporal C. E. Dunn, 7th Kent; and Lieutenant Hesketh, 37th Lancashire, being the persons who obtained that score. Ten competitors made 18, thirty-one 17, and fifty-nine 16 points each. For the Alexandra prize, at 500 yards, the highest score of 10 was made by Privates Sperry, 4th North York; there were two 18, seven scored 17, and eighteen 16 each. The competition for carbines with the artillery arm commenced at 500 yards, and was continued by the Duke of Cambridge's prize, for breechloaders, was concluded, Captain Edward Ross, Cambridge University, becoming the winner with 20 out of a possible score of 40 marks. Some excellent shooting had been made for the Enfield Association cup.

In the evening of this day camp fires were lighted for the first time, amidst scenes of good-humour and merriment, which offered an agreeable entertainment. A bonfire was lighted by Mr. Ellice, and Captain Drake, the proceedings were enlivened by Lord Bury, who sang "The gay cavalier." Lord Aberdeen also took part in this accomplished concert; Lord Elcho begged to be excused, as the score of the vocalist's usual excuse—a severe cold; but a party of the Victorias waiting with much impatience for the popular air which "will come up." The company included Lord and Lady Elcho, Lord and Lady Bury, Lord Bolton, Earl Dacie, Lord Dufferin, Lord Fielding, Lord Aberdeen, and Captain Milbanke. It was pleasant to notice the spirit of fraternity, liberty, and equality which pervaded the whole meeting. Peer and peasant, soldier and civilian, met at the same opera cloaks and luce mantillas, and villagers from the neighbourhood in more humble garb; shoeblacks, and gentlemen in velvet coats and white cravats, telling of the dinner-table which they had deserted; volunteers in uniform of every shade and colour—Royal Scottish and Royal Irish, representatives of every county in the United Kingdom—all met upon equal terms, and enjoyed the fun and frolic, the like of which the good humour which prevailed at this merry meeting round the Wimbledon camp-fire.

Friday week was the most busy day of the meeting. It brought nearly to a close the first stage of the competition for the Queen's prize, at 600 yards, leaving only the ties to be shot off to determine places. It has been decided to increase the number of the Queen's prize was, after all, equal to that of last year; but, upon an examination of the statistics, it will be observed that such is the case. In 1863 the aggregate number of marks made by the first thirty for the Queen's prize was 1287; in 1864, the thirty highest made 1315—showing an increase this year of 28. The best 30 scores for the Queen's in 1863, a total of 1211, and the same class at the present meeting made 1315, being an increase of 104 marks. A fair inference from the improved shooting of the present meeting might be found in the fact that last year the targets were 8 ft. by 6ft.; but this year they are all reduced to 6ft. by 4ft., thereby lessening the space which they would count for cutters. Taking all these things into consideration, we find from these latter deterrents, that the shooting this year been a great improvement in the shooting; though many experienced shots affirmed on Friday that the mirage, or deceptive exhalations, produced by excessive heat, was the cause of many bad marks as to mustrate the aim of the steadiest marksmen, now leading them to over-aim and under-aim. But high scores have been made with their bullets to ricochet short of the target, and frequently disappearing in the short interval between—sometimes when the marksmen were also made of the constantly-changing state of the wind, which, although light, occasioned much inequality in the scoring.

During the dinner hour Lord Elcho addressed the volunteers, congratulating them on the satisfactory state of the movement, and giving them excellent advice. A camp concert was held in the evening to elicit opinions on certain practical matters. Lord Elcho submitted two points—one as to what kind of target out of the many kinds provided would be most suitable, and the other as to bands was almost unanimous for iron. The other was as to whether the long-range form of half-yearly prizes should be substituted to the concentric; the unanimous opinion of the meeting was in favour of the Hythe system. Lord Elcho, in the course of his speech, mentioned two instances of insubordination by volunteers to officers. In one case an apology had been given for the offensive expressions used; in the other he had been obliged to order withdrawal. He had no desire to mention names, and he hoped the volunteer in question might be induced to withdraw his resignation, as the propriety of setting himself right as much with his own comrades as with the Major of the 5th, whom he had offended. If, however, after sufficient time had been given, the volunteer persisted in the property of him who makes the highest score. The shooting was of a very superior kind. The highest score was made by Corporal Thornton, of the Cheltenham School, who made the large score of 20 marks. But, as he was rather above the talent of his competitors in the same school, they were compelled to give way to those from Harrow School, who gained the prize by 226 marks. Cheltenham making 218, thereby losing by 8 marks only. Rugby scored 205; Eton, 202; Winchester, 189; and Marlborough, 163. Earl Spencer's prize was then shot for by the highest from each school, and Corporal Thornton won it by 12 marks, after a very spirited contest.

The plate of Cambridge will distribute the prizes at a grand review this day (Saturday) at three o'clock.

We shall give some more illustrations of the Wimbledon Meeting in our next Number.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

As soon as the shooting at Wimbledon is over the collapse of the Session will be complete. As it is, the sittings in the Lower House have been kept together by forty-five members, twenty-five of whom shirk nately carry on in the chamber, while those off immediate duty are about and soothing themselves in the coolest places, ready, if necessary, to rush to the stalled votes. And hard enough have this chosen band worked; every man of them who professes talk doing a double share, and managing to keep up the game until houses are nominally counted out at two in the morning. The "perpetual partridge" of the debates has been rather troublesome to the ear of jaded listeners, but there is a freshness about the difficult subjects, and enthusiasm passes into the senses and subjects glide so into each other that all members leave with a jumble of political personal, and patriotic of course, matter mixed up inextricably in their ideas of an evening with the representatives of the people. One relaxation Parliament has in certain nights, inspired by some means or the other, was so enthusiastic that he spoke on every topic that was brought forward, and, the occasion presenting a number of different motions, his voice was perpetually booming through the more or less rarefied atmosphere of the House; and, in justice to him be it said, he delivered himself with equal force and authority on every subject which he took up, as might have been expected. Notably the two members for the Colonies have had a great deal to talk about, and in this sultry weather, on still afternoons, or stiller nights, or in the stilled hours of the morning, all the bumble-bee humbuz have buzzed and purred through the house with a continuity which has been sometimes irritating, but oftener pilfering the faculties of those about them, and causing somnolence. One evening, when he was discussing an important question of colonial policy to exactly twenty-five auditors, he asked, "Are you listening?" and, struck by his side charmed—not in the sweet sense of that word—into the deepest feeling of sleep. However, the Transportation Bill has been brought in, and then all talk, all dullness, "all thoughts, all passions, all delights," which belong to Parliament, which shuttle or stir it, have been suspended in the House, and the whole force of gabble to come off, which will be carried on by a small "corps d'élite" on both sides; and then the House will be cleared for the Wimbledon Meeting stragglers. A curiously dull and meaningless State paper will be pronounced by the Lord Chancellor, with his hat on the top of his wig, and in the Queen's name, and then there will be silence.

Talking of the Lord Chancellor, one is reminded that he has been the hero of another Parliamentary scene, which requires manner of supreme face. Having to deal with a difficult question, if it was taken up succinctly, facetiously, or with any approach to humour or originality, as was speaking dagger, though he was promising to use none. The Bishop of Oxford is a humorist, a wit; no man, clerical or lay, makes a better pun than he; a more genial, free, and charitable person He can let drop irony, and keen, polished, half-covert jests in a way that is a perpetual delight in conversation, in ordinary discussion, or in set debate, and it might have been thought that he would have been angry, and in a way that successes which was cognate to his own humour. Therefore it may be surprising that he got so irate, plunged so fiercely into a personal contest with the Chancellor, and showed so ungenially as he did that most of his antecedents in regard to manner, tone, and bearing. So acute and at the same practical a mind as his might well have been supposed to have been secretly in unison with the sentiments so loudly uttered by Lord Westbury as to the real character of Convocation; and perhaps he had his private and unofficial gibes at speech and rhetoric for the purpose of concealing his real thoughts about the matter in hand. But he was angry, and angry enough must be set to work to find the origin of his rage. Some people affect that it was turned at the notion that anybody hands should be threatened to be laid on his episcopal reverence by way of penalty for his exercising what he believed to be a strictly episcopal and constitutional function; but no one will for a moment credit this, because if he—a Bishop—believes that Convocation is a constitutional and ecclesiastical function, he cannot for a moment think any sacrifice of mere pelf too great to pay for the privilege of upholding a great right. Away, then, with this sordid notion! After mature reflection we think we have a clue to the Bishop's choler. Whether by accident or design, the Lord Chancellor, in speaking of the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury, used the word "sapsuckers." Now, everyone knows how easily the Bishop of Oxford can have himself called a spider by anybody personally to himself, when he is aware that a synonymous word, but one more in familiar coupled with his own cognomen. A very small piece of red cloth will rouse the fury of a previously quietly browsing bull of a pasture; but why press the female fancy? Let us at once dismiss the unchastened fire of the locks a body, and was eminently characteristic of the individuals engagedin it.

What a week the House of Commons has before it—Monday to Monday. There were at least four subjects for discussion, which at happier or unhappier times—as the case may be—would have occupied a night to each of them. They questions of foreign policy, colonial policy, fortifications—hitherto a vexed subject—New Zealand and the Gold Coast, and last and not the least the affairs of the Emirate, besides a vote for the purchase of those steam-rams which have been the cause of so much battery in Parliamentary committee, and which might have formed bases for a whole evening's talk in April. But, as the patriotic "fifty" who remain to sweep up the threads and ends of the session have determined to have nothing to companies, alternately occupying the stage after the manner of the actors who come on and off at the Drama's Free College Play, they will have to be content with a single sitting, and cropping supper. Hence talk, for good things there will be in a single sitting. In a moment of enthusiasm Mr. Osborne, one evening last week, threatened to bring on the subject of our relations with Brazil; and, though the Government may be supposed to have their hands full of his liking, as we suppose, he redeemed his promise, and made a very effective speech, but which was strictly serious. He did not make one positive joke, and only once he diverged into that by-play for which he is famous. This was remarkable, and people were inclined to parody the taunts which Shakespeare puts into the mouth of the Yorkists over the dead body of a chief of the Lancastrians—"How is it with him when Clifford cannot spare his friends an eye?" How is it with Mr. Osborne when he cannot emit a jest? But he did something, and that is remarkable for him; that is he was modest to a degree—we can use no other term—to Lord Palmerston. His first sentence remarks, hath as "Do you deny that?—I expected you to deny it;" were bad enough, but it was a little too much when the Premier, in a placable and quiet mood—he had laughed at the previous taunts hurled at him—said that he would not be provoked, that the member for Liskeard should not cry, in a tone and with an emphasis which to call offensive were to use the mildest term, "Be provoked, Harcourt!" Those who heard it who were not angry were sure; though perhaps, in such a case, sorrow would be received as rather a ridiculous exposition of feeling. There was good reason, however, for observations, and Mr. Osborne, Mr. Gregory, and others, on the marked change in the spirit in which Lord Palmerston spoke of Brazil to this occasion from that which characterised him on former such very recent discussions on this subject. It was the noble Lord's almost instinctive treatment of the Brazilian question a few days ago which brought on this motion, which, however, he contrived very effectually to drain away to nothing.

Things had, in fact, by no business-like in both houses, the process of packing up has been so assiduous, that there has been little verge for excitement beyond those which have been already alluded to. In the room in which the Commons sit were not one of the coolest in summer that is to be found anywhere, especially when it is so thinly inhabited as it is just now. It would seem to be a physical impossibility for the work to be got through which is nightly performed therein, with the thermometer under 80 degrees, and the windows open as wide as they when you have the advantage of breathing air which comes into windows after having passed through a tea of coal waggons, and when it were into spray, why, you can defy the influence of the solstice and do your duty to your country even in the last days of a July in London.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE Liverpool July meeting was a sad failure, both as regards racing and attendance, on the first day. Lord Derby's new race, called Stanley Cup, was beaten easily by Gontran; Ely gave Harkforward 6 lb. and disposed of him as he liked; the Cup was reduced to a start of three; and the rest of the meeting was the Queen's Plate, a race in which Gontran caught on the post and beaten by her six-year-old coverd Stanton, The Standard seeding fewer of the half of the leaders of the turf, but the fields in most of the races were not large. Viceroy, ridden by Sam Rogers in his first style, scored the race of the meeting against Gustance on Rialto; and, owing to the heavy, thorough-bottom breaking, Little Stag was overhauled by Young Rapid in the Cup.

The noncompletion of the three thousand guinea match (red—of the turf in 1866 have just closed. For the Derby there are 284, or 29 the scores of the Oaks are 182; and the Leger 240 to 240, although it must be remembered that the 1865 entries for the two latter races were the largest they ever had. The Two Thousand Guineas, run on the Wednesday, William Day entes twelve; and "Algar by Chevalier d'Industrie was Distin." The Newmarket Summer contributes.

A subscription has been raised for the widow and nine children of Mr. Hendrikson's late groom, and the Duke of St. Albans has headed it with £100.

The foolish attempt of the Worcester stewards to censure Lord Coleraine and withhold the stakes won by his horse Wingfield, ridden by Heath deprivation, unless he made due submission, has ended in their making an apology to the disobeying "their lordships," and everyone "that it cannot be justified." It seems that they took action in consequence of a letter from Lord Coventry to the effect "that the Race Committee are the sole judges of Weighing, and consequently of the disgraceful scene on Monday, which they attributed to the Birmingham people, headed by Mr. Tarratt." Lord Coventry, on the other hand, Coventry did not speak officially on behalf of the committee, "who are not desirous of interfering in matters not within their province;" and so there is no chance of the matter coming before the Jockey Club master of the situation and with a character for pithy letter-writing, which will not soon be forgotten.

Mr. Parker, of University College, Oxford, the late holder, was made from the Vice-Chancellor of his College to Wingfield Heath, or amateur championship of the Thames, this summer, and they were won very easily by Mr. W. B. Woodgate, who was also the winner in 1862. Mr. Parker's time was 20 min. 10 sec., and Mr. Woodgate's 21 succession.

The Rose v. Harrow match was attended by upwards of 16,000 people on the two days, and nearly £1000 were taken at the gates. Harrow won in one innings, thanks to the admirable batting of Messrs. Hankey, Bowen, Lang, and Lubbock, Kynaston, and Aubrett. On three occasions the match was not played out, and, comparing the last innings of the Rose with that of Harrow, by a majority of one. Tarratt's bowling on behalf of England played a great part with the thirteen of Bowen Jackson won very unanimous tonned honours with "sixty-eight, not out." We read in a sporting paper that another English eleven "will be invited over for the autumn of '65, to be composed that it shall consist of eleven and eight professionals; to wit, H. H. Stephenson (Captain), Carpenter, Hayward, Caffyn, Wisden, Grundy, Willsher, and Tarrant."

Otter-hunting assumed quite a new phase on the Teviot last Thursday, as the meet with Dr. Grant's rare little pack was attended by no less than seven packs of foxhounds, and, owing to the difficulty of hiring horses the numbers would have been swelled to a hundred. The otter was at half-past three, and they were sure that the master, on his chestnut "Robin" and in his Garibaldi shirt, never had better sport in all the time in the days of the stress. In addition to the horsemen there were upwards of 200 of the Hawick scorers, &c., with whom this is a peculiarly favourite sport. The otter, after a long run, took to the water somewhere near Ilton, escaped into a large covered drain, from which there was no getting it out, and left him. A second otter, which had been disturbed its night's fishing, was found soon after, and tallyhoed amid great excitement over the weir. Ringwood was swimming the drag of the pool to the left, and Rattler, Rallywood, and Rosebud to the right, no fairer hunter exists, declined to lift them and leave the old dog to get the otter. Ringwood by all the time in the line of the stream, and made a ring through several fields of oats and up the glen. She hardly pressed him—he had that he did not stay long in the river when he was pressed, but, when he escaped into a large covered drain, from which there was no getting him out, and left him. A second otter, which had disturbed its night's fishing, was found soon after, and tallyhoed amid great excitement over the weir. Ringwood was swimming the drag of the pool to the left, and Rattler, Rallywood, and Rosebud to the right, no fairer hunter exists, declined to lift them and leave the old dog to get the otter. Ringwood by all the time in the line of the stream, and made a ring through several fields of oats and up the glen. She hardly pressed him—he had that he did not stay long in the river when he was pressed, but, when he escaped into a large covered drain, from which there was no getting him out, and left him. A second otter, which had disturbed its night's fishing, was found soon after, and tallyhoed amid great excitement over the weir. Ringwood was swimming the drag of the pool to the left, and Rattler, Rallywood, and Rosebud to the right, no fairer hunter exists, declined to lift them and leave the old dog to get the otter. Ringwood by all the time in the line of the stream, and made a ring through several fields of oats and up the glen. She hardly pressed him—he had that he did not stay long in the river when he was pressed, but, when he escaped into a large covered drain, from which there was no getting him out, and left him.

METROPOLITAN RAILWAYS.—THE INNER CIRCLE.

The line sanctioned by Lord Stanley's committee commences by a double junction with the Great Western Railway, one line from the Hammersmith and Kensington, and, passing through Earl's-court, joins a connection with the Kensington Extension Railway at Addison-road Kensington, where there is an exchange-station, and by another fork runs to a Kensington-road, where another exchange-station is made, and thence it continues parallel to the Metropolitan Extension Railway to Aldersgate-street, where the Inner Circle Railway of the Metropolitan Extension Railway is intended to be made.

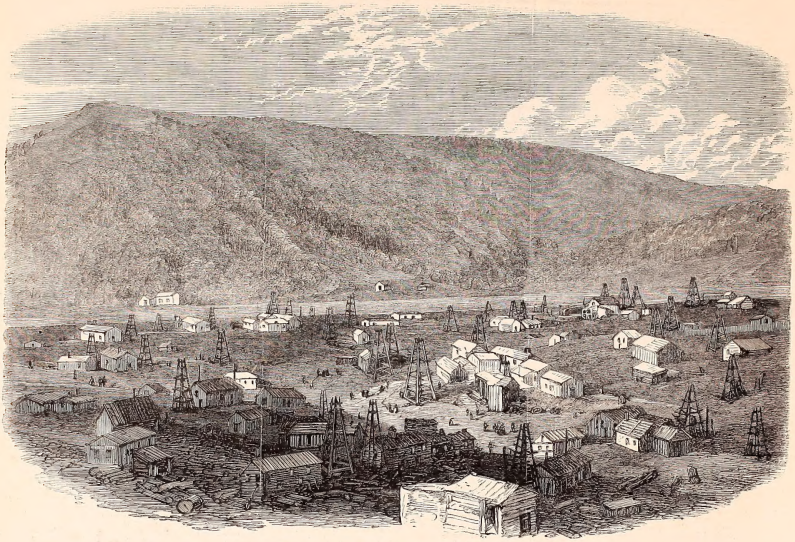
The Bill also provides for exchange-stations and junctions with five to all the railways to find their way to the West London Extension, the London and North-Western, Great Western, Great Northern, Midland, and South-Western, to communicate with the inner circle, and distribute, and exchange, the traffic of the whole.

The first station is in Sloane-square. The line passes to the south of Chelsea-hospital, and crosses the Thames by a bridge, with a footway and a secondary streets to Cadogan-terrace, at which point the Metropolitan Grand Union Line down to the Victoria station is adopted, as it avoids a good deal of opposition from the district of Chester-square and other places. At the Victoria station the Metropolitan District Line is adopted for a short distance, then the Grand Union proposed line, for the purpose of avoiding passing down Victoria-street, to which there was great objection made. By taking this line and running down Tothill-street, and widening it from a thirty-feet street to a sixty-feet street, the Victoria station is approached by a very commodious line. At the Westminster Hospital the District Railway is taken, and from that point the Metropolitan Railway is adopted to the Mansion-house Railway Station, taking a clump of houses between the Victoria station and Westminster Bridge. At Warwick-street a station would be formed, and the Bridge-street and the Thames Embankment. It was in contemplation to have had a line under cover, to have given access to the Houses of Parliament, but that is the private property of the Queen, and the proposal has been struck out of the Bill. The Crown probably knows as much about it as the Khan of Tartary; but Mr. Denison, the speak, is entitled to object if he likes. From Westminster Bridge the line goes through the embankment to Charing-cross. It passes under one of the spans of the bridge, and does not interfere with the Charing-cross Railway Company. There is to be another station at Blackfriars of a similar character to that at Charing-cross, namely, for the accommodation of the Railway which intersects it there, which is at that place—the London, Chatham, and Dover. From Blackfriars the line follows the route of the new street, which is called New Earl-street, and along that street up to very nearly the Mansion-house there is a street parallel to Cannon-street. Then it diverges from that line parallel to Cannon-street, coming to the station of the Charing-cross Railway. The Bill passes 1016, below the level of their rails, for the line to keep through on inferior class of property. At Trinity-square the line will run under the station of the Metropolitan Railway, which had just passed into the Committee; and that will be an entire completion of the inner circle.

All the questions affecting access and egress to the stations of the Metropolitan Board of Works have been agreed upon. There is only the question of compensation to be settled.

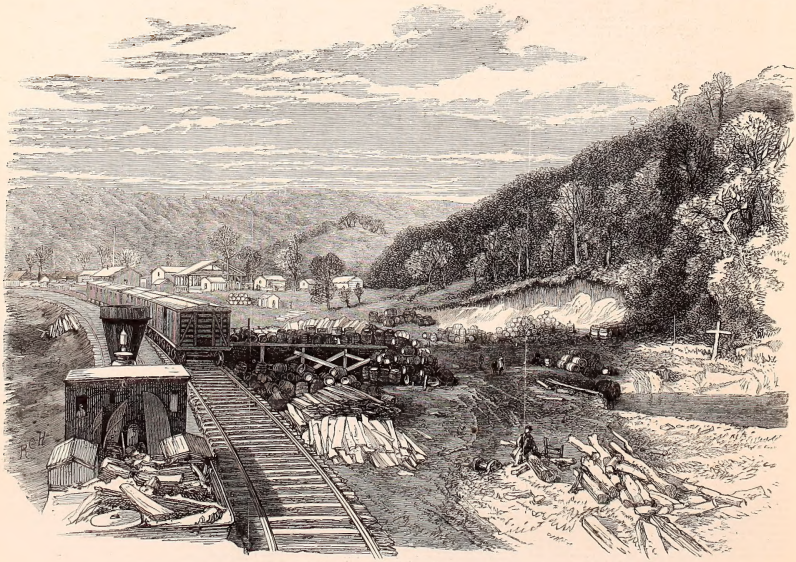
The length of the line right through is 7¾ miles; that which constitutes the circuit round the inner circle (the outer circle being from Paddington to Trinity-square) is 4 miles and 73 chains; the remaining lines are 2 miles 64 chains. The length actually proposed by the bill is 7 miles 69¼ chains. The total area of the property required will be 27 acres 1 rood 19 perches; the total number of buildings permanently required will be 316, and the total number of buildings interfered with 858. This estimate includes everything except the Thames Embankment and the streets; distinguishing that from property; including everything it would be 41 acres 3 roods and 23 perches. The quantity of property permanently required in the city is less than an acre; it is 3 roods and 28 perches. Eleven dwellings, nineteen dwelling-houses with shops or offices, one house or office only, and four warehouses or large buildings, will be permanently removed in the city of London; and during the execution of the works thirty-two warehouses, twenty-three dwelling-houses with shops or offices, eleven shops or offices only, and thirty-two warehouses or large buildings, making a total of 118—these would be reconstructed.

One practical effect will be that, instead of terminal stations, there will be, comparatively speaking, only roadside stations. The Victoria station will be done off the line.



The capital required to be raised is £3,000,000, of which £1,948,502 is for the purchase of land; the balance, £1,051,498, being the estimated cost of the works.—Railway News.

THE PETROLEUM OIL-FIELDS AT FRANKLIN, PENNSYLVANIA.

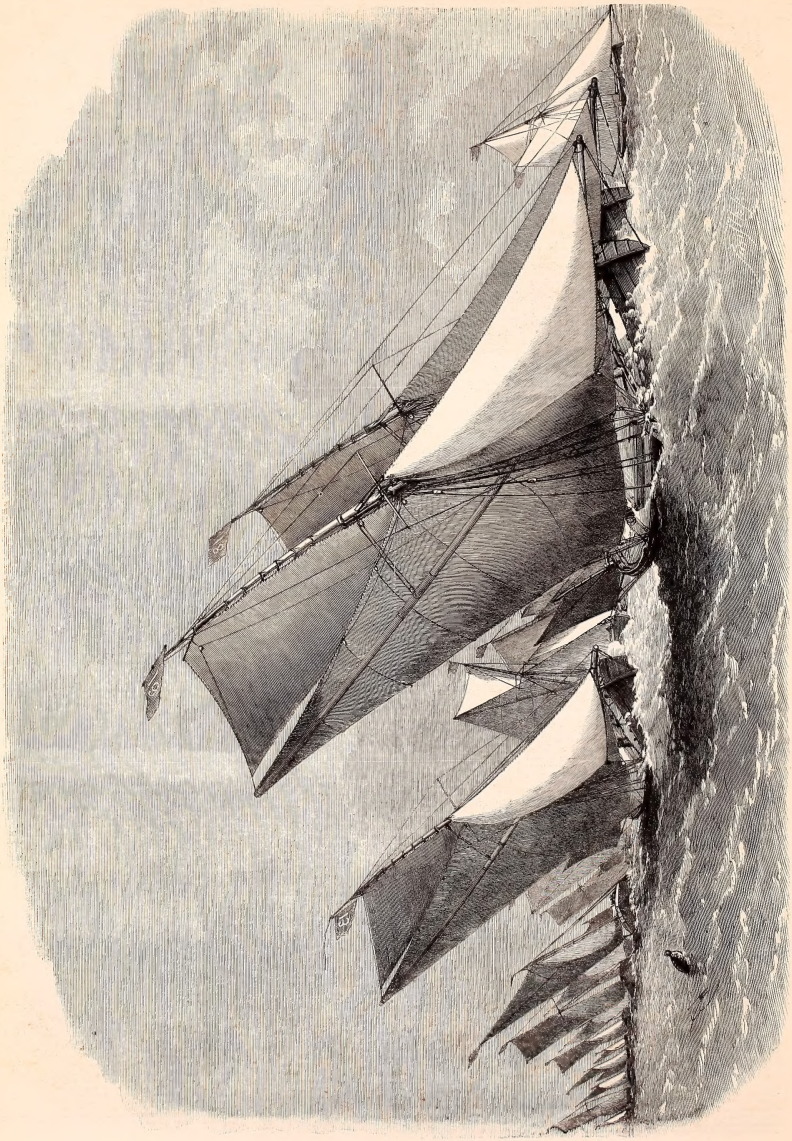


IN this Number of our Journal will be found a couple of Illustrations of the locality of the petroleum oil-springs at Franklin, in the State of Pennsylvania, that wonderful natural production which has lately given rise to a most lucrative commerce. The qualities of petroleum, or mineral oil, are, indeed, by no means a modern discovery, and its existence in many parts of the globe, especially in the neighbourhood of Baku, has been proved by the instances of spontaneous combustion which many ancient travellers have recorded. In the island of Trinidad, in the State of Virginia, and at Enniskillen, in Western Canada, there is abundance of this valuable product; but for a long time no efforts were made to obtain it for the use of mankind. It was not till 1847 that operations were commenced for the distillation of the bitumen at Enniskillen, and the operation was then performed by shaking wells a similar material might be obtained in a like manner. Large quantities of oil were thus procured. Two years later a well was sunk to the depth of seventy feet in Venango County, Pennsylvania. The oil flowed with such force that for many days 1500 gallons per day were obtained from this well. Other wells were speedily sunk, many of which yielded large quantities of oil. In some districts the rock is saturated with the oil, and, occasionally, a porous sandstone or limestone will yield considerable quantities. More commonly, however, the oil is collected in fissures in the rocks, at various depths below the surface. In some cases an ample supply of oil is obtained at a depth of 40 ft., while other wells are sunk as deep as 300 ft., or 400 ft., or 500 ft. deep. At Titusville, Pennsylvania, there are wells of the depth of 500 ft. Usually, when the oil is reached, the pressure of the gas in the fissure forces it up, and it flows for some time to the surface of the earth. As soon as the gas ceased flowing, a pump is employed. Sometimes the oil continues to flow spontaneously, and with such force as to require an effort to control it. The quantity of oil yielded by the wells varies, however, considerably, some wells producing only ten barrels per day, and others as much as 300 barrels.

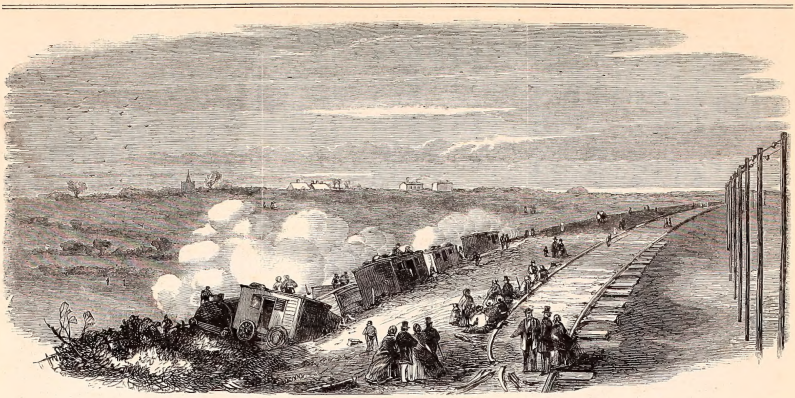
The apparatus to be seen at Oil Creek is of a simple description, consisting of large wooden cisterns sunk in the ground to receive the oil which rises through tubes let down into the borings. It is then drawn from the cisterns and put into casks for the conveyance. The cisterns are covered, to prevent evaporation, and their leaking is ingeniously prevented by surrounding them with a trench full of water, as the greater specific gravity of the water forbids the oil to escape through it. The casks or barrels of crude oil are conveyed from the Franklin and Warren Railway to the Atlantic and Great Western Railway—a branch of which, fifty-four miles in length, has lately been constructed for this traffic. The Atlantic and Great Western is a line of 400 miles, to Salamanca, on the New York and Erie line, connecting the great town of Cincinnati, and that of St. Louis, still farther west, with the port of Dunkirk on Lake Erie, and with the railway to New York, by which an immense export trade in grain and salt meat has been carried on. This important means of communication between the most productive region of the western continent and the Atlantic seaboard was formed by a company of which Mr. James M. Forman, of the City of London, is a director. Salmanca, the well-known Spanish capitalist, are the chief proprietors. They began their work during the spring of 1862, having five thousand English "navvies" to America for the purpose. They obtained the use of the line by mortgaging the first section of the line when completed, allowing 7 per cent interest on their debentures, and relying upon the high profits which a railway passing through this district—the garden of the great western State—was certain to yield. Their operations have been effected with extraordinary rapidity and success, notwithstanding the severity of the winter; miles of railway were constructed in as many days before the end of 1862, and 145 miles were added in the course of 1863. The line is now opened throughout its entire length, traversing the fertile States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, and enabling goods or passengers to travel from New York to the very heart and confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri, without a change of carriage. The corn of the Western States, the coal and iron of Pennsylvania, and the petroleum of the place shall be restored, some of the cotton of the South, will by this means find its way, along with the petroleum oil from Franklin and other districts, to the main cities of European maritime importance. The Oil Creek branch alone has just paid a dividend of 25 per cent on its share, and the traffic of the Erie and Erie and the Ohio and Mississippi lines, by the completion of the Atlantic and Great Western, which links them to each other, must greatly increase their profits. For the readier conveyance of the petroleum oil to the railway stations in the oil-producing district, the company is now laying down iron pipes, through which the oil will flow from the wells to the tanks at the wells by powerful steam-pumps. These parts of the apparatus cannot, of course, be seen in our Illustrations. During the last year the Atlantic and Great Western Railway has carried more than half a million barrels of petroleum oil, which is not one third of the produce of the Pennsylvania region.

The petroleum oil is sent from America in a crude state, just as it comes out of the earth, leaving the business of refining and preparing it for use is extensively carried on in England and France. The London Petroleum Oil Company, a large manufacturing establishment at Southall, apply to the American oil a patent process of distillation, by which the pure transparent liquid known as gasoline, giving a most beautiful light, is distinguished from the grosser elements of the petroleum, as well as from the spirituous part, which yields an explosive gas. The latter substance is largely employed instead of turpentine for various manufacturing purposes, while the residue is burned, without the slightest danger, in the lamps on our drawing-room tables, free from smoke and smell. Nor are these the only uses of the petroleum oil. Experiments have lately been made, by order of the French Government, to test its value as fuel for the engines of their steam navy. It has been proved that a given quantity of this substance will generate as much steam as 3 tons of coals as could be produced by burning twice the weight of coal. It seems likely that the introduction of this portable fuel will have a great effect upon the commerce and navigation of nations. The Southall works alone can refine fifty thousand barrels yearly.

THE PETROLEUM OIL WORKS AT FRANKLIN, PENNSYLVANIA.



RAILWAY STATION AT THE FRANKLIN PETROLEUM OIL WORKS.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

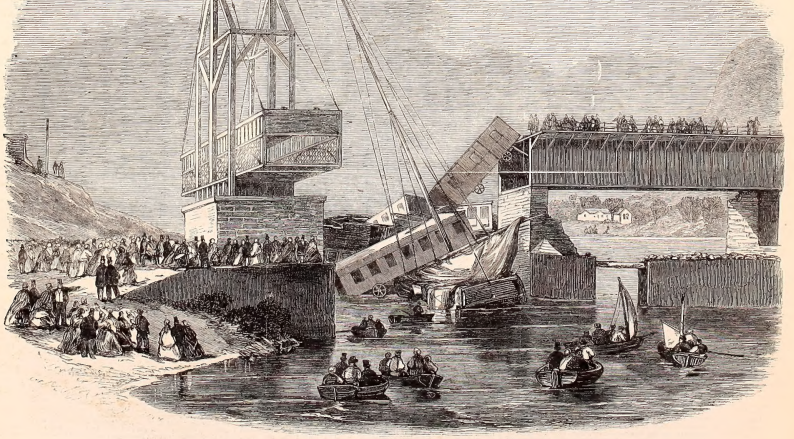


CURRENT LITERATURE.

Essays upon History and Politics. By T. E. Kebbel, Barrister-at-Law. (1 vol. Chapman and Hall.) An eminently readable collection of essays. They are written in scholarly fashion; the style is perfectly unexceptionable; the writer's views are stated in vigorous and lucid English, with occasional epigrammatic turns, but without any affectation; and an air of earnestness pervades the whole which assures you that he utters his opinions from honest conviction. One would gather from his essays that he is in politics a Tory of the fanning school; and in history—that is to say, so far as the style is which history should be written in consequence of the influence of Mr. Froude, is subject to severe handling. His "Popular History of England" is pronounced a failure," and regret is expressed that it ever was undertaken. Mr. Kebbel argues with ability, and has evidently studied the subjects upon which he writes with great care; but we do not propose to agree with him in his political views, and as this is not the place to deal with them, we must be contented to commend his book to attention on the ground of its readability.

Strathcleves. By Charles Allston Collins. (2 vols. Sampson Low, Son, and Marston.) Comedy and tragedy are pretty intimately allied in fiction, and which must make Clio blush as she loses her gravity; Mr. Charles Knight, in his writings, has severely handled. His "Popular History of England" is pronounced a failure," and regret is expressed that it ever was undertaken;

SAILING-BARGE RACE ON THE THAMES.—SEE PREVIOUS PAGE.



THE LATE ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY, NEAR BRADFIELD, ESSEX.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT BRADFIELD, IN ESSEX.

ONE of our Illustrations represents the serious accident which took place at Bradfield, in Essex, on Wednesday week, by the overthrow of the up-train which started from Harwich at 2.55 p.m., on the Great Eastern Railway. The train is run in connection with the new line of Rotterdam steamers which ply from Harwich. When it had proceeded on its journey towards London as far as within half a mile of the Bradfield station, the engine lurched over and dashed down the steep embankment, dragging all the train after it. The position of the train is shown in our Engraving, which is from a sketch by one of the passengers. The stoker was killed on the spot, having been crushed by the engine. He lay with his hand still grasping the metal handle of the break. The driver, who also stayed at his post, escaped. The passengers, in the greatest alarm, got out of the carriages as they best could, and helped those who were injured; and it was some time before it was ascertained that, although several persons had been cut, bruised, and injured, and some severely, only the stoker had been killed. An inquest has been opened upon the body of the stoker. The Rector of Bradfield sent those who were most hurt to the rectory-house, where they were cared for in the kindest manner, and their wounds attended to. The passengers who were able to proceed, after a delay of about four hours, were brought to town by a train which was dispatched for the purpose.

THE GREAT DISASTER ON THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY OF CANADA.

THE terrible disaster which happened upon the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, on the 29th ult., has already been mentioned in our pages. We have received from Mr. E. Whitefield, of Montreal, a couple of sketches, one of which is reproduced in our Engraving, of the bridge across the Richelieu River, at St. Hilaire, Belœil Mountain, about nineteen miles from Montreal, which was the scene of this deplorable accident. It seems that the Necker, a large packet, similar to those which bring emigrants to New York, left Hamburg about the 18th of May, and arrived at Quebec on Monday, the 27th of June, bringing out 538 emigrants. These consisted of Germans, Norwegians, and Poles, whose destination was principally Western Canada, though a few were bound for the Western States. On that night they were forwarded, with the exception of about thirty of the poorer class, by special train, from Quebec. There must, therefore, have been 500, if not more, on the cars, which proceeded without accident to the St. Hilaire Station, at the foot of Belœil Mountain. Here the River Richelieu is spanned by an iron bridge, on the top of which the cars pass. A drawbridge forms the connection between the last pier and the abutment on the Montreal side. The bridge is about 1100 ft. in length to the opening of the drawbridge, and about 45 ft. above the water, which is some 10 ft. deep in the canal under the drawbridge. The rule is that this drawbridge should always be supposed to be open, and that the train should therefore come to a dead stand on approaching the bridge, and not attempt to proceed until the proper signal has been given. At fifteen minutes past one on the Wednesday morning, when the special train arrived, the drawbridge was open to permit the passage of a steamer which had some barges loaded with grain in tow. The train, however, did not pull up at all, notwithstanding the established rule, and the display of the danger-signal, the red light, which should immediately have warned the conductors of the train to stop it, and not go on any further until the light was changed into a white one. The position of the bridge gives a view of the signal from a distance of 1625 feet. Hence the conduct of the engine-driver, Burney, is the more extraordinary, as it is stated he could have stopped the train in from five to six hundred feet. Burney, it is said, admits having seen the danger signal, but alleges that he found it impossible to stop the train in time. Whether he could have done so or not was not proved at the time the present particulars were sent, as the coroner's inquest had not then taken place. Certain it is that the train dashed on at a great pace, and, as might have been expected, when it arrived at the drawbridge it was found to be swung round for some boats to pass. Down this yawning abyss the cars, with their living freight, dashed headlong. The locomotive and tender, with the first five cars (baggage), went in first, the six passenger-cars piling down on top of them with terrific violence, being precipitated a distance of some seventy feet. At this very moment, as already mentioned, a steamer was passing through with six barges in tow, and the cars fell on one of the barges, sinking it, but preventing the wreck from being submerged to such an extent as it would otherwise have been had the canal been clear. The last three passenger-cars, falling on the accumulated débris of the others, shunted slightly to one side and over to the opposite embankment—that is, on the Memorial side. From these the living were chiefly taken, the other cars containing few who had escaped a severe shock or mortal injury in the horrible crash. A little child was found, singular to say, altogether uninjured, lying in its dead mother's arms. The man in charge of the barge sank had a narrow escape, from this same family. He heard the train thundering along, looked up, and saw the crash coming. He had, however, presence of mind to cut the line which connected his wife and little children with the sinking vessel, and they were saved. Many of the dead bodies were recovered early in the day, only eighteen of these being adults. The remainder were found on the side of the river side, where they presented a sad spectacle, many of the dead being terribly disfigured. Some of the children were only a year or two old. Harrowing scenes presented themselves in the temporary hospitals, where the wounded were placed together. Many of the wounds received by the poor people were shocking to look upon, and sometimes the sight still more hideous. Only one amputation was performed, and that on a woman, who bore the operation in a most heroic manner. The knee joint had to be removed, hardly less an operation had to be performed, but the brave woman appeared more distressed at her husband's grief than at her own misfortune, or the pain she was suffering. The Government police did good service in keeping the people from crowding round the bodies, and in permitting but few access of friends to the sick. Most of those who had escaped were to be seen wandering about, seeking relatives or friends, bemoaning their fate in the melancholy ending of their hitherto prosperous voyage, and the dissipation of their hopes and anticipations formed on coming to try their fortunes in a new country. While the injured were being cared for, active exertions were being made to get at the bodies which were still submerged in the river. As the divers deemed it better that the wounded, or at least all who could bear so bodily that it was scarcely required, they would reach Montreal alive. At the time the special train left eighty-six bodies had been recovered from the river. Four hundred and seventy-six were accounted for, leaving about a dozen of the 500 emigrants; and it is believed that these perished, and that their remains would be discovered in the wreck of the train. A majority of these were children or adults. The driver of the train escaped the death which had befallen so many of those committed to his charge.

SCENE OF THE DISASTER AT BELŒIL BRIDGE, NEAR MONTREAL, ON THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY OF CANADA.

FINE ARTS.

REFORM OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

IN our article in last week's Saturday Review heading, we gave several reasons why the Academy should, when it is called upon to provide itself with a new home in the rear of Burlington House, take a large and liberal view of the requirements of the public for which it purposes ultimately require. But, although we suggested several of these purposes, we omitted to mention one which obviously requires primary consideration. We allude to the exhibition of the "diploma" pictures.

Our readers are aware that it has been the custom since the foundation of the Academy—Sir Joshua Reynolds himself, the first president, setting the example—that for every artist upon his election as Academician he present a picture painted by himself to the Academy in acknowledgment of the honour paid him. From the first annual election to recent elections, as the ranks of the Academicians into those of the R.A.s, several of these "diploma" pictures are in the present exhibition in Trafalgar-square; and, upon the whole, principal of which a large number of Royal Academicians from forty-two to fifty taking effect, a larger number we will only be thankful for, as they would form a series of pictures by all the artists who have received the academic diploma from the days of Reynolds down to literally the present day most precious the highest interest to the history of British art. That large section of the art-loving public who visited the Art-Treasures Exhibition at Manchester will not, however, require to be reminded of the interest and value of this collection. The diploma pictures formed in reality, though many are unfortunately absent, the historic outlines of the great gallery illustrative of the British school, and supplied several links which without them would have been missing. Except on this occasion at Manchester, however, this valuable collection has, it might appear, been most jealously concealed from the public, and a large number of the students in the Academy itself only see it occasionally. There has been no reason, as far as we can understand, why the public should not have been admitted to see the pictures under, at least, certain conditions and at stated times, especially when the upper rooms are not occupied by the annual exhibition. But, if the Academy is to remain where it is, when the Academy will be at liberty to build itself galleries three or four times larger than those at present occupied would be inexcusable.

Then, again, the Academy possesses several pictures by old masters—particularly a very fine example of that rare master, Giorgione, together with a also-called "Correggio" Angelica carrying off Rinaldo, the cartoons of Raphael, and—perhaps most important of all—the famous copy of Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" by Sir Augustus Desgoffe, Leonardo's friend and scholar. These, likewise, should assuredly be more accessible to the public than they are at present. A more liberal feeling is manifested by the French in the case of the Louvre. There is no difficulty thrown in the way of a visitor who may wish to see Delaroche's "Hemicycle," or M. Signol's great picture of the Angels's "Last Judgment," or the works of sculpture and ornamental art in the Ecole des Beaux Arts at Paris. And it is the same thing in regard to the academies of Italy and Germany. Why not in England, too, South Kensington is an example to the Royal Academy. There is also an excellent feature in the management of the students' competitions at Paris and also at South Kensington which might be imitated at Trafalgar-square. The competitive drawings, paintings, models, &c., for the grand prix de Rome and other prizes given to the best works by the students of the Paris école, and the drawings, models, &c., at South Kensington and other prizes given at Kensington, are submitted to the public, and their exhibition announced in the public journals. Not so, however, in the case of the Royal Academy-square; none but the students and their judges ever see the competitive performance. It is quite proper that this should be so till the awards are made; yet a little publicity afterwards would certainly supply a very strong incentive to emulation, and would also be calculated to benefit the deserving young artist by introducing his name to the public in his favour. In this, however, as in some other points unnoticed by the Royal Commissioners, the Academy will be found to follow the system seems behind the time. We feel constrained to remark, since the appearance of the paper of "Observations" issued by the Academy in reply to the Royal Commissioners, that whatever proposition might bear the semblance of an invitation of public opinion, or bid for popularity among the artist-world generally, seems to be regarded with more or less unmerited suspicion and disfavour by the forty-two distinguished men who should be the chief representatives of art in this country.

Again, it seems to be unknown or forgotten that there is an artlibrary connected with the Trafalgar-square institution which would be, both on account of its contents and its central situation, of great value to artists generally, and likewise to writers on art. Yet this library is only accessible to the students, associates, and members of the Academy. It is only open on Mondays and Saturdays, and two other days of the week during certain months of the year, and the attendance averages (we speak from actual experience) two or three students, and these often of the idler sort, who frequent the room to while away an hour, pleasantly enough no doubt. Now, why cannot this library be opened under the charge of a curator, at all events when not used by the Academy, to all students of art, whether practical or literary, upon conditions as easy as those of that very serviceable and well-managed art-library attached to the South Kensington Museum?

In our last article we submitted our views in opposition to the intended exclusion, as intimated in the "Observations," of the associate class from all power in the administration and management of the Academy, and from all tangible influence on the elections. We have only to add that the memorial against this monopoly of power and influence by the Royal Academicians has been signed by all the Associates in the discussion in the Lords, and from which we quoted in our last issue, though the memorial has likewise received the signature of many artists (not associates), including several of the best-known names in the profession.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE.

3rd Life Guards: R. B. Rey to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant.
3rd Dragoons: Capt. J. Swinburne to be Major; Lieut. F. H. Elliot to be Captain; Cornet J. A. Dalrymple to be Lieutenant; Cornet H. M. Shewen to be Lieutenant, vice Sep. L. J. M'Sheehy, M.D., to be Assistant Surgeon.
7th Hussars: Lieut. J. Hall to be Instructor of Musketry.
8th Hussars: Brevet-Major to be Knight, 5th Class, of the Order of Military Merit: Lieut. A. E. Gallwey to be Captain, vice Capt. Hall, who exchanges; Cornet H. Wood to be Lieutenant, vice Gallwey, who exchanges; Cornet W. L. Lockwood to be Adjutant, vice Lieut. Wood, who resigns the Adjutancy; J. S. W. Finch to be Riding-Master, vice Riding-Master T. Thornton, who retires upon half-pay; Cornet and Adjutant H. Wood to be Lieutenant; Cornet J. D. M. Hay to be Lieutenant; F. Chaine to be Ensign, 87th Regt. Lord Dyl. H. Dalhousie to be Sub-Lieutenant; Cornet C. Cadell to be Lieutenant, vice Hay, who exchanges; Ensign and Lieutenant R. B. Rogers to be Captain; Cornet C. Cadell to be Ensign. 88th: Major-Gen. C. Gascoyne to be Colonel. 91st: Lieut.-Gen. C. G. J. Arentschildt to be Colonel, vice Gen. Sir J. Campbell, dead.
Rifle Brigade: Capt. and Brevet-Major Hon. H. Clifford and Colonel H. D'Oyley Torrens to be Colonels, Capts. A. Gronwood and A. Cross to be Majors; Paymaster J. R. Reese to have the honorary rank of Captain.

The next examination for direct commissions will be held on the 1st of August, at Burlington House.

The ships forming the Channel Fleet—the Edgar, Defence, Warrior, and Black Prince—will be commanded by Rear-Admiral Ducrer, C.B., sailed from Spithead on Monday, on their coasting cruise.

Another change is about to be made in the arms of the British soldier, in order to bring the rifle into more general use among infantry armies. This is to adopt breechloaders in all branches of her Majesty's service.

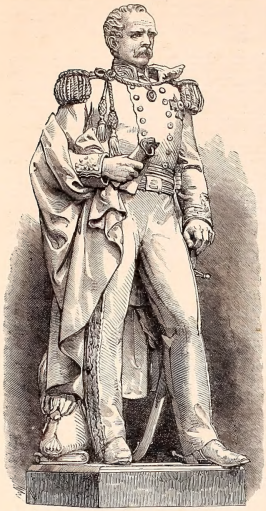
Colonel Gay, C.B., commanding at Colchester, has been selected to command the troops to be sent to the Cape of Good Hope in China. Colonel Gay goes out with the rank of Major-General.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to make a very sensible change in the conveyance of troops to India. They will in future be taken by the overland route, and not round the Cape, as has been the case since the Viceroy of Egypt. This small detachments will in future take the sea voyage.

On Thursday week a numerous party of convicts arrived at Chatham, in two parties, one from Millbank, for the purpose of being employed on the works for the extension of Chatham Dockyard and the formation of the new docks and basins, on which extensive operations are now going on.

The Gazette of yesterday week publishes despatches received by the Secretary of State for War from Lieutenant-General Sir Hugh Rose, K.C.B., commanding the troops in New Zealand. . . . He remarks that the heroism and self-devotion of Captain Hall and Commissariat Clerk reflect the highest credit on the naval service; and he mentions with special commendation the services of Lieutenant Carey; Major Hon. Henry Murray, Lieutenant and Adjutant Garland, 43rd Regiment; Deputy Inspector-General Mouat; Surgeon Wilkinson, 57th Regiment; and Assistant Surgeon Manley, of the Royal Artillery.

The Queen has signified her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon Lieutenant Pollard, of the 4th Punjaub Infantry, for the daring and gallant manner in which, in the course of the recent operations of the Peshawur Column, he led a party of his regiment to recapture the Crag Picket, after its garrison had been driven in by the enemy. He was severely wounded in the arm while he desperate hand-to-hand fighting; and also for the great gallantry displayed in leading on a party of his regiment to the capture of the Crag Picket when it again fell into the enemy's hands, on the 15th of November.



The Lancashire Militia, under Colonel Sir T. Hesketh, Bart., assembled on the common on Southport on Monday, to be reviewed by the Commandant-in-Chief. The regiment, which consists of a series of mild-day events lines. Tuesday, Royal Horse Artillery, under the command of Major Sutherland; Wednesday, Royal Artillery, under the command of Major Brandreth; Thursday, Royal Artillery, under the command of Major Light Infantry was commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Marriott, assisted by Lieutenant-Colonel Fenwick, Lieutenant-Colonel Hall, 71 Regiment; Captain Naughe, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General; Colonel Mitchell, Commandant at Fort Pitt, Chatham, who had charge of the ground; Captain Franks, front and rear, the force marched past, and subsequently went through a series of the movements in which they had been drilled.

The Himalaya, screw troop-ship, Captain E. Lacy, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday afternoon from Quebec, whence she sailed on the 6th inst., with the following troops on board:—Staff: Major-General Lord Lieutenant-Colonel W. L. Ingall, C.B.; Major M. Ryall; Captains S. G. Carter, C.B., R. Biddulph, A.D.C., Hon. A. Hood, A.D.C., Hon. A. Gordon, R. S. Michell, W. M. Thompson; Lieutenants L. G. Dundas, W. L. B. Cook, M. Hall, R. Hall, A. Hall, A. Hall, A

THE LATE SIR WILLIAM STEVENSON.

THE model has just been completed, at Rome, of a statue about to be erected in bronze, at Port Louis, the capital of the Mauritius, to the memory of Sir William Stevenson, K.C.B., who died on the 9th of January last year, while Governor of that island. In the long list of our colonial governors, not one can be named who has left behind him in the minds of all with whom he had to act, both in the different departments of the civil service of the colony and among the inhabitants generally, a stronger sense of the good which he did and of the pleasing manner in which it was done. Sir William Stevenson was respected by all. The manner in which the funds for this statue have been raised is a very gratifying evidence of the esteem that was felt for him. Immediately after his decease a subscription was commenced, confined to the Civil Service of the island, for the purpose of raising a suitable monument to the memory of their late chief. This was soon followed by another and more general subscription for a similar purpose among the people of the island. Eventually, by a wise arrangement, the two lists were combined, and the result was the very handsome sum of somewhat more than £3000. This is a satisfactory indication of the deep feelings of obligation entertained by all classes in the island towards one from whom no further benefits could be received. It is not less creditable to the inhabitants themselves than it is honourable to the character of their late Governor. The whole of the sum we have mentioned has been devoted to the erection of the bronze statue represented by our Engraving. The work was intrusted to M. d'Epinay, who, by a most appropriate circumstance, is himself a native of the Mauritius. Sir William Stevenson's services, indeed, deserved some such memorial as this; though their best monument will doubtless be the good that will result from the administrative, educational, and financial reforms he effected; and, from the satisfactory manner in which he settled what, at the Mauritius, is the most practical and important of all questions, that of the immigration and regulation of Coolie labour.

Sir William Stevenson was a native of the island of Jamaica, where his father held the office of Receiver-General. By his mother's side he STATUE OF SIR W. STEVENSON, LATE GOVERNOR OF THE MAURITIUS.

THE CLIFDEN CUP, WON AT THE STAMFORD RACES.
SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE LATE DR. NORMANDY, ANALYTICAL CHEMIST.
SEE NEXT PAGE.

OUR IRON-CLAD FLEET: H.M. STEAM-FRIGATE ACHILLES OFF FOLLY POINT, CHATHAM.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

was descended from that Lawrence who was president of Cromwell's Council, and the friend of Milton, and to whom Milton addressed the sonnet commencing with the line.

Lawrence, of virtuous father, virtuous son.

This friend of Milton and Cromwell, being obliged to leave the country at the Restoration, found an asylum in the Island of Jamaica, which had lately been taken from the Spaniards by Penn and Venables, whom Cromwell had sent out with an expedition to the West Indies. Sir William Stevenson was also descended, on the same side, from one Colonel Richard James, whose death is mentioned in the second volume of the "Annual Register," that for the year 1758, as having taken place at the Island of Jamaica at the patriarchal age of 105. Colonel Richard James having left the first child born of English parents after we had taken possession of the colony. Being thus descended from what may almost be called the historic families of Jamaica, which was for a long time our richest and most important settlement, Sir William Stevenson was of excellent birth. He was educated for the law, and, having commenced the practice of his profession in his native island, was at an early age placed upon the judicial bench. After having held this dignified position for twelve years, he was appointed by the Duke of Newcastle to be Governor of our settlements at Honduras. As a recognition of his services in that government, he was promoted to the Governorship of the Island of Mauritius. In these situations he showed so much administrative ability, tact, and discretion in public service, which qualities were fully acknowledged by the Colonial Office as well as by the colonists themselves, that had his life been spared a long career of usefulness and honour would have been open to him.

STAMFORD RACES—THE CLIFDEN CUP.

ALTHOUGH the meeting at Stamford is not associated with the Aintree gathering, no diminution was perceptible in the number of patrons. The elite of the turf were numerously represented, the Burghley party having left only a day before. Commendam and Fitzwilliam each entertaining a distinguished circle. On both days the weather was fine and very unusual for the season, and the well experienced had a marked effect upon the course, which in the straight was as hard as granite. In another part of our Journal the running of Stamford races is recorded. Here we confine ourselves to one or two particulars respecting the Clifden Cup, of which we have an Engraving now of interesting appeal. A field of thirteen were to the post for this cup, which was run for on the second day. The affair proved a sweet one for Mr. Cherry Cartwright, whose name had Westmoreland's Erin-go-Bragh and Mr. Bevan's Welland, had the call in the betting.

The Clifden cup, of silver, was made by Mr. Hancock, of Bruton-street. It is of classical outline, and encircled with ornaments in the style of the fifteenth century. The principal subject is a bas-relief representing Prince Edward rescuing his father (Henry III.) at the Battle of Evesham, which overthrew the Montfort family and restored Henry to his throne. The two handles are adorned with medallions of the figures of genii mounted upon grotesque dragons, and on the top is a figure of a knight in armour bearing with him the spoils of the victory on the body, is exquisite. The whole is mounted upon an ebony pedestal with large shields, which are inscribed with the names of the stewards and the date of the Stamford races of 1864. The value of the cup is 200 guineas.

THE LATE DR. NORMANDY.

We have engraved the portrait of the late Dr. Normandy, long known as a practical chemist of reputation and an experimental philosopher who contributed much to the last generation of scientific men. He was a Frenchman by birth, but had adopted England as his home. Originally educated for a surgeon, he gained the necessary qualifications; but having, in the course of his studies, been led into chemical experiments, he took a greater attraction in their pursuit, and soon occupied he formed an intimate friendship with the late Dr. Ure, with whom he was subsequently associated in many important chemical analyses. He was also much employed by the Government upon practical chemists, and became well known for his acquirements in the application of chemistry to the arts. His examination before the committee of the House of Commons on the Adulteration of Food his evidence was of the most startling character, as it showed the numerous frauds practised on the public by dishonest tradesmen. Dr. Normandy was the author of several works which stand high in the estimation of chemists. Among these are "A Commentary" "An Introduction to Rose's Chemistry" (he also edited an English translation of Rose's "The Elements of Chemistry"); "A Treatise on Agricultural Chemistry;" "Guide to the Alkalimetrical Chest;" "The Chemical Atlas," a work of great value to students of chemical analysis; "The Industrial Arts Chemical Atlas." His latest literary labour was devoted to several contributions to the new edition of the "Dictionary of Arts, Manufactures, and Mines." Dr. Normandy had taken out patents for many useful inventions. The most important of these may be said to be his apparatus for the distillation of sea-water. Fresh water from the sea. This invention has proved of the greatest value to Transatlantic shippers, and assumed the position of a necessity for passenger-ships and ocean-going steamers. Of an eminently practical disposition of mind and a singularly keen perception, Dr. Normandy was regarded with high confidence by those with whom he became associated. He died on the 10th of last May, in the fifty-fourth year of his age.

HER MAJESTY'S IRON FRIGATE ACHILLES, OFF FOLLY POINT, CHATHAM.

WE this week present our readers with another specimen of the iron fleet of Great Britain. Our Engraving gives a view of that fine ship the Achilles, which is the largest and fastest ironclad that our navy yet possesses. It represents her as she appeared off Folly Point, at Chatham, on the day before her late trial-trip, when she was found to fulfil the most sanguine expectations of those interested in her success. The result of this trial proved her to attain a mean speed of 14·362 knots at full power; and she made 11·878 knots when under sail. Of the 8,500 horse-power that she has, the improvements since made she will realise from fifteen to sixteen knots with ease. Upwards of 1,000 men will be required to man her sea, if necessary, in a few days. Her keel was laid down in Chatham Dockyard, in October, 1862, and she was launched in December of the year following. She is 380 ft. in length between and capacity—Length, 380 ft.; breadth, 58 ft.; depth in hold, 25 ft.; height of upper deck, 8 ft. 4 in.; draught of water, 26 ft. 6 in. forward, 28 ft. 6 in. aft.; thickness of side, 5 in. armour plating, 3 ft. 8 in. and teak backing; tonnage, 6,072 1-94 tons; horse-power, 1,250, nominal; intended armament, 30 guns ("Somerset" pattern); intended complement, 650 officers and men.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed to inquire into the truth of the charges brought against the Committee of Council on Education, and into matters connected therewith, have issued a report, in which, after stating the course which has been pursued by the department, they express their opinion that "the charges which have given to the subject of this inquiry all its importance are important, if we consider them as a whole, and not separately; and that the inquiry has led the Committee to the conclusion that the management of the department has been characterised by want of irregularity, want of care, and want of method, and has, on the whole, been conducted with a degree of laxity, and without excessive strictness."

A Nelson (New Zealand) paper says:—"The existence of an exceedingly rich gold-field within thirty-five miles of Nelson cannot be questioned, and we are realising the first fruit of it in paying an enormous advance in the price of wages and for the first necessaries of life. Messrs. Nelson, Pretes, and Blenkiron seem likely to be nearly deserted by the men for the Waimarahi gold-field. Several claims are yielding 10 oz. of gold a week per man. Six men got upwards of 170 oz. during the week; three others, who were working nine miles up the river, got 56 oz. on one morning; Mr. T. Brown and party got on the same afternoon 16 oz.; and Wilson's claim on the same day gave 16 oz. from the bank, where, in the opinion of most of the diggers, the largest amount of gold will be found. One party is reported to have obtained nearly 1 lb. weight of gold in the course of half an hour. We learn from Mr. Robert Burns, who with his cousins returned from the Waimarahi on Saturday last, that they and two diggers take out in the two hours 14½ oz. of gold. They had felled a birch-tree growing on the edge of the river and, finding that it overhung the bank, they cut it through. Then it occurred to them that the roots of the Pekeas will prove to be rich in gold. It thought the whole watershed of the Pekeas will prove to be rich in gold.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR T. C. MILLER, BART.

The Rev. Sir Thomas Cornelius Miller, sixth Baronet of Chichester, Sussex, Vicar of Fryde, Hants, was the only surviving son of Sir Thomas Miller, the fifth Baronet, by his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter and sole heiress of —— Edwards, Esq. He was born 11th April, 1794, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated LL.B. in 1822. In the same year he was ordained Deacon by the Right Rev. Dr. Brownlow North, Bishop of Winchester; and on being admitted into priest's orders in the following year was instituted to the Vicarage of Fryde by Purple, near Alton, Hampshire, which he has held up to his death. He married, on the 6th of February, 1823, Martha, eldest daughter of the Rev. John Holmes, of Bengeo Hall, Herts, by whom he has had issue (with four daughters, of whom the eldest, Charlotte Elizabeth, is married to the Rev. Thomas Bell Cumberlege, Rector of Stanhope, late 26th Foot) six sons—viz., Charles Holmes, his successor; Henry John, of Manor House, Hants; Thomas Edmund, a Major in the 18th Regiment, and Captain 11th Foot; George; William Owen, Lieutenant 2nd Dragoon Guards (late 93rd Foot); and Richard Combe. The Rev. Sir Thomas Miller died on the 19th inst., at the Vicarage, Fryde, and was succeeded by his eldest son, now Sir Charles Hayes Miller, the present Baronet, who was born on the 6th of February, 1829, and married, on the 8th of April, 1856, Katherine Maria, second daughter of James Winter Scott, Esq., of Rotherfield Park, Hants, by whom he has had issue one son, John Fairfax Cuthbert, family of Miller would, from bearing similar arms, appear to be a branch of that of Miller, of Froyle, Hants. The ancient family of Cornelius is extinct in the male line, and represented in the female line by the present Sir T. C. Miller's mother, who was the only child and sole issue and heir of the Rev. Sir Thomas Cornelius, 5th Baronet, who Thomas Miller, Esq., M.P. for the city of Chichester in 1688 and 1690, and whose large fortune left him by his uncle, was knighted and was advanced to the dignity of a Baronet by Queen Anne, Oct. 29, 1705. He died, Dec. 7, 1705, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Sir John Miller, who represented the city of Chichester in several Parliaments in the reigns of King William and Queen Anne, and, by his third wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Morse, third Baronet of Kingston, in the Isle of Wight, cousin of Sir Henry Morse, of Hursley, Hants, the present Baronet, was father of Lieutenant-General Sir John Gardiner. He was born May 7, 1781, joined the 52nd Light Infantry, and served in the Peninsular campaigns, including the Royal Artillery, April 7, 1797. In October he was sent to Gibraltar, then actually besieged, and in the following December to the Mediterranean. In November, 1798, when he embarked with the expedition under Sir Charles Stuart, not only was he present at the capture of Minorca, but he was also the was appointed on the Staff in Minorca as Commandant of Mosquito Fort (the principal entrance to the harbour of Mahon), and in which shortly afterwards became Aide-de-Camp to the General commanding, the Hon. Henry Fox, brother to Lord Holland. He remained in Minorca until the evacuation of Minorca at the Peace of Amiens, in 1802. He became Captain, Aug., 1804; Major, 1811; Lieutenant-Colonel, 1813; and, on the force under Lieutenant-General Don, forming the advanced corps of our army during the campaign of 1813, which Colonel Gardiner left Germany, combined with the Russian army under Count Tolstoy. They advanced on the 18th of October to the attack of the enemy's position on and to the campaign, and the army returned home. After further service Captain Gardiner joined the army under Lord Hill in the south of France, in 1814. He landed with it at Passage Bay, and, advancing from Lavaos on the 10th of August, he commanded the 52nd Light Infantry in the action of that day, and in the crowning success against Jonzé at Villeneu on the 21st, followed by the capture of Bayonne. Colonel Gardiner was present at the battle of Orthez, and was appointed to the command of the 52nd Regiment, which he retained in the prolonged struggle commencing on the 24th of December at Garris, and ending on the 27th of February, 1814, at the battle of Tarbes. At the battle of Barrosa, in which his battery bore a conspicuous part. He was Quatre Bras and Waterloo. In 1815 he was created a K.C.B. On the reorganisation of the Scottish Corps, in 1822, he was appointed Sub-Colonel, Sir Robert Gardiner acted as principal equerry. On his Royal Highness's accession to the throne, in 1830, he was appointed Groom of the Bedchamber, on the Clarence staff. He was military Aide-de-camp to the King, 1831, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, which regiment he commanded in 1841. In 1848 he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General, and Commandant of the Fourth Battalion Royal Artillery in 1854, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, in 1861, when he succeeded Colonel Sir Archibald Alison, Bart. Sir Robert Gardiner married, first, Frances, daughter of Joseph Gardiner, Esq., by Rebecca, daughter of Sir Harry Burrard, Bart., by whom he has had issue (with two daughters, the eldest of whom, Frances Elizabeth, married, first, Captain Hamilton, 26th Foot) six sons—viz., Charles Holmes, his successor; Henry John, of Manor House, Hants; Thomas Edmund, a Major in the 18th Regiment, and Captain 11th Foot; George; William Owen, Lieutenant 2nd Dragoon Guards (late 93rd Foot); and Richard Combe. The Rev. Sir Thomas Miller died on the 19th inst., at the Vicarage, Fryde, and was succeeded by his eldest son, now Sir Charles Hayes Miller, the present Baronet, who was born on the 6th of February, 1829, and married, on the 8th of April, 1856, Katherine Maria, second daughter of James Winter Scott, Esq., of Rotherfield Park, Hants, by whom he has had issue one son, John Fairfax Cuthbert, family of Miller would, from bearing similar arms, appear to be a branch of that of Miller, of Froyle, Hants. The ancient family of Cornelius is extinct in the male line, and represented in the female line by the present Sir T. C. Miller's mother, who was the only child and sole issue and heir of the Rev. Sir Thomas Cornelius, 5th Baronet, who Thomas Miller, Esq., M.P. for the city of Chichester in 1688 and 1690, and whose large fortune left him by his uncle, was knighted and was advanced to the dignity of a Baronet by Queen Anne, Oct. 29, 1705. He died, Dec. 7, 1705, aged seventy; and his eldest son, Sir John Miller, who represented the city of Chichester in several Parliaments in the reigns of King William and Queen Anne, and, by his third wife, Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir William Morse, third Baronet of Kingston, in the Isle of Wight, cousin of Sir Henry Morse, of Hursley, Hants, the present Baronet, was father of Lieutenant-General Sir John Gardiner. He was born May 7, 1781, joined the 52nd Light Infantry, and served in the Peninsular campaigns, including the Royal Artillery, April 7, 1797. In October he was sent to Gibraltar, then actually besieged, and in the following December to the Mediterranean. In November, 1798, when he embarked with the expedition under Sir Charles Stuart, not only was he present at the capture of Minorca, but he was also the was appointed on the Staff in Minorca as Commandant of Mosquito Fort (the principal entrance to the harbour of Mahon), and in which shortly afterwards became Aide-de-Camp to the General commanding, the Hon. Henry Fox, brother to Lord Holland. He remained in Minorca until the evacuation of Minorca at the Peace of Amiens, in 1802. He became Captain, Aug., 1804; Major, 1811; Lieutenant-Colonel, 1813; and, on the force under Lieutenant-General Don, forming the advanced corps of our army during the campaign of 1813, which Colonel Gardiner left Germany, combined with the Russian army under Count Tolstoy. They advanced on the 18th of October to the attack of the enemy's position on and to the campaign, and the army returned home. After further service Captain Gardiner joined the army under Lord Hill in the south of France, in 1814. He landed with it at Passage Bay, and, advancing from Lavaos on the 10th of August, he commanded the 52nd Light Infantry in the action of that day, and in the crowning success against Jonzé at Villeneu on the 21st, followed by the capture of Bayonne. Colonel Gardiner was present at the battle of Orthez, and was appointed to the command of the 52nd Regiment, which he retained in the prolonged struggle commencing on the 24th of December at Garris, and ending on the 27th of February, 1814, at the battle of Tarbes. At the battle of Barrosa, in which his battery bore a conspicuous part. He was Quatre Bras and Waterloo. In 1815 he was created a K.C.B. On the reorganisation of the Scottish Corps, in 1822, he was appointed Sub-Colonel, Sir Robert Gardiner acted as principal equerry. On his Royal Highness's accession to the throne, in 1830, he was appointed Groom of the Bedchamber, on the Clarence staff. He was military Aide-de-camp to the King, 1831, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, which regiment he commanded in 1841. In 1848 he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General, and Commandant of the Fourth Battalion Royal Artillery in 1854, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, in 1861, when he succeeded Colonel Sir Archibald Alison, Bart. Sir Robert Gardiner married, first, Frances, daughter of Joseph Gardiner, Esq., by Rebecca, daughter of Sir Harry Burrard, Bart., by whom he has had issue (with two daughters, the eldest of whom, Frances Elizabeth, married, first, Captain Hamilton, 26th Foot) six sons—viz., Charles Holmes, his successor; Henry John, of Manor House, Hants; Thomas Edmund, a Major in the 18th Regiment, and Captain 11th Foot; George; William Owen, Lieutenant 2nd Dragoon Guards (late 93rd Foot); and Richard Combe. The Rev. Sir Thomas Miller died on the 19th inst., at the Vicarage, Fryde, and was succeeded by his eldest son, now Sir Charles Hayes Miller, the present Baronet, who was born on the 6th of February, 1829, and married, on the 8th of April, 1856, Katherine Maria, second daughter of James Winter Scott, Esq., of Rotherfield Park, Hants, by whom he has had issue one son, John Fairfax Cuthbert, family of Miller would, from bearing similar arms, appear to be a branch of that of Miller, of Froyle, Hants. The ancient family of Cornelius is extinct in the male line, and represented in the female line by the present Sir T. C. Miller's mother, who was the only child and sole issue and heir of the Rev. Sir Thomas Cornelius, 5th Baronet, who Thomas Miller, Esq., M.P. for the city of Chichester in 1688 and 1690, and whose large fortune left him by his uncle, was knighted and was advanced to the dignity of a Baronet by Queen Anne, Oct. 29, 1705. He died, Dec. 7, 1705, aged seventy; and his eldest son, Sir John Miller, who represented the city of Chichester in several Parliaments in the reigns of King William and Queen Anne, and, by his third wife, Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir William Morse, third Baronet of Kingston, in the Isle of Wight, cousin of Sir Henry Morse, of Hursley, Hants, the present Baronet, was father of Lieutenant-General Sir John Gardiner. He was born May 7, 1781, joined the 52nd Light Infantry, and served in the Peninsular campaigns, including the Royal Artillery, April 7, 1797. In October he was sent to Gibraltar, then actually besieged, and in the following December to the Mediterranean. In November, 1798, when he embarked with the expedition under Sir Charles Stuart, not only was he present at the capture of Minorca, but he was also the was appointed on the Staff in Minorca as Commandant of Mosquito Fort (the principal entrance to the harbour of Mahon), and in which shortly afterwards became Aide-de-Camp to the General commanding, the Hon. Henry Fox, brother to Lord Holland. He remained in Minorca until the evacuation of Minorca at the Peace of Amiens, in 1802. He became Captain, Aug., 1804; Major, 1811; Lieutenant-Colonel, 1813; and, on the force under Lieutenant-General Don, forming the advanced corps of our army during the campaign of 1813, which Colonel Gardiner left Germany, combined with the Russian army under Count Tolstoy. They advanced on the 18th of October to the attack of the enemy's position on and to the campaign, and the army returned home. After further service Captain Gardiner joined the army under Lord Hill in the south of France, in 1814. He landed with it at Passage Bay, and, advancing from Lavaos on the 10th of August, he commanded the 52nd Light Infantry in the action of that day, and in the crowning success against Jonzé at Villeneu on the 21st, followed by the capture of Bayonne. Colonel Gardiner was present at the battle of Orthez, and was appointed to the command of the 52nd Regiment, which he retained in the prolonged struggle commencing on the 24th of December at Garris, and ending on the 27th of February, 1814, at the battle of Tarbes. At the battle of Barrosa, in which his battery bore a conspicuous part. He was Quatre Bras and Waterloo. In 1815 he was created a K.C.B. On the reorganisation of the Scottish Corps, in 1822, he was appointed Sub-Colonel, Sir Robert Gardiner acted as principal equerry. On his Royal Highness's accession to the throne, in 1830, he was appointed Groom of the Bedchamber, on the Clarence staff. He was military Aide-de-camp to the King, 1831, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, which regiment he commanded in 1841. In 1848 he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General, and Commandant of the Fourth Battalion Royal Artillery in 1854, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, in 1861, when he succeeded Colonel Sir Archibald Alison, Bart. Sir Robert Gardiner married, first, Frances, daughter of Joseph Gardiner, Esq., by Rebecca, daughter of Sir Harry Burrard, Bart., by whom he has had issue (with two daughters, the eldest of whom, Frances Elizabeth, married, first, Captain Hamilton, 26th Foot) six sons—viz., Charles Holmes, his successor; Henry John, of Manor House, Hants; Thomas Edmund, a Major in the 18th Regiment, and Captain 11th Foot; George; William Owen, Lieutenant 2nd Dragoon Guards (late 93rd Foot); and Richard Combe.

SIR D. GARDINER.

General Sir Robert William Gardiner G.C.B., Colonel-Commandant R.H.A., whose death has been announced, was the eldest son of Admiral Gardiner (3rd Bart), by his wife, Mary, daughter of Jonathan Allison, Esq., of Hebburn, county Durham, and was born in 1781. He entered the army as Lieutenant-General Sir John Gardiner. He was born May 7, 1781, joined the 52nd Light Infantry, and served in the Peninsular campaigns, including the Royal Artillery, April 7, 1797. In October he was sent to Gibraltar, then actually besieged, and in the following December to the Mediterranean. In November, 1798, when he embarked with the expedition under Sir Charles Stuart, not only was he present at the capture of Minorca, but he was also the was appointed on the Staff in Minorca as Commandant of Mosquito Fort (the principal entrance to the harbour of Mahon), and in which shortly afterwards became Aide-de-Camp to the General commanding, the Hon. Henry Fox, brother to Lord Holland. He remained in Minorca until the evacuation of Minorca at the Peace of Amiens, in 1802. He became Captain, Aug., 1804; Major, 1811; Lieutenant-Colonel, 1813; and, on the force under Lieutenant-General Don, forming the advanced corps of our army during the campaign of 1813, which Colonel Gardiner left Germany, combined with the Russian army under Count Tolstoy. They advanced on the 18th of October to the attack of the enemy's position on and to the campaign, and the army returned home. After further service Captain Gardiner joined the army under Lord Hill in the south of France, in 1814. He landed with it at Passage Bay, and, advancing from Lavaos on the 10th of August, he commanded the 52nd Light Infantry in the action of that day, and in the crowning success against Jonzé at Villeneu on the 21st, followed by the capture of Bayonne. Colonel Gardiner was present at the battle of Orthez, and was appointed to the command of the 52nd Regiment, which he retained in the prolonged struggle commencing on the 24th of December at Garris, and ending on the 27th of February, 1814, at the battle of Tarbes. At the battle of Barrosa, in which his battery bore a conspicuous part. He was Quatre Bras and Waterloo. In 1815 he was created a K.C.B. On the reorganisation of the Scottish Corps, in 1822, he was appointed Sub-Colonel, Sir Robert Gardiner acted as principal equerry. On his Royal Highness's accession to the throne, in 1830, he was appointed Groom of the Bedchamber, on the Clarence staff. He was military Aide-de-camp to the King, 1831, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, which regiment he commanded in 1841. In 1848 he was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General, and Commandant of the Fourth Battalion Royal Artillery in 1854, and Colonel of the 52nd Light Infantry, in 1861, when he succeeded Colonel Sir Archibald Alison, Bart. Sir Robert Gardiner married, first, Frances, daughter of Joseph Gardiner, Esq., by Rebecca, daughter of Sir Harry Burrard, Bart., by whom he has had issue (with two daughters, the eldest of whom, Frances Elizabeth, married, first, Captain Hamilton, 26th Foot) six sons—viz., Charles Holmes, his successor; Henry John, of Manor House, Hants; Thomas Edmund, a Major in the 18th Regiment, and Captain 11th Foot; George; William Owen, Lieutenant 2nd Dragoon Guards (late 93rd Foot); and Richard Combe.

THE PRINCIPAL OF ST. EDMUND HALL, OXFORD.

The Rev. Edward William Grinfield, M.A., Principal of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, and Rector of Catcombe, Isle of Wight, who, to the great sudden regret, died on Thursday morning last, was the second surviving son of Canon Bay, on the 6th inst., whilst bathing, was in his forty-second year at the time of his death. He was born at Bishopstone, in the parish of Stanford, in the Vale of White Horse, and received his early education at Bishopstone, under the Rev. Thomas Bell, Rector of that parish. He afterwards went to Eton, and subsequently to Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his degree of B.A. in 1836, and M.A. in 1838. Shortly after his ordination (1838-9) he became an assistant master at Eton, and published, in 1841, a work followed by "An Address to Protestants" (1841), "Reflections on Infidelity" (1841), "Hints on Public Schools" (1842), "Sermons on the Parables" (1849), "The Bulwarks of the English Church" (1850), "The Resurrection of Physiology" (1850), "Thoughts on Broughan's Education Bill" (1851), "The Doctrinal Harmony of the New Testament" (1854), &c. Between 1827 and 1843 he produced nothing, being engaged on his famous "Novum Testamentum Hellenicon," which cost him fifteen years' work, at seven hours a day, and in which there are 40,000 quotations, the author's object being to show the connection between the Septuagint and the Greek Testament. In 1846 he wrote "Scholia Hellenistica," two years later "An Apology for the Septuagint." He was a very laborious and modest scholar, and a few years back founded the Oxford University prize, which goes by his name, for the study of the Septuagint.

THOMAS COLLEY GRATTAN, ESQ.

Thomas Colley Grattan, Esq., of Belgrave-square, essayist, and writer, was a scion of the family of Grattan, of Ednederry, in King's County, and was, no doubt, on his name inheriting from the former possessor of that seat, the Colleys, a line illustrious as the ancestral stem of the statesman of Ireland, Henry Grattan. Mr. Grattan was himself the son of Colley Grattan, Esq., of Ednederry, and was born in Dublin, in 1796. His early life was passed in Dublin in the type of a compositor, and in that capacity he afterwards acted as a volunteer in the South American army in the War of Independence under the celebrated Sir Thomas Beauchamp Bridges Macdonald. Thence he went to reside in Holland, and at Heidelberg, where he wrote his "Legends of the Rhine" and "Agnes de Mansfeldt." Mr. Grattan was, on Sept. 24, 1831, appointed one of the Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber to King William IV., and on March 1, 1838, he received the special request of Leopold, King of Belgium, made British Consul at Boston—an office which gave a new turn to his talents and led him to write those works on the boundary question in America. He, in July, 1848, with the permission of Government, resigned his consulship, and on his return to London Grattan, Esq. (now Consul at Antwerp), who had been acting as his deputy. Mr. Grattan's later productions are "Civilised America," "Highways and Byways," "The Heiress of the Conscript's Bride," "England and the Disrupted States of America," and "James Duffy, and Other Tales." Mr. Grattan died on the 4th inst., after a severe illness, at his residence, 117, Jermyn-street.

JOHN DALTON, ESQ.

John Dalton, Esq., of Sheningford Park, Yorkshire, and Fillingham Castle, Lincolnshire, J.P., and D.L., for Lincolnshire, formerly a captain in the 52nd Regiment, "squire" families in the county of York, was the eldest son of John Dalton, Esq., of Sheningford and Fillingham Castle, by his wife, Penelope, eldest daughter of General Robert Prescott, of Rose Green, Sussex. He was born in 1791, and married, first, Dorothea, daughter of Thomas Wilkinson, Esq., of Leeds, by whom he had issue three sons, John, his successor; Richard Henry, Commander R.N., who married Miss Ellis, and was a Major in the 60th Foot; and six daughters, of whom five have been married—viz., Mrs. Frederick Thompson, of Kirby Hall, Yorkshire; Mrs. Grattan, wife of Thomas Colley Grattan, Esq.; Wellins Locke, and Mrs. W. Crompton. Mr. Dalton married, secondly, in 1844, Emma, daughter of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Charles Ibbetson, third Baronet, of Newland Park, Yorkshire, and aunt of Sir Charles Edward Ibbetson, the fifth Baronet, by whom he has had issue one son, also by her. Mr. Dalton, who was formerly in the Army and rose to the rank of Captain, having served in the 4th Light Dragoons in the Peninsula, died on the 1st inst. He is succeeded by his eldest son, John Dalton, Esq., formerly an officer in the 52nd Light Infantry, who has married, in 1841, his cousin, Georgiana, eldest daughter of Colonel Henry Tower, of the Grange, Castle Howard Hall, Essex, and has issue. This family of Dalton was originally seated at Kingston-on-Hull, and afterwards in Richmondshire, in the county of York. Sir William Dalton, Knight, Attorney-General of the King's Counsel for the northern parts, was Recorder of York and Hull and Attorney-General to the Council of York. His son, John Dalton, a Cavalier, fell in the Civil War, being slain at the bridge of Burton-on-Trent, while conducting Queen Henrietta Maria from Bridlington to Oxford. From him descended John Dalton, Esq., of Sheningford, just deceased.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

ANABAS SCANDENS (THE CLIMBING FISH).—Dr. Brisbane Neill has printed, in the Annals of Natural History, the following additional particulars respecting this remarkable creature, received from Dr. Bryce, Captain Jess Mitchell, of the Madras Museum :—"Bungasawny brought to me this morning, on my way to the observatory, one of the Anabas Scandens, to show me how it progressed. It was really most amusing to see these creatures crawling along the rattan mat. They progress by means of the pectoral fin operculum, which they open and shut with great rapidity, moving first on one side and then on the other. The dorsal fin appeared also to be used, but I could not see that the tail was of much assistance. So long as the function of movement was carried on by the pectoral fin operculum, the tail but one fellow got on the line of the rattans and seemed much bothered, until he clambered up the rattan, when he progressed with ease. I have three fish in my aquarium, where they seem quite at home. They do not appear to breathe like other fish—at least, I could not see any motion of the gill covering, nor perceiving any motion of the lips or operculum."

THE FOSSIL REMAINS OF THE MEGALOSAURUS were described by Mr. James Powrie in a paper read at a recent meeting of the Geological Society, and which gave a general sketch of the relations of the several beds and deposits of the series of strata between and with overlying it. Mr. Powrie, before proceeding to five genera, two of which are new. He concluded with a short synopsis of the fossil remains found in the Oxford clay and coral rock on Forfarshire and a discussion respecting the reference of that formation.

RESTORATION OF NERVE.—M. Langier has recently communicated to the Academy of Medicine of Paris the results of a method for re-establishing sensibility and motion in paralysed nerves by the section of adjacent muscles and nerves, as affirmed by M. Velpeau, who was present, the return of the functions is very rapid, a fact completely denied by some physiologists. Details will appear in No. 4 of the Gazette Hebdomadaire, vol. viii.

THE PUBLIC WATERS OF MARSEILLES.—In a paper on this subject, read before the Paris Academy of Sciences, M. Grimaud (who has received from that body a prize for his researches on the hygienic influence of water) points out the errors of the ancients in this important city, the third in the empire, with a population of 230,000 souls. He reminds the audience of the three constructions made to supply the city with potable water being the only one manageable by men, yet exercising so important an influence over the health of the people. The other most reprehensible fault in the arrangement of the streets are censured by M. Grimaud as likely to lead to enormous injuries to the public health.

NON-METALLIC IMPURITIES IN REFINED COPPER.—In the next number of The Chemical Journal Mr. Spencer will be found a paper on this subject by Mr. F. A. Abel, F.R.S., in which he gives the results of a great number of experiments made by himself during the last several years. They have determined the presence of small quantities of oxygen, carbon, selenium, phosphorus; but no other impurities has been found, and nitrogen has not been detected in any appreciable quantity. The paper will be examined with much interest by all engaged in copper refining.

THE BONE AND CAVE DEPOSITS IN THE SOUTH OF FRANCE (of the Reindeer period) which are still being explored under the able direction of M. Lartet, and which have been described in the Revue Archéologique, is celebrated for his paleontological researches, accompanied by Messrs. Christy, Hamilton, Lubbock, Boyd Dawkins, Jones, Franks, and Captain Godwin-Austen, has submitted to the Geological Society a detailed description of the physical features of the district, the nature and composition of the various caverns, and giving a list of the most remarkable organic remains discovered in the same species from all the caverns. He then discussed the antiquity of the deposits under the following methods of inquiry, namely—from geological considerations with regard to the character and position of the caves; from the palæontological evidence of the remains found in them; and the archæological character of the objects of human workmanship; and from a comparison with the evidence afforded by corresponding classes in France, and he came to the conclusion that they belonged to a period subsequent to that of the Elephas primigenius and Rhinoceros tichorhinus, but antecedent to the presence of the reindeer and some other animals now extinct in that part of Europe.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN.—In regard to this subject, we desire to draw the attention of each of our readers as are interested in the controversy to articles in the last two numbers of Fraser, by Professor Huxley (on the Neanderthal skull) and by Mr. John Lubbock (on Cave-men). The former, we think, has shown that there has been by no means sufficient to the degree from certain existing skulls, examines the opinions of King, Meyer, Schaaffhausen, and Turner at considerable length, and illustrates his views by engravings. Mr. Lubbock describes the numerous animal remains found in various caves, and winds up by saying :—"On the whole, then, though we cannot as yet determine what variety or varieties of men then existed, we find in the bone-caves of Britain evidence that man was coeval in Europe with the great group of quaternary mammalia. Since the period at which these caves were filled, the physical geography which has taken place must have resulted either in the extinction then in the creation of species. All our existing species of mammalia, with the exception of the bear, dog, and reindeer, were already in existence, and there would have been more just cause for surprise if human remains had been found in the caves." We admire the candour with which he readers must draw their own conclusions. It is not our office to decide.

RESPIRATION OF FRUIT.—M. Frémy has reported to the Academy of Sciences at Paris the results of his experiments on this subject made upon oranges. At the end of his report, he submits the following chemical considerations in regard to the researches of MM. Decaisne, Cahours, and Chatin:—The first period in the history of fruit is its development. In the second period (that of ripening) the green colour disappears and is replaced by a yellowish brown; the fruit then transforms the oxygen of the air into carbonic acid; a slow combustion is produced in the cellules, which has the effect of augmenting the decomposition of the immediate principles of the cellules—first the tannin, then the acid, and, finally, the sugar. Light is not indifferent on this respiration. The fruit placed in the dark is in decomposition, which has the effect of completely destroying the pericarp, or fleshy tegument, and setting the seed at liberty. Then the air penetrates into the cellules, and produces the phenomena of fermentation by acting on the sugar; and we observe alcoholic fermentation, which, by degrees, passes to the growing state, produces the aroma of fruits. But oxygen soon brings its destructive action on the new principles formed, and the fruit becomes putrid and decomposes. The pericarp of fruit thus traverses three periods of change, which explain the opinions of MM. Decaisne and Chatin, who say that in certain periods fruit transforms the oxygen of the air into carbonic acid.

HABITS OF THE GORILLA.—In the "Annals of Natural History Recent" Mr. Winwood Reade's work on Savage Africa, we extract some curious facts in regard which may serve to illustrate the article below:—"I am glad to find that the statements which were received by the scientific world two or three years ago. Mr. Reade asserts that repeated excursions into the African forests with the native hunters in search of the "great invisible" were all in vain, and that when he got on sound tracks, and even within a few yards, "the gorilla ran away." He states broadly that he does not believe that M. Du Chaillu ever killed a gorilla. According to Mr. Reade, who derived his evidence from the natives of three distinct districts of Equatorial Africa, the gorilla "is found in those thick and unhealthy spots of the forest where animal life is scarce. His food is strictly vegetable; he moves along the ground on all fours; sometimes he will climb into the trees to feed on fruit, and at night he sleeps in a large tree. When the female is pursued, the male hastens to her assistance, and which she abandons as soon as her young one is born. The gorilla does not beat its breast like a drum. It utters a kind of short, sharp bark when enraged, and its ordinary cry is of a plaintive nature. With regard to its fighting powers have a perusal. Leave a negro alone and it will leave you alone." When it is at bay and wounded, it will attack man, like the stag, the elephant, and other animals naturally timid; but, as it makes this attack on all-fours, the hunters, who are themselves as nimble as apes, often escape from its fury. Mr. Reade describes one of an elephant. I have seen a man who had been wounded by a gorilla; his wrist was crushed, and his head was bitten to the bone. He said that when the gorilla seized his wrist and dragged it into its mouth; it was contented with having done this, and went off. The natives approach at an early age to which the gorilla attains is by supporting itself by holding on to the branch. When the natives kill the female, the male will have never been killed by a gorilla, they said that their fathers had spoken of such a thing, but that nothing of the kind had happened within the memory of any living man. The African considers the leopard to be more dangerous than the gorilla, and Mr. Reade believes the chimpanzee to be more intelligent but not more docile than his "big brother."

THE GEOLOGY OF THE MALTESE ISLANDS is described by Dr. Leith Adams in the "Annals of Natural History." These islands run from north-east to south-east; their long axis, including the intermediate channels, does not exceed twenty-four miles. Malta, the most northern of the chain, is seventeen miles long by nine miles broad. Comino is two miles long by one in breadth; and Gozo, the next northern, is seven miles in length, with a breadth of about five miles. All the islands belong to one series, and, according to the local researches, to the undistinguished portion of the cretaceous, equivalent to the Hampstead beds in England, and of the middle territories of the Isle of Wight. Fossils are of the same fabulous nature—semi-lacustrine and marine, with a horizontal stratification, and are all conformable. The greatest thickness of the deposits equals nearly 800 feet, as shown in a well. The ship rises from about north-east to east-north-east, to emerging the lowermost beds, which are the opposite coast line, and then it goes over the sea level. The inclination is in a line with the Apennines and Sicilian range, from the Val di Noto, Mount Etna, and the Lipari Islands, which are also parallel to the great fault, the line of which runs to the north-west, and parallel with the Apennines. The most extensive denudative traverses are found on the coast of Malta, the remaining fault proceeds in a south-easterly direction to Gozo. There are, besides, local sea-levels; and ancient sea-levels are pointed in several directions. The islands apparently present themselves, from the sea level upwards, in the following order:—3. Lower limestone.—2. Calcareous sandstone.—1. Sand. 3. Upper limestone. Dr. Adams gives some characteristic details respecting these deposits.

THE MEDUSA OF ZANCLEA IMPLEXA.—In an article in the "Annals of Natural History on the Hydrozoa" Professor Agassiz describes this creature, remarkable for its singular pedunculated capsules, filled with threadcells, set about in whole length of the marginal tentacles. At the end of last April he dredged off the Portarlston coast a colony of the zanclea, which, after remaining for about a fortnight in a glass vessel, gave birth to a single medusæ. On examining these with a hand-lens as they floated in the water he was struck with the appearance of a muscle-like groove in each, which many of them seemed to be invested. That this, however, was something very different from what it appeared to be was soon manifest, for if the little medusa was touched with the point of a needle, the whole of the tentacles became instantly variable. A glance with power of the microscope showed that the apparently parasitical growth consisted of a commonly elongated pedicle, with a large oval investing capsule, each of which had the power, while still carrying the capsule on its extremity, of drawing itself to a length which considerably exceeded that of the longer or vertical diameter of the ostricella. While the medusa continued at rest undisturbed in the vessel, the pedunculi were generally projected in a straight line from the tentacle, becoming, at the same time, amazingly attenuated, but on the least disturbance they would become considerably shortened to less than the one-twentieth part of its length when extended, drawing the capsule back with it in its contraction. The pedunculi are composed of tiny tubes, with very fine capsules, to be in a state of constant vibration, and a cell of long fine vitrastile cilia on the uppermost end of every capsule.

RICININE is a new alkaloid obtained from the crushed seeds of the castor-oil plant (Ricinus communis) by Professor R. Tuson. The seeds are extracted by boiling; the solution evaporated over a water-bath to the consistence of an extract, which is exhausted by boiling alcohol. The filtrate on cooling deposits a small amount of crystalline matter, and is concentrated by filtration. The filtered liquid is then deprived of its excess of alcohol by distillation, and allowed to stand all night. After separating an almost white crystalline substance is found adhering to the sides and bottom of the vessel containing the above-mentioned concentrated "eau-de-vie." This crystalline body is ricinine; and in order to obtain it in a pure state it is only necessary to purify it from the "eau-de-vie" last named, and a small quantity of with animal charcoal. Ricinine crystallises in rectangular prisms and plates. When dried in vacuo it loses it slowly at 212° Fah. and fuses at a temperature not exceeding that of bitter almonds. Continuing heated on a glass plate, it melts and forms a colourless and mobile liquid, which, on cooling, solidifies into a wheat of acicular crystals. On heating it between two watch glasses a sublimate is formed, which appears to be analogous to that of benzoic acid. Ricinine is platinum foil, the alkaloid first melts and subsequently burns, with a highly-luminous and fuliginous flame. Professor Tuson found that ricinine is not poisonous to cats the purgative principle of the castor seeds. He mentions that many years ago Schweinitzer announced the discovery of an alkaloid "ricercetine" in the cascarilla bark—i.e., the bark of Croton eleuteria or Croton cascarilla, bole belonging to the natural order Euphorbiaceæ.

THE NEW COMET which M. Tempel discovered on the evening of the 3rd inst. has been seen by Dr. Rosegig, at the observatory of Bologna, on the morning of the 6th, at 3h. 59m. 30s. mean time. The position of the nucleus of the sky was at that latter observation difficult, but quite positive was determined pretty accurately. From Mr. Hind's letter in the "Times" of the 13th inst., we learn that Mr. Talmage, Dr. Hind's assistant at Mr. Bishop's observatory at Twickenham, computed an approximative orbit for this comet from his observations on the 10th. The present data are sufficient to indicate that the comet must approach the earth in the middle of August, probably with a distance sufficiently small to allow it to be long observed morning and evening for several days, with a considerable degree of brightness.

The Queen has appointed Edward John Eyre, Esq., (now Lieutenant-Governor), to be Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief in and over the island of Jamaica and the territories depending thereon.

Mr. Joseph Harcourt has been appointed Queen's counsel to the Attorney-General in matters connected with the Treasury, in the room of Mr. Welsby, deceased.

The report brought by the steamer Wonder of an engagement between the Rosargue and the Florida, off Jersey, is false, as we were able to announce in a considerable part of the impression last week.

The Central India Times has an account of a curious natural phenomenon which was observed some months since back at Pertabgurh, in the Chundwarsa district of the central provinces. A hail of considerable size "melted down," one night into a lake," and the natives are described as being, naturally enough, "lost in amazement." The probable volcanic origin of the hill will, our contemporary thinks, account for its subsidence.

A notice has been issued from the Post Office that on the 1st of August next, and thenceforward, patterns of merchandise may be transmitted by post between England and Ceylon and Hong-Kong, either viâ Southampton or viâ Marseilles, at the following rates of postage, which must, in all cases, be prepaid by means of postage stamps:—viâ Southampton, for a packet not exceeding four ounces, 6d.; above four ounces and not exceeding half-a-pound, 1s.; every additional half-pound, 1s. viâ Marseilles, for a packet not exceeding four ounces, 6d.; above four ounces and not exceeding half-a-pound, 1s.; every additional half-pound, 1s.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G. H. G.—They shall be reported on next week.

J. W. M.—If you engage to play a game of chess by correspondence, you are bound to play it out or resign it. In the particular game in question, we repeat that Black has the best of it. Your 11th move, Kt to Q B 3rd, is a blunder, which loses a piece. Your opponent's 12th move, Kt to Q 5th, wins the game. Black cannot extricate his Kt without a serious sacrifice.

ERRATA.—P to B 3rd (ch) 2. Kt to K 7th; and, 3. B to Q R 6th. The mate cannot be delayed.

J. P.—Much too obvious.

R. H. DE LA STAUNCH.—1. Your solution of Mr. Kling's problem, No. 1062, is the true one. 2. Your problems Nos. 4 and 5 shall be re-examined, and shall be reported on with the last. 3. It will be well for your problems, however, that one fine problem is worth a hundred mediocre compositions, and grow incomparably less trouble.

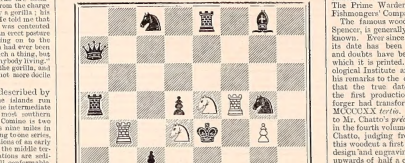
A. B. C.—Your problem, No. 1063, is a very pretty one, and just inspired, and have some difficulty, therefore, in finding the solution, of which four variations are duly furnished, is correct. It appears to us that, in the situation given, White may very easily make it even more easy by first playing his King.

K. C.—You have failed in Eleigmas Nos. 1397 and 1398. Nos. 1399 and 1001 you appear to have solved.

ALPHA AND OMEGA.—Your solution of No. 1062 is right.

H. B.—It is needless to ascribe motives, but you are quite safe in saying that the compose the games played between Mr. Boutlebeg and Mr. Wyvill, with those between Mr. Staunton and Cochrane is simply absurd. The first were contested with the greatest care and deliberation, and the latter were played in a manner which would disgrace a beginner. Mr. Staunton's play in the article before us is the greatest possible reptition by two players—one of whom (Cochrane) had hardly touched a chessmen for twenty years, and the other of whom was a young gentleman who had never played but one match against a player of repute since he entered the chess arena.

J. P.—Your communication is received, and shall be attended to. Many questions not absolutely necessary. To reply to your string of queries, most of which are purely fundamental matters, easily found in any chess-book, would cause an absorption of half a column of our short allowance.



J. B., Birmingham.—The key to Mr. Lehmer's beautiful Enigma, No. 1398, is Kt to Q 8th. If Black move, Kt to Q 6th (ch), or Kt to K 5th (ch), or Kt to Q B 6th (ch), or Kt to K B 5th (ch). Black move either of the Pawns, White mates with Q to Q B 8th.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1064.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q R 6th (ch)	K to Q B 4th	3. Kt to Q 8th (ch)	K moves, or
2. B to K 8th	Any move.	4. B mates accordingly.	the Knights

PROBLEM No. 1065.
By Mr. L. I. Watts.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

A NEW RECORD OF OLD GAMES.

The following Skirmish was one of many played between Mr. Staunton and Mr. Cochrane, with the object of testing a variation by the former in the Scotch opening, which appeared in the "Chessplayer's Handbook," page 170:—

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr.—)	WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr.—)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	8. K to Q B 2nd	K to Q 2nd
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	9. Q to K 2nd	Q to Q 5th
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P	10. Kt takes Q P	P takes Kt
4. Q takes P	Q to K R 4th	11. Kt takes Q R	P to Q 3rd
5. Kt to Q Kt 5th	P to K 5th	12. Kt to K 4th	Q to K 2nd
		13. B to Q B 4th	B to K 3rd (ch)
(The point in dispute was whether this move was sound. It would be somewhat adopted by reply to Kt to Q B 3rd, move of Black—Q to K R 5th. The games		14. P to Q B 3rd	Kt to K B 3rd
		15. Kt to Q 3rd	P to Q B 4th
		16. P to K B 4th	B to K B 4th
		17. P to K B 5th	B to K 2nd
		18. K takes B	B takes Kt
		19. B takes Q (ch)	R takes B
		20. B takes Q P	Kt to Q B 3rd
		21. B takes K P	B takes B
		22. R takes B	B to Q 3rd
		23. B to K 3rd	Kt to Q 5th
		24. R to K B 8th (ch)	K to Q 2nd
		25. R to K 8th	R to K 2nd
		26. K takes Kt, and	White must win.

to be that it could not; but the author of the "Handbook" has since discovered a way to expose it. We, however, have not yet had an opportunity of testing the matter in actual play.)

5.	B to Q B 4th

(It may be well to remark, for the benefit of the uninitiated, that if the recent player Q to K R 5th, Black would be forced to put his Bishop to obtain an inferior position. Thus:

	B takes K P (ch)
6. K to K 2nd	K to Q 2nd

If he play it to Q 3rd, for the purpose of saving his Q Pawn, White may capture it, and keep his King's Pawn guarded.)

7. Castles	P to K R 3rd
8. P to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q 4th

An instructive Game between Mr. STAUNTON and one of the best Players of the age. (Scotch Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P
4. P to K B 4th	P to Q 4th
5. B to K Kt 5th	P to K R 3rd
6. B to K Kt 4th	P to K B 4th
7. Castles	B to Q B 4th
8. B to K B 3rd	P to Q 5th
9. P to K 5th	Q to K B 3rd
10. Q to K 2nd	Kt to K 2nd
11. P to Q Kt 4th	B to Q Kt 3rd
12. P to K R 4th	P to Q R 4th
13. P to K Kt 3rd	Q to K Kt 5th
14. P to K R 5th	P to K B 5th
15. Q Kt to Q 2nd	Kt to K Kt 3rd
16. Q R to Q B 2nd	Kt to K 4th
17. B to K B 2nd	P to Q R 5th

(Bold, but good, stake it enables him to bring Queen's Rook into play at once.)

18. Kt takes Q P	B to K 3rd
19. Kt takes Kt P	Q to K R 4th
20. Q to K 4th	Q to K R 4th
21. Q to K 6th	Q to K Kt 4th
22. Kt to Q B 4th	K to K sq

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 1340.—By Mr. HERLIN.

White: K at K 6th, Bs at K 8th and Q R 2nd, Ds at sf. K 5th and Q R 6th, Kts at K 8th and Q Kt 3rd, Ps at K 4th and 6th.

Black: K at K 4th, R at Q 8th, B at Q 8th, B at Q sf 7th, Kts at K R 7th and Q B sq; Ps at K 3rd, K B 6th, and Q Kt 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 1341.—By Mr. HERLIN.

White: K at Q 2nd, R at Q 6th, Kts at K B 3rd and Q B 7th, P at K B 5th.

Black: K at K B 4th, Kts at K B 8th and K 6th, Ps at K B 6th and K 7th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

[Solutions next week.]

THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF THE TREASURY.

The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury have decided not to carry into effect, at present, the alterations in the rates of postage on letters addressed to the Australian colonies and to New Zealand, by packet and by private ship, which were ordered to take place on the 1st inst.; and a Treasury minute has been issued, announcing that the rates of postage of 6d. the 4oz. letter, viâ Southampton; 10d. the ½oz. letter, viâ Marseilles; 6d. the ½oz. letter, by private ship. Those rates must be paid in advance.

COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

ONE of the civic events of last week was the celebration of the five hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of the wealthy Company of Fishmongers. The anniversary was Sunday, July 10, and the commemorative festival was held in their noble hall at Lothbury, London, on Tuesday, the 12th inst.—James Spicer, Esq., Prime Warden, in the chair. The whole of the livery of the company were invited, with a few visitors of note, among whom were Mr. Justice Hailburton, M.P.; Mr. G. Hadfield, M.P.; Mr. T. Barnes, M.P.; Mr. E. Baines, M.P.; and Colonel Salt Bey. The usual loyal toasts having been duly honoured, the Prime Warden rose to give the toast of the evening, which he prefaced by a remarkably interesting summary of the history of the Fishmongers' Company since its incorporation 500 years since, and its existence as a guild two centuries earlier. The royal letters patent of the 10th of July, 37 Edward III. (1364), the fraternity was incorporated nawe, by the name of the Mystery of the Fishmongers of London. They were named in the charter the mystaries and the mistery, and were annexed in the reign of Henry II. The earliest Parliamentary enactment on record in connection with the fishing trade is that of 1283, who was glorified, on his return from his Scottish victory, in 1298, with a most splendid pageant by the Fishmongers, in which figured gilt galleys and silver salmon, and a thousand minstrels were in the year before their incorporation the company had made Edward III. a present of money towards carrying on his wars, which sum being, we sum being £40, only one pound less than the Mercers, who were the highest company. The history of the Fishmongers abounds with curious details of their trade and mystery; and their regulations, even to the crying of fish, are very minute. The ancient market can be traced; and in the charter-house in the Lothbury may be seen the splendid banner and wealthy fishmongers, besides the gallant Mayor who struck down the rebel in Smithfield. Throughout the whole century of the company's existence was a fit subject for commemoration and congratulation. The Prime Warden then proceeded to propose "Prosperity to the Fishmongers' Company," which was drunk with enthusiasm.

The famous woodcut, the property of, belonged to Lord Spencer, is generally considered the most ancient woodcut with a date known. Ever since its discovery, in 1769, however, the authenticity of its date has been questioned, and it has been ascribed to 1418; and doubts have been raised as to the genuineness of the paper on which it is printed. Mr. W. Chatto has lately read to the Archæological Institute an interesting inquiry upon the subject, confining his remarks to the consideration of the date. He ingeniously showing that the true date is not 1423, but 1453; believing that on the first production of the cut to Baron Henecken, in 1760, a forger had transformed, by an easy process, MCCCCXXIII into MCCCCXX tertio. This cut is engraved as one of the illustrations to Mr. Chatto's great work on Wood Engraving, its History and Practice," in the fourth volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, p. 252. Mr. Chatto, judging from the manner of its execution, does not consider this woodcut a first attempt. It is, in fact, much superior both in design and engraving to many of the cuts of similar subjects, executed upwards of half a century later. It is a fine, bold specimen of the art of Mr. Holt in the above paper.

Three valuable additions have just been made, by purchase, to the British Museum. The first is the collection of remains found in the cavern at Abbeville, which is important in an archæological and prehistoral point of view, and will throw light upon the question started by Sir Charles Lyell in his work on "The Antiquity of Man." Here we have the identical articles found in the Danish kitchen-middens, consisting as well as specimens of the cave itself, in which the stones and bones were found mixed up. For this collection £1000 has been paid. The second acquisition is a large, round, tomb on the site of Julian's palace, which was probably of a date prior to the Christian era; it is considered, by Dr. Gredy, to be in good condition, and in a most beautiful work. The third acquisition is the Furness Collection, which is purely classical, and contains a number of valuable specimens of art in the Parliamentary vote and not be enabled to see the treasures until some time has elapsed, and the interest in the subjects has consequently abated.

Antiquities are lowly estimated at Southampton, for the Corporation decline to purchase the celebrated Bevis Mark Gate of that famous town, at a cost of £45 for the wall, or of £300 for the wall and its site together. It is urged that the Corporation are building a Martley Institution, renovating the Bar-gate, improving the park, &c., it would be an act of Vandalism to allow the to be destroyed Mark Wall, a relic of the Norman foundation of the town; we think so, too.

The Metropolitan Board of Works are getting into hot water by the Clerkenwell Vestry, which complains of roads and streets of much less meaning than those they displace. At Islington they have changed the Lamb's road to Essex-road, and Hackney-road, and the county of Essex having a puzzling remoteness. Then their amalgamations of streets lead to "high numbers"—stumbling-blocks in more streets than one to persons slightly addicted to calculations, and arithmetic.

The new Morgue, or Dead-house, at Paris is nearly completed, behind the Cathedral of Notre Dame, on the old Morgue, on the Quai du Marché Neuf, built sixty years ago, is shortly to be taken down. The statistics of the last ten years of Death's "acute-court" are these:—

The number of bodies exposed for identification was 3741, of which 2241 were males; 493 of the number were newly-born infants. About seven-eighths of the whole were found dead in the bodies recognised. In the years, 1244 were those of persons between twenty and forty years of age (1068 males, 176 females). The greatest number of deaths taken to the Morgue in the period above mentioned was 1766, of whom 1414 put an end to their existence by drowning, 114 by hanging, 74 by poison, 72 by fire-arms, 66 by charcoal, 46 by leaping from high buildings, 18 by sharp instruments, 11 by poison, 7 by throwing themselves under the wheels of carriages, and 4 by breaking beauty or other spirits. The chief causes of suicide were insanity (230), drunkenness (84), want (76), domestic troubles (60), illness (unspecified) love (62), domestic troubles (50), delirium in fevers (12). About 22 per cent of the suicides were soldiers.

Excellent use has lately been made of "treasure-trove" in Cornwall. In taking down an old "poorhouse" in the churchyard of Lanlyan parish, the workmen discovered a number of coins in good preservation—eighty of the reigns of Elizabeth, James, and Charles. The Vicar, to whom they were delivered, has communicated with the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, who waived the right of the Crown to them. The proceeds will be applied towards the repairs of the parish church.

We have been favoured with the following interesting communication on the Cimbrian Chersonese, from the Rev. Mr. Chantrell:—

As the attention of the public is directed to the Danes in the brave and painful conflict which they are waging with the Germans, it may not be an important point in their national history which has been too generally mistaken. I allude to the erroneous relation of the Danes and the Scandinavians to the ancient Cimbri, or Cimbrians, and the Cimmerians. It is notorious that the last two names have been frequently confounded not by the old classic writers called the Cimbrian Chersonese, which was once a peninsula, but is now an island, and the Cimmerians, who, however, clearly demonstrable that these Cimbrians (meaning ourselves) were a German race, and their memorable irruption into Italy was a migration of the Germans. But these Cimbri, or Cimbrians, who gave their name to Cumberland, have been, by many historical writers, confounded with the Cimmerians (by dark people), who belonged to the Celtic race, and who are still to be recognised among the Cymry, or Welsh, in Wales, as well as the ancient Britons, were generally dark, with eyes as black as those of a Jew or a gipsy. Old Herodotus plainly distinguishes the Cimmerians, who were driven out of Europe by the Scythians, or Turanic Cheramians, or the Cimmerians, from the German and Gothic races. It is now generally admitted that the Cimmerians were a southern people. They gradually advanced through Greece, Italy, and Spain; and they occupied a large portion of France and Britain, under the name of Cymri, Gaels, Gaels, and Celts. That dear old pragmatical, Homer, is right enough when he tells us that the Cimmerians dwelt on the furthest west, enveloped in constant mists and glooms. Thus the poems of Ossian describe them in Scotland and Ireland, and he informs us that the very ghosts of those heroic barbarians were generally seated astride of a black fog and wrapt in a mantle of thick Highland drizzle. But to be grave, it is a very remarkable fact that two of the most various wars of our time have taken place on the Cimbrian Chersonese and the Cimmerian Bosphorus. In the one, the something dimmerians in the very same—Scandinavian land island, the Danes and Germans—and in the other, the Cimmerians

W. M. THACKERAY.—The following Noblemen and Gentlemen have applied to the Very Reverend the Dean of Westminster for permission to attend in Westminster Abbey, a Memorial to the late WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY:

Richard Ansdell	William Ernest Gladstone, M.P.
John Bacon	Sir Roderick Murchison
John Blackwood	F. Seymour Haden
William Bradbury	James Hannay
Sir John Brown	W. J. Higgins
Stanley Brooke	Matthew D. Hill
W. J. Broderip, Q.C.	Leigh Hunt
Lord Houghton	George W. Hunt
Robert Carruthers	Henry Irving
Henry Cole	Henry King
Wingrove Cooke	Alexander Macmillan
Austin Dobson	John Leech
Thomas Crowquill	Mark Lemon
S. R. Dalton	Charles Mackay
Charles Dickens	James Spedding
Edward Dicey	Herbert Stanfield
J. M. Dodson	J. Fitzjames Stephen
Joseph Durham	Sir James Stephen
Miss Eliz. A. Sinclair	Mrs. Taylor
Alfred Elwes	Martin Thackeray
Luke Fildes	Anthony Trollope
F. H. Fox	William S. Weir
Thomas Fraser	Sir Charles Wood, M.P.
Sir Bruce Richard Frazer, Bart.	Benjamin Webster
M. Gerenflo	Dr. Munk

The lines of Westminster having granted the desired permission, the subscriptions in aid of the object will be received only by Messrs. Richard Ansdell, 46, 16, London-street, S.W.

Immediately on the closing the subscription, a List of the Subscribers will be published, and a Circular issued relative to a Meeting for the purpose of considering on the necessary arrangements.

STREET BROOKS, Kent-terrace, Regent's Park, Hon. Sec.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND.
INCORPORATED BY ACT OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY.
Banker to the Government of New Zealand, the Provincial Councils of Auckland, Canterbury, Otago, &c.
CAPITAL £500,000. RESERVE FUND, £50,000.

Branches and Agencies in New Zealand.

Auckland	Nelson	Oamaru	Invercargill
Port Nicholson	Napier	Timaru	Riverton
Taranaki	Akaroa	Wellington	Wanganui
Wellington	Christchurch	Nelson	Blenheim
Wanganui	Kaiapoi	Westport	Kaiapoi
Picton	Lyttelton	Dunedin	Queenstown
Blenheim	Timaru	Invercargill	Hokitika

This Bank grants Drafts on any of the above-named places in New Zealand, and transacts every description of Banking business connected with that colony, on terms which may be learned on application at the Bank's LOMBARD-STREET, LARKWORTHY,
No. 33, Old Broad-street, City. Managing Director.

£1000 IN CASE OF DEATH, or an allowance of £5 per week while laid up by accident, by the purchase of any kind, whether walking, driving hunting, shooting, fishing, or at home, may be secured by an annual payment of £2 to the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY. For particulars apply at the Offices, 10, Regent-street, and 64, Cornhill. WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

FROM HER MAJESTY'S 4TH KING'S OWN REGIMENT.—THE GATESONIAN MINSTRELS, or Entertainers of Character. This remarkable and highly talented family of young musicians and composers will shortly visit London. Every Description of Music performed, for Soirées, for Garrison engagements, &c. Address Albert-villa, Blackpool, Lancashire.

MALVERN PROPRIETARY COLLEGE COMPANY (LIMITED).
President and Visitor—His Right Reverend the LORD BISHOP of WORCESTER.
Head Master—The Rev. ARTHUR MAYER, M.A., Fellow and late Tutor of New College, Oxford.
The Council hereby give Notice that the Malvern College will be opened for the reception of Pupils on THURSDAY, JAN. 26, 1865, and will be ready for the Boarders on that day.
The Internal Arrangements of the College will be under the sole management of the Head Master, from whom information regarding them may be obtained, and to whom all Applications for Admission should be made to the Secretary, HENRY BUTLER, Esq., Solicitor, Worcester, from whom also may be obtained Prospectuses.
Malvern, June 15, 1864.

ISLE OF MAN.—HILL'S ROYAL HOTEL, DOUGLAS, overlooking the Pier, Parade, Esplanade, and Steamboats, 3s. 1st day. Inclusive a stamp for an interesting Sketch of the Island. Mrs. HILL.

MONEY.—Mr. W. F. MORRIS'S Offices are still at No. 11, Basinghall-buildings, Basinghall-street, where settlements and greatly-reduced rates to estates, and families can have immediate accommodation on their bill, or on estimated property, reversions, legacies, dowries, annuities, or annuities, by way of mortgage, at 3 per cent. No preliminary loss, unnecessary publicity, or delay.

CANCER HOSPITAL, London and Brompton.
This many other claims on public benevolence, and no charitable become having been received during the present year, the Governors have been induced to open a new Ward, containing 10 beds, for the reception for eight indoor patients. The admission of cases is necessarily restricted for want of funds, excepting cases of the most urgent character, which are admitted under urgent necessity. The munificent and benevolent are urgently solicited for DONATIONS.
Treasurer, Sir Benjamin Phillips, Knt., 66, Lombard-street, E.C.
Bankers—Messrs. Coutts and Co.
Secretary's office—67, Portland-place, W. J. COCKERILL, Secretary.

MAYALL'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAIT GALLERY, 224 and 225, Regent-street (corner of Argyll-place). CARTES DE VISITE and highly-finished PHOTOGRAPHS up to life-size taken daily. Specimens and Lists of prices per post.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES.—The largest and best selection is at CALLAGHAN'S, 324, New Bond-street. W. (corner of Conduit-street). Any of these illustrations mounted glasses are recently made for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and may be had of CALLAGHAN, 324, New Bond-street. Sole London Agent for the celebrated Race and Field Glasses made by Voigtländer, Vienna.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, patented Nov. 19, 1861.—THIS TOURISTS' FAVOURITE shows landscape distinctly at thirty miles, small windows ten miles off. Aquirer says: "The Reconnoiterer outdoes and surpasses the result from extraordinary division of labour. The Reconnoiterer is the best glass I ever had." Sold by Opticians, and by the Patentee, 3, Hungerford-market, Strand. Caution.—Beware of worthless imitations, not complete satisfaction, and is consequently good."—Sir Digby Cayley. "Quite as powerful as that for which I paid five guineas."—Major Hackey, Wembley Hall, Nantwich. "I never before met an article which so completely answered its description."—Rev. J. Bulmer, Bedale. "I can highly recommend it, a clear vanishing as much angle for its size, with so much charming."—F. H. Fawkes, of Farnley, Esq. "It does carefully what it was meant to fully equal to others which had cost more than four times its price."—Rev. J. Bulmer. "Your glass is very good, and I am glad I got it."—Mr. Spencer, formerly to a pleasure-ship."—Rev. Mr. Gurney. "Hynes' Glass shows bullet marks at 1000 yards, and men at 15 miles. Sir H. Hay shows glasses only to be had direct from SALOM and CO., 98, Prince-street, Edinburgh. No agents.

GOODWOOD RACE GLASSES.—The best and most powerful Glasses. New Bond-street, W. (corner of Conduit-street). N.B. Sole agent to Voigtländer, Vienna.

PHOTOGRAPHIC BATHS, TRAYS, DIPPERS, DECANTERS, DEVELOPING-CUPS, SPONGING DISHES, &c., &c. PATENT NEGATIVE, very light, and not liable to break. PURE COLLODION, and every requisite for photography. Sensitive is of stored sugar-candy, and will keep for months. Lists of prices and specimens forwarded on application to HENRY SILVERLY, Photographic Glass Works and Telescope Cradle Company (Limited), 7 and 8, Bishopsgate-street Within, London. Telegraphic address, "Silverly, London."

MARBLE CHIMNEYPIECES. — EVANS, SON, and CO. respectfully invite the attention of purchasers to their extensive Stock of the above, which for Variety of Design and Finish, is unique, adapted to every style of decoration, and to suit apartments of every size.
Show-rooms, 42, and 34, Upper Wimpole-street, London Bridge.

THOAS'S PATENT SEWING-MACHINES, the Most Simple Family use. Descending &c. They will Hem, Bind, Braid, Gather, Stitch, &c., &c. Descriptive Catalogues and Samples of the work may be had on application to W. F. Thomas and Co., 4, Cheapside; and Regent-circus, Oxford-street.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY'S MEETING at NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—Stand 138.—EXHIBITION of NEW PATENT TOOL-WASHING MACHINE. Bradford's New Patent Carts.
See New Catalogue, free by post Cathedral Buys, Manchester. 25, Fleet-street, London; and Cathedral Buys, Manchester.

FLOWER-STANDS and BASKETS for the Conservatory, Drawing-room, or elegant assortment in Gold and all Colours at HOWELL, JAMES, and CO.'s, Decorators, 13, Baker-street, Portman-square. Tide "London Society."

TRELOAR'S COCOANUT MATTING and LINOLEUM FLOOR-CLOTH WAREHOUSE, Removed from 39, 40 to 10, LUDGATE-HILL, LONDON.

DINNER, DESSERT, BREAKFAST, TEA, and TOILET SERVICES.—A large assortment of new and good patterns. Also a beautiful variety of every description of Cut Table Glass. The stock is well selected, and marked in plain figures forbidding to choose from.
Observe the address, 1, Leicester-place, Leicester-square.
ALFRED B. PEARCE. Established 1760.

GARDNER'S £2 9s DINNER-SERVICES, strongly made, best quality. Illustrated Catalogue post-free.—Gardner's, Manufacturers to the Queen, 453, West Strand (one door from Trafalgar-square), London. Established 1752.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM or DRAWING-ROOM, Suspensions in Patina, Tortoise, and Crystal, Chains and Glass. Statuettes in Parian, Tazza, and other Ornamental China. HOWELL, JAMES, and CO., 13, Baker-street, Portman-square.

OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and Lustres, for Gas and Candles. Table Glass, &c. Glass Dishes and Fruit Baskets, from £2 2s.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £2.
All articles marked in plain figures for process.
Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.
Glass Shades, Globes, Chimneys, &c., always executed.
Osler, Crystal Glass Manufactory, 45, Broad-street, Birmingham.—Manufactory and Show-rooms, Broad-street.

CASELIERS in Crystal, Glass, Ormoulu, Bronze, Medieval Styling, &c. A large assortment always in view. Show-rooms, 76, Strand, W.C. Established 1810. D. HULETT and CO., Manufacturers, 35 and 36, High Holborn, W.C.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.
Families who study economy with durability and elegance should visit this extensive Establishment, where they will find the largest stock, combining much time, trouble, and expense. A two-roomed House furnished complete for £50; a four-roomed House for £100; a Mansion in proportion. Priced Catalogues sent post-free.
Tottenham-court-road, Nos. 145, 147, 149, 151, 153, 155, 157, 159, and 161, Tottenham-court-road.
The next door, 145, is Maple and Co.'s Block, not connected.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.
Mahogany winged wardrobes, 6 ft. high, drawing-room furniture, from 17 to 20 guineas; the Eugenie easy-chair, in rich silk damask, 4 guineas; the Eugenie couch, in rich silk plain glass and morocco, from 12 to 14 guineas; mahogany telescope dining-tables, very large sizes, from £12 to £32; bedroom furniture, from 4½ guineas.
Tottenham-court-road, Nos. 145, 147, 149, 151, 153, 155, 157, 159, and 161, Tottenham-court-road.

EASY-CHAIRS, SOFAS, and COUCHES, best quality, made to any shape, on approval, at T. E. PLUMER'S, 101, Tottenham-court-road. Established 1841.—An Illustrated Priced Catalogue sent post-free.

CARPETS.—Notwithstanding the late TYE DECLARATION, Messrs. HOWELL, JAMES and SONS, having one of the largest Stocks in the kingdom, are enabled to continue selling CARPETS at 2s. 6d. per yard, and all others at old prices. Patterns sent to any part. Observe the address, 13, Baker-street, Portman-square. Furnishing throughout Houses or Hotels. Catalogues of General Drapery and Carpets, post-free. HOWELL, JAMES, and CO., Manchester, 1.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.
WADMORE and SON, 3 and 4, Goodge-street; and 45 and 46, Berners-street, Oxford-street, manufacturers of Brussels, Tapestry, Velvet, and Kidderminster Carpets, for every style of decoration.

TO LADIES.—GREEN TISSUE TYE LINEN, the most durable and economical material to prevent the effects of dust. Perforated Tissue, for Stove Aprons, 4 stamps per packet; ditto for Sleeves, 6 stamps per packet.
Manufactured by the Inventor, HENRY BURY, Manchester.

CHUBBS' PATENT LOCKS and SAFES, with all the newest improvements. Street-door Locks. Cash and Deed Boxes. Price-lists free.—CHUBB and SON, 57, Chubb and Son, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.—THE OCTOBER BREWING of the above Ale are now being BOTTLED in the finest condition, and may be had of the following FURNISHING MACHINE, 35, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE defies all honest competition. Sold in packets and boxes, each bearing the Trade-mark. Unadulterated; highly nutritious. Annual consumption exceeds 4,000,000 lbs. Sold by Grocers and Chemists. Covent-garden; and sold retail by all respectable houses.

2280 AGENTS—Chemists, Confectioners, Grocers, and others—WANTED IMMEDIATELY for TEA Packets. It is choice and strong, moderate in price, and wholesome. These advantages cannot fail to secure a constant preference.

SAUCE.
LEA AND PERRINS'
WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE,
pronounced by Connoisseurs
"THE ONLY GOOD SAUCE."
Their peculiar withers and invigorates the Palate, and imparts a Zest and Piquancy to Gravies, Soups, Game, Fish, Cold Meats, Hashes, &c. Sold by CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, and by Grocers and Oilmen universally.

BROWN and POLSON'S
PATENT CORN FLOUR
is much recommended
for light suppers, and excellent for Children's Diet.

COWDED
PREPARED CORN
Puddings, Custards, Blancmanges, &c.
Manufactured and Perfected by
BROWN and POLSON,
Patentees of New York.
It is the original preparation from the farina of maize, established in public favour for upwards of twenty years, and is of the highest value to the consumer.
Sold in packets, one of the imitations, less a fine grain, and is more delicious flavour.
Each packet has the natural golden tinge, and not the chalk white of the imitations.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD,
Sold in 1lb. and 1lb. Canisters, at 1s. and 2s. each.
We prepare only one quality, the best.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO.,
Mustard Manufacturers.

LITTLE'S PATENT 1859. PRIZE MEDAL 1862.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY is the most valuable, delicious, and nutritious food for infants and invalids, and is unrivalled for making gruel and delicious jelly. Modern chemistry has shown that the chief part of the nutriment of barley is contained in the husk, which this Barley retains in its entire state.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

TAYLOR BROTHERS' MUSTARD,
WARRANTED GENUINE.
Dr. Hassall, having analysed Taylor Brothers' as a rigorous microscopical examination and chemical analysis, reports that it contains no added ingredient whatever, but is the pure Mustard Flour.
Manufactory, Norwich, and 6, Mincing-lane, London.
See that each Package bears their Trade Mark, the "Prize Ox," and Signature of Taylor Brothers.
Sold by all Grocers, &c., in 1lb. and ½lb. Packets.
Taylor Brothers, Britannia and Wentworth-street, London, N.E.

PURITY AND EXCELLENCE OF QUALITY.
COLMAN'S PRIZE MEDAL MUSTARD
is the only Mustard which has received a Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition, 1851.
Any domestic purposes nothing flour can be produced. Their "genuine" and "double superfine" are the qualities particularly recommended.
Retailed by every town throughout the United Kingdom.
J. and J. Colman, 26, Cannon-street, London.

COLMAN'S STARCH obtained
Prize Medals,
International Exhibition, 1851, 1862.
Report—"Superior Quality, very large Production."
STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry.

THE WIMBLEDON MEETING.—E. H. HAINES, 39, Strand-street, Brighton, Jeweller to the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, begs respectfully to inform Volunteers and Riflemen that the Prize Medal for the WIMBLEDON can only be obtained at his Establishment or on the ground. In silver, 7s. 6d.; and in gold enamelled, 3 guineas.
P.S.—A large stock of enamelled Flags, Silver Cups, Prizes, and Testimonials of every description. Victoria Crosses Manufactured.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—G. HOOPER, Artist in Hair. Solid Gold Lockets for Hair, from 4s. each; Hair Rings, from 6s. 6d.; Hair Chains, from 12s. each, &c. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—115, Regent-street, London.

A. FORRER, HAIR JEWELLER to the QUEEN, 9, Hanover-street, Hanover-square.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS, 61, Strand, 34, Cockspur-street, Chronometer, Watch, Clock, and Chronometer Maker by special appointment to the Queen, the Prince of Wales, H. and M. Cockspur-street, Charing-cross (corner of Spring-gardens).

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Manufacturers of Watches to the Queen and the Prince of Wales, the Bank). First-class Patent Detached Lever Watches, with the latest improvements, jewelled throughout in rich cases, strong plain or ornamental, and warranted.

Patent Lever, Jewelled, Hunter, Dial, and Seconds	£4 14 6
Ditto, jewelled in four holes and capped	6 6 0
Ditto, the finest quality, jewelled in eight holes	8 8 0
Silver Watches in Keyless Action, with 4th. cutters.
Silver Watches in Keyless Action, FOR LADIES.
Watch, with gold dial, jewelled	11 11 0
Ditto, with richly-engraved case	12 12 0
Ditto, with very superior, and jewelled in four holes	14 14 0
GOLD WATCHES—SIZE FOR GENTLEMEN.
Patent Lever, Jewelled, Hunter, Dial, and Seconds	£6 6 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance	8 8 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance	17 17 0
Gold Watches, Keyless Action, £3 3s. extra.

List of prices with remarks on Watches, gratis and post-free.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S Manufactory, 77 and 78, Cornhill.

DESPATCH BOXES—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufactures of Dressing-cases, Bags, and Despatch-boxes, warrant the following:

	French Morocco, Hard.	Real Russia.	Real Finish.
Complete, with cutlery, stationery, writing-desk, &c.	£2 5 0	£4 10 0	£5 10 0
Ditto, ditto, lock, pocketed, slate, &c.	4 10 0	6 6 0	8 15 0

DRESSING-BAGS—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO. have the largest and most elegant assortment, and exchange the same if not approved.

	French Morocco.	Real Russia.	Real Finish.
Containing fourteen most useful toilet articles	£1 10 0	£3 3 0	£4 4 0
Ditto, with writing-case complete	2 15 0	5 5 0	6 6 0
	Strong Waterproof.	Real Russia.	Real Finish.
Ditto, with writing-case complete	£4 4 0	£6 6 0	£8 8 0

77 and 78, Cornhill, City, and 77 and 79, Oxford-street.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S only West-end Address, 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and BAGS, containing every article of toilet use or guest fittings, in every variety. Mounted and Ornate Silver Fittings. Ladies' Dressing-bags, containing every requisite, of elegant Novelties for Presents, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and TRAVELLING CASES, in massive manner, of the best quality. Elegantly mounted Dressing-cases, Hunting Boxes, and Writing-desks, for presents. HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS, in splendid Binding, from 5s. to 21 guineas. Also a large assortment of Cabinets, Tablets, and Conveniences for holding Cartes de Visite. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

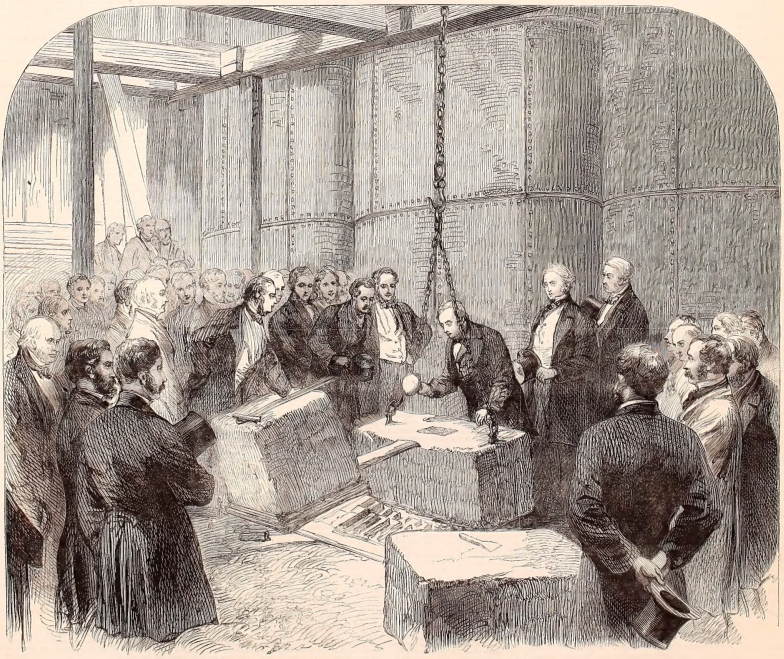
NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Steel Die Engraving, 5s. Best Wedding Cards, 50 for 2s. Visiting Cards, Name Plate, Rodrigues' Cream-laid Envelopes and Paper, 4s. per thousand. Best Gum Envelopes, 1s. per 100. At HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

VISITING CARD-PLATE ENGRAVED, and 100 CARDS printed, for 4s. Arms, Crest, or Monogram Engraved on Dies, Paper, and Envelopes of Fine Quality and stamped with Crest or Address at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

THE SUMMER SUN and DUST.—Ladies should use ROWLAND'S KALYDOR both for cooling and refreshing the heated skin; allaying all heat and irritation, and rendering it soft, clear, and blooming. Gentlemen will find it most refreshing after shaving. Sold by A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden; and by Chemists and Perfumers. Ask for "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR," and beware of spurious and pernicious articles under the name of "Kalydor."

BEAUTIFUL HAIR.—ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL preserves, restores, and beautifies the hair, and promotes its growth. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., and 10s. 6d. per bottle. Sold at 20, Hatton-garden; and by Chemists and Perfumers. Ask for "ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL," and beware of spurious and pernicious articles under the name of "Macassar."

BEAUTIFUL WHISKERS.—ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, produces a beautiful set of Whiskers and Moustachios. Whiskers



THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1271.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE SESSION OF 1864.

A FAIR and complete review of a Parliamentary Session is not always feasible immediately upon its close. Party passions have not wholly subsided; legislative blunders or benefits have not had time for development; the mind is too much distracted by a multiplicity of details to catch distinctly the forms and proportions of general effects. Criticism on a bygone Session can hardly be at once penetrating, discriminative, comprehensive, and just, unless its point of survey be removed by some considerable distance of time from the subject of its observation and treatment. On the other hand, however, public interest in the character and course of the Legislature is evaporated by the prorogation; and none but quarterly reviews can be got to put forth—none but studious politicians can be enticed to read—elaborate and exhaustive analyses of the proceedings of Parliament when once the members of the two Houses are dispersed and what is aptly called "the dead season" has commenced. Fully aware, therefore, that any review of the Session of 1864 made at the present moment must lack some of those qualities requisite for the ultimate guidance of the reader's judgment, but desiring to deal with the subject before his interest in it is gone, we venture to sketch the most prominent features which it has exhibited, not as a substitute for, but merely as introductory to, the completer and more finished study which, besides being impossible just yet, would be out of place in these columns.

The Session of 1864 can hardly be called an eventful one in comparison especially with many of its predecessors, nor, in regard to actual legislation, a fruitful one; but it has been by no means an unimportant one. Parliament, during its continuance, has not added so largely nor so profitably to the statute book as on many former occasions, and such additions as it has made affect rather the social than the political condition of the people. It has done something—not altogether inefficient, we hope—towards restraining crime by remodelling, to some extent, the system of prison discipline. It has passed a measure for enabling the industrial classes to provide for the immediate wants of their families when the hands that sustained them have been stricken by death. It has evinced concern for the distressed, both in the manufacturing and metropolitan districts, and has extended over a larger area of juvenile labour its protecting shield. Without commiting ourselves to the soundness of the principles on which it has framed its enactments in these several cases, we gladly and gratefully recognise in them a disposition at least to befriend the unbefriended and to make law the guardian of such as are least able to help themselves. The work done in this direction is less showy than that which accomplishes striking political alterations, but it is often, in its result, more solid, more durable, more fully fraught with advantage to the nation. All things being taken into account, we believe the unenfranchised poor have had from Parliament during the Session of 1864 a larger amount of attention than at any previous period of ordinary legislation, and we cannot, therefore, characterise its labour as barren of results. "The condition-of-England question," as Thomas Carlyle once styled it, has not been wholly forgotten.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE THAMES EMBANKMENT AT WHITEHALL STAIRS.—SEE PAGE 126.

Financially also the Session has something to boast of. We can say but little, it is true, of its retrenchment of expenditure. The national outlay is still enormous—is great, even on Mr. Gladstone's estimate, beyond the nation's necessities. There is still abundant room for increased economy in the management of its establishments; and although we may never hope to get back to the moderate expenditure of 1835, or even of 1852—for candid criticism is obliged to allow for the increase of population, the immense extension of commerce, and the consequently augmented claims upon Government for supervision and protection—they are not beyond acquisition with the several departments are also most fully convinced that we are spending far too much. But, at any rate, this much may be placed to the credit of the Session of this year—that it has sanctioned a somewhat smaller outlay than that of last year, which was itself considerably less than that of the preceding year. We have touched the highest point of extravagance; we are receding from it; and, should the foreign policy on which the country seems intent be adopted, we may reasonably hope to diminish our outgoings annually for several years to come. Meanwhile, under the auspices of our brilliant Chancellor of the Exchequer, the repeal or modification of taxes is being carried to a most gratifying extent. The present Session has contributed its full quota to this beneficial work, and both the thieving and the poorer classes have shared the advantage. This is no mean praise. The House of Commons—conceded it has many things which the majority of its constituents believe that it might have attempted, if not effected—has used to good purpose its "power of the purse;" and if it have not surprised public expectation by its financial achievements, it has at least earned for itself the right to be considered well on in the path of improvement.

It is not, however, for its social or its financial legislation that the Session of 1864 will be hereafter remembered; its political legislation, in the technical sense of the word, may be set down as nil. But it will be remembered as the Session in which it has exercised the higher function of Parliament—that, namely, of impressing its own spirit upon the foreign and colonial policy of the United Kingdom. In this respect it has done service beyond any that, in late times, have preceded it. We have the desire to overlook the merits of the Government. We fully admit the influence exerted by the stern pressure of events. Nevertheless, it will be set down to the credit of this Parliament that in 1864, amid many provocations to go to war, and in spite of earnest sympathies with a weak and suffering people, it declared almost unhesitatingly and vehemently against war; was silent as long as silence was demanded, gave the utmost liberty to those who negotiated in the name of the nation, judged their errors leniently, but emphatically confirmed, what, indeed, had been done much to inspire—their decision for the maintenance of peace. And it did all this in a manner of the kind which proclaimed, "We must have no more of this. The system of our diplomacy, as far, at least, as European interests are concerned, is as dangerous as it is antiquated. We must meddle with no affairs that do not concern us. We must ascertain our proper sphere of obligation as a people, and confine ourselves to it. We owe a duty to ourselves—that is, a duty to those who are a constituent part of this empire; we cannot justly overlook that duty for the sake of righting the wrongs of every part of the world." England, through her Parliament, thus deliberately decided in 1864. The decision is equivalent to a revolution. It is worth more, for it has been reached without the cost of one. Rightly applied, it will put a new face upon our affairs. Rightly applied, we say, for it may be pushed to an unnational length. But the mere fact that the Session of 1864 has given birth to a conception of international duty in harmony with the facts and temper of the age will be referred to in times to come as its distinctive and transcendent merit. That this has been done without necessitating even a change of Ministry or an appeal to the electoral bodies enhances the credit due to Parliament. In a most delicate matter, and under circumstances of peculiar temptation, it has expressed the mature convictions of the country wisely and well.

That it has practically recognised, but not formally enemned, is already beginning to work a change in the most unexpected manner. Our colonial government feels it and must respond to it. The press as well as Parliament, representing all shades of political opinion, takes a different view from that which last of late prevailed, as to the policy of adopting without inquiry the "little wars" in which colonial governors are too ready to involve us. A lesson has been read upon the Ashantee and the New Zealand wars, and upon the Brazil imbroglio, which will not be forgotten. In fact, we are beginning to understand our proper relations to the world around us, and more correctly to estimate our responsibilities. There is no reason why we should allow this better knowledge and appreciation to degenerate into selfishness. A just view of our position, capabilities, and obligations is not by any means identified with setting up commercial gain as our exclusive end. We hope and believe that the event will be quite contrariwise—that by husbanding our national resources, and by refusing to squander them upon unworthy and Quixotic enterprises, we shall wield them with all the more readiness and effect when occasion really calls for them—and that our influence will prove all the more decisive because it is not pugnaciously thrust into prominence in every quarrel that threatens the peace of nations.

With these feelings predominant in our heart, we bid the Session of 1864 a respectful farewell. We looked forward to its approach without any sanguine anticipations. We see several of its weaknesses and shortcomings. But, on the whole, it has commended itself to our judgment as worthy to take a high place among its predecessors. Some of its omissions will, perhaps, be repaired by the Session which succeeds it. But from the latter the Session do we look for a more wise or certain guidance of the public will under serious and perplexing emergencies such as those through which it has conducted us. We condone its faults for the sake of its virtues. Let it pass out of sight with the credit which is its due.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Emperor is still at Vichy, where he has been visited by the King of the Belgians.

The Emperor has decided that a monument shall be erected at Vichy to the memory of Madame de Sévigné, who was the first to make known the waters of that place.

The Government has enrolled in the Department of Ardèche and Dordogne have been elected by a large majority.

By the decision of the examining magistrates in Paris, the Deputies Garnier-Pagès and Carnot, with some of the twelve advocates of the Paris and Marseilles Bar, have been committed for trial before the Correctional Court, under the charge of forming part of a non-authorised association composed of more than twenty persons. The affair is fixed to come on for hearing on the 5th of August next, before the Sixth Correctional Chamber.

As some workmen were engaged in removing a ladder which they had been using to the upper part of the Tuileries' Palace, the Sieur Faris, they let it slip from their hold, and in falling it struck the head of the Governor of the Palace, who was the first to make the interesting room of the establishment, to which she was conveyed. She was seventy-seven years of age.

A report of the Minister of War is published in the Moniteur of Saturday, followed by an Imperial decree modifying the administration of the army. The report says that the measures created partly by fanaticism, but still more by an unfounded hope of supplanting the valour of the authorities, who were believed to be disarmed because divided in their action. The report, therefore, proposes to increase the power and responsibility of the Generals commanding divisions, and to concentrate in them, and in them, and through them with the administration of the natives established beyond the limits of the Algerian territory.

Some of the French troops in Mexico are to be immediately recalled. Commands have been given in the military ports of France to disarm the necessary ships to Vera Cruz, in order to bring back the recalled soldiers. Those ships are to leave France, it is stated, early in the ensuing month of August. According to news received in New York from Mexico to the 2nd inst., it was reported that Uraga and Doblado had given their adhesion to the Empire.

ITALY.

In the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, yesterday week, the Minister of the Interior read a Royal decree proroguing the Session to an indefinite period.

It is stated that Prince Humbert, eldest son of the King, will pay a visit to Berlin during the month of August.

Count Louis Frederic Manabrea, the Minister of Public Works, has proceeded to Vichy.

General de la Marmora started from Naples on Monday on leave of absence for some time.

Garibaldi has returned to Caprera.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The negotiations for peace between Denmark and Germany were formally opened on Tuesday at Vienna; but the only rumour respecting their progress which has reached us is published by a correspondent of the London newspaper, to the effect that a nine months' armistice, during which Schleswig and Holstein will be occupied by Austrian and Prussian troops, was immediately concluded.

How much longer the Austrian occupation of the Emperor of Austria, as which the Prussian Minister is said to have offered to pay up to Austria the whole of her share of the war expenses on condition that Prussia be allowed to retain Schleswig-Holstein, we cannot say, and collecting the revenues.

There was recently, as stated in our last Number, a collision between some Prussian and Hanoverian troops at Rendsburg, the fortress on the Eider. The Prussians did not hesitate what course to take. Prince Frederick Charles, the Commander-in-Chief, informed the Commander-in-Chief of the Federal troops in Holstein that he had received orders from the supreme master of Holstein, Bismarck. Hake replied that, having only four companies at his disposal, he must be allowed to withdraw his troops. The Prussians declined to accept responsibility for this step. On the 21st six thousand Prussians marched into Rendsburg. The Federal Diet telegraphed to General Hake their approval of his withdrawal, and Hanover and the Federal protest against the occupation.

The Upper Chamber of Deputies have unanimously adopted a protest against the forcible occupation of Rendsburg by the Prussian troops. The Government, it is said, intends to take some steps to oppose such acts of violence. The Prussian Government has refused to accept the garrison at Kiel.

A meeting of Schleswig landowners has taken place at Kiel, to draw up an address to the civil authorities of Schleswig requesting that the decision of the Germanic Confederation on the Danish succession question, under the joint government of Austria and Prussia.

A proposed address to the King on the existing crisis has been under debate in the Upper Chamber of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Last week the late Premier, Bishop Motrad, spoke. He favoured the idea of the Duke becoming part and parcel of the Germanic Confederation. He said—

The point of present moment in my eyes is that everything Danish should remain constitutionally connected with Germany, and that the Duchies should not be lost to her. Unfortunately gone to ruin. We cannot get it back, for a State of Schleswig-Holstein would be the same as a republic, and that is a thing which the Duke would not accept. I entertain no such idea. Before any one attempted to protect the integrity of Denmark, I should have considered it unpardonable to have entered into negotiations for treaties; after each Power successively has said, "Well, if Sa-and-so does not interfere, I will," I do not see why I, too, should refuse to do so. I am convinced, however, that I consider the holiest, and that is the integrity of the Danish empire. Every one is aware that it is my opinion that the best security for the freedom of the Danish realm, and nothing is more grievous for me than to see the task of the Duke's life unaccomplished, but I solemnly declare that if I am asked to choose between the preservation of the Danish realm and the preservation of our national independence, I should not hesitate a moment to select the former, and see every trace of political liberty vanish from the land. Should the Germans take the sword of Schleswig-Holstein wrested from us and annexed to the German empire, and the choice rested with me, I should vote to follow Schleswig with the kingdom. The integrity of the people is in my eyes the first and most important object; everything else, whether called freedom or known by any other name, is for me of secondary importance. I trust that the Almighty will grant His blessing to the important task committed to the Ministry. Before this great and momentous question all minor differences, in a political sense, vanish. May God grant that the Government may succeed in that which was denied to their predecessors! May the advent of the new Ministry to power be the harbinger of a happy future! Should, however, the Ministry and the Government one fortunate event may follow another, as a greater humiliation than by husbanding our national resources, and by refusing to squander them upon unworthy and Quixotic enterprises, we shall wield them with all the more readiness and effect when occasion really calls for them—and that our influence will prove all the more decisive because it is not pugnaciously thrust into prominence in every quarrel that threatens the peace of nations.

GREECE.

A Ministerial crisis seems imminent at Athens. The National Assembly has censured the conduct of the Minister of War as unconstitutional, he having incurred expenses not authorised by the Budget, and without previously asking the Assembly to vote the necessary credit.

TURKEY.

We learn from Constantinople that the Porte has closed all the Protestant missionary establishments and even arrested several converts. We presume that this measure must have been immediately protested against by the British and American Ministers, as the Bible and American Missionary societies were soon after reopened. The Protestant movement is said to be greatly spreading among the Mussulmans.

The forthcoming Budget will show a small surplus.

AMERICA.

The raid into Maryland has been brought to a close, and the Confederate forces have recrossed the Potomac, carrying with them immense quantities of booty. On the 9th inst., the Confederates had reached a position midway between Baltimore and Washington, and were threatening both towns. An engagement took place with a strong Federal force under the command of General Wallace, in which the latter was defeated and forced to retire on Baltimore. Several of the bridges on the railroad connecting that town with Washington were destroyed, the telegraph-wires cut, and two trains captured, one of which contained a general officer and his Staff. Having approached Baltimore sufficiently close to learn the weakness of the Governor of Maryland, which stood within four miles of that town, the invaders turned southward and made their appearance in the northern environs of Washington. A demonstration was made against one of the outlying forts. But on the 11th inst. the invading force withdrew from before Washington and recrossed the Potomac, carrying with it enormous stores and a large number of horses. Such, briefly told, are the events which took place in Maryland during the past week. The Federals, who, it is stated, have been reinforced by the arrival of two divisions from General Grant's army, were reported to have also crossed the Potomac at Edward's Ferry, in pursuit.

The Governor of Pennsylvania had earnestly appealed to the people to volunteer for short service to meet and rather reproaches the Federal Cabinet for not displaying more alacrity in responding to his first call.

One of the correspondents of the New York Herald was in the train going from Baltimore to Philadelphia, which was captured by the Confederates. He says—

At forty minutes past nine the express train to New York started with passengers, your correspondent among the number. We reached Gunpowder river all safe, and immediately after passing the long trestle bridge, speed was increased. About two miles from the bridge, at Magnolia station, two or three piled-stone were found on the track; the locomotive dodged, and a cry was raised, "The rebels are on us." But a few seconds elapsed before they cleared the obstructions, carrying planks in their hands. The first question asked was, "Are there any holes in this car?" On being answered in the affirmative they entered the car, and in a few seconds a volley was suddenly followed by another order to "Clear out." It was while leaving the cars that parties took away their valises and passengers. The latter were handed them over was enforced by a cocked pistol held at the heads of the victimized passengers. The rebels were about twenty-five in number, and had the cars set on fire, after the baggage and express cars had been emptied. Steam was then let on, the engine reversed, and the train of blazing cars run down to Gunpowder bridge. A column of dense black smoke was soon seen rising in the direction of the bridge, and when the train was within a mile-range of the bridge returned they said the bridge was burning finely, and would by shortly consumed. Major-General Wallace was a passenger on board the first train. He was dressed in citizen's clothes, and when the rebels entered the car and asked him who he was, he replied, "Nobody of consequence." The guard passed on a few yards, when a Baltimore lady (of whom there were three or four on board) fainted from the General's cask and assault returned and demanded his papers, which were of course handed over, and the General was taken from the train.

This correspondent notes the significant fact that a large number of the invaders were Maryland recruits, showing that they were only the country but the people. He says—

They were under the command of Major Harry Gilmore, and consisted of twenty-five men belonging to the 1st Regiment Maryland Cavalry, and the balance belonging to the 2nd Maryland. Major Gilmore's own regiment. From their conversation I learned that the majority were residents of Maryland. They were armed with pistols, sabres, and short rifles, and were, on the whole, remarkably well treated by the rebels, and it was somewhat amusing when the time for supper arrived to see the commissariat rule up to the car windows, which they were greeted somewhat as follows:—"Why, Tom, is that you?" "How are you, Harry?" "Old home made," &c. Small white loaves were passed in, the brown hard ones of the troopers and warmly shaken. Many of them discharged, and, on entering the car, were very affectionately kissed by their lady friends. It appeared to be quite a joyful meeting. The other prisoners were treated very well, with the exception of being robbed of every article of any of their captors fancied he would like to possess. One gentleman—a Jew—in Baltimore was completely shorn of his locks and whiskers for a pair of dusty captors fancied he would like to possess. One gentleman—a Jew—in Baltimore was completely shorn of his locks and whiskers for a pair of dusty captors cowhide riding-boots, or rather leggings, as they were minus the soles. A lady fainted in my car, and took, in reply to my cry, "Here, I want that hat!" at the same time giving me his tobacco-stained one, which was full in exchange. My treasure followed suit. It contained, among other things, a number of despatches and a long list of casualties. The latter I read afterwards, and, upon comparing them with the majority of the prisoners, had no article of value left. The man who superintended the robbery of the prisoners allowed me to retain my despatches and a toothbrush. Likewise were in every instance returned to the owners, as were also any other articles of no value to the rebels. As far as I was in their power, everything was done to make our situation pleasant. I am bound to say that a spirit of simple justice was the ruling feature that their officer was not cognisant of the conduct of his men. He strictly prohibited all stealing from prisoners; but the more timid of these troops—under his command could not be restrained from filching a purse or a watch when a fair opportunity presented itself.

The Times New York correspondent reports great indifference among the people of this city and of Pennsylvania (our own correspondent states) with regard to the Confederate raid. He writes—

Governor Curtis, of Pennsylvania, is both alarmed and indignant, and utterly at a loss to account for such lukewarmness—he will not call it treason—on the part of the people. In a proclamation addressed to the Mayor of Philadelphia and the people of Pennsylvania, he tells them candidly that they are not responding freely to his call, and he therefore appeals to them to come forward "like men" and "do their duty;" accuses them of stupidity in not understanding the gravity of the circumstances, and prays to God to enlighten them, that the honour of their commonwealth may be preserved." But the people will not be roused. They are, indeed, in the work as if nothing were amiss; and the rich send away their jewels, their plate, and their greenbacks to such cities than their own—some as far to the north as Boston, and some still further—to Toronto and Montreal, out of Federal jurisdiction altogether. Mr. Curtis, and Mr. Gratten, in a letter to Major-General Sanford, commanding the New York militia, endeavours to explain that efforts have been in this "grave apprehension" that the withdrawal of any considerable number of militiamen from the city would encourage the mutuous, while the currency is bearing heavily upon the masses of the people," might tempt the rebels and roughs to attempt to retain possession of what might come into their favourable opportunity for arson and plunder," and for that reason "earnestly protests against any withdrawal of troops." But the people, it seems, in view of public utterances so significant as these, and of the indifference, not to say contempt, with which the Governor's appeals for assistance are everywhere received, to avoid believing that at last the people are losing heart in the war, and that, if Mr. Lincoln succeeds in his second campaign as South by the abundant means already placed at his disposal, they are content to be conquered. Such peace cannot be made now, for furthermore there is no enthusiasm for the war, unless it be in the counting-houses of those who are making money by it. As for the army, it will rally, and fight, and die; but it sees nothing but ruin in the war if Mr. Lincoln is left to conduct it.

The people we have left behind us seem to have forgotten it that the Confederates have made demonstrations on Grant's left, with the object of getting in his rear.

Accounts from Georgia stated that the Federal General Sherman had fallen on General Johnston's army across the Chattahoochee River, and had arrived within sight of the defences of Atlanta.

Mr. Lincoln had issued the following proclamation of his policy on the question of reconstruction of the Union:—

Whereas, at the last Session, Congress passed a bill to guarantee to certain States, whose Governments have been usurped or overthrown, a Republican form of Government, a copy of which is hereunto annexed; and whereas the said bill was presented to the President of the United States for his approval less than one hour before the sine die adjournment of said Session, and was not signed by him; and whereas the said bill contains, among other things, a plan for restoring the States in rebellion to their proper practical relation in the Union, which plan expressed the sense of Congress upon that subject, and which plan it is now thought fit to lay before the people for their consideration:—

Now, therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, do proclaim, declare, and make known that while I am, as I was in December last, when by proclamation I propounded a plan for restoration; and while I am also unprepared to change that position, I am yet constrained by the developments of the existing rebellion and instituted in Arkansas and Louisiana shall be set aside and held for nought, thereby crystallising and discouraging the loyal citizens who have set up those States as the farther effort, or to declare a constitutional amendment abolishing slavery throughout the nation, may be adopted, I am fully satisfied that with the system for restoration contained in the bill, to see no other great plan for the loyal people of any State choosing to adopt it; and I am, and at all times shall be, prepared to give the executive aid and assistance to any such people so soon as the military resistance to the United States shall have been so prevailed in any such State, and the people thereof shall have recognised and accepted their obligation to the Constitution and the laws of the United States, in which case military governments will be superseded, with the reinstatement of the rightful civil rule. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 8th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, and of the independence of the United States the 89th. By the President.

W. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State. ABRAM LINCOLN.

Washington official records show that up wards of 150 female recruits have been discovered during the war. Two were wounded at the storming of Fort Wagner, and one was killed. Many of the female recruits were detected by their sex was discovered, were acting as officers' servants.

The Confederate steamer Florida has been committing serious depredations on American shipping off the Virginia and North Carolina coast. It is reported that she has destroyed at least ten vessels. The Florida had also capture d the transport-steamer Electric Spark, a fast vessel of 800 tons burden, carrying a valuable cargo of the United States, and bound for New Orleans. Several Federal gun boats have gone in pursuit of the Florida.

The Alabama's successful career over the destruction of the Alabama is but natural. The Washington Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Gideon Welles, in a despatch to Captain Winslow of the Kearsarge, sends him his promotion to Commodore, and does not forget to recall the English equipment of the Alabama. He says,

You will please express to the officers and crew of the Kearsarge the satisfaction of the Government at the victory over a vessel superior in tonnage, armament and number of guns, and equipped and manned for war. The battle was so brief, the victory so decisive, and the comparative results of striking, that it would be a waste of words to dwell upon the brilliant conduct of one infant navy, which have been repeated and illustrated in this engagement. The Alabama represented the best models of naval architecture from English workshops. Her battery was composed of the well-tried 32-pounders of 57 cwt., of the famous armament of the British navy, and of the only armament rifled 100-pounder yet produced in England. The crew were generally recruited in Great Britain, and many of them received superior training on board her Majesty's gunnery-ship Excellent.

Secretary Fenenden had appealed to the bankers of New York for a loan of 200,000 dols. until July 15, when he was immediately wants of Government; and it is stated that the bankers will accept the loan. Gold, after falling to 210, has risen again to the 160 & 215.

The State Convention of Maryland, now in session at Annapolis, has adopted, by a large majority, a constitutional amendment declaring that "hereafter in this State there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except in punishment of crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, and all persons held to service or labour as slaves are hereby declared free."

A collision occurred on the 15th inst. between two trains on the Delaware and Lackawana Railway, in Pennsylvania, by which over a hundred persons—principally Confederate prisoners, who were being conveyed to the camp at Elmira, New York—were killed or wounded.

INDIA, CHINA, AND JAPAN.

Sir Sidney Cotton has been chosen successor to Sir Hugh Rose.

A telegram from Shanghai states that Major Gordon's force has been disbanded, and Sir Frederick Bruce is returning home.

From Japan it is stated that Mr. Rutherford Alcock ha d arranged quarters for the British troops at Jeddo.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The foundation-stone of the "national " O'Connell monument will be laid at Dublin on the 8th of August.

The foundation-stone of a cross in memory of the medical officers who fell in the Crimea will, it is expected, be laid at Netley Hospital by the Prince of Wales on the 1st proximo.

The Russian line-of-battle ship-ship Peik Musaet, carrying 84 guns, and 1000 tons burden, commanded by Admiral Edhem Pasha, arrived at Southampton on Wednesday, to be converted into a screw-steamer.

The twelve convicts who broke out of Portland some days since have been captured at Portsmouth, and have been conveyed to the penitentiary at Dartmoor, where they will remain until orders are received from the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Mr. Bovill, one of the members of Parliament for Exeter, died at Bystock on Tuesday. Mr. Cuteridge, Q.C., a Liberal, and Lord Courtenay, a Conservative, are already in the field as candidates for the seat thus rendered vacant.

The suspension was announced last week from Norwich of the East of England Bank—the parliament which has a rather extensive business, but whose position has for two or three months past been regarded with doubt. The precise amount of its liabilities has not transpired, but it is thought to be about £600,000. The bank has branches at East Dereham, Fakenham, and various other places in the district.

Lord Palmerston has signified to the directors of the East and West Junction Railway Company, which is to connect the Great Western Railway at Stratford-on-Avon with the North-Western system at Blisworth, that he will be present at the ceremony of cutting the first sod of the line by Lady Palmerston, on Wednesday, the 3rd of August, at Towcester, five miles from the Blisworth station. His Lordship will lay the first stone of the new Exchange at Bradford on the 9th of August.

Last week three vessels belonging to the Norwegian navy met anchor in Leith roads. The flagship of the squadron was the command of Commodore Vicar, is named the King Sverre, a two-decked frigate, of about 2000 tons, carrying 32 guns. The second vessel is the Nordkap, commanded by Commodore Krogh, a frigate of nearly the same tonnage, carrying 32 guns; and the Alfida, a brigantine, commanded by Lieutenant Hansen, commanded by Captain Hjorth.

At the Leeds Assizes, yesterday week, there was a trial between Mr. Tobin, the well-known semi-painter, and Mr. Fechter, the equally well-known actor. The latter had agreed to give the former £100 per night for the use of the theatre for the purpose of "Hamlet," and which he expected would be delivered to him by the 28th of April last; but, as Mr. Tobin did not deliver the scenery till the 14th of May, he refused to pay more than £270, which he had already paid account. The only question was, whether a contract had been entered into for delivery by the 28th of April. The jury, after having both parties before them, decided that there was no such contract, and Mr. Fechter was in consequence ordered to make up his payments to £400.

On Tuesday, Lieutenant-Colonel Harman, the Assistant-Inspector of Volunteers for the Northern district, reviewed the administrative battalion of North Nottinghamshire volunteers on a large piece of land adjoining the town of Worksop, which the Duke of Newcastle had lent for battalion drill and erected thereon a rifle-butt, for which there is a range of 1000 yards. Before the review commenced, the officer in command, Major Barnsley, announced to the corps that he had received a letter from the Right Hon. Henry Pelham Fiennes Pelham Clinton, commonly known as Lord Lincoln, his intention of taking the honorary colonelcy of the corps. The battalion, which consists of the Retford, Newark, Mansfield, Worksop, Southwell, Ollerton, Clowne, Southwell, and Worksop companies has been encamped on the review ground during the week, each day spent in strenuous battalion drill. The movements of each day, which were gone through most efficiently, having concluded, Lieutenant-Colonel Harman addressed the officers and men, thanking them for the manner in which they had performed their duties during the encampment. The commanding officer also expressed his thanks for the use of the battalion, and there were all the appliances required for the comfort and convenience of the men.

The San Francisco Bulletin says that Sir Macdonald Stephenson, who projected the great railway schemes in India, has visited China for the same purpose. He proposes that Hankow should be made a common railway centre, from which should radiate trunk lines, to Shanghai 600 miles, to Canton 800 miles, and to British India 1600 miles. From Shanghai Hankow should be a line to Pekin, 800 miles. Sir Macdonald Stephenson proposes, however, that a short railway should first be made between Tien-Tsin and Pekin, and between Shanghai and Soochow, to demonstrate the Chinese to the value of railway communication.

SPORTS OF THE MONTH.

YACHTING.

THE poets Gray and J. E. Reade must have had a prophetic view of yachting in their "mind's eye" when the one wrote—

Fair laughs the morn, and soft the zephyr blows,
While proudly riding o'er the azure realm,
In gallant trim the gilded vessel goes,
Youth on the prow, and Pleasure at the helm;

while the other brought a regatta vividly before us :—

This was a day of banqueting on board.
. . . . . .
The beautiful, were there. Right merrily
The pleasure-vessels ride on past, with swift prow
The clear wave curling, till around each bow,
With living colours, like the gladness or beauty, sprays
Throws mimic rainbows at the sun in play.
The ship is here, the silken shrouds are there,
Exulting youth and beauty bound on board;
And, while their merry laughter o'er the grass was and shrouds,
The flag flaps o'er them like a crimson cloud,
And Pleasure kissed each heart.

No sooner have the dog-days commenced, and the summer has arrived at its glory, and the foreign nightingales, who have warbled their "matchless notes" in the "native wild" during the season at Haymarket or amidst the floral beauties of the famed Covent Garden, are about to migrate to the land of blue sky and song, than yachting attracts the attention of those whose vocations enable them to exchange the dense and oppressive atmosphere of London and the villainous odour of the fetid Thames for the balmy and fresh breezes which are to be found on "the gladsome waters of the dark blue sea." Happy, then, is the man who has a "craft" all his own or a friend to lend a friend's, and who can for a time find repose of body and relaxation of mind in the calm and soothing delight of sailing. Then, may the yachtsmen enjoy a fresh breeze on the Thames, a cruise within the Isle of Wight, or a trip to foreign parts. To river sailors we would strongly recommend Greenhithe as the best spot for the last morning in their respective craft; for Woolwich and Greenwich are far from being safe berths; and the distance from town to either of these is a week your weed will be fouled by a collier or run down by a steamer, your bowsprit carried away, or some circumstance or your gig stove in by a billyboy. There is another advantage at the two former-named places, which is, that stores of every kind are to be had at a better and more reasonable rate than at the Nore or Sheerness; and, as there is a railway conveyance almost every hour during the day, and the steam-boats to Gravesend and Rosherville Gardens, there is no difficulty in reaching the vessel at any moment you may be desirous of getting on board.

Once on board, how delightful to find the river not quite so much choked up as it is off the Dockyard and Hospital! You pass the Crescent, to which the cutter is put in order to keep the fennell, mainsail, and forestsayail; to haul out the jib on the bowsprit ready for hoisting, followed by the stentorian and lung-power cry, "Hoist away!" "Mainsail, ho!" "Jib, ho!" "Ease off to block! haul them taut! set the mainsail! hoist forestsayail only to haul it by-board again, because the wind has shifted a point off! slack out the mainsail! haul in jibsheet!"—the latter on the contrary to the former, which is to be hauled in neither heavy nor taut, but precisely between the two, as under way, with a "boating-up" great care must be taken, when sailing close to the wind, not to be too close, so that the canvas shall not flap, and so spoil craft. In tacking, the practised helmsman will see that every attention is paid to the jibsheet; that the mainsheet is hauled amidships, and that the helm is put gradually down. When the vessel is head to wind, let "Let fly the jibsheet" will be the order; if jib is not starboarded taut, but forsakes the weather bow, and in taut, which in nautical phraseology is called backing the jibsheet, and causes the vessel to "miss stays," and, consequently, the best rig for a small vessel—that, as the squall strikes her, she may have good way on her, must lull into the wind's eye, and if she does not right at once he must let go jib and fore sheets. If the lull continues, he must be cast off, and a boat-hook be ready to stand by the fore and jib halliards, which, if the gale increases, should be cleared by the order, "Down foresail! In jib!"

Anglers is an excellent way of "yachting and boating; and those who agree with Procter—

Such a boat, is the toy for me.
To rollick stout in es river and sea;
To lie in a harbour by breeze and the gale,
And like a wild bird or a fish to sail—
This is the life for me!

may have their fancy gratified to their heart's content. If their vocations confine them to London, excellent boats may be hired—by the hour, day, week, month, or season—on the Thames, the Lea, and many of what was once called the "silver Thames." Half-deckers, skiffs, wherries, punnies, pair and ten oared boats, and randans may be had, with or without a waiter, at a fair price. The Serpentine, within the last few years, can boast of a small flotilla for hire, where the lover of quietude may enjoy the "dolce far niente" of existence by lying in this truly enjoyable month without any risk of being run down by a coal-barge or City steamer. For sailing in placid waters we should recommend the Lea, about 10 miles from London, a small, light lugsail, much of canvas or strong duck.

GROUSE-SHOOTING.

From yachting we turn to grouse-shooting. There are few periods looked forward to with greater delight by the sportsman than the twelfth of August, 1864. It is the commencement of the shooting season, for on the morning of the 12th the campaign is opened against the grouse, and on the 20th hostilities commence against the black game. Although the best moors are let out in Scotland, Yorkshire, Lancashire, Derbyshire, and Staffordshire can boast of excellent moors, and the owners of English moors, like Scotch proprietors, many of whom are connected with the manufactories of their county, are willing to entertain their friends. Sportsmen, Birmingham jennies are set aside for shot belts, factories for fowling-pieces, cotton prints for pointers, machinery for the moors, and, instead of watching the rise and fall of the cotton and woollen trade, the fascinating pleasurable than a ramble over the moors, armed with a double-barrelled gun, accompanied by steady, staunch, good working dogs, with fine noses and good feet, and with a light, active, and a gillie with ammunition, a second gun, and a slight luncheon, sandwich in the pocket of October. At the commencement of the season, during a hot August and September, the grouse lie close, rise wild in response to dogs, and are easily killed. Not so about September time, when the birds, being stronger, swifter on the wing, and wilder, are more difficult to bag.

With regard to dogs, much must depend upon circumstances—the nature and the quantity of work required of them, the state of the ground, whether dry, boggy, or hilly, and the manner in which they are of the right breed, may be worked nearly double the number of days that pointers can be, for they are much more hardy, less liable to become footsore, and less affected by the cold weather. On very hot, dry days, pointers have the advantage in the way of "nose," as they can range wider and spring at hand. If money is no object, we would venture to recommend a brace of each description, and work them alternately according to the circumstances above related. With regard to the hour for commencing operations, attention must be paid to the extent of the moor, the quantity of grouse upon it, and the strength and energy of the sportsman. If there be a scarcity of birds, it is unwise to disturb them before feeding in the morning; and an eight or nine hours ought to satisfy the keenest "gunner," we recommend from no o'clock in the morning to six or seven in the evening. As a matter of course, the above suggestion only applies to the months of August and September, for when the autumnal quarter approaches it will be well to take the field at break of day. In wet weather grouse are so very wild that not only are they extremely difficult to get at, but by disturbing the ground you run the risk of marring your sport another day. During rain or heavy Scotch mists the theory of grousing at home can be better studied than the practice carried on out of doors.

Before we conclude, let us offer a few precautionary suggestions respecting the use of the gun; for experience has taught us that accidents of the most serious nature are constantly happening in consequence of carelessness and inattention. The first grand, golden rule which ought to be emblazoned, framed, and glazed, in every sportsman's room, gunsmith's shop, and kennel, is "Never hold your gun in a position to shoot anyone should it go off by accident." There are other points which are equally to be carried out—namely, always to uncock your gun when getting through a hedge or over a gate, or walking in rough or boggy ground. Never allow the cock to remain down upon the nipple, for we have twice witnessed an untoward result; and last, not least, never load your gun in a house. How often does it happen that the person guilty of this unpardonable act is suddenly called away, or runs off to look for something he has forgotten, leaving the loaded weapon within the reach of prying maid-servants, inexperienced youths, and children?

NATIONAL SPORTS.

ALTHOUGH the turtles have the luxury of racing principally for their own money at Goodwood, which only adds £300 to its first day's sport and £200 to its second, the meeting is pretty nearly on its Ascot prestige, the meeting, so far, has been a pretty good one. Birchtrcom has a capital race with Angle-Saxon, in the Craven Stakes; and Marigold (7 st. 6 lb.) was made the favourite in a field of four for the Stewards' Cup, and pulled it off cleverly. People could not forget how close she was to Queen Bertha in that grand Oaks field of four, and on this occasion she received a stone from Vivid, whom she then had by a head. Three more moderate horses met Colonel Anson's Athol, or rather against each other, to save their stake in the Gratwicke, and the Derby winner came away as he liked, when Challoner sided him. Lambourn, similar to Bladebone, proved a great deal of gameness in his winning finish for the Lavant, for which Ledlington did not show and Lord Vincent's Eddystone (5 st.), a son of De Clare and Cancora ran a bad last; and Colonel Towneley won the first match that we ever remember his making.

Wednesday was pleasant enough by the first visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to the course, and Fordham, "the Sussex jockey," celebrated their visit by riding his fourth winner of three first races off the reel, one of them on Knight of Snowdon, who was second with Lord Hastings's Rosebud's dam Rosalba. Aldcroft reappeared in the Glasgow colours on Ashaan for the first time since their Derby difference. He was beaten a short head by Ilter, and then landed a rich stake for the pair on Sister To The Drake. Ely did not oppose Young Rapid in the Goodwood Derby, and the Thalestris question was not put to the test as to which of the pair led in the Stakes, which Mr. T. Parr won cleverly enough with his Blondin. Kenig was again in his favourite second place for the Findon stakes, only beat a head by Scavenger, but the weights in favour of Zambesi, who carried 5 lb. extra. The Goodwood Cup has been won by Dollar, and the Ford's Premium has been successful for it under Seegerman, in 1840.

The subscription for the widow and ten children of Lawson, Mr. Blenkiron's late stud-groom, reaches, with the Duke of St. Albans' £100, nearly £850 and it is hoped that it will be considerably augmented. The Derby week at Epsom was attended by the usual tie up a very timid brood-mare belonging to his Grace, when she wheeled round and struck one of her fore-legs under her hind legs so severely sharply that he died on the following day. The latest addition to this stud are Whimsical (dam of Fantastic) with a filly by Chanticleer, and Rosalba (dam of Rosebud) with a colt by Dundee, and filly by the same horse. There are six Dundees for next year's sale, and Mr. Blenkiron hopes, with his own, to make up a dozen lots of them. Seven winners have appeared already out of the forty-two yearlings that were sold last summer, which is a very capital percentage. Mr. Bowes's four foals have been named "Tarahan," "The Wid Wind," "Corybantics," and "Rondinella."

There is nothing especially interesting in cricket this season, and terribly long scores continue to be made. Cambridge had to fight very hard to beat Nottingham by 18; and when was the last time of the Ashton-under-Lyne bowling of Reynolds and Rowley that All England could make no head whatever against it. The Hampshire Fourteen beat the Surrey Eleven early by 86 runs; but the Oval men " inflicted terrible vengeance on Sussex by 54 runs in one innings. Julius Cæsar contributed 107 (not out) to their 205, on the part of Sussex James Lillywhite delivered 404 balls without once being taken off. Surrey met Kent this week at The Oval, and were by six wickets. Mordlock and the slows did great execution, and H. H. Stephenson, whose batting form is the talk of the season, twice carried out his bat for 48 and 18; and the Kentish Eleven were disposed of by G. M. Kelson (83), and Willsher, who took seven wickets in the first innings. Cambridgeshire has beaten Yorkshire very easily at Sheffield.

GOODWOOD RACES.—TUESDAY.

Craven Stakes.—Angle-Saxon, 1. Birchtrcom, 2. Fairwater, 3. Gwendoline, 4. Lady of Lorne, 5. Lady Constance, 6. Overtone, 7. Lawant Stakes.—Longdown, 1. Siberia, 2. Le Mandarin, 3.

Stewards' Cup.—Marigold, 1. Vivid, 2. Bertha, 3. Orus, 0.

Gratwicke Stakes.—Blair Athol, 1. Peon, 2. Miss Pickle, 3.

Ham Stakes.—Hastren, 1. Ilter, 2. Ashaan, 3. Rosalba, 0.

Fifty Pounds, added to a sweepstakes of 8 sovs.—Blenkiron Buck, 1. Erin-go-Bragh, 2. Ely, 3.

WEDNESDAY.

Drawing-room Stakes.—Knight of Snowdon, 1. Glendusk, 2. Hark-forward, 3.

Handicap Plate of 50 sovs.—Chrysalis, 1. Voxpitzz, 2. St. Vincent, 3.

Sweepstakes of 100 sovs.—Idler, 1. Ashaan, 2. Governess, 0.

Sweepstakes of 500 sovs.—Sister to Drake, 1. Auricula, 2. Procella, 3.

Goodwood Derby.—Young Rapid, 1. Thalestris, 2.

Goodwood Stakes.—Blondin, 1. Guerilla, 2. Thalestris, 0.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs.—Lord of England, 1. Olivo, 2. Sabrina, 3.

Findon Stakes.—Ostrycot, 1. Kenig, 2. Zambesi, 3.

Sweepstakes.—Sister Ann, 1. Lady Gorham, 0.

THURSDAY.

Twelfth Benitent Stakes.—Old Oswald, 1. Blair Athol colt over.

Thirteenth Benitent Stakes.—Rugbuly, 1. Ely, 2. Goolykeeks, 3.

Chichester Stakes.—Master Herbert, 1. Sweetbriar, 2. Miss Bell, 3.

Sweepstakes of 200 sovs.—Maid Marian, 1. Paymate, 2. St. George, 3.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs.—Zambesi, 1. Ranger, 2. Zetland Stakes.—Blair Athol walked over.

Sussex Stakes.—Le Mandarin, 1. Siberia, 2.

Racing Stakes.—Knight of Snowdon, 1. Beatrix, 2. War Dance, 3.

Sweepstakes of 100 sovs.—Lady Constance, 1. Lady of Lorne, 2.

Molecombe Stakes.—Kenig, 1. Zambesi, 2. La Fortune, 3.

Fourteenth Benitent Stakes.—Farewell, 1. Hourless, 2. Vest c., 3.

NEW ALMSHOUSES, AT WATFORD, ERECTED FOR THE SALTERS' COMPANY.

THE rebuilding of the almshouses of the civic companies in the environs of the metropolis is one of the most noteworthy events, on occasion requires, is a sanitary change much to be commended. It is a step towards the removal of the unhealthy building in a pent-up rook and on the margin of the great town; but the value of property in these localities has increased to such an extent as to render the removal of them to the founds of the suburbs desirable, besides ensuring the comforts of the poor almspeople. The wealthy Company of Salters—one of the twelve great companies—has set a praiseworthy good example. More than four centuries ago (1454) Thomas Beaumont, Esq., gave to the company a tenement in Broad-street and six almshouses adjoining; the six almshouses to receive 7d. a week. And, in 1578, Sir Ambrose Nicholas, Lord Mayor in 1576, gave an almshouse, in Monkwell-street, for twelve women, to receive 7d. each. The original premises were burnt down in the Great Fire of 1666, after which the company rebuilt the almshouses, which had become so dilapidated as to require reconstruction; when the Master, and Wardens, and Assistants—trustees for all time—instead of rebuilding the refuge for their decayed brethren in Monkwell-street, chose the neighbourhood of Watford for their new location. The new almshouses, a view of which is engraved on page 112, from a photograph by Mr. F. L. Downer of Watford, have been erected at a cost of £2000, exclusive of the expense of the site and adjacent grounds, in a pleasant part of Watford, about ten minutes' walk from the railway station. The buildings present three sides of a square, or a centre and two wings, the principal portion resting on a raised terrace. The interiors are planned with careful regard to sanitary considerations and the domestic accommodation of the inmates—the almswomen from Monkwell-street, and almsmen from Salters'-seats, Bow-lane. The architect is Mr. John Collier, of Putney; and the builder Mr. King, of Shefford, Bedfordshire. The grounds are tastefully laid out for the recreation of the almsfolk; and the judgment displayed by the company in providing "so many happy ports and havens" for such of their brethren as may become poor in advanced age, or their widows, is highly honourable to the worthy Salters, who may henceforth wreathe their loving-cup with memories of the Watford refuge.

NEW ALMSHOUSES AT WATFORD ERECTED BY THE SALTERS' COMPANY OF LONDON.

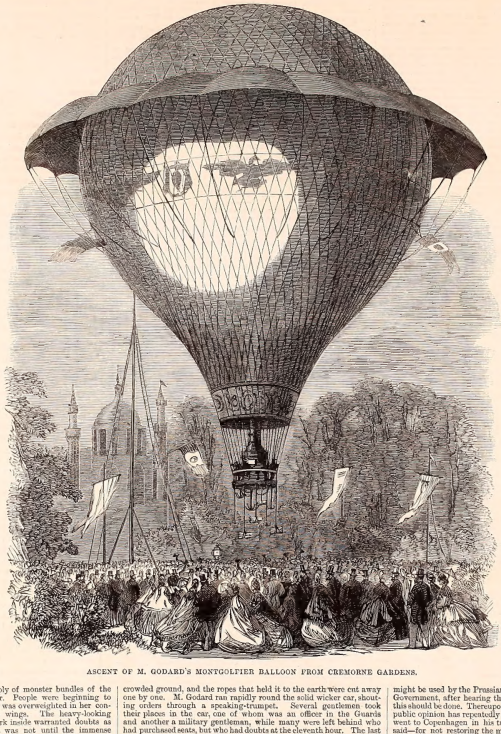
The institution was lately opened with some ceremony in the presence of the Master (Mr. Alderman Gibbons), the Wardens, and Court of Assistants, with a deputation from the livery of the company, and some of the neighbouring gentry.

The Salters flourished in times when salt fish formed part of every meal, and the use and consumption of salt fish in the ancient Catholic periods was amazing. In short, it formed part of the allowance of the King and the nobility, of monastic establishments, and of all ranks of society; and the custom is even commemorated in modern times, in the "King's Maundy," which was, in great part, composed of salt fish. The Salters have had four halls before their present one in Swithin's-lane. "A bill of fare for fifty people of the Company of Salters, A.D. 1506," at their first hall in Bread-street, has often been quoted. In their books is a less known curiosity—a receipt for making a Christmas pie (Passte of Gamys), in the reign of Richard II., 1394 which was tried by the company's cook some years since and found to be excellent. Such good things are "not of an age, but for all time."

THE DRAMATIC COLLEGE FETE AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

THE annual festival at the Crystal Palace in aid of the funds of the Royal Dramatic College was kept up with great spirit on Saturday and Monday week. The model of Shakspeare's House at Stratford-on-Avon was tenanted by a representative of the poet himself, wearing the costume of his monumental bust, and gravely bidding welcome to the numerous visitors who came to inspect the collection of Shakspeare relics. Outside this building, in the wide space fronting the Handel orchestra, the central portion of the nave and transepts was filled with the stalls of a fancy fair, kept by many of the most popular of the London actresses, whose merry merchandise went off with remarkable success. We present an illustration of this pleasant scene. On the left-hand side of the transept, looking towards the great orchestra, were the stalls of Miss Katharine Hickson; Miss Elsworthy, who was liberally patronised; Mrs. Stirling, who conducted her commercial operations with her usual spirit; and Mrs. St. Henry, who attracted a multitude of customers and sold a variety of wares at no very alarming sacrifice. On the right were ranged the stalls of Mrs. Alfred Mellon, Mrs. Billington, Miss Fanny Hunt, and Mdlle. Stella Colas, who, as might have been expected, enjoyed a large amount of public patronage. In the centre of the nave a many-sided tent, of curious construction, was jointly tenanted by Miss Harfleur, Miss Wentworth, Miss Lindley, Miss Caroline Carson and her sister, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul, who sold, at a profitable price, fans of a peculiar pattern, prettily got up and embellished with views of Maybury College, and vignette portraits of Mr. Webster as Master of the institution and Mr. Creswick as Deputy-Master. Along the nave, by the orchestra, were erected the respective marts of Miss Constance Aylmer, Miss Clara Thompson, Miss Alice Seaman, Miss F. Bolton, Miss Lavine, Miss Morelli, Miss Minnie Davis, Miss C. Willard, Miss Sheridan, and Miss Fanny and Miss Patti Josephs; all of whom plied their vocation with unwearied zeal and succeeded in getting off their stock at the most unconscionable prices. The other entertainments of the day, including a grand heraldic procession, a melodramatic performance in Richardson's theatre, a wild-beast show in Wombwell's menagerie, an exhibition of conjuring, a museum of antiquities, a post-office, a tent of fortune-telling gipsies, a company of nigger musicians, and a variety of Aunt Sallys, Punch and Judys, Marionettes, and miscellaneous diversions, were equally attractive in their kind. Mr. Buckstone took care of Aunt Sally. The performance of "Don Sebre Izquierdo, or Alfred and Florencia," by Messrs. Paul Bedford, Toole, and Company, in the theatrical booth, was especially laughable; and their subsequent feats in the Temple of Magic were beheld with astonishment by those who crowded to see them. These amusements were relieved by listening to the Crystal Palace band or by strolling in the garden and pleasure-grounds. The objects of the Dramatic College are so good that we are glad to record the success of any such attempt to raise contributions for its support.

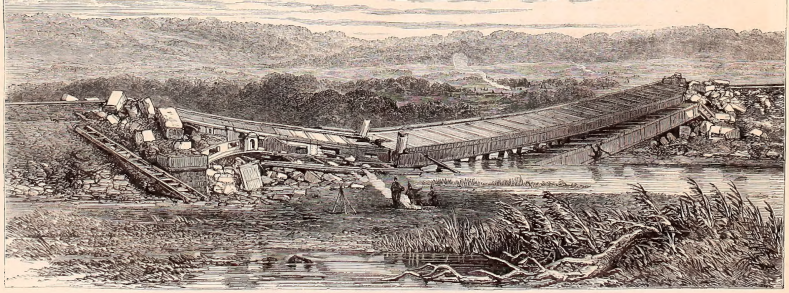


THE DRAMATIC COLLEGE FETE AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

M. GODARD'S

MONTGOLFIER BALLOON AT CREMORNE GARDENS.

We give an Illustration of the appearance of the huge "Montgolfier," or heated-air, balloon, with which M. Eugène Godard ascended from Cremorne Gardens on the evening of Wednesday week. This balloon is an enormous structure, made of silk inside and very plain canvas outside, of the ordinary pear-shape, adorned with representations of the French eagle, and generally of a whitey-brown colour, except a blue border which goes round it near the top. Last year M. Nadar's "Géant" balloon was a subject of international interest, but "The Eagle" far surpasses it in size, and the following statistics go beyond the dimensions of any other balloon yet made:—It is 117 ft. 7 in. in height, 88 ft. 9 in. in circumference, 360 ft. 6 in. superficial, 39,000 ft. in area, 2005 lb. in weight, 408,856 in cubic capacity, contains 4758 square yards of silk in 1910 pieces of ninety-six stripes, 14,203 ft. of stitching, 96 overlaps of joints 154 ft. long, making 13,848 ft. more of sewing, and 17,244 ft. of galloons, which form the network; the galloons are stitched on both sides, and contain 34,349 more feet of stitching. Twenty-four compartments in the parachute require 6824 ft. of stitching. The whole contains 69,324 ft. of stitching, requiring 2706 days of work. The valve is 4 ft. 8 in. in diameter, and the appendix is 24 ft. 5 in.; the opening of the latter is held by a wooden hoop, rigged with 32 cords to sustain the car, which weighs 585 lb., is dish-shaped, and 13 ft. 2 in. in diameter, with a border of 8 in.; the car is constructed of several pieces, which can be disconnected and put together again for convenience of transport. The hoop and the car are also attached by sixty-four metal cords. In the centre of the car is an 18 ft. stove, including the chimney, 980 pounds in weight, 6 ft. 6 in. in diameter, composed of three cylinders, apart from each other, invented by M. Godard, with a view to counteract the effects of the radiated heat upon the occupants of the car; inside the fire is a metal colander to intercept sparks. The combustible employed for filling the balloon with heated air is rye straw, cleaned from the ears and compressed into blocks. The total weight of the balloon (including the grappling-iron cords, 400 lb.; two supplemental pumps, 150 lb.; and combustibles, 500 lb.) is 4620 lb. Such is M. Godard's gigantic aerial machine. It appears to be put together in a most substantial manner, and when fully inflated is of symmetrical proportions. The process of inflation commenced about six o'clock in the evening, the balloon depending from a horizontal rope attached to two masts one hundred feet high. For nearly an hour the great mass of silk, canvas, and cordage seemed to set at defiance all the exertions of a powerful furnace and an unfailing supply of monster bundles of the choicest straw for producing rarefied air. People were beginning to lay wagers that the great French Eagle was overweighted in her construction, and would fail to use her wings. The heavy-looking exterior of the balloon and the ironwork inside warranted doubts as to the practicability of the ascent. It was not until the immense mass rose from the ground and swayed to and fro before the spectators, that public confidence began to revive. At a quarter to eight the whole fabric stood up amongst the trees and poles of the crowded ground, and the ropes that held it to the earth were cut away one by one. M. Godard ran rapidly round the solid wicker car, shouting orders through a speaking-trumpet. Several gentlemen took their places in the car, one of whom was an officer in the Guards and another a military gentleman, while many were left behind who had purchased seats, but who had doubts at the eleventh hour. The last rope was cut away, and the huge balloon rolled rather than rose towards the east side of the gardens. Here it met a firm lofty pole, to which some of its detaining ropes had been attached, and this pole was bent upon the creaking roof of a theatrical Swiss cottage, which broke in like a piece of ornamental pastry. For a few seconds the balloon seemed to return to the gardens, and to descend towards the grass, while the stokers were seen desperately throwing the small trusses of compressed straw into the mouth of the fiery furnace. M. Godard vociferated through his trumpet. The excitement caused several ladies to faint, and a portion of the crowd to rush panic-stricken towards the hotel. In less than a minute, however, the "Eagle" had regained her buoyancy, and rose with extraordinary steadiness above the lofty trees of the gardens. There was little wind stirring, and her course appeared to be in the direction of Woolwich. Her appearance was peculiar, as she had no variegated stripes of colour, like the ordinary oil-skin balloons; the yellow furnace gleamed just above the travellers and under her neck, and numbers of small straw trusses hung dangling underneath her car. The balloon safely descended at Greenwich. The presumed advantage of returning to the Montgolfier system is, that the inflation can be completed in less than an hour, and M. Godard says that under favourable circumstances he can fill and start in less than half an hour. With a gas-filled balloon the process of inflation is generally long and tiresome—sometimes beginning at ten o'clock in the morning, and not being finished at six o'clock in the evening, the usual hour for ascending. What may be the respective merits of the two systems in stormy weather, we leave the learned in aërostation to determine.



ASCENT OF M. GODARD'S MONTGOLFIER BALLOON FROM CREMORNE GARDENS.

THE LANGAA RAILWAY-BRIDGE IN JUTLAND.

THE following extract from a letter of the Times special correspondent with the Austro-Prussian army in Denmark will explain the subject of one of our Illustrations this week:—

"The most uncivilised thing the Prussians have done in Jutland is the blowing up of the great iron railway-bridge at Langaa, a few miles south-west from Randers, on the line to Viborg. This line was open for traffic. When the Danes left they took with them some essential parts of the steam-engines, easy to transport and difficult to replace, without which it is impossible the locomotion can be worked. Some weeks ago General Falkenstein told the director of the railway, which belongs to the Danish Government, but has been constructed and was being worked by English contractors, that if they were not prepared to run trains by the end of the armistice he would destroy the line. Thereupon the director went to Copenhagen, stated the case to the Government, and strongly urged that the machinery carried off by General Hegermann Lindencrone should be returned, in order that the line might be used by the Prussians and saved from impending ruin. The Government, after hearing the arguments of the director, ordered that this should be done. Thereupon General Hegermann, an officer in whom public opinion has repeatedly expressed its perfect want of confidence, went to Copenhagen in his turn, urged reasons—strategical ones, it is said—for not restoring the machinery, and so enabling the Prussians to use the line, finally carried his point, and the Government revoked its order. It is not easy to see, when the Prussians were already at the Lim Fiord and the Danes north of that barrier, of what great strategical importance it would be that the former should have the use of the few miles of railway as yet made in central Jutland. It might possibly facilitate and expedite their operations when the Fleet had to be covered; but if General Hegerman retreated as fast as he did after his discomfiture by the Austrians at Velle he need hardly fear even a railway-train. Be that as it may, the piston-rods and other essential machinery were not sent; the armature expired; the Prussian General sent for the manager of the railway and asked if he were prepared to take him by train to Viborg. He was not so, but he expressed his willingness to send to England without delay for the missing machinery, and to have it out within ten days or a fortnight. But the General was incredulous. He had given the order that he would destroy the line if there were not trains ready to run at the end of the armature, and his word he would keep. An explosive effect was sent to blow up Langaa Bridge, a costly iron one of a single span across the River Guden. I have not seen the bridge, for the carriage-road from Viborg to Randers runs far north of the railway, but I have seen photographs of it as it was and as it is, as a stately structure; and a perfect one it was. The work of destruction has been most completely done, at no small expense of powder, for the bridge was built as English engineers are wont to build, with a liberality of strength. A first explosion did but partly succeed. After blowing up the buttresses, one of the tubular girders was blown up with a charge of 1lb. of powder. Other damage has been done to the line. A small bridge has been blown up, turntables have been broken, and plates removed. But these are all trifles compared with the destruction of the great Langaa Bridge, which cost, if I am rightly informed, 200,000 Danish thalers, or upwards of £22,000. It was a cruel thing to do merely out of revenge on the Danes for having built the machinery, which might have been replaced in a few days. Some of the following papers, I understand, have pleaded that there were strategical reasons for the destruction of the bridge; but that only proves either gross ignorance of the facts of the case or wilful misrepresentation. The allied commanders were perfectly certain that the Danes would not cross the Lim Fiord and attack them, one against three or four, in their guarded camp in spite of it. Could they suppose the Danes capable of such unwonted temerity, they assuredly did not reckon on its being successful by success; and, finally, were it necessary to prevent traffic on the line, nothing was easier than to take up a few rails, which the railway people would doubtless themselves have done in order to save the bridge. It is perfectly legitimate to destroy railways that may really be of service to an enemy's army or to cut off his retreat, but the case of mere wanton mischievousness, and does little honour to those, wherever they may be, with whom the orders for its commission originated.

THE WAR IN DENMARK: RUINS OF THE LANGAA RAILWAY BRIDGE, IN JUTLAND, LATELY DESTROYED BY THE PRUSSIANS.

BIRTHS.

On the 21st inst., at 5, Clarence-place, Penzance, the wife of J. Barclay Montgomery, M.D., of a son.

On the 21st inst., at Villa Marina, Weston-super-Mare, the wife of John Hugh Smyth Pigott, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 5th inst., at Fort Richmond, Cape of Good Hope, the wife of R. D. Buchanan, Esq., of a son.

On the 24th inst., at 61, Buttond-gate, the Hon. Mrs. Welby, of a son.

On the 23rd inst., at Weldon Rectory, the wife of the Rev. William Finch Hatton, of a daughter.

On the 20th inst., at Stonelaven, Kincardineshire, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Robertson, of a daughter.

On the 25th inst., at 69, Princes-street, Leicester-square, the wife of Mr. Edmund Lamert, of a daughter.

On the 11th inst., at Erbek, Constantinople, the wife of John Seager, Esq., of a son.

On the 21st inst., at the Pollards, Loughton, Essex, the wife of Edward Vickers, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 20th inst., at Charleston House, Beckenham, Kent, Mrs. William Richardson, of a son.

Lady Denbigh, of a son.

At Acton Lodge, Cheshire, Mrs. C. A. Chetwynd Talbot, of a son.

On the 27th inst., at Cossebury Park, the Countess of Essex, of a son.

At Upper Grosvenor-street, Lady Mary Herbert, of a daughter.

At Ampthill Park, the Hon. Mrs. W. Lowther, of a son.

At the Deanery, Mayfair, the Hon. Mrs. Bligh, of a son.

At South-street, Lady Colebrooke, of a son.

At Pershore Rectory, near Bromsgrove, the Hon. Mrs. A. Saville, of a daughter.

At Wilton-crescent, the Hon. Mrs. Wrottesley, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 21st inst., at Christ Church, Lee, by the Rev. Thomas England, Rector of North Lew, Devon, uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. William T. Rose, Incumbent, Benjamin F., eldest son of Benjamin Ingham, Esq., to Frances, only daughter of Elsworth England, Esq., both of Lee, in the county of Kent.

On the 7th of April, at Gayndah, Queensland, by the Rev. Father O'Connell, Mr. Thomas, eldest son of Thomas Mount, Esq., of Croggan, Ballyhaise, in the county of Derry, Ireland, to Mary Teresa, fourth daughter of the late Richard Kelly, Esq., of New Ross, Ireland, and of Gloucester-terrace, Queen's-road, Bayswater.

On the 24th inst., at St. John's, Eton, by the Rev. W. B. Marriott, John Prettyman Shipley Roberts, of 5, Norfolk-terrace, Bayswater, solicitor, to Sarah Mary, third daughter of the late Richard Jenkins, Esq., of Eton, and Lisvane, co. Glamorgan.

On the 22rd inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, C. E. Boyle, son of the Hon. J. Boyle, to Lady T. Pepys, daughter of the first Earl of Cottenham.

On the 25th of May, at the Chateau de Mont-Vilgenon, near Melun, Vicomte G. de Maricourt, to Louise, only daughter of Baron de Pontalba.

At Plymouth, Captain E. P. T. Bevor, Coldstream Guards, to Fanny Emma, daughter of the Hon. and Rev. C. Dundas.

On the 19th inst., at Alverstoke, Warwickshire, C. B. Pelly, Esq., to Louisa Catherine Emma, youngest daughter of Sir R. N. C. Hamilton, Bart.

At Bexley, R. N. Burgoyne, Esq., to Jaljee, daughter of Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, Bt. East Allington, Devon, the Rev. R. F. Carew, son of the late Sir H. Carew, Bart., to Charomme, Charlotte, widow of the late Capt. Hall, R.N.

At St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, Lieutenant-Colonel W. Earle, to Mary, daughter of General Sir W. J. Codrington, G.C.B.

At Clifton, T. H. Parr, Lieutenant Rifle Brigade, to Mary Bridget, daughter of the late Capt. W. Dowden.

At St. Mary's, Bottons, Brompton, John, son of the Rev. W. Richards, Vicar of Dawlish, Devon, to Hannah, daughter of the late G. Gooch, Esq., and niece to the late Sir T. D. E. Smith, Bart.

On the 25th inst., at St. John's Church, Paddington, by the Rev. Dr. Goulburn, assisted by the Rev. George de Vitré, William Sherman Turner, Esq., only son of the late William Turner, Esq., and nephew of the late Sir William Mollens, Esq., of Cambridge-square, and Walton Lodge, Banstead, to Helen, third daughter of the late Sir Richard Jenkins, G.C.B., of Eton, and of Lisvane, Shrewsbury.

At Stanwell Church, Marylebone, the Hon. Ivo de Vesci E. T. Wykeham Fiennes, Major 9th Queen's Royal Lancers, son of Lord Saye and Sele, to Isabella Emily, daughter of Charles F. Gregg, Esq.

At Alveston, Warwickshire, C. B. Pelly, Esq., to Louisa Catherine, daughter of Sir R. N. C. Hamilton, Bart., K.C.B.

At Sir T. E. Hanmer's, Bart., Mr. Gosling, to Miss Hanmer.

At St. John's, Paddington, by the Rev. G. Pepys, son of the first Earl of Cottenham, to Anna Ellen, daughter of J. Forster, Esq., of Charnden-place.

DEATHS.

On the 20th inst., at The Pollards, Loughton, Essex, Harriette Edwards, the beloved wife of Edward Vickers, Esq.

On the 20th inst., at 1, Park-place Villas, Maida-hill West, Joseph Vickers, Esq., in the Bombay Medical Establishment, aged 74.

At Upper Brook-street, Lourn, relict of Sir W. W. Bailey, Bart., aged 81.

At Southsea, Jane Rose Nott, wife of Lieut.-Col. and Lucy Nott, in her 42nd year.

On the 12th of May, Vicomte Filemone Henry de Maricourt, Knight of the Orders of St. Francis and St. George, late officer in the service of Francis II. of Naples, aged 28.

On the 26th inst., at Prince's-gardens, Kensington, Evelyn Georgiana, the infant daughter of Mr. and Lady Georgiana Vernon, aged six months.

At Ampthill Park, Major-General Richard Hardinge, C.B., Royal Artillery, brother of the late Viscount Hardinge, aged 74.

At Moate, Galway, Ireland, wife of Captain Gascoyne, and daughter of his Grace the late Bishop of Tuam, in her 64th year.

On the 20th inst., at Bilston, Staffordshire, Augustus Pugin, Esq., Laureate Machell, Bengal Horse Artillery, Commissary of Ordnance at Allahabad, second surviving son of the late Rev. Robert Machell, in the 36th year of his age.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is five shillings for each announcement.*

A traveller through Oude gives a sad account of the present condition of Havelock's tomb. Writing to the Bengal Harkaru, he says:—"I reached the Alumbagh about five a.m., and could not pass without visiting the grave of Havelock. I was much surprised and disappointed to find the place utterly neglected. It might be as well, perhaps, to leave the house as it now stands, for it bears good evidence of the fighting there; but why the garden should be allowed to remain as it is cannot be well explained. Grass, shrubs, and bones stay at will through it; a large quantity of seemingly rotten timber lying about does not improve its appearance; the walls are almost lost in weeds and jungle, and it bears altogether a deserted look."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 6.

SUNDAY, July 31.—Tenth Sunday after Trinity. Trinidad discovered by Columbus, 1498. Oxygen discovered by Joseph Priestley, 1774.

MONDAY, Aug. 1.—Lammas Day. Henry III. of France, last of the Valois, assassinated by Jacques Clement, 1589. Accession of George I. and the house of Brunswick, 1714.

TUESDAY, 2.—Victory of Philip of Macedon over the Athenians, Thebans, &c., at Chæronea, and overthrow of Grecian liberty, 338 B.C. County Courts Act passed, 1846. Open moon, 9h. 36m. p.m.

WEDNESDAY, 3.—The stupendous fort of Gwalior gallantly stormed by Sir Hugh Rose, 1858. Opening of the Suez Canal, 1869. Abolition of the union of the duchies, 1863.

THURSDAY, 4.—St. Dominge founded by Bartholomew Columbus, 1493. Battle of Alcacar. Sebastian of Portugal defeated and slain by the Moors, 1578.

FRIDAY, 5.—Great victory of Prince Eugene of Savoy over the Turks, at Belgrade, 1717. Foundations of the Crystal Palace laid by Archbishop, 1852.

SATURDAY, 6.—Transfiguration of Our Lord. Prince Alfred born, 1844. New Bankruptcy Act passed, 1861.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 5, 1854.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.	A.M. h. m.
30 10 0	31 10 47	1 11 34	2 0 22	3 1 10	4 1 59	5 2 49

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER			WIND.
	Barometer reduced to 32° Fahr.	Direction of Wind.	Rain in Inches.	Humidity. Amount of Saturation. Complete Saturation = 1000.	Temperature of Evaporation.	Minimum in Night.	Maximum in Day.	General Direction.	Miles.	Number of Hours.
	Inches.	°	Inches.	°	°	°	°		Miles.	Inches.
30	29·910	67·7	·02	3	55·0	47·8	W.		274	·000
31	29·871	65·7	51·2	·01	4	54·2	76·4	W. WSW. SW.	274	·000
1	29·783	64·1	61·7	·00	2	52·9	77·2	W. SW.	293	·015
2	29·982	64·0	49·3	·55	3	50·2	75·2	W. SW.	250	·000
3						50·2	77·0	W. WNW.	202	·000
4	29·702	59·2	52·5	·00	9	52·9	70·7	W. SW. NW.	247	·000
5	29·847	63·9	49·4	·07	5	52·9	71·7	WNW. W. N.	240	·000

The following are the readings of the self-registering thermometers for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Thursday (31st)	29·995	29·908	29·961	29·908	29·926	29·877
Temperature of Air	71·1°	67·6	64·9°	65·9°	64·9°	59·9°
Temperature of Evaporation	61·9°	56·9	55·6°	57·1°	56·4°	51·4°
Direction of Wind	W.	W.	W.	W.	W.	W.

OVERLAND MAILS FOR INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIA.

AUGUST, 1854.

MAIL STEAMERS DISPATCHED FOR			MAIL STEAMERS DUE FROM
4	Calcutta and China	(Teneah) S	2	Calcutta and China	(Delhi) S
5	Egypt	(Ripon) S	3	Egypt and Malta	(Simoom) S
12	Malta	(Hindoo) S	3	Bombay and Mauritius	(Canada) S
19	Calcutta and China	(Orpheu) M	13	Calcutta, China, and Australia
26	Egypt	(Ripon) S			(Simoom) S
30	Calcutta, China, Australia, and Mauritius	(Teneah) S	18	Calcutta, China, and Australia	(Teneah) S
31	Bombay	(Canada) S	19	Bombay	(Orpheu) M
139	Calcutta, China, Australia, and Mauritius	(Peninsular) M	25	Bombay	(Canada) S
			30	Calcutta and China	(Peninsular) M

S, Steamboat. M, Marseilles.

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS FOR THIS WEEK, JULY 30, COMPRISED OF 2 SHEETS AND HALF-SHEET SUPPLEMENT.

AT HOME.

Copies bearing the impressed stamp which must be exposed to view) circulate FREE through the Post Office, for fifteen days from the date of publication, to all parts of the United Kingdom. The Half-Sheet Supplement, when published separately, pays a Postage on delivery of Id. Single Numbers, 1½d. Monthly Parts, 6d. Quarterly Parts, 1s. 6d. Every stamp (each, which must be prepaid by affixing a postage-stamp. The free delivery of the Paper is limited to the rule, extends to such places only as are within three miles of the General Post Office.

The Illustrated London News pays two penny postage-stamps affixed to each.

FOR FOREIGN PARTS.

The impressed stamps is of no service for Foreign parts are to be sent abroad: these must have postage-stamps affixed to them according to the following rates :—

Australia—Penny Stamp	Hamburgh—Penny Stamp	Malta—Penny Stamp	Sardinia—Penny Stamp
Austria—Penny Stamp	Holland—Penny Stamp	Mexico—Penny Stamp	Spain—Penny Stamp
Brazils—Penny Stamp	India—Two Stamps. This paper	Naples—Penny Stamp	Sweden—Penny Stamp
Canada—Penny Stamp	Ionian Islands—Penny Stamp	New Zealand—Penny Stamp	Switzerland—Penny Stamp
Cape of Good Hope—Penny Stamp	Malta—Penny Stamp	Portugal—Penny Stamp	Turkey—Penny Stamp
China—Two Stamps	Mauritius—Penny Stamp	Prussia—Penny Stamp	United States—Penny Stamp
Denmark—Two Stamps. This paper	Mexico—Penny Stamp	Russia—Two Stamps. This paper	West Indies—Penny Stamp
France—Penny Stamp	Naples—Penny Stamp	Sardinia—Penny Stamp

An edition of this paper specially printed for transmission abroad. The postage of this edition is one penny ordinary sheet paper is double to those places which require, as marked in the above list, the thin-paper edition.

THE ILLUSTRA ED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, JULY 30.

THE prorogation of Parliament, the termination of the season, and the departure from town of all who are not compelled to remain in it, will now hand over the metropolis to its improvers. They will be left in full possession of highways and byways, and there will be no impetuous owners of aristocratic mansions to rage at obstructions to their rapid career, or merchants to menace with penalties the sulky sluggards whose carts make it impossible to say when one can get on Change; no lawyers to storm from hansoms at the "block" that adds new delays to the course of law. The newspapers will no longer be enlivened by the wrath of the Home Secretary, and Parliament will cease to be told, unfilially, that they are utterly useless as fathers of the City and had better delegate their functions to Sir Richard Mayne.

But, as we hope and expect to find, when the winter shall roll round, that much has been done; and as hopes and expectations are not unfrequently doomed to disappointment, it may be as well to leave on record a decided protest against the grievances to which we have so long been subjected. Protests are seldom of much use in themselves, for they are generally the last resource of the unfortunate victim of a gentleman to whom the great Lord Ellenborough is said to have observed, in reply to an emphatic declaration, "Very well. Protest, and go home, and be hanged." But they serve us as useful memoranda. We shall know where to begin again with our indignation; and though there is no need of "nursing our wrath to keep it warm," like the lady in Burns's poem, we shall not do amiss to preserve a register of the inflictions we have endured. Be it remembered, therefore, that for many months London has been in a state of siege and barricade, by reason of the "improvements." The Metropolitan Railway had scarcely cleared away its huge piles and covered in its abysses, when the great arteries were seized in the grip of the emissaries of the Sewerage. They went to work with the zeal of an army that knows its only safety to be in lines and intrenchments; and a series of fortifications, mostly surmounted by huge scaffolds that in the twilight resembled the guillotine in the last scenes of "The Dead Heart," and surrounded by stockades that would defy a New Zealand warrior, arose in our chief thoroughfares. The sites of these erections seemed ingeniously selected to give the most hindrance to the traffic and the most trouble to the police. If there was a particular part of the line that was already too narrow, and an ordinary point of conflict, that was the place chosen for the new obstruction. Let those who have to drive during the opera season to hear the first act of "Faust" testify to the total success of the barricades. Let those who have had bills to take up in the City, and have sought to comply with the polite invitation to call between two and four, and before three on Saturday, say how their credit was jeopardized by Mr. Thwaites's blocks. We make no doubt that very good reasons could be assigned for all that has been done, though nobody has ever condescended to try to explain to a furious public that its sufferings were necessary. But we have, while detained in the neighbourhood of the odious obstructions, had ample time to note that the work seemed to be done in the most leisurely fashion, and that it was struck at the easiest hours. In France, relays of men would have been kept employed night and day rather than that the business and comfort of a great city should be needlessly injured; and if any things are differently managed here, and we can only submit. Nevertheless, we are now full of remembrance of what we have suffered, and we shall be in no mood to find ourselves, in the winter, when vehicles are a necessary of life, in the same mess of muddle and block which the streets present at the end of July.

The Sewerage impediments not being enough to bear, another tyranny has been set up, and this is one which demands a grave consideration. The Sewers must soon be finished; but when will the Embankment be completed? We cannot but think. But in the mean time there has been introduced into our crowded streets a new obstruction of the grimmest sort. Let anyone who wishes to comprehend it stand for half an hour, at any part of the day, before the office of this Journal, or, still better, a little further east, and near Messrs. Child's book-closet, better known as Temple Bar. He will there see strings of huge, massy carts, driven by the most stolid clowns, crawling slowly backwards and forwards, or motionless amid the traffic they have arrested. Some are full of earth and rubbish; some are empty. Against the obstructions thus caused, policemen rave and gesticulate in vain, vainly storms the man of business from his hansom cab, vainly gnashes his teeth the physician in his carriage, vainly launches his sulphurous omnibus out, as vainly hurls his curse the sulfer driver. Nothing can then these carts, nothing can move the savages who rule them. These force their way amid lighter vehicles, reckless of paint and of wheels; and when they choose to halt for a wrangle or a discussion they do so, and there they stop. A mile of carts are suddenly brought to a standstill. Even (and there is a gleam of fierce comfort in the sight) the railway-van demons can do nothing against these machines, and the brutal driver of the Juggernaut car that has been tyrannising over all else now meets as brutal an adversary, and whom he greets with sneers in vain. The Strand and Fleet-street are absolutely at the mercy of the Embankment carter. That he might be compelled to come earlier and later, and that he might be forced to adopt routes that would not much hinder the traffic is of course clear; but who thinks of doing it? We shall, were legislation or police-direction attempted, there would be the usual outcry about common-law rights, and, as Mr. Punch suggests, Magna Charta and the Vaccination Act. To this nuisance Londoners will be hopelessly consigned for the rest of the year, and in the greatest commercial city of the world there is no one to interfere in the interest of hindered commerce.

Happy are those who can get away, and in deep shades or by green seas forget all wrongs. But the winter will come, and we must all return—carriages must roll, cabs must stink, omnibuses must jolt, and—worst of all—it will be a time when if we are to come back to the blocks and struggles which disgrace our capital. Should it be so, the citizens of London will surely exert themselves for their liberation: and we, who quarter their arms, shall be prompt to aid in agitation against the shameful nuisances we have recorded for condemnation.

THE COURT.

The Queen continues at Osborne House, in the enjoyment of good health. Princess Helena is convalescent.

On Wednesday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse and Princess Louis, walked and drove in the grounds adjacent to Osborne. Prince Louis of Hesse went to Aldershott. Upon his Royal Highness's return, after the field-day, he was met at Southampton, by Princess Alice in the Fairy. The Prince and Princess of Leiningen dined with the Queen. The Duke of Argyll arrived at Osborne, and dined at dinner with her Majesty.

On Thursday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis and Princess Beatrice, drove in the grounds of Osborne. Later in the day her Majesty, accompanied by Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and Prince William of Prussia, and attended by Colonel the Hon. A. Hardinge, paid a visit to the Prince and Princess of Leiningen at West Cowes.

Yesterday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse and Princess Louis, walked and drove in the grounds adjacent to Osborne. Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse and the Princess of Leiningen visited the prince for females at Parkhurst.

On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, drove out. Prince Louis of Hesse and Prince William of Prussia had a cruise in the Solent in the Fairy.

On Sunday the Queen, Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, Princess Louis, Princess Beatrice, and Prince William of Prussia, attended Divine service at Osborne. The Rev. G. Prothero officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, walked and drove in the grounds at Osborne. The Earl of Clarendon returned to London.

On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse and Princess Louis, walked and drove in the grounds adjacent to Osborne.

The Countess Dowager of Mount-Edgcumbe has succeeded the Countess of Caledon as Lady in Waiting.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales left Marlborough House yesterday week for Frogmore House.

On Saturday last their Royal Highnesses had an excursion upon the river, and witnessed the Eton regatta. The Prince and Princess, attended by the Hon. Mrs. F. Stonor, Lieutenant-General Keppel, Captain G. H. Grey, and Mr. Herbert Fisher, entered the boat the Albert Edward at half-past six, the Prince, Captain Grey, and the waterman rowing. Their Royal Highnesses arrived opposite the Eton Rowing Club time to witness the starting of the boats for Surley Hall. The Prince and Princess remained to see the race over and the return of the boats from Surley, when their Royal Highnesses met them and returned to the Brocas, opposite the college, where the prizes were displayed, after which the crews of the boats rowed past the Prince's boat, and cheers were given for the Prince, Captain Grey, and the Princess rowed from the scene amid the enthusiastic cheers of the spectators, and returned to Frogmore.

On Tuesday the Prince and Princess drove to Virginia Water and dined in the Fishing Temple. The Duchess of Cambridge visited their Royal Highnesses at Frogmore.

On Wednesday the Prince and Princess left Frogmore for Goodwood House, on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Richmond during the races. Their Royal Highnesses proceeded by the South-Western Railway to the Chaplain Junction, where Mr. Hawkins, general manager of the Brighton, Lewes, and South-Coast Railway, was in waiting to conduct the Prince and Princess, via Croydon, Three Bridges, and Arundel, to Chichester, where the Royal travellers arrived, after a most agreeable journey through a charming variety of country, at two o'clock. At Chichester the Prince and Princess, who were accompanied by the Hon. Mrs. Stonor and Captain Grey, were received by the Duke and Duchess, with whom they proceeded to Goodwood House. The Prince and Princess afterwards went, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess, to the racecourse, where the Royal party were received with cheers on a huge concourse of company. The Prince and Princess went to the racecourse again on Thursday and Friday, the last day for the Goodwood Cup. Yesterday (Friday) their Royal Highnesses took leave of the Duke and Duchess of Richmond, and proceeded to Osborne on a visit to the Queen.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess De Montpensier have left Trinity-square for Shirley's Royal Victoria Hotel at St. Leonards-on-Sea, for the benefit of sea-bathing.

The Grand Duchess Marie, sister of the Emperor of Russia, has arrived at Cronberg Hotel from Belgium en route for Tongay.

The Count Schwarzer (of Austria) has left Sackville House, St. James's, on Saturday last for Berlin, on a tour of a few weeks in Germany.

The Duchess of Roxburghe has left the Clarendon Hotel for Floors Castle.

The Marquis of Bowmont left town on Tuesday for Floors Castle, near Kelso.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Drogheda have left town for the season, and will take a cruise in the noble Marquis's yacht till they take up their residence at Moore Abbey.

Louisa Marchioness of Waterford has left Farrance's Hotel for Germany.

The Marquis of Bristol and the Ladies Herrey left the family residence in St. James's-square yesterday for Widland, in Bohemia.

The Earl and Countess of Derby have left St. James's-square for Knowsley, near Liverpool.

Earl and Countess Spencer left Spencer House, St. James's, on Saturday last, en route for Althorpe Park, Northamptonshire, for the season.

Countess De Grey has left town for Wrest Park, near Ripon, for the season.

Earl and Countess Jermyn have left town on a visit to Mr. and Lady Elizabeth Drummond, at Cadlands, near Southampton.

Earl and Countess Ashburnham and Lady Katherine Ashburnham are present at Addlestone Park.

Viscountess Jocelyn and the Hon. Misses Jocelyn left Cambridge House on Tuesday, for Wrest Park, Bedfordshire, on a visit to Countess Cowley.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster and Lady Augusta Stanley have left Bagshot Park on a visit to her Majesty at Osborne.

Lady Egerton of Tatton and the Hon. Miss Egerton left town on Wednesday for a tour in Germany.

FOREIGN AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Ministerial whitebait dinner took place on Saturday last at the Trafalgar Hotel, Greenwich.

The Duchess of Wellington had an evening party on Monday evening at Apsley House.

Viscountess Palmerston had a reception on Saturday evening last at Cambridge House, at which a large circle assembled.

A Royal decree issued at Madrid on Wednesday appoints a committee of directors to erect a statue in honour of Christopher Columbus.

The Earl and Countess of Hanover were entertained every week by Royal proclamation. No time has been fixed for their resignation.

The Emperor of Russia arrived at St. Petersburg on the 22nd, after having reviewed the garrison of Finland in the 20th, and at Dunaburg on the night of the 21st.

The Swiss Government has ordered its chiefs of the Department of Commerce to open negotiations for a commercial treaty with Italy.

The Governor of Barcelona, in Spain, is occupied in founding a large chain-cable establishment for the use of the navy. He has, for the sum of six soos, a basin of soup, a portion of meat, and a good piece of bread may be had.

A shopkeeper at Vichy has adopted as a sign to his establishment, "The Three Theological Virtues," illustrated by medallions representing Faith, Hope, and Charity, portraits of the Emperor, the Empress, the Prince Imperial, and the Empress.

A funeral service for the memory of King Louis Bonaparte, father of the Emperor, was celebrated on Tuesday in the Church of St. Leu Orsine (Seine-et-Oise). Madame Vaillant, Madame Hortense Cornu, and others present, with the functionaries of the arrondissement, and a deputation of soldiers of the 14th Regiment.

Advices received at Paris from Tunis represent the condition of affairs at that place as very unfavourable. The Khasnadar persists in requiring the payment of a large sum from the Jews, and threatenings have broken up their camp. The troops of the Bey are in the neighbourhood of Tunis.

The monthly returns issued by the Poor-Law Board continue to show a steady improvement in the pauper list. The return for July, at the end of that month, a decrease of 6·9 per cent in the number of persons in receipt of relief as compared with the last month, and 5·5 per cent decrease was large, it was in the manufacturing districts; it amounted to above thirty per cent and in the north-western division, consisting of Lancashire and Cheshire.

A meeting of the Royal National Life-boat Institution was held on Thursday, at the house, John-street, Adelphi. Rewards amounting to £71 were voted to the crews of the life-boats of the institution stationed at Aberdovey and Barmouth for going off, in the course of a storm, to the assistance of the crew and passengers, consisting of nearly 300 persons, on board the emigrant ship Cambrian, from Liverpool for New York, which had stranded on Arklow Bank on the night of the 20th inst. As the weather was not very favourable, many boats were unable to put off, and those that did, to take the passengers on board, and afterwards to take the ship to Wicklow. A new set of life-boat signals has been adopted for use by the coast-guard and other men of life, two men from the entire Phantom, of Preston, which, during a gale on the 14th inst., stranded on Lytham Sands, and rescued the whole crew. It was stated that, in connection of the promptitude and skill of the saviors, that, in a short time after they were safely on shore, they were called to two more for rescuing, at some risk, in a small boat, one out of two men whose boat in the meantime capsized on stormy waters on the coast of Donegal. One poor fellow perished before assistance could reach him. Payments amounting to upwards of £300 were made on various life-boat establishments. The committee decided to place a life-boat at a favourable opportunity on the coast, and to call it the Sir Cornelius Scholefield, in addition to the gift of £100 to the institution by his son, the Hon. Beauchamp Scholefield, of Bombay. The executors of the late Mr. Thomas Reade, of Kensington, had paid her legacy of £500 to the society; and the legacy of the late Mr. Thomas Hodgson, of £50, had also been received. Lieutenant Rodney Mahon, R.N., who assisted in China £27 in his pay, and Lady Jane Ellice, £10, and subscriptions and donations to the amount of £1,000 were announced to the institution. During the past month the society had sent new life-boats to Blackpool, New Brighton, and Seaton Carew, Cornwall. They were all the gifts of benevolent persons to the institution.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Convocation of the Northern Province has been adjourned until the 18th of August.

The Right Rev. Dr. Samuel Crowther, the newly consecrated Bishop of the Niger, the first Anglican Bishop of his race and colour, left England by the mail-steamer which left Liverpool on Saturday last for Africa.

The Bishop of Ripon, on Wednesday week, consecrated the Church of Bramley, near Ripon, which has been rebuilt at a cost of £2500. The principal contributor was Mr. Samuel Brown, of Bramley.

The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge have voted a sum of £1000 to carry on the operations of the Bishop of Newcastle at Grafton and Armidale. The new see will be formed out of the present extensive diocese of Sydney. It is expected that a Bishop will be nominated in the course of a few days.

The new church of St. Paul, Wokingham, built by Mr. Walter, M.P., was consecrated, last Saturday, by the Bishop of Oxford. The church, which stands on a site of two acres intended as a burying-ground for the new district, is built of flint and stone, and consists of nave, chancel, north and south vestry and organ-chamber, and a tower and spire 170 ft. in height.

An Ornithological Museum has been established in the church of St. Mary, Hunslet, Leeds, which had been rebuilt on the site of the old edifice. The total cost of the work is £6000, and £4000 of this sum has been raised by parishioners for the organ, clock, bells, &c., the cost of the fabric itself having been defrayed by the son and two daughters of the late Mr. J. Ingham, a cloth manufacturer in the parish, as a memorial to their father.

The Rev. Mr. Bowyer, rural dean of Beddington, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday on Wednesday week by an entertainment to the wives and widows of his poorer parishioners, which took place on the garden of the Rectory, and was attended among the guests by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Dowager Duchess of Somerset, and the Bishop of Shaftesbury.

The annual meeting of the Poor Clergy Relief Society was held at the society's offices, Somerset-house, Strand, on Tuesday. A report stated that the operations of the society extended over a period of seven years, and during that time 1,000 cases had been relieved, the amount of pecuniary grants to the amount of £7910. Since the publication of the last report grants had been made to 181 cases, and 150 cases were under consideration awaiting investigation. It appeared from the balance-sheet that the year's receipts amounted to £2,042 8s. 3d., and the total sum raising the society's funds to £8,042 8s. 3d.

The Earl of Shaftesbury has withdrawn his name from the list of vice-presidents of St. Aidan's Theological College, Birkenhead, in consequence of the resolution which has been passed to establish a Church of Wesleyan wishing to become a minister of the Church of England can be admitted to St. Aidan's College without undergoing any examination, or any advantageous terms." The noble Earl has expressed his opinion that such a scheme of Church of England as it is offensive to the Wesleyans.

The Rural Dean of the Deanery of Cleobury Mortimer, in North Worcestershire was held in the Holy Trinity Church, Coventry, on Tuesday week—the Rev. Thomas Sheepshanks, M.A., Rector of Stoke Prior, presiding—of Tuvrey, Bois, holds its third annual festival there on the 14th inst. The proceedings began by a choral forthcoming, which was followed by a sermon preached by the Rev. Thomas Sheepshanks, M.A., Rector of Stoke Prior, from Matthew xxiv. 14. The second annual festival of the Church Choral Union of Shropshire was held in Burwood Church on the 20th inst. (St. James's Day). Eleven churches were present. The Rev. Mr. Monk, organist to the Abbey, Shrewsbury, under whose direction the choirs had been trained for this festival, was conductor.—The Rural Deanery of Wells, in the Deanery of Bishop's Wells, has held its two festivals this year—the first at South Petherton on the 21st ult., and the second at Bradford, on Wednesday last. About 140 members sang at each festival, and the services throughout were successful.—The Rural Deanery of Bath has held its annual festival in the abbey church of that town, on Thursday week, when seven choirs mustered and sang heartily and well.

TESTIMONIALS.—A handsome set of plate, consisting of a teapot, cream-jug, sugar-basin, and six teaspoons, has been presented by the parishioners of Bishop Wearmouth to the Rev. Edward Ellis, on his leaving the town to become Vicar, the Rev. Henry Fellowes, for more than fifty-one years Vicar of the parish, and who has resigned his living on account of infirmity.—The Rural Dean has been elected Rector of Bromley, in succession to the late Rev. Dr. Bowyer. The Rev. P. W. Bruyn Bayley, M.A., Incumbent of St. Paul's, Hull—a piece of plate and a purse of sovereigns, presented by his parishioners.—The Incumbent of St. Thomas's, Athlone, on the resignation of Christ Church, Liversedge—three silver salvers and a purse of sovereigns.—The Rev. Thomas Dempsey of Ballymore, and the members of the choir, and a gold pencil-case from the scholars.—The Rev. J. S. Sutherland, Incumbent of Christ Church, Bradford, and the Rev. J. Congregation of St. Paul's, Bethnal-green.—The Rev. C. A. St. John Mildmay, Rector of Hazeley, Hants, and Lady Mildmay, on the 21st inst., on their having resigned his living to take charge of the benefice of Long Marston, Yorkshire, presented with a handsome silver tea and coffee service and a purse containing £100.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. H. James, Incumbent of Christ Church, Bradford, to be Honorary Canon of Ripon.—Rectories: Rev. C. H. Burnham to Cobenhee, Northamptonshire; Rev. T. B. Bates to Ingoldsby, Lincoln; Rev. R. F. Dop to Bassingham, Lincolnshire; Rev. F. Orme to Lyndon, Rutlandshire; Rev. J. E. Troughton to Ashwell, Rutlandshire; Rev. J. Hall to Ayston, Rutland; Rev. J. Bennett, Rev. F. W. Browne to Almondsbury; Rev. J. S. Clarke, to Goodhurst, Kent; Rev. J. Gwyn to Llanfihangel-Nant-Melan, Radnorshire; Rev. J. Hughes to Gawsworth, Cons., Rev. T. Smith to Dundrum. Perpetual Curacy: Rev. J. B. Roberts to Bryn-Crug, Merionethshire.—The Rev. W. A. Jones has been with chaplaincy of Orotti Union; Rev. G. J. Chester to Irvine and Stirlingshire; Rev. J. Bell to Dalmellington, Ayrshire; Rev. W. Vincent to Sedgefield, Durham; Rev. W. Vincent to Bet-lington, Kent; Rev. G. Richardson to Ashton-on-Mersey, Cheshire.—The Rev. Mr. Hoodle, rector of west-Grawsend (and not Old Milton, as stated last week); Rev. E. L. Lace to St. Clement, Worcester; Rev. R. Hall to Bishop's Tachbrook, Warwick.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—Last Saturday was "Election Saturday" at Eton College, when the usual formalities took place, closing with a cricket-match in the Upper Playing-fields between a procession of boats manned by gay costumes, rowing from Windsor to Surley Hall, where they had a reflection in the open air. The Duke of Cambridge and a large party were also on the spectators. A dinner also took place in the college-hall, at which Dr. Goodford, the provost, presided, and a large party assembled. Monday was the 4th of autumn vacation, which will last about seven weeks. The lower boys return to Windsor on the 12th of September, and the upper boys on the 13th to form on Friday, the 16th, when the whole of the scholars will have returned.—The annual speech-day at Harrow took place on Thursday week, when Mr. Elton, which has just concluded, went made about two hundred speeches, and received a number of prizes. The proceedings terminated with the usual speech, placed on the list. The following are the names of the successful candidates, in order of merit:—Toy, Bowen, Bourne, Keating, Steere, Thring, Bp. Pulman, twelve; Ainsley, eleven; Bp. Pulman, ten; Bowen, nine; Keating, eight; Toy, Bourne, Steere, seven; Thring, six; Bp. Pulman, five; Bp. Pulman, four; Gregory, thirteen; Pulman, thirteen; Avern, nine; Bourne, Keating, Steere, seven; Ackland, six; Bowen, five; Smith, four; Thring, three; Bp. Pulman, two.

The death of Mr. Joseph O'Leary Vice-President of Queen's College, Galway, is announced. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and graduated with honours in 1837. He was called to the Bar in 1845, and soon obtained a reputation as a sound lawyer and a powerful speaker. He was appointed to the professorship in Queen's College, Galway, and to the chair of English History and Literature, which he has filled with great ability and decease.

The examination of speeches and awards of prizes at the midsummer examination of stationers' School took place on Tuesday at Stationers' Hall, the examination having been conducted by the masters of the school. The attendance was good, although it has been little more than three years in existence, has already accommodated 200 boys, and the prospects of the pupils connected with it at various public examinations.

The annual distribution of prizes in connection with the St. Marylebone and All Saints' Grammar-School, which was established in 1852, and is in union with the National Society, took place on Thursday week in the theatre of the Marylebone Institute, Edward-street, Portman-square, in presence of a large number of spectators. Archdeacon Sinclair presided over the meeting, and the Rev. Sidney Brooks.

The annual distribution of prizes to, and recitations by, the boys of St. John's-wood Collegiate School took place on Wednesday at the Assembly-rooms, Hall-place, Upper Bayswater, in the presence of a large number of the relatives and friends of the pupils.

The Rev. Charles Duke Yonge, Normal Master of St. Mark's College-Schools, Chelsea, has been selected to fill the post of Head Master of the new Albert Middle-class College, at Framlingham, Suffolk.

A traders' congress is about to be opened at Hanover. Most of the principal towns in this confederation will be represented at the opening of the decimal system into Germany.

The freshly-erected cupola crowning the Church of the Transfiguration at St. Petersburg fell on the 14th inst. The loss of life would have been comparatively limited but not crowds of townspeople forced an entrance into the edifice beyond the control of the police or military to immediate attendance. The concussion created by the falling dome in a short time brought down the whole structure, overwhelming hundreds in the ruin.

An account of the gross public income of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the year ending the 5th of June, has been issued. The total revenue amounted to £69,302,909, and the total expenditure (including £700,000 for fortifications) to £67,345,078, leaving an excess of income over expenditure of £1,943,837. The balances in the Exchequer on the 30th ult. amounted to £7,748,951.

THE WESLEYAN METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The ministers of the Wesleyan Methodist body held their annual conference this year at Bradford. The present is the hundred and twenty-first conference of Methodism. The annual assembly now returns to Bradford after several years, having been held there first in 1853, when the Rev. John Lomas was placed in the chair by a virtually unanimous vote. An appendix to a brief account, abridged chiefly from the Manchester Guardian, of the Conference, shows the time of going to press with our early edition:—

The Jubilee Committee met at Bradford on Saturday. About seventy ministers and laymen were present. It was reported that the amount promised to the jubilee fund of the Wesleyan Missionary Society has reached £28,239. Of this sum England contributes £20,619 7s. 7d., Ireland, £3,888 12s. 9½d.; and foreign stations, £3,731 0s. 4½d. The preparation of a jubilee volume was remitted to the Rev. Dr. Hoole. The sum of £1,000 is the amount already paid in to £48,868. It was resolved that the general mission century committee be requested to carry out the scheme already announced, and prepare its details for the future consideration of the jubilee committee.

On Monday, the Committee of Privileges, and the annual Conference elected, the chair being taken by the ex-president, the Rev. Charles Prest. The Rev. Dr. Hoole read a long programme of matters for the arrangement of the Conference. A detailed statement of the general committee was read, giving an account of the operations of the year. The Rev. Dr. Osborn moved the thanks of Government and last year to Wesleyan schools, in the shape of capitation grants, &c., was also read. The following statistics had been carefully collected:—Weekday schools in Great Britain, 562, being an increase of 9; day scholars, 82,536, an increase of 1,000; Sunday schools, 1,000, an increase of 9; Sunday scholars, 82,251, an increase of 5,000; scholars who are members of the Church or of select classes, 31,000, an increase of 1,275. The number of Sunday schools for the year had been £10,765, or an increase of £8 91. The total amount of the Chapel Committee's grants for the year's work, which was of a very satisfactory character; after which a discussion took place upon the best means of providing for spreading copies that, in many localities, the congregations of importance have not yet established day-schools. Assistance from the Committee could be obtained by application to the schools in various districts to collect information on the mode of conducting Sunday-schools, and the success of the society.

The Worn-out Preachers' Committee met on Monday, and a report was read by the Rev. J. Jefferson. The report stated that since the meeting of 1863 twenty-one ministers had died, and given their sanction to the building of a larger one, and the Committee had, therefore, enlargements and additions in contemplation. The Rev. Dr. Osborn moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Hoole, and carried. The Rev. Dr. Osborn moved the adoption of the report of home-mission operations

MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NEWCASTLE.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE EXHIBITION GROUND.

MACHINERY IN MOTION.—SEE PAGE 119.

MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NEWCASTLE.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

MACHINERY IN MOTION.—SEE PAGE 118.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

An exhausted House! Such has been the general remark from mouth who has been apologising at two in the morning, and all the speech he meant to deliver if he had been allowed an hour in the evening. What is this praise to those fifteen or twenty members who have spoken consecutively—a sitting which began at three o'clock, and lasted till nearly the corresponding hour of the afternoon? Such a feat would probably not have been attempted in the days when the Parliamentary privilege of counting out the House for want of forty members was a considerable annoyance to those who had left their names of private members, who did not choose to be present at the moment when they were called on, and who therefore postponed the orders and retreated to the smoking-room, or the refreshment-room, to allow the adjournment. The next day, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Lord Chancellor, and Queen Victoria herself, in the Diplomatic gallery, were compelled to hear the Chancellor of the Exchequer explain his financial scheme, which was to be embalmed him in the regrets and almost great satisfaction to which was always before snappish without more than fifty members sitting in front of him. Mr. Goodwood Palmerston coolly replied that he saw no reason why he should speak for two hours and a half, because the House was tired. Then what a shout arose, and how the Speaker was obliged to make about Japan, because a few company had been sent to Yokohama to open trade! Waking on the morning with all their heads aching, to observe Lord Naas, instigated by the same Mr. Goodwood, to urge him to give a second lecture on China, the fulfilment of which must have been a burden to the Royal Victoria Hotel at Southampton, and the Emperor of Russia at Peterhoff, in the course of the day, was pathetic men in tremendous when it comes to Tuesday for Flour. Lord House, of a few weeks in Germany threaten a discussion on Japan.

To show how exhausted the members were, it is stated that Sir Charles Wood, on this occasion, Clarendon Hotel for Lord Tuesday for Flour. Palmerston, was unable to find a House sufficiently full to move the Speaker out of the chair, so as it were taking a lesson how to make be had been used to Yokohama in a morning, and have left town for the nation on finance, instead of, as has been the custom, on the Speaker's chair. Another figure in the great balance-sheet of the Parliamentary session, and by dint of economy no doubt for the purpose of the Budget, is his frame, which such an effort of latent Farrance's Hotel, Piccadilly, strength must have left a shadow of. Mr. Gladstone, in Bohemia. as he had learned that it was possible for a Parliament to speak for four hours on a single subject, full of matter, and teeming with interest, House, St. James's Square, Mr. Bright, its audience without a single tangible fact Derby, Park, near Epsom. or piece of information, and had asserted that there were three millions of revenue over the expenditure of the year, and a public meeting of which he was a member, vote of thanks had been passed to him for his successful administration of the affairs of the country, he could not be gathered from a statement that India has recovered from its deficiency, and has kept almost within the estimates and financial prosperity. Whatever may be the merits of Mr. Gladstone's Budget as a financial orator, and it is a little too much for a gentleman who is a Member of Parliament or a privy councillor, and a Chancellor of the Exchequer, and a Master of Arts, and a Doctor of Civil Law, and a Doctor of Laws, and a Doctor of Medicine, and a Doctor of Divinity, and a Doctor of Music, and a Doctor of Philosophy, and a Doctor of Science, and a Doctor of Literature, and a Doctor of Anything else, and a Doctor of Everything else, and a Doctor of Nothing

MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NEWCASTLE.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

MACHINERY IN MOTION.—SEE PAGE 119.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

As exhausted House! Such has been the phrase in every gentleman's mouth who has been apologising at two in the morning for not making all the speech he meant to deliver if he had had his chance at an early hour in the evening. What is this state of exhaustion, as applicable to those fifteen or twenty members who prolong talk for eleven hours successively—a sitting which began at three in the afternoon having lasted till nearly the corresponding hour of the next morning, and which would probably not have concluded then but for the almost divine Parliamentary privilege of counting out? On Wednesday in last week there was a considerable amount of business standing in the names of private members, who did not choose to come down for two hours after the House had met; and the Government, having postponed the orders and waited for some time, was obliged at last to allow the adjournment. The next day up rose several of these members, complaining of positive injustice in their Lordships' having rights—Lord Claud Hamilton, acting as an amateur reformer of grievances, putting himself into a towering passion, making the roof ring with his indignation, and contemplating in his peculiar manner, which can only be compared to the violent wriggling of the figures in the "Contortions" of the steel-cut which our Swiss friends love to tumble to pieces. Then Mr. Ayrton, who had their grounds by tumbling to pieces. Then Mr. Ayrton, who had intended to bring on at length the question of the balance of power in Europe, and who was in the house, but, being absent at a time and for a period which was suspicious of luncheon, missed his opportunity, was angry, with a calmness that must have been the result of long self-command, at the House's having counted him out. Exhausted! worn out! Why, on this very evening there was a large House than has been assembled to Yokohama to prevent the British Legation from blackening its walls with all their beads on. It is no good fun to waking one morning with all their beads on. It is no good fun to waking one morning with all their beads on. It is no good fun to waking one morning

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION FACILITIES BILL.—The Commons' amendments to this bill were brought before the House.—Lord BERESFORD moved that the amendments be printed, so that they might be considered more particularly by their Lordships, and be discussed to-morrow. In that case Parliament would be prorogued on Saturday.—The Archbishop divided, and there were—Contents, 8; Not Contents, 18. Majority for considering the amendments at once, 10. Some amendments were agreed to, and the reasons for disagreeing with the others were forwarded to the Lower House.

The sitting was suspended for a considerable time, waiting the result of a conference with the Commons upon the Railway Construction Facilities Bill. The result was, as usual, an amicable understanding between both Houses, concerning being made on both sides, when the bill finally passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

MR. H. SEYMOUR gave notice that early next Session he should move for a Royal Commission to inquire into the revenues of the Church in Ireland.

In answer to Mr. Kinglake, MR. LAYARD said the French troops were in possession of several places in Mexico. It was difficult to say whether for a long time past the Mexican Government had been in possession of them. It had always been the practice to recognise the de facto Government, and the practice had been followed in the present instance.

The Lords' amendments to the Railways Construction Facilities Bill were considered, with one or two exceptions, agreed to.

The Lords' amendments to the Railway Companies Powers Bill were considered and agreed to.

The Lords' amendments to the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Bill were considered and agreed to.

The order for the committal of the Partnership Law Amendment Bill was discharged, and the bill was withdrawn.

EMIGRATION (AMERICA).—Lord E. HOWARD called attention to the subject of emigration to the United States of America, and moved for the prolongation of the war now raging in that country. The noble Lord referred to numbers of cases in which a great many mechanics had been decoyed over to America, under the inducement of good work and high wages in large towns in the North. Instead of being conveyed to that place, they were landed in New York, and there, having been interfered with while, shortly, they were in the enjoyment of wages, and ultimately many of them were compelled to enter the Federal army from sheer necessity to escape starvation. He looked with great satisfaction on the great emigration at present going on, and he advised large manufacturers to do their utmost to stop the flow of skilled labour from the agricultural districts. The noble Lord then referred to the circumstances that occurred a short time ago in Ireland, and afterwards extracted from the papers, the names of those who had unfortunately been driven into quitting England for America, all of whom advised their friends not to follow them. He entertained no suspicion upon all indictments to visit the United States at the present moment. It might be that the wages given were higher than here than those in England, yet the price of the necessaries of life were so enormous that the balance was earned in England as compared with the wages obtained in America. If it were possible, he should like the Government to give some expression of opinion upon the subject; but he did not suppose that Lord Russell would do all that was possible to protect those who had been kidnapped from their native land to take part in a struggle in which they had no interest in the contending parties. The noble Lord concluded by moving for certain papers relative to the question.—Mr. LAYARD said he could not refuse to take part in calling attention to the subject of emigration to America. He could not see how many of the difficulties mentioned by the noble Lord could be obviated, but he advised the greatest caution to be observed by all quitting their native land. The Government had directed their representatives in every oil that was possible to protect English emigrants; but, at the same time, he hoped that all those parties who were about to emigrate to the States suppose that emigration should be stopped—would exercise the greatest discretion. The emigration officers in the noble Lord's own county were ready do all in their power to prevent undue practices; but he felt certain that Money was to be attached to the emigration agents themselves, who were willingly give the noble Lord all the papers he desired.—MR. F. HENNESSY, seeing the number for Ireland in the list in question, said that from 1851 to 1861 the American army was going on at the present time to the same extent as it was at the beginning of the civil war. Could there be a doubt that the greatest importance that extreme caution should be exercised by emigrants. The present view of the American dollar was certainly not a fair one. It was not the extent of the horror of the present struggle and the sacrifice of human life was not the real state of the case. The noble Lord had not been already sacrificed.—SIR E. PERY, in reply to the hon. and learned member, said a precaution had been adopted in the case of Ireland. The Irish Act would check the tide of emigration from Ireland. The greatest efforts were made by the Irish Government to prevent the Irish people from going to America.—After a few words from Mr. F. Taylor, Lord J. MANNERS thought that the language of the noble Lord was not one to excite a feeling that it was not safe for the humbler people of England to go to America to find a home.—The motion was agreed to.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

On Tuesday the annual meeting of the institute, now in its twenty-first year, was opened in the ancient town of Warwick. The archæologists met at the Courthouse. The assembly-room was quite filled, and on the platform were the Marquis Camden, Lord Leigh, the Bishop of Oxford, Mr. Greaves, M.P., Mr. Bernard Hope, Archdeacon Sandford, Dr. Beke, Dr. Mac Cabe, Archdeacon Jones, Dr. Wilbraid, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge; Mr. Brocklebye, Sir John Eeltoft, Mr. Grant, Master of Sidney College, Cambridge; Mr. Bloxam, Mr. Sharpe, Sir E. Ryley, C.B.; Rev. H. Hill, &c. As Warwick itself is a centre of great antiquarian interest, numerous and several localities in the neighbourhood of equal attraction, the congress was brilliantly attended. The proceedings were formally opened by the Marquis Camden presiding the chair of the meeting. An address of congratulation from the Corporation of Warwick was presented by the Mayor. Lord Leigh then introduced the Mayor and Corporation to the audience. His Lordship, as president and as a Warwickshire man, gave the Corporation a hearty welcome to the meeting. He congratulated them on the fit choice—the ancient Castle of Kenilworth and the birthplace of the Immortal Bard. Dr. Wheeler added a few words of congratulation on the objects of these meetings; and Mr. Greaves, M.P., on the part of the town of Warwick, offered congratulations and welcome. Mr. Bernard Hope returned thanks for the reception of the institute, adding that it was most meet they should hold their anniversary at Warwick, "rather than any other part of that great compeller of English archæologist, Dugdale" (Hear). Archdeacon Sandford, on behalf of the clergy, welcomed the institute to the county of Worcester. The Bishop of Oxford acknowledged the welcome given by various bodies, and particularly by the clergy. Archdeacon Jones referred to the wolfries of the county, commencing with the great Saxon Wonder of the passing ruined to ruin. Mr. Brocklebye, on behalf of Chichester (a laugh); and the great reigning Abbot of Leigh (laughter) had received them with more than hospitality. Mr. Greaves, president of the Warwickshire Natural History and Archæological Society, then invited the members to visit the Museum. Dr. Bloxham gave a short history of the county, its Roman and Saxon remains; the Visits of several crowned princes—Edward II., Richard II., Henry IV., Henry V., Henry VI., Elizabeth, James I.; Charles I. and II.; William III., George III., William IV., and her present Majesty. Mr. Bloxham also noticed Shakspeare, Drayton, Somerville, and Walter Savage Landor. Shenstone was another of the Warwickshire worthies whose character had not been fully understood. Mr. Bloxham then referred to Warwickshire as the seat of the civil war of the seventeenth century, and concluded with the honourable record of Queen Victoria's visit to Coventry. After the formal business of the morning, Mr. Pollett read a paper on Warwick Castle, and the "Painted Chamber," which is the finest specimen of the early style in the chapel. St. Mary's Church, and other objects of interest in Warwick. In the evening there was a meeting for the reading of papers.

The programme of Wednesday included visits to Warwick Castle, Stoneleigh Abbey, Kenilworth Castle, besides the ancient town of Warwick itself. In the morning the chair was taken by the "Parliament of Kenilworth," by the Rev. C. H. Hartshorne, and by Mr. Charles Young, Clerk of Warwick Parliament. A large party visited Warwick Castle, their inspection occupying three hours. The Earl of Warwick gave an address descriptive of the history and plan of the castle and its owners; and the party, some 200 in number, proceeded into the courtyard, Mr. Scharf, F.S.A., pointing out the chief points of interest, especially the large and valuable collection of pictures. At two o'clock about 150 ladies and gentlemen proceeded by road (nine miles) to Stoneleigh Abbey, on the invitation of the noble owner, Lord Leigh. The visitors, having inspected the mansion, embarked in the cloister-grove of the ancient abbey, where Mr. Bloxham explained the position of the old cloister. Lord Leigh afterwards entertained the party at a sumptuous luncheon, and they then repaired to inspect the famous ruins of Kenilworth Castle.

Such is a brief outline of the proceedings on Tuesday and Wednesday. Next week we shall present to our readers a report of the proceedings of the congress. A more full description of the archæological field than it presented by Warwick and its neighbourhood could scarcely be named.

At the Sheriffs' Court, Red Lion-square, last week, a special jury awarded £18,000 to St. John's College, Cambridge, for some property at Cox-cross, required by the Metropolitan Railway.

The Queen has signified her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on Samuel Mitchell, captain of the foretop of her Majesty's ship Terrier, for his gallant conduct at the attack at Te Papa, Tauranga, on the 29th of April last, in entering the pah with Commander Hay, and when that officer was mortally wounded, bringing him out, although ordered by Commander Hay to leave him and seek his own safety.

A bust of Shakspeare has been made from the wood of Herne's Oak, by Mr. W. Perry, of North Audley-street, at the Queen's request, to be placed in the library of Windsor Castle. In his design for this work he has endeavoured to combine the characteristics of the Stratford monumental bust and of the frontispiece engraving prefixed to the edition of Shakespeare published in 1623.

MUSIC.

THE lessee of the Royal Italian Opera has worthily brought his season to a close by a performance of one of the greatest works of the late lamented Meyerbeer, the "Etoile du Nord." This opera, we may remind our musical readers, was originally written, not for the Grand Opéra, but for the Opéra Comique, and, in the full tide of its Parisian success, was reproduced at Covent Garden in an Italian dress, and under the title of "Stella del Nord." Its success here was as great as at Paris; but its run, after a few representations, was suddenly brought to an end by the disastrous fire which destroyed Covent Garden Theatre in 1855. Along with the building the costly and magnificent scenery, decorations, and other "properties" provided for this opera, were consumed, and Mr. Gye has not, till now, found it convenient to incur the expense and trouble of its revival. He has now done so, and the new Etoile du Nord was given for the first time throughout on Saturday last. The house was full to overflowing, and the performance was received with the most enthusiastic favour. It has been twice repeated this week, and its fourth representation this evening will terminate the season. It may seem surprising that no one should have thought of reviving a work which has more than once given the Covent Garden Theatre a full house. But Mr. Gye evidently has had in view the next season, when this opera will be one of the most prominent features. The "Etoile du Nord," though it has been seldom seen on our opera-stage, is by no means unknown to the musical public. The finest pieces in the opera of the music have often been heard at concerts and in drawing-rooms where music is an habitual pastime; and this fragment and that has more than once given a hint of the pleasure to which it belongs. It would be superfluous, therefore, to go into details respecting either the music or the other. The "cast" of the piece differed from that of 1855 in several important particulars. Instead of the lamented Bosio, we now had Mdlle. Marie Carvalho, a lady of the most captivating figure, singing and acting with a brilliancy and finish which could not be exceeded. Instead of Formes in the character of Peter, we had Ronconi, the manager, on the first night, but, on the other hand, the change from Lablache to Ciampi, in the character of the Tartar soldier, was decidedly for the better. On the other hand, Signor Gardoni appeared in the character of Vasco, and Mdlle. Jenny Bauer re-appeared in their old parts of the two Scandinavians.

The cheap performances at Her Majesty's Theatre continue. At one of them, on Saturday last, Weber's "Oberon" was revived, but not, as we have remarked, in its integrity. As some expected, But "Oberon" has never been popular. The extreme beauty of the music is neutralized by the absurdity of the drama. Oberon, upon whose musical enthusiasm by her superb execution of the great scena, "Vasio, tremando mare" (? Ocean, thou mighty monster"), Mdlle. Titiens has lavished the whole of her genius, Gardoni appeared in the character of Sir Huon, but this admirable performer was not at home in a part written expressly to display the vocal power of Braham.

On Saturday morning last a very agreeable "pianoforte recital" was given by Mr. Hanvercourt, at the Beethoven Rooms, Hall Bell. This young gentleman is a pupil of the Royal Academy of Music, and his studies as a pianist have been under one of its ablest instructors, Mr. W. H. Holmes. Mr. Hanvercourt is already an excellent, and promises to be a first-rate, performer. He played Dussek's Sonata in E flat, and Thalberg's Fantasia (from Op. 6) in the same key; the first movement of Hummel's Concerto in A minor, Mendelssohn's Allegro Brillante, and Weber's Rondo Brillante in E flat, Handel's Air and World, and other pieces in different styles, which showed the extent and variety of his attainments. These performances were assisted with vocal music by Miss Lascelles, Mr. Harriet Lee and Millie. Novati; and the whole entertainment evidently gave much pleasure to a numerous audience, which included many distinguished members of the musical profession.

THE THEATRES.

We announced last week that a new and original burlesque, by Messrs. Henry Bellingham and William Best, would be produced at Sadler's Wells on Saturday. The performance was carried off, and met with a very favourable reception. It is founded on the story of "The Bohemian Girl," and is entitled "Arline, the Pride of Prague; or, the Policeman and the Pedlar's Pack." Many of the authors themselves took a part in the performance. The libretto of the burlesque is not of the best of its sort, but the dialogue is smart, and carefully copied throughout. There is vigour and a certain ragged strength in the couplets, a liveliness and a verve which carry on the scene or the song to the conclusion, and which are not devoid of a certain profundity. The puns are few and the parodies far between. It would have been better if the authors had omitted the "gagging" scene at the inception of the subject—a dogged determination to go through all the incidents renders the piece rather heavy. Some of the songs are of a humorous kind; and in particular there is much promise in Mr. T. W. Neale, who sustained the part of Devilshoof, and gave to it much distinctness and force of outline. Owing to the indisposition of Miss Minnie Davis, the character of Thaddeus was performed by a young lady who made it, as it were, her first appearance on the boards, and almost perfect in the text. She was deservedly applauded, and rewarded with bouquets, for the achievement was a decided feat. In other respects the burlesque is well got up, and the whole was preceded by the performance of Douglas Jerrold's drama of "Black-Eyed Susan." Mr. Edmund Phelps sustaining the part of William with care and pathos.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The exhibitions of the Royal Academy, the Society of Painters in Water Colours, and the Society of British Artists, which for many years Town Clerk of the City, died a few days ago, at his residence at Castlefield, near Lewes, aged eighty-four.

Alderman Sir James Duke, M.P. for the city of London, has issued an address to his constituents informing them that he will retire from the representation of the city at the next Lord Mayor, Mr. W. Lawrence, has appeared as a candidate for the vacancy. He has issued his address.

Mr. Alderman Lawrence and Mr. Alderman Besley, the newly elected Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, have appointed as their Under-Sheriffs for the ensuing year Mr. Charles Pearson, Solicitor, of Bedford Row Hall, Bloomfield-street, and Mr. Henry De Jersey, of Gresham-street West.

A silver cup, presented by the Queen, has been awarded to Mr. John Frederick Isaacson, solicitor, the vestry-clerk of St. Clement Danes, by a large number of the inhabitants of the parish, as a testimonial of their high esteem for the able manner in which he has performed the business of this parish during the last fifteen years.

Yesterday week the first of the mosaic paintings in St. Paul's Cathedral, forming part of the pictorial embellishments of the interior, was uncovered to the public view. The commission was given by the general committee for raising funds for the decoration of the cathedral, and Mr. F. C. Penrose, the surveyor, and Clayton and Bell.

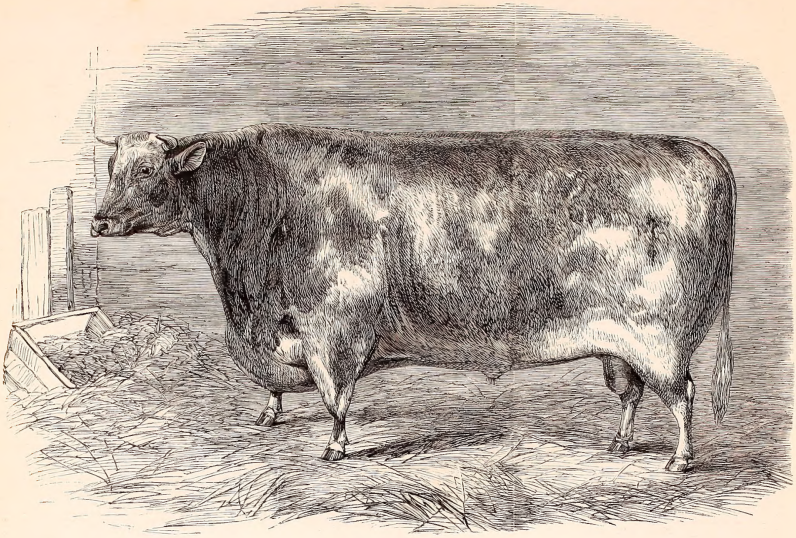
On Tuesday night the twenty-fifth anniversary festival of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution was celebrated at the Freemasons' Tavern. The chair was taken by Andrew Lusk, Esq., Alderman; and about a hundred and twenty ladies and gentlemen sat down to dinner. The subscriptions reached nearly £160.

The Lord Mayor on Wednesday entertained her Majesty's servants and a brilliant company at the Mansion House. Covers were laid for 226 guests. The Lord Mayor was supported on his right by the Duke of Somerset, and on his left by Lord Palmerston. All the ancient dignitaries were by the courtesy of Mr. Gladstone.

In the House of Lords, on Thursday, judgment was given in the long-pending case of "Yelverton v. Yelverton" (or Longworth). It was an appeal against the decision of the Court below, which affirmed that the marriage of Miss Yelverton with Miss Theresa Longworth was a valid one. The Lord Chancellor thought that the decision of the Court below was right; and Lords Wensleydale, Chelmsford, and Kingsdown were of opinion that it ought to be reversed. Thus this celebrated case has been brought to a close.

The new regulations for the traffic through the City, pursuant to the late Act obtained, were published on Saturday. It is provided that the omnibuses passing to and from London Bridge and the westward shall go by way of Cannon-street instead of Cheapside, and that the heavy traffic of the City must not pass through the streets between nine in the morning and six in the evening.

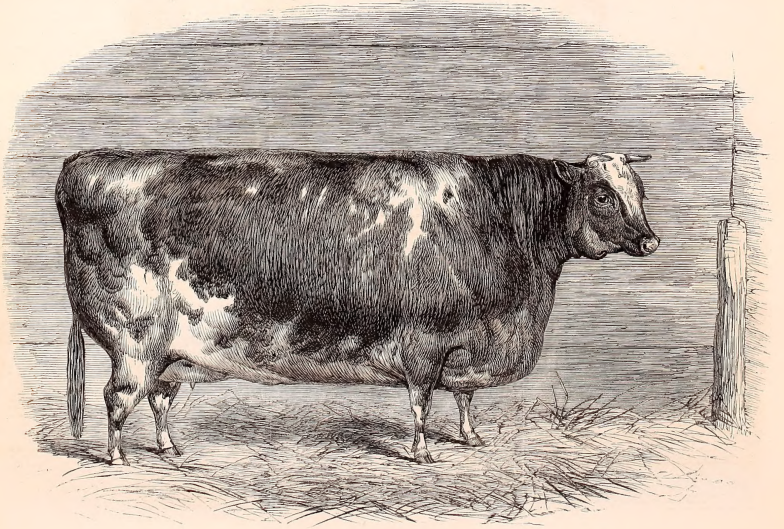
Last week the births of 1870 children—976 boys and 894 girls—were registered in London. In the corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number (corrected) was 1811, varying in the weeks in each London, which were 1799 in the second week of July, rose to 1899 in the week that ended the 30th. The seemingly large number of deaths in the same week of the ten years 1854-63 is, with a correction for increase of population, 1796. The number registered in the third week of July, for the whole number of deaths exceeded the estimated number by 113. The increase in the deaths over those of the previous week arises in great part from the summer diarrhœa. The weekly number of fatal cases of this complaint had been gradually rising. Of the 1,441 deaths registered in the week, there is room to add 146.



The annual visit of inspection to mark the yearly progress in the execution of the Main Drainage Works has been made this week. On Monday the chairman and members of the Board of Works, a number of members of the House of Commons, the chief officials of the Board, and others, making a party between 300 and 400 strong, left the Board's works, on the Tuesday and Wednesday following. The first stage of the inspection, and detachment, went as far as the Abbey Mills Pumping-station, near Stratford, on the Essex side of the Thames, and the engines of a few very minor connections and works completed. The low-level sewer on the south side will be finished this year, but a short piece of the high-level sewer, extending from Deptford well to Crossness Engine Embankment is finished. About one third of the metropolitan sewage is intercepted and discharged at the outfalls. On the north six upwards of fifty square miles are drained.

The Lords Justices delivered judgment on Wednesday, in the claim of Lord Ellesmere against the Queen. The case was tried in the Royal Italian Opera House, which Mr. Gye, as lessee of the opera, denies. Both their Lordships were of opinion that the claim failed. The whole decision the case was appealed, that Colonel Knox had failed to prove his claim to the property in question. It appeared to be equally clear that actions against Mr. Gye in respect of the estate of the late Mr. Thistlethwaite, of whom Mr. Gye was the executor, could not be brought in the form of declaring the bill simply, but without prejudice to other remedies as against Thistlethwaite's estate. The Lords Justices were of opinion that Mr. Gye to have leave to amend his bill, but would not insist on his view, and the petition was accordingly dismissed. The Lords Justices refused to give any costs of appeal to the House of Lords.

The annual contest between the gentlemen of Eton College and St. Peter's College, Westminster, was decided on Thursday, in outrigged boats, the course being from Surly Hall to the Red House. Both crews and contests Eton had scored seven wins. A start was effected at five minutes to one o'clock, and the boats were nearly level between Surly Hall and the first stroke. On settling down to their work, however, the Etonians gradually drew the issue of the contest was never in doubt. Eton kept far ahead during the way nearly a length in advance. Hammersmith Bridge was reached in 5 min. 30 sec., and Chiswick Eyot in 11 min. 30 sec. The Eton crew having increased their lead to about two clear lengths, as nearly as could be distinguished from the Ship Hotel, where they were by the Queen's barge, and rowing was dropped in both boats; but, although the Westminsters put on the full force of their power, they could not lessen their distance, and so the Crab Tree by three clear lengths; and finally passed the flag-boat, opposite the Star and Garter, Richmond, in 23 min. 30 sec. The race was accompanied by Eton in accomplishing the distance was thirteen minutes five seconds; the Westminster Boating Club's crew being rowed by Etonians.



Yesterday week a meeting of the company recently formed for the purpose of erecting dwellings for the labouring classes in various parts of the metropolis was held at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, with Mr. Massieu Houson—Mr. Alderman Waterlow, the deputy chairman, presiding. The report for the first year's working of the scheme stated that the capital of the company amounted to £30,000, in 300 shares of £100 each. There had been issued 240 shares, of £25 each, on which £2 10s. had been paid in advance of future calls. The sum of £749 odd had been paid in consideration of the purchase of property, situate in Kingsgate-walk, and an agreement had been entered into for a lease of a large piece of ground in the neighbourhood of the Great Eastern Railway station at King's-cross, which will be large enough for five blocks of buildings similar to those already erected in Kingsgate-walk, and which will afford provides accommodation for twenty families—ten having three rooms and ten two rooms each. The rents of the tenements each, it was stated at Southwark and Kingsgate-walk, were found to be remunerative. The estimates for the buildings in Redcross-street, Southwark, £4,000; Brewhouse-lane, Wapping, for tenements, at an estimated cost of £2,000; £4,200 in Old Kent-road, exclusive of the land; £4,000 in Kingsgate-walk; £4,200 in Old Kent-road, totally families at a gross rental of £1092; and £2329 in Kingsgate-walk, Families, £1,000; Brewhouse-lane, £400; Old Kent-road, £1,000; Kingsgate-walk, £1,000; Old Kent-road, £1,000; Kingsgate-walk, £1,000; Old Kent-road, £1,000; Kingsgate-walk, £1,000

MEETING OF THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY AT NEWCASTLE.

THE FIRST-PRIZE SHORTHORN BULL.

horn prizes. One of their firsts was for the old bulls, which went, appropriately enough, to Aberdeenshire, or the "great beef county," as they rejoice to call it. Forth, the winner, is the property of the Messrs. Cruickshanks, of Sittyton, who have, we believe, the largest pure bred shorthorn herd in the three kingdoms, and average from 96 to 108 calves each year. He is a roan, of about four years and a half old, and was bred by Mr. Stirling, M.P., of Keir, who also bred his sire, Florist by Hiawatha, and his dam, Anna Rose by John o'Groat. Without being what is called a gallant bull," he is perhaps the deepest and most evenly-fleshed one that ever entered a showyard, and, thanks to careful feeding and exercise, he looks nearly as blooming as when he won the first prize in the fields of Battersea, and just lost the gold medal to the late Mr. Webb's white calf. He has only been out five times, and was once beaten by his half-brother at Perth. At the Four Counties meeting he won in his class, and took the challenge cup for the best bull entitled to compete at the show. In 1863 he did not go to Worcester; but he met Duke of Tyne, the Worcester winner, at the Highland Society at Kelso, and beat both him and Van Tromp. After that he was sold to the Messrs. Cruikshanks, who brought him, by sea, to Newcastle, to meet a very strong class of twenty-eight, and who purpose showing him on his return for the challenge cup at Aberdeen, which has been won for two successive years by bulls of their breeding. The bull with which Mr. Stirling replaced Forth at Keir also won the head prize at the meeting in the next class; and it is more remarkable still that this gentleman should have only exhibited three bulls at the Royal—John o'Groat (which Mr. Wetherall declared to be "the best big bull I ever saw"), at Salisbury; Forth, at Battersea; and Royal Butterfly 11th, at Newcastle; and taken a first each time.

THE FIRST-PRIZE SHORTHORN COW.

Northumberland also fought hard for the short-horn honours against all England, and succeeded in winning an eighth of them—viz., a first for cows, a second for heifers in calf or milk, and a third for bull-calves. Evelina 4th, the winner of the first cow prize, is a dark roan, bred by Sir Matthew White Ridley, M.P., of Blagdon, and by Sir Colin (16,950), dam Evelina, by Lunderdale. Mr. Richard Booth's Sincerity had broken her stifle, and therefore Warlaby was unrepresented. Lady Pigot sent nothing to keep up her time-honoured position in the front rank; but Mr. Douglas drew out all his strength, and came second with one of his "four dowagers." The winner is very deep fleshed, with neat bone, and well made up for show, though more suggestive of beef than milk; in fact, a very "winsome narrow" in point of bulk, for Forth, who is about three months older, but she is not what would exactly be called a high class shorthorn, by those who can pronounce no Shibboleth but "Booth," "Bates," or "Towneley."

BUST OF THE PRINCESS OF WALES, BY MARSHALL WOOD, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

THERE is much in all reasonable and fair criticism that is only of relative application. There has never been, nor will there ever be, a work of art which is by universal consent deemed absolutely perfect. It would, indeed, be difficult to make a critique on any piece of painting or sculpture intelligible without at least tacitly measuring it by other works of the same kind; and criticism, were it ever so easy, without various standards of comparison, would practically be almost valueless. For these reasons we usually endeavour to limit ourselves to a simple description of those works which we select for engraving from the annual Exhibitions; and any critical remarks we may have to make upon them must find their proper place in our general reviews of such exhibitions. It so happens, however, that we expressed an opinion regarding the clay model of this bust of the Princess of Wales when invited to inspect it at Marlborough House. We were not then aware that the finished work in marble would be exhibited at the Royal Academy. It may, perhaps, be remembered that we praised the model as a work of art, but that we especially commended Mr. Marshall Wood's very honest and scrupulous fidelity to those minute characteristics of the living original which give individuality to a head almost ideal in its general proportions. Notwithstanding this, we took a slight exception to the sculptor's treatment of the mouth; but it is only just to state that we do not now feel, in looking at the finished bust, that objection which occurred to us from inspection of the model. Nothing more need here be said of it, because we have had occasion to notice this bust, together with that of the Prince of Wales by the same sculptor, in a recent article on the sculpture of the Royal Academy Exhibition. We cannot refrain, however, from adding that, although an unaccountable attempt has been made to depreciate this very creditable and meritorious bust of the Princess, the great majority of our contemporaries, including the Times, have, during its exhibition, endorsed our original estimate of the model—namely, that it is, on the whole, the best likeness of her Royal Highness which has hitherto been executed.

BUST OF H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES, BY MARSHALL WOOD.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR AUGUST.

OWING to the absence of the Imperial Court from Paris, and the departure of many families for the bains de mer, the Paris fashions for August must be considered as those rather of the Dispersion than of that favoured locality which generally gives an impulse to innovation. Nevertheless, the peculiar stamp of the Parisienne will not fail to be recognised even at hundreds of leagues from the capital; and, though she may reign with less éclat, her influence will not be felt the less during the time when she may be regarded as abdicating a portion of her claims to the admiration of the rest of the world, in matters of taste and dress, by the adoption of such toilettes négligées as those which compose our present Engraving.

Although easy of wear, these light costumes are not without their peculiar complications; and, to be altogether graceful, require care in the selection and arrangement of the colours for ornament. In addition to the ordinary disposition to patronise foulards, alpacas, and barèges, great favour is being bestowed upon white muslin dresses of the first quality, trimmed fantastically with strips of silk disposed in all directions, according to the caprices of the modiste. Indeed, light dresses generally, ornamented with silk strips attached as just mentioned, or with very small passementerie trimmings, enjoy a vogue altogether undisputed, and really merit the patronage they meet with even in the highest quarters.

The head-dresses and bonnets worn at this season are extremely varied in style and shape. The chapeau Windsor in Tuscan (shown in one of our Illustrations), is one of the most fashionable of the round description; but the legitimate bonnet in white tulle—small, round, and with or without bavolet—completes, à ravir, the white muslin costume just alluded to. The bavolet is usually replaced by a bow in tulle or by a garland of small flowers gracefully arranged.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Walking Dress.—Robe and paletot of grey foulard, with three rows of dark violet silk and passementerie trimming on the skirt; round the edges of the paletot, across the shoulders, and on the cuffs, a single row of similar trimming is adapted with a most pleasing effect. The small round chapeau is in white tulle bouillonné, the bavolet being replaced by a large tulle bow; orange bow and ribbons.

Fig. 2. Evening Dress.—Very pale yellow alpaca robe, ornamented with silk embroidery in several shades of velvet. The skirt especially presents a very pretty and novel appearance, and the dress is completed by the Moldavian vest, and the muslin chemisette, of which only a small portion is seen above the black silk plastron edged with violet. The head-dress is the coiffure Catalane, in Valenciennes lace, with black and violet velvet bow in front.

Fig. 3. Walking Dress for a Young Lady.—Light stone-coloured toilet, the paletot and robe being of uniform colour, but trimmed with pink silk ornaments soutachés. The paletot is relatively more abundantly decorated than the skirt. Tuscan chapeau Windsor, almost covered with cogles' feathers and white feathers, the latter placed in front.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR AUGUST.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Elizabeth Baroness von Zandt, of Orington House, Southampton, and Clarges-street, Piccadilly, was proved in the London Court of Probate on the 8th inst.; the executors nominated being William G. C. Hammond, Peter Dickson, and Killingworth Hedges, Esqs.; and Mrs. Emma Hammond. The personalty in England was sworn under £100,000. Her Ladyship (who was a British-born subject) was the widow of the late Frederick Baron von Zandt, and was twice married, her first husband being the late General Sir Thomas Richard Dyer, first; and to his son, the present Baronet, Sir Thomas Dyer, her Ladyship leaves a considerable portion of her estates, as well as legacies to other members of his family. Estates are also left to Emma Elizabeth, the daughter of her cousin Mrs. Emma Hammond, together with a legacy of £8000; also her furniture, jewellery, and plate, and recommends to her kind care and protection her horses, dogs, birds, and other favourite animals, equally with an annuity of £100. To the other legatees there is an annuity of £700 to her secretary; £200 a year to her lady-servant; the balance of her estate to other servants, and cottage residences to some of the labourers on her estates. The residue of her property, real and personal, she bequeaths to her said cousin, Mrs. Hammond. The will bears date 1859, and a codicil 1863. Her Ladyship died, on the 20th of May last, at the Château de Schoo, near Isenbery, Bavaria.

The will of George Gatty, Esq., of Felbridge Park, near Godstone, Surrey, late of Great Russell-street, on the 9th inst., by Frances Gatty, the relict, and Charles Henry Gatty, Esq., the son, the surviving executors, John Wainwright, Esq., of Ealing Park, the other executor, having renounced. The personal property was sworn under £100,000. The testator was late one of the Taxing Masters of the High Court of Chancery, and died on the 19th of May last, having executed his will in 1851 which bears attested by Alfred Hall and W. H. Pitt-Hugh, both of Lewes. To his widow he leaves an absolute legacy of £20,000 and a life interest in the residue of the real and personal estate. To his son Charles Henry he devises the real estate at Great Russell-street, and leaves him also a legacy of £2000 and the ultimate residue of such real and personal estate. To John and Julia Wainwright a legacy of 200 guineas; and to his son (the testator's godson) Robert Spencer Wainwright, 100 guineas free of legacy duty.

The will of George Fieschi Heneage, Esq., late M.P., of Hainton Hall, near Louth, Lincolnshire, was administered to, on the 14th inst., by his son, Edward Heneage, Esq., by reason of his having been duly appointed to be the residuary legatee named in the executors, Charles G. Fairfax, George, Anne, and Edward Heneage, the testator having died intestate. The personalty was sworn under £50,000. The will bears date 1858, and the testator died in May last, at the age of sixty-four. He had represented Great Grimsby (1826-30) and Lincoln (1841-52), and was formerly Deputy-Lieutenant for the county of Lincoln. Mr. Heneage, having by deed settlement, in favour of descendants, left £54,125 to be performed £30,000 to his daughter, and the remainder to his younger children, making, as his gifts the whole, the sum of £50,000. To his eldest son, Edward, he leaves the residue of his property and estates, both real and personal, the plate, diamonds, and jewellery to be held by him as heirlooms. To the late nurse of his children he leaves an annuity of £50.

A story of almost unexampled horror is given in the American papers, being the substance of a deposition by a survivor of the wreck of a ship called the Elvina, which left Calcutta in the month for Boston. Her crew consisted of about thirty persons. She was so fearfully damaged in a storm that she was obliged to put into Algoa Bay to obtain provisions, but the rest, with the exception of a few articles of food, was lost. The survivors were reduced to the most terrible straits. Tied to the spars, they lay down upon the sails, and they looked longingly upon the sharks that swam round them. At noon the gale again sprang up, blowing so furiously as to drive the unfortunate men overboard over the raft, carrying away two of their number. One, George Chase, swam back, and was received on board, but the other, a native, to the last was swallowed by the raging sea. Next day, the second day, but that day and night the storm continued, moderating towards morning. The sky was overcast the second day, but the wind went down and the sea became smooth. Again on the crew looked and clung in a dazed way to the sharks. On the third day, and his beams beating fiercely upon them, the heads of the men became affected with thirst, in their agony, some of them drank the sea water, and in their madness they clawed with a saw, though not one was injured by the saw before. Another died. The survivors, Chase, Hogg, and the latter the native Indian seaman, Bob, died. Nothing but the cases, not a drop of fresh water had they during the last days. They drank gathered condensed water on the sails, but this soon burnt them off and shone more scorchingly than ever. That evening their exhausted eyes lighted over the side, saying, "I am going home, I can stay here no longer—good-bye—to my mother—come with me, we shall not be long—and soon return." They were too weak to prevent it, and he swam away. For six days the crew had good range did they wistfully watch him swimming on, the sharks pleasantly in his wake by his side, till the last was lost in the distance. The sixth day came and went, and another died. The surviving friend was now delirious and despairing—he too weak to stand, spiritless and exhausted, lay by feebly clinging to the spars, and moaned for death. At last he left now of the eleven—and still through the long forenoon did the burning rays of Apollo's steeds on full fairly upon them. At the last moment relief came. The French barque Colbert, Bordeaux master, discovered the almost signal fortunately flying, and dispatched a boat to their assistance.

The municipality of Naples have sold a piece of land to the Jews, which these latter intend to convert into a cemetery. Under the old régime they were not allowed to have a private burying-ground.

A gentleman, stated to be at least 84 ft high, stout and well proportioned, was seen walking in the streets of London on Friday last. Hundreds of men and boys followed the tall gentleman, who appeared to be completely undisturbed by the ogreness with which he was stared at and commented upon.

The Earl of Carlisle, it is rumoured, is likely to yield to the opinion of his medical advisers by withdrawing for a time from the fatigues of public life. In this case it is said that the Chief Secretaryship will probably be his successor in the viceroyalty. In the contingency of his Grace declining, Lord Marquis of Lansdowne and the Earl of Beesborough are talked of.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Handsome operations for money having prevailed in all quarters, owing to the activity in the demand and the recent heavy shipments of bullion to the East, the Bank directors, at their meeting on Thursday, raised their rate from 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. We understand, however, that the supply of stock in the hands of the jobbers has not increased. The Unfunded Debt has been dealt in to a very moderate extent. There have been numerous applications for advances upon Exchequer Bills, but the Bank has refused to make any reduced their minimum rate for 3 per cent. On Thursday, notwithstanding that a further advance was in several quarters anticipated, a liberal demand for cash existed, and money without making any alteration.

The following return shows the rates of interest at which money has been lent at the Bank of England and at the leading Stock Exchange Loan Offices during the last four weeks:—

	June 30.	July 7.	July 14.	July 21.
Bank of England	3	3	3	4
Stock Exchange Loan Offices	2½	2½	2½	3

The following table will show the value of the leading Stocks and Shares at the commencement of each day of business during the week:—

	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.
Bank Stock	218	218	218	218	218
3 per Cent. Reduced	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾
3 per Cent. Consols	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾
3 per Cent. Consols for Account	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾
New 3 per Cent.	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾	91¾
New 2½ per Cents.	86¾	86¾	86¾	86¾	86¾
Long Annuities	14	14	14	14	14
India Stock	218	218	218	218	218
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent.	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (Small)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1862-72)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1865)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1866-74)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1867)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1868)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1869)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1870)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1871)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1872)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1873)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1874)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1875)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1876)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1877)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1878)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1879)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1880)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1881)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1882)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1883)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1884)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1885)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1886)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1887)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1888)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1889)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1890)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1891)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1892)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1893)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1894)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1895)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1896)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1897)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1898)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1899)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1900)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1901)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1902)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1903)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1904)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1905)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1906)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1907)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1908)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1909)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1910)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1911)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1912)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1913)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1914)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1915)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1916)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1917)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1918)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1919)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1920)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1921)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1922)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1923)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1924)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1925)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1926)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1927)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1928)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1929)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1930)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1931)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1932)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1933)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1934)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1935)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1936)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1937)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1938)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1939)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1940)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1941)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1942)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1943)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1944)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1945)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1946)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1947)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1948)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1949)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1950)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1951)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1952)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1953)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1954)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1955)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1956)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1957)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1958)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1959)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1960)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1961)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1962)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1963)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1964)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1965)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1966)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1967)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1968)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1969)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1970)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1971)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1972)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1973)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1974)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1975)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1976)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1977)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1978)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1979)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1980)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1981)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1982)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1983)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1984)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1985)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1986)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1987)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1988)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1989)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1990)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1991)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1992)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1993)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1994)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1995)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1996)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1997)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1998)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (1999)	98	98	98	98	98
Ditto Bonds, £3 per Cent. (2000)	98	98	98	98	98

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, JULY 22.

BANKRUPTS.

H. T. SHAW, John-street, Tottenham-court-road, dealer in hair. W. TURNER, Osgood-crescent, Canonbury.—W. L. MATHEW, Blackwater, Hampshire, grocer.—T. C. BARNES, Castle-street, Finsbury-square, commission agent.—J. BLOOMFIELD, Bishop's Hull, Somerset, Bloomsbury.—H. HOBBS, Alvington, Gloucester, and Upper Kentish Town, professor of music.—T. R. BROWNE, Leeds, and Greenhalgh-street, Cliff, commission agent.—J. CLARKE, silver-cases, Wentnor-hill, baker.—S. B. JONES, Hertford, coal merchant.—W. HOLLAND, Bristol, commission agent.—J. LANYMAN, Bristol, dealer in cheese.—W. HOBBS, Alvington, Gloucester, innkeeper.—J. MARSH, Lower Mynton, Worcester, farmer.—G. BURROWS, Cobham, Surrey, carpenter.—J. CLARKE, Northgate, Bridgwater, manufacturer.—W. H. BICKNELL, Swansea, tailor.—J. DEARDEN, Bolton, Lancaster, cotton-waste dealer.—T. DEARDEN, Bolton, Lancaster, cotton-waste dealer.—J. HILLIER, Whitworth, near Rochdale, grocer.—J. ARMSTRONG, Chester, commission agent.—J. ROBERTS, Liverpool, near Prescot, grocer.—J. BOWDEN, R. MASON, Retenhall, near Sheffield, builders.—E. LISTER, Wibsey, Yorkshire, worsted-spinner.—J. HOLDSWORTH, Bradford, Yorkshire, worsted-spinner.—J. HUTTON, Hartford, cordwainer.—E. BERENNA, Truro, carpenter.—W. GREGORY, Manchester, commission agent

NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, Second Thousand, price 3s.,
Dedicated, by permission, to the Right Hon. David Wedderburn.
THE LOST SAILOR, and other Chapters from a Northern Rectory. Chapters: The Lost Sailor—Sunday Afternoon—Sunday Evening—Sunday Morning—Sunday Afternoon—Planting Prince, &c. "All the papers contain information minded and only to amuse but to instruct and benefit the reader."—Edinburgh Guardian. "The volume concludes with a thrilling ghost story."—Carlisle Journal.
London: HOULSTON and CO., 65, Paternoster-row.

COLONEL BEAMISH ON CAVALRY.
In 1 vol., price 5s.,
Sanctioned for Military Libraries by the Secretary for War.
T. and W. BOONE, 29, New Bond-street.

SUPERIOR SCHOOL BOOKS.
BUTTER'S READING AND SPELLING Book, in one volume. Illustrated. Price 3s. 6d., bound.
BUTTER'S ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING-BOOK and EXPOSITOR. Sixth Edition. Price 3s. 6d., bound.
BUTTER'S GRADUAL PRIMER, with Engravings. 47th Edition. Price 6d.
London: SIMPKIN and CO.; Whittaker and Co.; Longman and Co.

Price 3s., with 12 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 3s. 3d.,
DESIGNS for WINDOWS of different styles to be executed in DIAPHANIE, with full instructions.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Eighth Edition, with 32 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 6s.,
STAINED WINDOWS: the Improved Translucent Process of Diaphanie; easily practised as a usual cost.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

DECALCOMANIE.—Boxes containing Designs, Materials, and Instructions for this beautiful Art, price 10s. 6d., sent on receipt. Post Office order.—J. BARNARD and SON, Sole Agents for the Patentee, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d., with 14 Lithographic Plates,
ALPHABETS and DESIGNS of different Periods, for the use of Draughtsmen and Decorators. By C. WOOD.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Fifth Edition, enlarged, price 3s.; post-free, 3s. 3d.,
HINTS ON ILLUMINATING AND ORNAMENTING IN GOLD AND METALS. By HENRY M. LEIGHTON.—London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Second Edition, price 2s. 6d., post-free, 2s. 10d., illustrated with Drawings printed in Colours, Wood Engravings, &c.,
LANDSCAPE-PAINTING and SKETCHING FROM NATURE. By JOHN CHASE. M.W.C.P. Edited by the late JAMES HARDY, M.A., Master of Sketching, Chatham School, Chester.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Third Edition, price 2s. 6d., with 48 Diagrams, printed in Colours,
MIXED TINTS, WITH AN ESSAY ON LIGHT AND COLOUR. By EDWARD PUGSLEY.
London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street.

EDUCATIONAL WORKS.
Sixty-two pages, price 6d., or forwarded by post to any Lady or Gentleman engaged in tuition on receipt of one stamp.
SCHOOLS CATALOGUE of CLASSICAL, MATHEMATICAL, and GENERAL SCHOOL-BOOKS, ATLASES, MAPS, GLOBES, and SCHOOL REQUISITES.
The Division enables, irrespective of Publisher, all the most important Works in Classics, Mathematics, Geography, Grammar, Arithmetic, Algebra, Mathematics, the Greek, Latin, French, German, and Italian Languages, Chemistry, Mineralogy, Philosophy, and every other branch of Education.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and CO.
Second-hand School Library, 6, Bunhip-row, E.W.

DECALCOMANIE—Instructions, 6d. Designs from 6s. sheet. Every Material, separately or ready-made, from 2s. 6d. WHITE-WOOD Screens, Blotting-books, &c., STAINED WINDOWS (Diaphanie). Instructions, 6d. Cross of Malvern, 10s. 6d. and 21s. Illustrated Lists free.
WILLIAM BARNARD, 59, Cornwall-terrace, London, W.

THE PRIZE POEMS receiving the 100 guineas offered in anonymous competition, "Ho! the Merry Month of May," illustrated with Lithograph Portraits. Grace on application to Mrs. Lascelles Iroutsky, Author of "Ho!" Cottage adjoining the Lake and Inn, Lascelles-hall, Leeds.

Second Edition, corrected and revised, post-free, 7s.; in cloth, 8s. 6d.,
THE TEETH: a Practical Treatise, with the best means of Restoring them when Defective or Lost. By A. ROWELL, Esq., Surgeon-Dentist.
We should be loth to recommend for general perusal Mr. Rowell's treatise, which is as useful as it is unpretending."—Tait's Edinburgh Magazine.
London: CORNISH, Hall End, Southampton-buildings, W.C.

POSTAGE-STAMPS.—Jack's priced Catalogue of FOREIGN POSTAGE-STAMPS, and post-free for twelve stamps. JACK'S INN, 465, New Oxford-street, London. A Proof of the Stairoyd Envelope for sale, price 2s.

TO INVENTORS.—All intending Patentees should peruse the HANDBOOK, prepared by the GENERAL PATENT COMPANY (Limited), 71, Fleet-street, E.C. Points essential at moderate charges, and special terms for the country to inventors.
R. MARSDEN LAYHAM, Sec.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—The Half-yearly Volumes bound in appropriate CLOTH, with gilt edges, at 3s. each, if sent carriage-free with P. O. order to ANDERSON, BOOK and BINDER, 175, Shoe-lane, London. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.—The best Penny Printing Press for Amateurs, Clergymen, and Clergymen Printing, from 41 to 4s 4s. Sketch of the Art Sent free by post for two stamps. The Press used by Stamp Office to let Majesty's Post Office, 38, High Holborn, London, W.C.

TOURISTS derive additional pleasure in their Excursions when supplied with MURRAY'S ROCKS and FOSSILS. By VENNOR. Illustrated by Woodcuts. Price 2s. 6d. Question to Ladies and Gentlemen. Why not study Geology? Mineralogy Geological Collections at 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, to 100 guineas each.

KEYZOR and BENDON'S two-guinea MICROSCOPE FIELD or GLASS, magnifying powers, by the addition of six extra glasses. This celebrated instrument is the best ever made for the price, and is recommended by the Press as additional power, large, and field, and enclosed in a mahogany and brilliant definition for near or distant observation. It will show a thousand times as much as the naked eye, showing objects invisible to twenty, suitable for the student, naturalist, target practice, etc. Sent free by post for two stamps. Sketch of the Microscope sent free. Visited Microscopic Establishments Register and Remedy, Wholesale Opticians, 20, High Holborn, London.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price 45s 6s. SMITH, BECK, and BECK,
31, Cornhill, E.C. (late 6, Coleman-street).
Catalogues sent on receipt of six postage-stamps.

TOURISTS' GLASSES,
Barrows' (Malvern) are the best.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her late Majesty Queen Adelaide, to the Queen, to the Royal Family, Gold Chronometer, Duplex, Detached, Horizontal, Repeating, Centre Seconds, Pocket and Keeper Rings, 30s., 35s., and 20s.; Gem ditto, 5s., 6s., 8s., 10s.; Gold Earrings, 25s. 6d. to 42s. per pair. Gold Lockets, 10s. to 42s.; Gold Guard Chain, 5s. to 25s.—FREDC. HAWLEY, Goldsmith, Silversmith, and Working Jeweller, Manufacturer, and other Precious Stones purchased or taken in exchange. Jewellery repaired and Diamonds cut. List of Prices free. Shippers supplied.

DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Maker of the Great Clock for the Palace of Justice (St. 61), Strand (adjoining Coutts's Bank), and 34 and 35, Royal Exchange.

NEW MUSIC.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LES HUGUENOTS. Three brilliant Duets. Decidedly the best that has been written on Meyerbeer's magnificent opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GOLDEN BELLS. A most attractive, elegant, and brilliant piece, destined to become as popular as "La Harpe Eolienne." Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S PAS REDOUBLE. A very spirited and highly effective military piece. Played by the military bands with great success. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S UNE NUIT ÉTOILÉE. A melodious and charming serenade. One of the most successful pieces by this popular composer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S MARTHA. A new and very short arrangement on the best airs in Flotow's melodious and pleasing opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season." Illustrated London News, 23rd July, 1864. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA VIVACITÉ. Polka de Concert. Played by the Composer at the principal concerts of the season with great success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING.—GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Miss Poole, with unparalleled success. For Soprano or Tenor. Price 4s.
KUHE'S brilliant Transcriptions for Pianoforte Solo. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

NEW SONG, by Miss C. M. E. OLIVER.
"When first I met my love,
Down in the meadow where
Daisies and buttercups grow,
Since she took farewell to me."
To be had of all Music-sellers. Price 2s. 6d.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST of NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.—
The VINCENT WALLACE ALBUM of PIANOFORTE MUSIC.—La Ballo Danzante, rondo élégant, 4s.; Serio Melody, with variations, 3s.; Air de Ballet, 3s.
E. F. WEST.—NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC.—The Bloom is on the Rye, variations, 3s.; Les Cloches du Soir, 3s.
The POPULAR MARCH, by the Band of the Coldstream Guards, arranged for Pianoforte Solo, by STEPHEN GLOVER, with fine view of Marlborough House, &c. The LIFE GUARDS' MARCH, by E. M. LOTT, 3s. 6d.
CHALLTON'S PIANO TUTOR. 420th Edition. 4s. All musicsellers.
HALLTON'S ART OF TUNING THE PIANOFORTE. 1s.
"There is much to be learned from this book."—Times.
GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. For Military Band, by C. COOTE. 4s.
Played by the band of the Coldstream Guards, at Balmoral, Saturday at Noon, in the presence of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.
Song, with Chorus ad lib., 3s.; Piano Solo and Duet, each 4s.; Harmonium, 2s. 6d.; Septet, 2s.
The POPULAR MARCH, by the Band of the Coldstream Guards. Full scores and septet parts.
The MUSICAL MISSIONARIES.—With the Refr. 4s.; without Refr. 3s. These are the best London reads, and are only to be had of the Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street.

POPULAR SONGS OF THE SEASON.

Great Nightingale. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington 3s. 0d.
Rose, Thistle, and Shamrock. Sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby .. 3s. 0d.
The Brunnock. Sung by Mdme. Rudersdorff .. .. .. 3s. 0d.
A Wolf, Not Night. Sung by Miss Palmer .. .. .. 2s. 6d.
The Bird and the Maid. Sung by Miss Poole .. .. .. 2s. 6d.
Bird of Beauty. Sung by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington .. 2s. 6d.
Baby, and When sparrows Build. Virginia Gabriel. 3s. each.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

IRANCILETTA. Italian Bolero. Sung by Miss Milly Gentina Rebilliere with the greatest success. With Portrait. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

GASTON DE LILLE. "NINA." Serenade Espagnole, for Cornet-à-Piston, with accompaniments ad libitum. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC BY
GASTON DE LILLE.
A Summer Night's Dream .. .. 3s.
Under the Trees. Valses .. .. 3s.
Punch and Judy. Polka .. .. 3s.
Spirit of Fun. Valses .. .. 3s.
Fairy Bells. Polka .. .. 3s.
All illustrated in superior style.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

PLAYED AT THE STATE BALLS.
THE ROYAL ALBERT GALOP, by T. W. BROWNE, will equal in popularity the same Composer's "Rose-in-Bloom." Price 3s. Solo and Duet, 4s. each.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

BANTING! BANTING! BANTING! The Life and Times of the Celebrated EDWARD BANTING, a most amusing copyright Illustration. Price 2s. 6d.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, & 40, Great Marlborough-st., London, W.

NEW SONG.—"HOME ONCE MORE." Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Sent for fifteen stamps. Also, "Will he be Constant?" and "Ah! Why Should I Love Him?" Sent for 15 stamps each. Also, "Sweet Bird, Good Bye," by Miss Lindsay, 15 stamps

NEW MUSIC.

MEYERBEER'S L'ETOILE DU NORD. The Opera complete, with Italian and English words, and Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price 21s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CALLCOTT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD.—All the favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera, arranged for the Pianoforte, in three books, price 5s. each; 4to, or Duets, 6s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S POLKA MAZURKA, or VARSOVIENNE, from "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SCENE MILITAIRE, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord," arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA PRIÈRE DE MARGUERITE and Barcarolle, from "L'Etoile du Nord," beautifully illustrated for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA MARCHE SACRÉE, or Peter the Great's March, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FANTASIA BRILLIANT. For the Pianoforte. On favourite airs from Meyerbeer's grand Opera "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CONRADI'S GRAND MARCH from "L'Etoile du Nord." For Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S LA BELLE CATHERINE WALTZ. On Airs from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 3s. Illustrated.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD QUADRILLES. Two sets of Quadrilles on favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera. Price of each set, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GALOP FROM L'ETOILE DU NORD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIECES ON GOUNOD'S FAUST.

A SCHERZO PENSÉE DRAMATIQUE SUR FAUST, Opera de Ch. GOUNOD. Price 3s. Illustrated.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S FAUST.—Just published, a Set of Quadrilles on favourite melodies from Gounod's celebrated and popular Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. Just out. One of the most popular galops published, and beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Fordham, Flatman, Custance, Wells, Grimshaw, and Sherrard. From photographs by Mayall, of Brighton.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. The Band of the Bell-ringers, the Band and Trumpets of Wales. Just published. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new set of Lancers, composed on all the favourite popular tunes of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s., Orchestra, 2s. Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIG. GIUGLINI'S NEW SONG.

FIGLIA DERNA. Romanza. Composed by Verdi, and sung by Sig. Giuglini with the greatest possible success. Price, in F or B, 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE VALLEY (LE VALLON). New Song. Composed by Gounod and sung by Mdme. Salomon-Polny and Mr. Sealey. Price, with English and French words, 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S Popular New version by H. Farnie, and composed by Signor Ar dit, in C, D, or E flat. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

I'LL STAY HERE AND SPIN. New Song. Written by CHARLES OSBORNE; composed by G. A. MACFARREN. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps or Post Office order. Catalogues worth a shilling sent gratis.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

COOTE'S TUILERIES QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INNOCENCE VALSE. Price 4s. "This simple and beautiful Valse has become quite the rage of the season."—Review.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED BY COOTE.

COOTE'S PRINCE ALFRED VALSE. 4s. With a capital Portrait in Colours of his Royal Highness.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE FAVORITE GALOP IN

COOTE'S PRINCE IMPERIAL GALOP. Price 4s. Embossed and illustrated in full.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET EVER COMPOSED.

COOTE'S POLLY PERKINS QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Cluton's celebrated Songs, "Imbella," "Wanderings," and the popular Song of "Polly Perkins."—Review.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT THE STATE BALL.

COOTE'S HUMMING-BIRD VALSE. 4s. Considered the best set of Valses by this popular Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE

COOTE'S QUIZ LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pilgrim of Love," "My Pretty Page," and "Early in the Morning."—"The Case," and other popular Airs. A rare set. No dance programme complete without them. Always rehearsed.—Hop'wood and Crew, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES. Introducing "Kathleen O'Moore," "Norman's Farewell to Kathleen," "Kate Kearney," "Inverneen Darlin'," Sailor's Home."—Hopwood and Crew, 42, New Bond-street.

CHAPMAN'S DÉBUTANTE VALSE. Illustrated. Price 4s. One of the best sets of the season.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

MEYERBEER'S ETOILE DU NORD. All Favourite Airs. Three Books. Solos, 5s.; Duets, 6s. W. H. CALLCOTT.
Scena Militaire. Brinley Richards . . . . . 3s. 6d.
Polka de Cadeaux. . . . . 3s. 6d.
Reminiscences of the Opera. By F. De Vos . . . . . 4s. 0d.
Fantasia Brillante. By Rimbault . . . . . 4s. 0d.
Rondo . . . . . 3s. 0d.
Valse. F. Bassignolier . . . . . 3s. 0d.
Solo, 4s.; Duet, 6s.
Complete Opera for Pianoforte. E. F. Rimbault . . . . . (cash) 4s. 0d.
First and Second Set of Quadrilles. C. D'Albert . . . . . (cash) 4s. 0d.
" Galop. C. D'Albert . . . . . (cash) 3s. 0d.
La Belle Catherine Waltzes. C. D'Albert . . . . . 3s. 0d.
Le Rêve de Dorothée. Ditto . . . . . 3s. 0d.
Fantasia Pastorale. Ditto . . . . . 3s. 0d.
" Polka Mazurka. C. D'Albert . . . . . 3s. 0d.
" Polonaise. Ditto . . . . . 3s. 0d.
" Galop. C. D'Albert . . . . . 3s. 0d.
" Valse. Ditto . . . . . 3s. 0d.
Also all the Vocal Music, Italian and English words.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

GOUNOD'S LA REINE DE SABA. Opera complete, with Italian and English words. 8vo, 28s. net.
Ditto. Airs for Pianoforte . . . . . 18s.
Book of Airs. Solo, 5s.; Duet, 6s. By W. H. Callcott.
March. Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s. By W. H. Callcott.
Valse. Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s. By W. H. Callcott.
March. Solo, arranged by W. H. Callcott . . . . . 3s.
Ditto. Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.; by C. Gounod.
Valse, by F. Bassignollier, 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

KUHE'S FANTASIA on NICOLAI'S Opera, "MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR," 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BISHOP'S MELODIES. Price 4s. each.
No. 1. Mynheer Van Dunck. | No. 3. Tell me, my heart.
" 2. Cherubim Song. | " 4. Home, sweet home.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOUNOD'S QUARTE ROMANCES SANS PAROLES. 3s. each.
No. 1. La Provençale. | No. 3. Le Soir.
" 2. Le Baiser. | " 4. Le Calme.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CHARLES SALAMAN'S "SPANISH CAPRICE," 4s. Played by the Composer.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

RENÉ FAVARGER'S STRADELLA, 3s. 6d. An elegant Fantasia in Salon.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

RENÉ FAVARGER'S MASANIELLO, 4s. A brilliant Fantasia.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES BLUMENTHAL. Tout l'on! Chanson Napolitaine . . . 3s. 6d.
Le Rêve du Bonheur. Chanson Napolitaine . . . 3s. 6d.
Adagio e Presto Agitato . . . 4s. 0d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

EDITH'S GARIBALDINA. BRINLEY RICHARDS. Celebrated National March for the Pianoforte, Solo or Duet. Illustrated. 3s. 6d. Regent-street.

SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. F. P. CLARKE'S LAST SET. Beautifully Illustrated. 4s. Rondo Caprice, 4s. Fantasia, 4s. Quadrilles, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NEW VOCAL DUETS.—THE FALL OF THE LEAF. (Soprano and Contralto.) G. A. MACFARREN. 3s.
THE THUNDERY LAKE. (Soprano and Contralto.) W. T. WALLACE. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

DANISH NATIONAL SONG (Den lapre Landesdrot), with English words by H. F. FARNIE. 3s. Arranged for the Pianoforte by HENRY LAHEE. 3s. 6d. Illustrated. The most popular air of the day. The above, arranged for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. BLUMENTHAL.—A Daydream, for the Pianoforte. 4s. Illustrated. 3s. 6d. net.
I prithee, give me back my heart (Song by Mdlle. Parepa). 3s. 6d.
Thoughts of thee (Song by Madame Sainton-Dolby). 3s. 6d.
Ave Maria. Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.; Violin Obbligato, 1s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOUNOD.—Forget him! Ah! the thought now vain . . . . . 2s. 6d.
Fairer than the morning . . . . . 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. Illustrated. 3s. net.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BOAT SONG. By VERDI. 2s. 6d. A
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER. By VERDI. 3s. The exquisite Song of the Opera "Luisa Miller" for the Pianoforte.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

LITTLE GOLDEN-HAIR. A Venetian Ballad. By VERDI. 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

GARIBALDI. Song. By ARDITI. Words by Henry Farnie. Price 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

A NITA. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s. (Founded on a plaintive melody of Mexican origin.)
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

ARDITI'S LA GARIBALDINA. 2s. 6d. Sung with enthusiastic applause by Mdme. Rudersdorff, Theatre, and Jenny Lind.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"ARDITI." "TITIENS." "FALSTAFF" and "VERDI'S" Latest Song. No. Valse. Introduced by Mdlle. Titiens in Nicolai's Opera, "Falstaff."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NEW CHERRY SONG. 2s. 6d.

OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE PRETTIEST SONG IN

COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. By FRED BUCKLEY. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.

THE NIGHT IS CALM AND CLOUDLESS. By C. M. LEVEY. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SONGS OF THE DAY.

POLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON. Price 2s. 6d. Sung everywhere.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

UTTORAROUS SUCCESS OF MR. TOOLE'S NEW SONG.

A NORRIBLE TALE; or, The Suicidal Family. Price 2s. Encored five times nightly in "The Area Belle." HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

EWER and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY, Subscription and Country Supplying. Prospectuses gratis.
87, Regent-street, London.

MENDELSSOHN'S ATHALIE. Just ready.
A new cheap Edition for Voice and Piano. 4s.
London: EWER and CO., 87, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
"The music of 'Mirella' is so good as that of 'Faust;' perhaps in some respects better."—Daily News.
"M. Gounod has given us a much another genuine and charming work."—The Times.
"The music of 'Mirella' will as surely make its way with the public as that of 'Faust.'"—Morning Post.
"In a capital review, nothing can could write anything for the stage comparable to it."—Athenæum.
"We have to thank M. Gounod for giving us an opportunity of hearing the last work of one who certainly now is the greatest living writer of melodies."—Illustrated News.
Most of the music may be had of every Musicseller in the United Kingdom. BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." The principal songs of the principal artists are the following:—
MIRLE TITIENS.—"Non mista il cuore." 3s. 6d.
MIRLE CARVALHO.—"Ballatella-Serenata." 3s. 6d.
MIRLE. VOLPINI.—Petite Pastorel (Shepherd's Song). 2s.
MIRLE. LEMAIRE.—Chanson Provençale. 3s.
MR. SANTLEY.—Air, Mon Père, écoute Regnier, 3s. 6d.
THE SAVOYARD MELODY.—As, festival; 1 cent 3s. 6d.
THE OPENING CHORUS AS A SONG.—Fascian Carols, 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

THE OVERTURE to MIRELLA is published for the Pianoforte, solo and duet, arranged by the Author. "Seems to be a string of popular melodies from the south of France."—Daily News. "Light, airy, and essentially pastoral."—The Times. "A beautiful composition."—Advertiser.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

KUHE'S MIRELLA FANTASIA on Gounod's new and immensely successful Opera. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S MIRELLA. The Favourite Airs from Gounod's new Opera, as Solos and Duets, in 3 books, 5s. and 6s. each.—BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MIRELLA.—Two pieces on favourite airs, by Brinley Richards.—1. The Savoyard Melody. 2. The Opening Chorus, the most exquisite subjects in the opera. Price 3s. each.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA QUADRILLES, on Gounod's new Opera. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA WALTZES on Gounod's new Opera. Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE SAVOYARD MELODY is published in Italian, "Ah, festa!" 3s. 6d.; in English, "O her fresh face," 3s. 6d.; for the Pianoforte, by Brinley Richards, 3s.; for the Pianoforte, by Burdman (easy), 1s.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE OPENING CHORUS (!) "One of the most delightful and fascinating Choruses ever written."—Illustrated News. "Exquisite."—Times. "Is also a Song, 2s. 6d.; arranged for the Pianoforte by Brinley Richards, 3s.; and arranged for the Pianoforte by Burdman, 1s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MADAME OURY'S MIRELLA. Brilliant Fantasia for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and CO., Holles-street.

FORBES' MIRELLA. Fantasia on the new and successful Opera. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' CAPRERA. Chanson Napolitaine, for the Pianoforte. A most fascinating little piece. By the Author of "Rapid Practice." Price 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' RAPPELLE TOI, a Romance for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Illustrated.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

HARMONIUMS

BOOSEY and CO.'S 24, Holles-street.
The 8-GUINEA HARMONIUM (for Schools) has a rich and agreeable quality of tone.
The 12-GUINEA HARMONIUM (for Schools) has a rich, full tone, suitable for leading class-singing, &c.
The 16-GUINEA HARMONIUM, 20, 25, and 40 guineas, are very powerful, and of the highest class of Harmonium.
Boosey and Co. have also an extensive stock of Harmoniums by Peters, new and secondhand, at reduced prices, including a variety of instruments with two rows of keys and pedals.

PIANOFORTES

BOOSEY and CO.'S 24, Holles-street.
The MINIATURE COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, 7 octaves, has the full compass and quality of tone of a cottage instrument. The majority of cheap pianos hitherto introduced have been distinguished by great harshness and inferior workmanship. Messrs. Boosey, on the contrary, in a most just unpretending case, the workmanship of which is unsurpassed, have produced a
The 25-GUINEA COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, or 27 guineas in Italian Walnut, is a highly-finished, elegant case, with every modern improvement, and possesses a full, rich quality of tone, both elastic, and the tone of that part, rich quality that especially distinguishes Boosey and Co.'s Pianofortes.
The 30-GUINEA COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, or 32 guineas in Italian Walnut, is four inches higher than the 25-guinea Piano, and the tone is correspondingly increased. The instrument is in a richly ornamented case, and has the registered keyboard as well as the new grand suspension action.
PIANOFORTES FOR HIRE.

MUSICAL BOXES.—BOOSEY and CO. beg to announce that they have just received a variety of Musical Boxes from the celebrated Nicole, of Geneva, made expressly to their order, and which, for tone, power, and quality of air, they can confidently recommend. Detailed catalogues forwarded on application.—BOOSEY and CO., 24, Holles-street, W.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, BEALE, WOOD, and CO. have arranged a system by which to pay for a PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be known on application at the Grand Model Rooms, 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, SEMI-OBLIQUE PIANOFORTES. Price 41 guineas in Rosewood, and 45 guineas in Walnut. This instrument presents recently to the notice of the public, Cramer and Co. may be permitted to say that it is the result of many years' study for the quality of tone, thereby obtained, the steadiness of touch in tinning, and the superiority in bearing the screws. The tone may be forced by no effort, however violent, or drawn out by the less occasioned fixed of the monitor; in the one case there is no harshness, in the other no weakness, but a full, rich, singing quality of the instrument. The action is moderate, is of the very best quality, being somewhat similar in the principle of construction to that of the Grand Pianoforte. The touch is complete, there being but three wires to each note, like the Full-Grand. Cramer and Co. guarantee the instrument for five years, and engage to keep it in tune for three hours in all parts of the country without cost to the purchaser, at a very trifling cost.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 201 and 205, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE. 37 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small pianoforte, with all the improvements of the full Pianoforte—action, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished oak or walnut, and is of the following dimensions:—Height, 3 feet 6 inches; its straightforward appearance renders it an ornament placed here in the key and worn in the manner. In rosewood, 41 guineas; in walnut, 45 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this lasting instrument is manufactured only by Cramer and Co., and not by their workmen; and that Cramer and Co. were the original manufacturers of it.

GREAT SALE of PIANOFORTES at the Gallery, 207 and 209, Regent-street.—J. B. CRAMER and CO. are offering for SALE the whole of their STOCK of PIANOFORTES, by the most eminent makers, at reduced prices. Instruments are chiefly by Broadwood, Collard, and Erard. Many of these are quite equal to new. Every pianoforte is fully guaranteed to not only the genuine manufacture of the firm whose name it bears, but also of their being in other respects perfect. The Gallery contains the largest assortment in London of pianos of all the different descriptions. The printed catalogues are now ready, and may be had on application. Instruments for the country are packed and sent to the London terminus free of charge. The sale will continue until the 1st of October.

PIANOFORTES, NEW, by Broadwood, Collard, or Erard, for SALE or HIRE, at CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE RENOVATION.—CRAMER and CO. repair and renew the mechanism of pianofortes worn by years of constant practice. Cramer and Co. guarantee that, if originally good, the instrument will be restored to great freshness of tone and touch. Pianofortes taken in exchange.—Cramer and Co. give estimates (if not.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

PIANO MECANIQUE.—CRAMER and CO. supply organists with a Pedal Piano, an instrument entitled to each fortement among the triumphs achieved in the mechanical arts. Anyone can play upon it. Price 50 guineas. It fits with a keyboard, enabling it to be used by a pianist like an ordinary pianoforte.—Cramer and Co., Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for HIRE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.—HARMONIUMS for SALE.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO'S ARTIST'S CONCERTINAS selected by Mr. Richard Blagrove.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO'S FOUR-GUINEA CONCERTINA.
The best Cheap Instrument yet produced.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO., SECONDHAND CONCERTINAS.—201, Regent-street.

SECONDHAND GRAND PIANOFORTES 1 by CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND SEMI-GRAND PIANO-FORTES by Collard and Collard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND OBLIQUE GRAND PIANOFORTES by Erard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by Broadwood.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by Collard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by CHAPPELL and CO., at their Establishment, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the only Pianette with the Price Marked on every case).—A very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass (seven octaves), and possessing a quality of tone and touch which for the last twelve years has attracted so large an ease, and is the best and cheapest Pianoforte of the check action class. Price 30 guineas.
Prices, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 25 and 28 guineas. A great variety of larger Pianos.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S COUS ENNADE MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To customers preferring the check action, and requiring a Pianoforte of portable size, this Model will be found the most perfectly satisfactory instrument, as a moderate price. It is made on the same principle of construction as the above nuisance, and therefore especially adapted to the country. The tone is full and sympathetic, and the touch elastic and under the control of the fingers. The case is elegant, and suitable in every respect to other instruments at 50 guineas, price 35 guineas. In walnut, 40 guineas.
Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE is of the same dimensions as the above, but contains the Three Strings and the fullest possible compass of seven octaves. The tone is of the most brilliant quality, and the touch elastic, and under the most perfect command in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description; the case is elegant, and the instrument is guaranteed to stand in any climate. The touch is elastic, and the repetition very rapid. No. 1, in rosewood, 30 guineas; mahogany, 28 guineas; walnut, 32 guineas. No. 2, with the same price. Every instrument well examined, and (if desired) exchanged within six months of the purchase.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. The best Pianofortes of every description, including all the newest kinds by these celebrated makers, may be hired on the best and most liberal terms, with option of purchase, at the new Show-rooms of CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany or plain walnut, the best English pianoforte ever made for the price. Every one warranted by Chappell and Co. to stand in any climate. Messrs. Chappell recommend this instrument as superior to any other pianoforte at or about the same price, whether sold or hired.
50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, in rosewood, 25 guineas; with the best check action, 3 strings, the grand compass of seven octaves, and every recent improvement. Every instrument warranted by Chappell and Co. to stand in any climate. The same instruments with two strings, at 26 guineas.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM MODEL HARMONIUM, the best that can be made, price 50 guineas. Messrs. Chappell have also a large assortment of Cottage and Private Chapel Harmoniums for SALE or HIRE.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with 5 stops and octaves, two rows of keys, and 8 pedals. These Harmoniums are lower in price and superior to all other Harmoniums of the same price.—CHAPPELL and CO.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, nearly (if not quite) as good as new, at greatly reduced prices.—CHAPPELL and CO.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION MODEL HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, 14 stops, 4 rows of keys, and pedals complete, 100 guineas. Also a smaller instrument, in oak case, 32 guineas. A large assortment may be always seen at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—Caution.—The public are respectfully cautioned against buying Pianos bearing the names of "Allcrox" or "Allison and Allison," as the undersigned have not, and never have had, any connection with the Firm of Allison, late in the trade.—RALPH ALLISON and SONS, 109, Newman-street, Oxford-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by LACHENAL, Full Compass, with all the latest Improvements, manufactured and supplied to the trade in town, from Two guineas, with case, lock and key, &c.
LACHENAL and CO., 20, Soho-square.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. PLACE NEW PIANOFORTES of every description and in Europe, about two thirds the price of the much advertised French Pianos. Can be had on the three years' system. Also in the window marked with price: plain wooden cheaper.
OETZMANN and CO., 27, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in rosewood and walnut, 25 guineas, warranted, 27, Regent-street. Please observe the address.

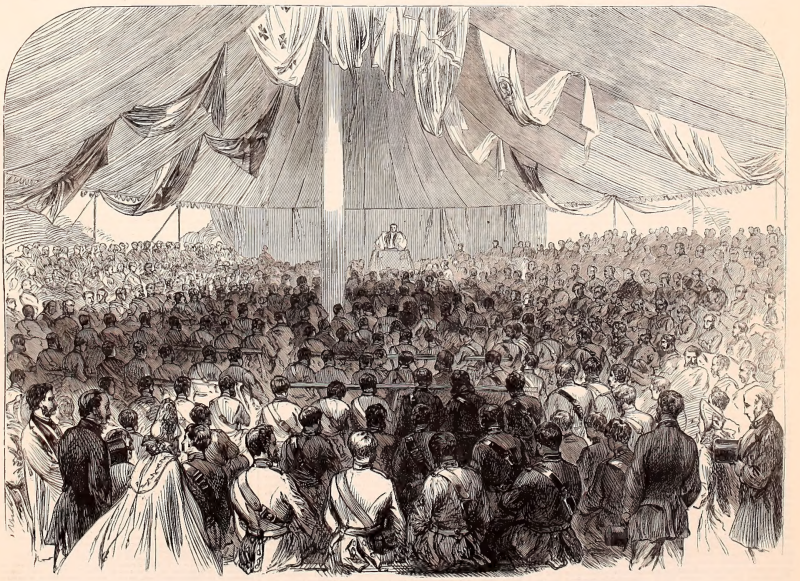
PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S COTTAGE, rosewood and walnut, 20 guineas, hire, 30 to 38 guineas. These instruments are beautiful in touch, quality of tone, and similar to Broadwood.—31, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S INDIAN PIANOFORTES, made expressly to resist damp, heat, and insects. Inspection invited.
OETZMANN and PLUMB, 27, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES AND HARMONIUMS. OETZMANN and PLUMB have all descriptions for HIRE, from 20s. with first 20l. Instruments, all they can receive in every instrument at moderate prices, by instalments if desired. CASH Piano taken in exchange. Regular and tunings by experienced workmen.—31, Regent-street, the only address.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE PRIZES.



THE proceedings of the National Rifle Association on Wimbledon-common for the year 1864 terminated last Saturday with a public distribution of prizes and a review of the volunteer corps by his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief. The prizes had in former years been presented in the Crystal Palace. On this occasion the ceremony took place upon the field. A table was placed at the foot of the Royal standard, and the prizes were laid upon it. Four or five rows of iron chairs, within the space inclosed for paying spectators, gave accommodation to many ladies, besides those who were admitted into the marquee. On the flagstaff, above the table, was suspended the Elcho challenge shield, unfinished as it was, fine specimen of repoussé work in hammered iron, which will be ready for presentation next year. It is represented, meanwhile, by the plaster cast, which is kept by each successful competitor for a twelvemonth. Behind the table a guard of honour, composed of about a hundred of the London Rifle Brigade, under Captain Finckney, were drawn up; and Private Wyatt, of this corps, who had before distinguished himself as a crack shot, having won the Queen's prize, his comrades each wore a laurel leaf in his shako. The bands of the London Rifle Brigade and of the London Scottish—the former under Mr. Stanton Jones, the latter under Mr. M'Farlane—were stationed behind the guard of honour, and played at intervals before the presentation of the prizes. The winners, having been called to the front, were arranged in oblique lines to the right and left of the table. Lord Elcho, advancing a few paces, opened the proceedings by saying that the Council had hoped that they would have had either Lord Ellenborough or Earl De Grey to give away the prizes, but as they found it would be impossible for either of those noblemen to be present, he hoped that it would not be unacceptable to the prize-winners if they were to receive their prizes from the hands of Lady Elcho, who was one of the heartiest and best supporters of the volunteer movement in the kingdom. He must congratulate the volunteers, the Council, and all those who took any interest in the volunteer movement, on the great success which had attended this Wimbledon meeting. His Lordship, however, alluded, with much regret, to the accident which had occurred the day before, when a man named Cooper, a private in the Coldstream Guards, employed as a marker at the butts, was severely wounded by a stray shot. That morning, he said, the Council had received a telegram from her Majesty, kindly and anxiously inquiring after his condition and requesting that she might be daily informed of his state of health. With this exception, everything had been prosperous. After some further observations, Lord Elcho called over the names of the prize-winners, a list of whom will be found upon our next page. Lady Elcho then presented the prizes, shaking hands with the winners, and congratulating them on their success.

When the City of London prizes, amounting to £600, were presented, Lord Elcho explained that this money had been collected for the National Rifle Association by a subscription among the merchants, bankers, and others, of the City, which was set on foot by "those excellent shots and hearty volunteers Sergeant Martin Smith and Major Oxley." Lieutenant-Colonel Lindsay presented the St. George's vase, and at the same time handed to Lord Elcho a casket containing 180 dragon sovereigns, the produce of the entrance fees paid by the competitors. In presenting the Elcho challenge shield Lord Elcho said:—"This is a prize in which Lady Elcho and myself have some little interest. It has been won twice by England; but this year there has been a turn in the tide of luck, and Scotland, I am happy to say, has carried off the prize. I do not believe there is any Englishman present, whether he wears a black coat or a volunteer uniform, who grudges Scotland its victory this year. The first year we had only a chalk drawing of the shield, next year a plaster cast, but this year it has assumed something like form and substance. When Lady Elcho presented the shield the first year, she said that the Scotch felt that, as it was not ready for them to take if they won it, they would not exert themselves to obtain it; and last year, when it existed only in plaster, the English won again; but no sooner did it appear in a tangible form than Captain Ross and his seven have exerted themselves, and are about to take it to Edinburgh to show what they have won." Lord Bury, as captain of the English eight, called for three cheers for Scotland, which were given. Captain Ross, of the Scottish eight, returned thanks, and in return called on every Scotchman present to give three cheers for Lord Bury and the English eight, which were heartily given. The next prize was that for the International Enfield match—won by England with 1016 points. Lord Elcho presented certificates to the twenty English winners, stating that a more tangible token of victory would be subscribed for in another year. At his call the Scotchmen gave three cheers for the English.

There was great cheering during the presentation of the prizes, but especially for the young Harrovians, and for Mr. Wyatt, of the City Rifles; the guard of honour standing to "attention" as he received his prize, and the band striking up "See, the conquering hero comes!"

MR. JOHN WYATT, WINNER OF THE QUEEN'S PRIZE.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK PERFORMING CHURCH SERVICE IN THE CAMP.

The following is a list of the winners in the order in which they were called up :—

Extra Prizes, 1st series, a Bennett gold watch, £31 10s.: Captain Bevan, 1st Hadnor, 19 marks. 2nd, Maggin tea-service, £22 10s.: Mr. Miller, Bristol, 20 marks. 3rd, Smith rifle, £40: J. G. Fletcher, 18 marks. 4th, Whitworth rifle, £30: C. Ross, 20 marks. 5th, Pair of statuettes, £21: Lieutenant-Colonel Halford, Leicester, 40 marks.

Twelve All-Comers, £25, 11 to prize £10: Captain E. Rose, 3rd Cambridge, 19 marks.

Mr. Mortin's Prize, £100 (for breech-loaders), Range A, 1st Prize, £40: Sergeant Brook, 17th Middlesex (13 shots), 31 marks; Range B, 1st Prize, £30: Ensign Hughes, 2nd Manchester (9 shots), 30 marks.

Mr. Henry Peck's (Sir 19th.), £25 10s.: Private Breed, 3rd Kircudbright, 28 marks.

Daily Telegraph, cup, £50: Lieutenant Burt, 1st Warwick, 19 marks.

Earl the Grey's Prize, £30, 1st Prize, £10: Mr. T. Turner, 20 marks.

Lord Vernon, £50: Eden, Ituse of Cosit.

Volunteer Service Gazette, £25: Captain Heaton, Manchester.

Army and Navy Gazette, £20: Private Doe, Victorias.

Wimbledon Cup, Range A, 1st Prize, £50: Lieutenant Baker, 1st Gloucester, 18 marks. Ditto, Range B, 1st Prize, £50: Lieutenant-Colonel Baker, 3rd Gloucester (9 shots), 30 marks. Ditto, Range C, 1st Prize, £50: Lieutenant Hanson, 1st Gloucester Artillery, 29 marks.

Alexandra, 1st Stage, cup or money, £100: Hercules Rose, 5th Kincardineshire, 27 marks.

Alexandra, 1st Stage, Range A, 1st Prize, £20: Private Wood, 18 marks. Ditto, Range B, 1st Prize, £20: Private Sawyer, 18 marks.

Alexandra, 2nd Stage, cup or money, £50: Private Parsons, Hon. Artillery Company, 28 marks.

Any Rifle Association Cup, £50: H. M. Ashton, Liverpool Rifle Brigade, 29 marks.

Enfield Association Cup, £50: Sergeant H. M. Aldridge, 35 marks.

Curtis's Prize, 1st Prize, £10: Lieutenant Rose, 20 marks.

Mr. Dillwyn's Prize, cup, £25; Rev. W. Brown, 1st Devon, 16 marks.

Mr. Dent, £25, 1st Prize, £10: Lieutenant-Colonel Hutchinson, 4th Lanarkshire, 18 marks.

City of London £500, Range A, 1st Prize, £75: Sergeant Hall, 3rd Ayrshire, 19 marks. Ditto, Range B, 1st Prize, £25: Private Baston, 21st Middlesex, 19 marks.

Ashburton Shield (Public Schools), £140: Harrow, 226 marks.

Earl Spencer, cup, £13: Curzon Howe, 1st Middlesex, 21 marks.

Saturday Review, £50, 1st Prize £25: 2nd Administrative Battalion, Sheffield, 114 marks.

St. George's Vase, vase, gold jewel, and £6, £250: Sergeant Frazer, 5th Staffordshire.

Chancellor's Plate, cup, £100: Cambridge, 413 marks.

Elcho Shield, Scotland, 907 marks.

International Enfield Match : England, 1016 marks.

Wimbledon Cup, cup, £100 : Scotland, 1015 marks.

Burt Dudley's, cup or money, £50.

H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge's, 1st prize, £30: Captain E. Ross, 3rd Cambridge.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, cup or money, £100: Sergeant Dodd, 1st Hereford.

Queen's Prize (first stage), Silver Medal, Whitworth rifle, and £50, £70: Private Haward, 1st Suffolk.

Queen's Prize (second stage), her Majesty's Prize of £250, gold medal of the N.R.A., and Whitworth rifle, £277 : Private Wyatt, London Rifle Brigade.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW.

The review of the volunteer corps by the Duke of Cambridge took place immediately after the prize distribution of yesterday. For the sake of the wounded soldier, who lay in the hospital tent, his Royal Highness had given orders that not a shot should be fired. The firing was, however, considerably from the effect of the manœuvres. The muster was also a very short one, many distinguished corps being but thinly represented. For example, the Victorias, which Colonel M'Murdo has had put down in his list at 480, brought only 120 to the field, and more or less disquiet between the regiments and the actual numbers on the ground was general. There were about 8000 men present, divided into two divisions, each of four brigades, and several batteries of artillery. The first division, under the command of Major-General Sir J. Yorke Scarlett, consisted of the cavalry of the Hon. Artillery Company, headed by Major Robinson, and commanded by Captain Lee; followed by two batteries of artillery of four guns, and the batteries of the 2nd Surrey artillery, also with four guns. The infantry brigades were in the following order :—The 1st Middlesex (Victorias), under Major Greenhill, and the 36th Middlesex, Lieutenant-Colonel Wood, in one battalion ; four companies of the 1st Middlesex (Working Men's College), Lieutenant-Colonel Hughes, five companies ; the 2nd Essex Administrative Battalion, Lieutenant-Colonel Rose, six companies ; the 3rd City of London, Major Richards, six companies ; the 5th Administrative Battalion of Middlesex, Lieutenant-Colonel Capper, six companies ; the 5th Administrative Battalion of Middlesex, Colonel Grey, eight companies ; the 1st Surrey, Lieutenant-Colonel M'Donald, four companies ; 18th and 19th Middlesex, three companies ; the 20th Middlesex, (Central London), Lieutenant-Colonel Somerset, four companies ; the London Irish, Major Power, five companies ; the 21st Middlesex, Captain and Adjutant Hotham, four companies ; the 7th Surrey, Major Beresford, four companies ; the St. George's, Colonel Lindsay and Major Ives, four companies ; the West Middlesex, Captain Dear, three companies ; the 1st Tower Hamlets Administrative Battalion, Lieutenant-Colonel Raikes, seven companies ; the 4th, five companies ; the 4th and 6th Tower Hamlets, Lieutenant-Colonel Money, four companies ; the 12th Surrey, Colonel Cole, four companies ; the Bells Rifles (Bermondsey), Colonel Perkins, four companies of thirteen files.

The second division, commanded by Major-General Rumley, comprised the 1st Middlesex Artillery, Colonel Creed, six guns ; the 3rd Middlesex Artillery, two batteries of six guns each. The 1st brigade, commanded by Lord Ranelagh, who was loudly cheered as he passed, consisted of the 2nd, 8th, and 9th Tower Hamlets, Lieutenant-Colonel Saunders, four companies ; 1st Middlesex Engineers, Lieutenant-Colonel M'Leod or M'Leod, five companies ; the South Middlesex, Major Atherley, four companies of twenty-five files ; the Queen's Westminster, (29th), Lieutenant-Colonel Whitehead, four companies of twenty files ; the Civil Service, four companies, and Artists, one company. Viscount Bury, the 19th Surrey, commanded the 1st Middlesex, Lord Truro, four companies of ten files ; the 37th Middlesex (Bloomsbury), Lieutenant-Colonel Lucas, four companies of thirteen files ; the London Rifle Brigade, Lieutenant-Colonel Warde and Major Rose, here followed, each man wearing a cockade, by the 1st brigade mustered eight companies, and its appearance was greeted with hearty and enthusiastic applause. Next followed the 2nd Administrative Battalion of Middlesex, Lieutenant-Colonel Whitehead, six companies ; it was succeeded by the London Scottish, headed by Major Elcho, who was followed by the regiment, in five companies, was loudly applauded. Colonel Biggs's was the last brigade, and consisted of the Queen's (Westminster), Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence and Lord Gerald Fitzgerald, eight companies ; the City of London and Tower Hamlets Artillery, Major Walmsley, four companies ; the 8th Middlesex (Victoria Park), City Companies, and 2nd City of London in one battalion, Lieutenant-Colonel Cruikshank and Major Spottiswoode, six companies of thirteen files ; and the 24th Middlesex (London Scottish), Sir John Shelley, M.P., four companies.

The Brigadiers of the day were the Duke of Wellington, Marquis of Donegall, Viscount Bury, Viscount Ranelagh, Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, Colonel Lloyd, Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence, and Major Rose.

The troops were made to execute a series of movements which proved their satisfactory proficiency in drill. After this they made a general advance in line, and concluded with the "march past." The Commander-in-Chief had taken up his position at the flagstaff, and received the salute of each regiment as they passed. The band of the London Rifle Brigade, Victorias, 1st Middlesex Artillery, and 1st Middlesex Engineers helped to enliven the scene.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS

We present in this Number a couple of illustrations of the proceedings. One represents the ceremony of distributing the prizes, as above described, on Saturday last, the Duke of Cambridge in the interior of a marquee used on Sunday week for the performance of the Church service. The sermon was preached by the Archbishop of York; and the Rev. T. Hanley Ball, lecturer of St. Mary's, Wimbledon, read the prayers. The band of the London Scottish performed an instrumental accompaniment to the psalmody. The Archbishop's sermon made a good application of the characteristic incidents of the Wimbledon meeting. A desire was universally expressed that it might be printed, a request to which his Grace immediately assented. As the congregation dispersed, a collection was made on behalf of the poor of Wimbledon, the contributions being appropriately received in the boxes which on week days were devoted to pool and sighting tickets.

THE WINNER OF THE QUEEN'S PRIZE.

We give a Portrait of Mr. John Wyatt, a private of the London Rifle Brigade, winner of the Queen's prize for this year. Mr. Wyatt is a native of Chargrey Campden, Gloucestershire, thirty-five years of age, and unmarried. He has for ten years past been connected with the firm of Messrs. Churchill and Son, timber and mahogany brokers, of 30, Old Broad-street, who are liberal patrons of the volunteer movement in the City. Having thus been encouraged to enter the London Rifle Brigade, he soon became distinguished as an excellent shot. In the first year's classing he figured as premier marksman of the regiment. In the following year, 1863, he attended the volunteer class of musketry instruction, at Hythe, in February, 1862, and left there with the soldier's marksman's badge, having passed into the first class, both in shooting and judging distance, a position obtained by only about ten per cent of the volunteers at Hythe. At the meeting of the National Rifle Association at Wimbledon, where he was placed third in the first thirty, and won a Whitworth rifle. At the meeting in 1863 he was placed in the first thirty, and carried off another Whitworth rifle. In 1864 he stands highest in the first thirty, and has gained the Queen's prize, with another Whitworth rifle, as the reward of his perseverance. He may regard his triumph the greater, since he has had such a competitor as Lieutenant-Colonel Halford, one of the most accomplished shots of the day. There are one or two curious accidental circumstances about Mr. Wyatt's success on this occasion. It has been remarked that in the Queen's prizes in which Scotland has won four doors of that of a former winner of the Queen's prize; and it may also be noted that Lieutenant Baker, 1st Gloucester, had the charge of the squad in which Mr. Wyatt shot at Wimbledon, and was the first to congratulate his fortunate pupil. Another contemporary, rather invidiously comparing the shooting for the Queen's prize of this year with that of last year, did not take into consideration the fact that the targets used on Thursday were twenty-five per cent lower in price, and certainly more than as much inferior in quality. The effect of the change in the rifle, however, is made, it will be found that the winning score this year is much above the average of the English and Scottish champions, or that of the Alderney prize squad. The latter included Mr. Whitworth at the meeting, shooting in any position and using weapons furnished with all the appliances that ingenuity could devise for the use of mighty wealth, in the competition for the Queen's prize, the Hythe position is absolutely prescribed, and the rifle is a comparatively simple weapon, which is not even the best of its kind, being actually stamped by the manufacturer "second quality." We understand that the Queen's prizeman has also the attention of Lord Elcho and the council to this anomaly. The shooting as the last range in the competition of Tuesday week was very interesting. When the squads had finished, except that to which Mr. Wyatt belonged, and the highest scores were known to the Lieutenant-Colonel and the officers of the London Rifle Brigade, who were present, they sedulously concealmed their knowledge reaching Mr. Wyatt, lest it should unnerve him as he made his last shot. It may be says that at the commencement of the shooting that day he felt pretty confident that he should not in the end be far from the top of the list, and that a score of sixty would be near the mark to win.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION-STONE OF THE THAMES EMBANKMENT.

The Engraving on our front page represents the ceremony of laying the first stone of the Thames Embankment, in front of Whitehall Stairs, on Saturday last. The Right Hon. Thomas Farrer, one of the Metropolitan Board of Works, accompanied by some of his colleagues, performed this office, in the presence of the Right Hon. W. F. Cowper-Temple, Commissioner of Her Majesty's Works, and Mr. John Manners, the predecessor of that right hon. gentleman ; and a select party of guests. The stone is of granite, and is 3 ft. 6 in. square, a space of 37 ft. in length by 20 ft. in width had been inclosed by caissons and coffer-dams, and the concrete and brickwork put in ready for receiving the stone. The stone is 3 ft. 6 in. thick, every way at high tide, and the water-line was fully 27 ft. above the spot where the caissons stood. We mentioned on Saturday last, however, that the slightest leakage or even damp was unacceptable. The means by which this result was obtained are worthy of particular remark. When the first contract of the embankment was being tendered for, the great question was the description of dam that would be required for the purpose. It was evident that the ordinary embankment works were being carried on within. It was known from experience that the bed of the Thames consisted of alternate gravel strata, and the many obstructions always found existing in the bed of the Thames, especially along the shore, a dam of timber piles would be scarcely practicable, and even if it could be made, with a probability of its not securing all the conditions required. This gave rise to numerous suggestions, and the use of iron, the most likely way and many ingenious schemes were offered. But the plan finally adopted by the contractor, with the approbation of the Board of Works, is that known of Mr. Joseph Phillips of the Charing-cross Railway-works. He, from his experience in the building of foundations under water on the Charing-cross Railway, was able to adapt his design and carry out a simple plan of erecting a dam or wall of iron caissons, which could, when the work was completed, with little purposes required and partly work in as portion of the permanent structure. This is done by the formation of an iron wall or dam along the whole length of the embankment, which is made of iron, and which are so designed as to be capable of being taken to pieces at intervals of one, two, or three hundred feet. The portion of the wall which is to remain permanently is the inner ring of iron plates, which, when the above is removed, and fixed in advance over again, as the work behind is finished. The portion left in is filled with concrete of Portland cement, and thus forms a solid foundation to the embankment. The outer ring of iron plates is to be used in forming the caissons, for convenience, are made in rings 4ft. 6in. deep. They are sunk to an average depth of 36ft. below Trinity high-water mark, and never less than 27ft. at low water. The clay, partly by excavation or dredging and partly by excavating, where a water-bearing stratum is found and the water is got to work by pumps. The clay in this manner is one of the many signs that iron is rapidly superseding timber, whether for bridges, iron-plated ships, or embankments. Already the Government are about to use caissons on this principle for some of their fortifications in the neighbourhood of Portsmouth ; and there is no doubt that for deep foundations, especially such as rock bottom, great depth of water, or natural or artificial obstructions, this method will be found the most safe and economical system to be made where before it would have been impossible. The total length of the embankment to be constructed in this speedy, economical, and efficient manner is about 7000 feet. Behind the wall and underneath the roadway a subway and main sewer will be constructed, which will substantially add to the value of the property. The subway itself is divided by the bridges into three sections, each of which will be made 20 feet 6 inches wide, and 8 feet high. Westminster Bridge, which has been contracted for by Mr. George Furness, for £520,000 ; the second section, from Waterloo to the Temple Gardens, has been taken by Mr. Hinde, for £225,000 ; a third section, somewhat in width of roadway, from that point will continue the embankment to Blackfriars. At Westminster Bridge the subway, which will be at an inclination of 1 in 80 to the level of the bridge, is set back some 30 or 40 ft. from the face of the embankment wall, and the intervening space is to be reserved as a promenade and steam-boat pier, having access from the bridge by a wide and imposing flight of steps opposite the Houses of Parliament. This will terminate without abruptness the varying styles of architecture there. Between Westminster and the railway-bridge at Hungerford are to be landing-stairs for the smaller craft, and here it is proposed to introduce the beautiful watergate removed from the end of Buckingham-street, and designed by Inigo Jones. On each side of the Charing-cross railway-bridge and Waterloo Bridge provision will be made for steam-boat landing-places, the dummies of which will be partly concreted within recesses formed by projecting into the river in front of the general line of embankment massive granite piers, with moulded pelestals, rising about 30 ft. above the roadway, and hereafter to be enriched with bas-relief and surmounted by groups of statuary. The whole of the granite will be supplied from quarries which are the property of the Duke of Argyll. The same granite was used exclusively in the construction of the Westminster Bridge and the Liverpool Docks.

The ceremony depicted in our Illustration was conducted in the usual manner. The stone having been duly adjusted, a bottle containing a parchment descriptive of the character of the work, with some of the current coin of the realm, and the current coins of the realm, were deposited in a cavity and hermetically sealed. Mr. Thwaites then proceeded to spread the mortar with a handsome silver trowel, on which was engraved a record of this important occasion. The stone was then lowered and declared to be duly laid, amidst the cheers of hundreds of workmen and other lookers-on. Mr. Thwaites then mounted on the top of the stone and made a speech, referring to the history of the Thames Embankment scheme, which had then been referred to a practical commencement, after engaging for so many years the attention of engineers and committees. Royal Commissions and Committees of both Houses of Parliament. He observed, on behalf of the Metropolitan Board of Works, that they felt grateful for the confidence which had been reposed in them by both Houses of Parliament. He had especially to acknowledge the share which the Chancellor of the Exchequer had taken in promoting this great work. The Metropolitan Board could not have raised the money for the embankment at a less rate than six or seven per cent. He (Mr. Thwaites) went to the right hon. gentleman, and explained their position to him. The Chancellor of the Exchequer at once entered heartily into the matter, and promised a Government guarantee for any loan the board may require. A bill for that purpose had passed the House of Commons, had been read a second time in the House of Lords, and no doubt would become law before the end of the Session. By this bill the Metropolitan Board would be enabled to borrow, say, £18,000 a year for the next eighteen years, because they would be able with the Government guarantee to get money at four-and-a-half per cent or less, instead of the higher rate. In conclusion, Mr. Thwaites expressed the hope that he and his colleagues would have the sympathy and confidence of the public while engaged in the execution of this great work. A vote of thanks to him was proposed by the Right Hon. W. F. Cowper-Temple, and to Sir John Manners, after which a similar compliment was bestowed on Mr. Bazalgette, the engineer. Thanks to the two right hon. gentlemen in their turn for attending this ceremony were then given. The company then partook of a luncheon in a marquee which had been erected in the contractors' yard.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE HON. AND REV. RICHARD CUST.

The Hon. and Rev. Richard Cust, Rector of Belton, Lincolnshire, Prebendary of Lincoln and Rural Dean of Corringham, was the third son of Sir Brownlow Cust, first Lord Brownlow, by his second wife, Frances, only child of Sir Henry Hesketh, Bart., of Rufford Hall, Lancashire, and widow of the first Earl Brownlow, and of Colonel the Hon. Peregrine Cust, and General the Hon. Henry Cust, both of the Coldstream Guards. He was born on Aug. 26, 1780, and was educated at Eton, and Cirist College, Oxford, where he graduated A.B. in 1802, and M.A. in 1805. Of the second, his elder brother, he was appointed Rector of Belton in 1810, and an honorary Canon of Lincoln in 1819, and a Prebendary of Lincoln in 1824. He was also born at our time Rector of Shelland, Suffolk, which living he resigned. The hon. and rev. gentleman, who died on Saturday last, married, on the 1st inst., at his rectory, Belton. The present Earl Brownlow is his grandnephew.

LADY RIDLEY AND MRS. COCKSON.

The Dowager Lady Ridley and her daughter, Mrs. Cookson, the former the mother and the latter the sister of Sir Matthew White Ridley, Bart., M.P., form and present Baronet, of Heaton Hall, in the county of Northumberland, died on the same day, the 22nd inst., at the family seat from house, 27, Upper Brook-street, Grosvenor-square ; and Mrs. Cookson, at Holden Clough, near Clitheroe, in Lancashire. The Dowager Lady Ridley was Anne Lours, youngest daughter of George Hawkins, Esq. ; she was married, on the 19th of August, 1805, to Sir Matthew White Ridley, the first Baronet, M.P. for Newcastle-on-Tyne, and leaves, besides Sir Matthew White Ridley, the present Baronet, another daughter—Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Ridley, Admiss Monck, of Belsay Castle ; Mrs. Martin Tucker Smith, Mrs. Corbett, and Mr. Isaac Thomas Cookson, of Holden Clough, Clitheroe, in Lancashire, Commander-land. Lady Ridley's eldest daughter, Sarah, whose demise is contemporary with that of her mother, was married on the 9th of April, 1827, to the present John Cookson, Esq., of Meldon Park, Northumberland, and leaves a family of sons and daughters.

MAJOR-GENERAL HARDINGE, K.H.

Major-General Richard Hardinge, Royal Horse Artillery, K.H., who died on the 26th inst., at his town house, 32, Hyde Park-square, after a short illness, was one of a family distinguished in the service of the British empire. He was the fourth son of the Rev. Henry Hardinge, Rector of Stanhope, in the county of Durham, by Elizabeth, youngest daughter of James Best, Esq., and was brother of the hero of the Sutlej, the late Field Marshal Henry Viscount Hardinge, and of Captain Charles Hardinge, who was killed in action while in command of H.M.S. Firebrand, after capturing a Piedmontese slaver. The deceased General Hardinge was born on April 13, 1787, and entered the Royal Artillery in 1806. He was actively engaged in the Peninsula from 1812 till the end of the war in 1814, and was present at the blockade of San Sebastian, battles of Orthes and Toulouse, affairs at Orme, Bayonne, and Tarbes. He also took part in the glory of the battle of Waterloo of 1815, and was present at Ligny and Quatre Bras. General Hardinge was made a Knight of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic order in 1838, and had received the silver war medal and four clasps for his conduct in the Peninsula. He married, first, on the 15th of September, 1814, and a Major-General on Jan. 26, 1858. The gallant General married, first, Anne, eldest daughter of Thomas Papillon, Esq., of Acrise Place, Kent, and secondly in 1819, he had a son, Henry, and a daughter, Frances. He married, secondly, Aug. 15, 1827, Augusta Elizabeth, daughter of Admiral Sir Alexander Cullander, Bart., by her had four sons and a daughter. Major-General Hardinge was uncle of the present Viscount Hardinge, and of Henry Charles Hardinge, the third and present Baronet, of Bounds Park, Kent.

LORD WOOD.

Alexander Wood, of Wooden Castle, Haddingtonshire, a Lord of Session in Scotland as Lord Wood, who died on the 19th inst. at his seat of Woodcot House, was the son of George Wood, a writer in Edinburgh, and was called to the Scotch Bar in 1811. He was appointed Crown Counsel in 1823, and Steward of Kirkcudbright in 1824. He was appointed Solicitor-General for Scotland in 1841, and the next year was made one of the Judges of the Court of Session, under the title of Lord Wood. In 1851 he was named one of the Scotch Commissioners of Lunacy. Lord Wood's judicial career, one of high credit and honour, lasted twenty years. He married, in 1815, Miss Anderson, daughter of John Anderson, Esq., of Lochyra.

Mrs. Wood, the celebrated vocalist, who first became known to the public, as Drury Lane and Covent Garden, as Miss Paton, died on Thursday week, at Balcliffe Hall, Bretton West, near Wakefield, where she had resided for the last twenty years. Mrs. Wood had retired from public life for many years, and devoted her talents to the teaching of music at Leeds.

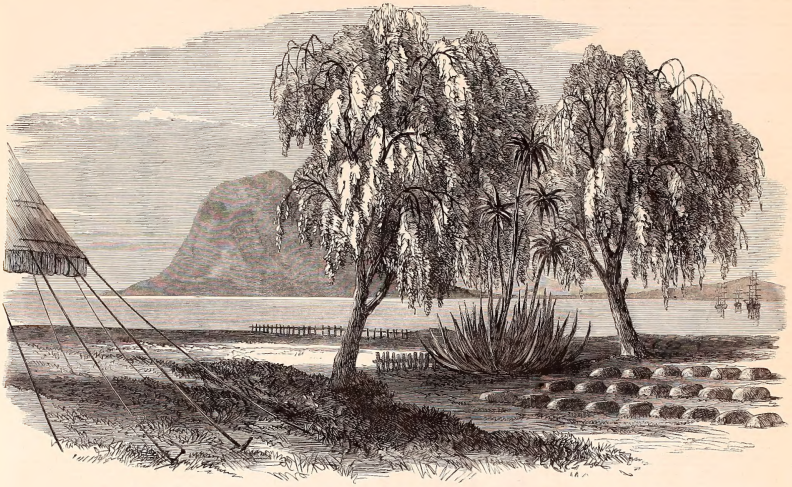
The Army and Navy Journal gives a grand review which took place on the 11th inst. at the new training-camp of Levent-Chiftlik on the heights above the town of Rodosto, in honour of the sultan's birthday. The display of a sham fight, the number of troops present and the show of artillery. Everything was considered most satisfactory, and the Sultan expressed himself much gratified. In the evening a congratulatory order of the day was issued by Omer Pasha.

The Japanese Embassy arrived at Alexandria on the 14th inst., where the Chief Ambassador found despatches from Jeddo appointing him, an already announced, Minister to the United States of America, and determined to promote European interests. He has taken measures for the establishment of steamers between Egypt and Japan, and has made large purchases when in France for that purpose. After a short stay in Alexandria, the mission proceeded to embark here.

Dr. Livingstone arrived in London last Saturday evening, having in company with Mr. Waller, of the Times, Sir Roderick Murchison, referring to a letter which he had received from the great traveller, says :—"Far from being downcast at the failure of the efforts hitherto made to check the slave trade on the east coast of Africa, my dauntless and energetic friend writes that he 'cannot find it in his heart to abandon his object.' He is therefore bent upon returning to Africa, after a stay of about four months at home, during which time he will consult friends on the subject of those future labours in which he purposes to employ his steamer, now left at Bombay. Of this vessel, built at his own expense for river and lake navigation chiefly, Dr. Livingstone writes :—'The Lady Nyassa is a first-rate little sea-boat, and she rises like a duck on the huge waves of the ocean.' The projected new expedition of Dr. Livingstone is not, he says, so much exploration, as to set in train operations by merchants and others by which the slave trade shall be eventually worked out."

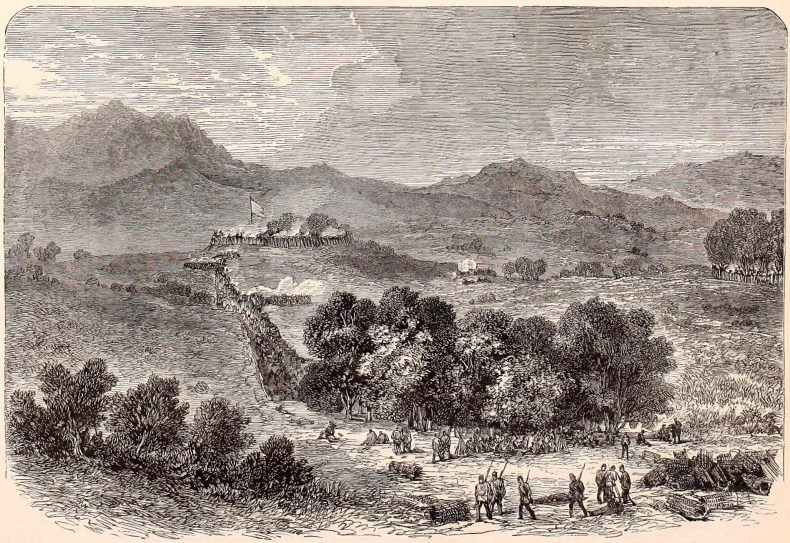
ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

WHEN Mr. Gideon Wells got out of his way to assure Captain Winslow that in destroying the "piratical craft Alabama" he destroyed the best maritime effort of the most skilled English workmen and the best battery of England, with the only successful 100-pounder yet produced in Great Britain, served by a crew of superior English seamen, he must H.M.S. Excellent, we are quite aware of, but meaning nothing on board WHEN Mr. Gideon Wells got out of his way to assure Captain Winslow that in destroying the "piratical craft Alabama" he destroyed the best maritime effort of the most skilled English workmen and the best battery of England, with the only successful 100-pounder yet produced in Great Britain, served by a crew of superior English seamen, he must have had in his mind's eye, the presence of the H.M.S. Excellent, we are quite aware of, but meaning nothing on board the Kearsarge. We all know what a pointed side means in a tragedy or farce. We all know what a pointed side means in the presence of the enemy. When the swaggering captain tells his friends he is loaded to the muzzle, and unmistakable peace-lover, "My pistols are loaded to the muzzle, and I can snuff a candle at twenty paces," what can be more likely, John Bull shakes in his ironclads, and trembles even at Wimbledon. But the recapitulation is so gratuitous as not only to be unnecessary, but unwise. Captain Winslow's 100-pounder is not the only one we can turn out, and the sinking of the Alabama had very little to do with her guns, and the sinking of the Alabama had very little to do with her guns, and her screw—now wooden sides are not calculated to resist steel shot, no, as the late Mr. Selby said in one of his farces, "it's no use to try, to stop a cannon ball with a pocket handkerchief." Mr. Wells appears to have forgotten the Merrimac. Mr. Wells appears to have forgotten the Merrimac. Mr. Wells appears to have forgotten the Merrimac.



MEETING OF THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION AT WIMBLEDON: LADY ELCHO PRESENTING THE PRIZES.—SEE PAGE 129.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: THE TEXANS OF LONGSTREET'S CORPS RETAKING THE OUTER LINE OF INTRENCHMENTS ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE JAMES RIVER.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.



THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

THE CEMETERY AT TAURANGA, WITH THE GRAVES OF THE OFFICERS AND SOLDIERS KILLED AT THE PUKE WHARANGI PAH.

WE published last week a view of the harbour of Tauranga, with the camp of the British troops there stationed, and another View showing the interior of Puke Wharangi Pah, which was captured by them on the 29th of April with a heavy cost of life. We now present another Engraving from a sketch with which we have been favoured by Colonel Williams, who is commanding of the artillery in New Zealand. It may best be explained by the following extract from his note :—

"The accompanying rough sketch of the cemetery at Tauranga cannot fail to be of melancholy interest to the families of those brave men who fell in the assault on the Pah of Puke Wharangi on the evening of the 29th of April. This cemetery is situated at the end of a bluff in the harbour of Tauranga. In the sketch, Mount Monganui appears facing the spectator, and the Esk, Harrier, and Jason are seen lying in the harbour. Two weeping willows, and a cabbage-tree with a clump of aloes, mark the spot where the British soldiers and sailors are interred in thirty-two graves, which are disposed in three parallel lines. Lieutenant-Colonel Booth, of the 43rd Regiment, is buried on the left hand, close to the aloes; his men are buried to the right of him. The six officers and sergeant-major of that regiment lie in the centre line of graves. The naval officers and seamen are buried in the line of graves farthest from the spectator, being arranged in their order of seniority, beginning from the left hand side of this view. These graves had all been prepared by the 2nd of May, when the funeral took place. The coffins were, on that day, beame in procession from the marquee which is shown on the left-hand side of the sketch. The ceremonial was conducted with impressive solemnity. General Duncan Cameron, Commodore Sir W. Wiseman, and all the officers who could be spared from duty, attended this service, which was performed by the Ven. Archdeacon Brown."

ORAKAU PAH, TAKEN BY THE BRITISH TROOPS ON THE 2ND OF APRIL.

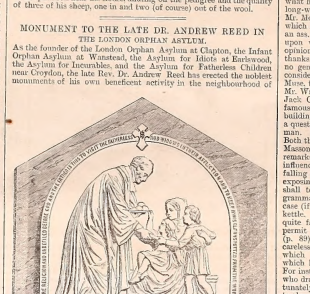
We have also engraved the sketch by Brigadier-General G. J. Carey, referred to in our last, showing the situation of the Orakau Pah, in the Waikato country, which was stormed by the troops under his command, after a siege of two days, on the 2nd of April. The forces engaged in this service were 250 of the 65th and 65th Regiments, under Major Blythe, 250 of the 18th (Royal Irish), a company of the 70th, one of the 12th, and some of the Royal Artillery and Engineers, with the native Waikato Militia and Forest Rangers. The enemy were found, at daybreak on the 31st of March, intrenched in a very strong position—an earthwork with strong flank defences, deep ditches, with parapets and a wide outside, and surrounded by a fence of close palisades, treble-trees, and high fern. The advanced guard of our troops more than once tried to storm this place by assault without success. Captain Ring, of the 18th (Royal Irish), fell mortally wounded in the second attempt. Lieutenant Fisher (40th) of the Engineers, and seven men besides were killed. Another assault was gallantly led by Captain Butler, of the 18th; but this also failed. General Carey then determined to surround the pah, and to adopt the usual Engineering method of approaching it by sap. This was commenced by Lieutenant Hurst, of the 12th Regiment, an officer attached to the Royal Engineers, with a supply of intrenching-tools and gabions, which was soon brought up. The sap was pushed forward vigorously, and the troops so posted as to prevent any possibility of the enemy escaping during the night. The enemy, however, kept firing on our troops around the place during that day and night, causing the few casualties. Our men were contriving to cover themselves in temporary rifle-pits, dug out with their bayonets and hands. Next day some reinforcements, under Captain Inman and Captain Greaves, arrived from head-quarters, and Captain Inman took the command of the artillery and threw a few shells into the enemy's position. Early the next morning Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Henry Havelock came up, bringing some hand-grenades, which were found very useful to the enemy. The commander of the forces in New Zealand, Lieutenant-General Duncan Cameron, arrived about the middle of that day, in time to witness the remainder of the operations; and Colonel Mould, of the Royal Engineers, gave his assistance in completing the sap. A six-pounder Armstrong gun then opened fire on the front work, destroying the loopholing, making a considerable breach, and silencing in a great measure the fire of the enemy. As it was thought many women and children were in the pah, the enemy were called upon to surrender previous to the concentrated fire of the Armstrong gun and hand-grenades. They were told that their lives would be granted, and requested at all events to send away women and children and send them out. They replied that they would not do so. The fire could fight on. The pah was then ordered to be stormed. The enemy, effecting their escape from the opposite side of the work, dashed through a space from which the troops had been driven back under cover, to enable them to do so. They were, however, followed up for nearly six miles. General Carey regrets to say that the pah and its fine garrison were those or four women were killed unavoidably, the similarity of dress of both men and women, and their hair being cut equally short, rendering it impossible to distinguish them from the men at any distance. The troops were recalled about sundown, and bivouacked round the enemy's late position, as represented in our Engraving. The loss of the Maoris was considerable, amounting to 101 killed, besides eighteen to twenty carried off by native practice, dressed in the pah. Twenty-six wounded and taken prisoners; seven taken prisoners. In addition to this number, the natives were seen carrying off dead and wounded at the point of the points of pursuit. The loss on our side was sixteen killed and fifty-four wounded.

THE FARM.

As regards weather and attendance—two out of the three great cardinal points—the Royal Agricultural Society throve bravely at Newcastle. Its popularity did not appear to suffer from any of the set-backs it incurred on the Wimbledon principle, to get about that yard; but still the fault was on the right side. Matters of detail were very carefully looked to, and the prize sheep were penned with an eye to the greater identity than of yore. The entire had their pronouncés as well as the horses which competed, and many outlying visitors for not seeing the two first ball classes judged, and fresh interest was added to the proceedings by exhibiting the prize-mounted and defeated implement-makers are deeply injured, as usual; and the Messrs. Garrett differ so entirely with the judges (who did not just see that their engines and tackle were so "wonderfully superior" to Fowler's, to say nothing of the great clip-drum machine's genius, ingenuity, and Surrey's patent swivel-engines not being held to comprise a complete system) that they return to the society pathetically and "respectfully the slight marks of approval with which it endeavours," and "offer compensation, and try even to bribe them from your trial-yards." So be it. "Fare ye well, and if for ever," &c. When we have collected sufficient data to be the most competent judges, and a third to act as umpire and to be nicely summoned into council when the prize cone to a regular book." The innocent and "lively" seems to have added to the complications by again leading in some of Mr. Dodgson's cattle when they were short of hands; but if that gentleman had wanted to fight under Bodle's colours, as he hinted, he would most certainly have assigned him to Placido, which has far away the best "fighting" face of his lot, and is a match among the old bulls. Ebor struck us as much as anything; and so did Prince Albert. As regards Baron Crossley, we cannot be nearly more with the judge who placed him fourth, and told Mr. Willis so when he met him, than we do with one of his colleagues, who thought him the best by £50 at least. The Royal Horticultural Hall was beautifully brought to the post, and his foot cooled down as the week was on; but we longed for Royal Borrett and for the Royal North Lincolnshire as well as the Yorkshire, where she was second last year. Mr. M'Intosh did not achieve another success like that of '62, but many lingered fondly over his commended Princess by second Duke of Devonshire. The pig show and beef and mutton were not quite such as a whole. Mr. Wainman lost a boar by apoplexy at the station, and one of Mr. Sexton's died in the yard towards the close of the week. The sheep and pony show were a great deal above average, and dray-horse prizes move especially are a mere waste of money. The Shire-horse class, which was a real medley at Worcester, sank down under the new rule to two, and will be modified for the future to a single one, which will probably tempt Cifaldi north. Mr. Stirling's Clydesdales, Mr. Brydon's Cheviots, and Foltalloch's blackfaces were all sadly missed; but The Curse of Stirling desires their presence on Tuesday, at nine o'clock.



None of the Dutchesses came to Newcastle, but we hear of two fresh ones—one to be named by Second Duke of Wellington from Duchess 87th (half sister to 77th), and the other a red heifer by Fourth Duke of Oxford from Duchess 86th. This is the second calf (both of them heifers) that this cow has had in the last eleven months, and the first of the "Fourth Duke" cross at Wetherby. Duchesses 73rd, 77th, and 80th will follow suit this autumn, and so will Duchess 86th and 70th to the First and Second Dukes of Wharfdale respectively.

We are now fast drifting into the thick of the rum hirings; and Messrs. Lythall and Preece are already very busy with their sandglasses over the "Shrops." On Friday next the former sells Mr. Bradburn's sheep, and on Monday Mr. Preece will make the most of the prestige which Mr. Overton, of Frecford (which is also within a mile of Lichfield), has just acquired at Newcastle, where he won the first prize for aged rams, and the third prize and an H.C. among the shearlings, whose first-prize sheep he purchased for 80 gs. Mr. Rawlence's Hampshire Down sale is on Tuesday; and Mr. John Lane, Mr. E. Handy, and Mr. H. Hewer bring their Cotswolds into the sale-ring on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday. Mr. Druce, of Eynsham, and Mr. Oxford Howard, of Biddenham, have about fifty or sixty Oxford Downs each to sell by private contract. Mr. Stratton commenced showing his Leicesters on Tuesday, and Mr. Torr announces his Aylesby show for the first Wednesday in September.

The first portion of the Foscote flock, consisting of 94 rams and 216 ewes, will be sold on Wednesday. The Old Vat and his ancestors occupied one farm under the Dukes of Grafton for a period of a century. He lived with his father, who had as great a taste for sheep as himself, for many years, and as he died a bachelor, and left no direct heir to succeed to his flock, its dispersion has become inevitable. He came here in 1786, just three years after his father began to farm his flock, and originally hired the rams from Mr. Joseph Robinson, of Wellingborough Lodge, who was a member of the Sheep Society from the commencement. In 1810, when, according to the quaint catalogue, they had reaped the full advantage of Bakewell, A. Q. Z. Yet, O "the sheep ironically called Lamber," Little E. Cambril, "Cude alias Cudbert," and others, the father and son thought that no further improvement was needed; and since then there has been no infusion of fresh blood—and no curly forcing with artificial food. Two of the rams were sent to a specimen to Newcastle, but the attendant was sadly in want of a medium to consult the late Mr. Bakewell, and learn whether the Favorite or the Cleveland and Darlton reading of a Dishley ram is the true one. The north countryman stood when they parted amazing by all to heavy 294-5; but still the midland farmers understood sheep, and Mr. Barford could; but still he had to find out. It was a singular testimony to his ceaseless clipping-hound remonstrances that in the very year of his death an inspector of shearing should be appointed at the Royal. Self-reliance and tenacity of purpose were the great features of his character, and his sincerity and strong convictions quite compensated for his dogmatism. Some few years since his picture was presented to him by 150 friends and customers. It represents him in the pet-lamb yard, and is a capital likeness of the pedigree and the quality of three of his sheep, one in and two (of course) out of the wool.

MONUMENT TO THE LATE DR. ANDREW REED IN THE LONDON ORPHAN ASYLUM.

As the founder of the London Orphan Asylum at Clapton, the Infant Orphan Asylum, and the Asylum for Idiots at Earlswood, the Asylum for Incurables, and the Asylum for Imbecile Children, near Croydon, the late Rev. Dr. Andrew Reed has erected the noblest monuments of his own benefactor activity in the neighbourhood of MONUMENT TO THE LATE DR. ANDREW REED IN THE CHAPEL OF THE LONDON ORPHAN ASYLUM.

London. The memorial tablet represented in our Engraving more particularly expresses the reverence and gratitude which are felt for his name by those who have been benefited by the London Orphan Asylum for their early education and a fair start in life. It was fifty-one years ago, in 1813, when Dr. Andrew Reed first conceived the project of this institution, and invited his friends to join in the efforts to be made for establishing it. Amongst those who responded to this appeal were Mr. Wilberforce and Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, while the Royal Dukes of Kent and Sussex bestowed their influential patronage upon the scheme. Public meetings were held, at a beginning sermons were preached, and speeches were delivered at meetings and public dinners to advocate the charitable cause. A temporary building was soon provided, in which 200 poor children, whom death had deprived of parents and home, were sheltered, nourished, and trained. A few years later the Asylum was opened at Clapton, Middlesex, and was furnished entirely with the funds which Dr. Reed's financial ability had enabled him to collect. The foundation-stone was laid in 1825, when it was opened with befitting ceremony, by the Duke of Cambridge and Sir Robert Peel. The Infant Orphan Asylum, which Dr. Reed set on foot immediately afterwards, was designed exclusively for children under seven years of age who could not, by the rules of the London Orphan Asylum, be admitted into it. The success of this asylum, however, induced the trustees, as much later period, to withdraw from their active management, in consequence of some measures to which, as a conscientious Nonconformist, he could not assent. The London Orphan Asylum, however, as the earliest though not the most important of his foundations, may well possess this record of a good and useful man.

TheQueen has given orders for the appointmentof Captain Robert Jenkins, of the Royal Navy, to be a Companion of the Bath.

The Rangoon Gazette announces that a telegraphic wire has been oask between Hdinginfus and Sweabeng.

Her Majesty has conferred the dignity of Baronet of the United Kingdom upon Sir Charles Locock, Bart., physician to the Queen, and Sir Charles Lyell, Baronet of Kinnordy, in the county of Forfar.

The Prince of Wales has consented to accept, on behalf of Mr. Charles Salaman, honorary secretary to the Musical Society of London, to become honorary member of that body. The council resolved at meetings for choral practice and the annual conversazioni. The council will not meet to resolve upon the scheme of the society's operations of 1865 until next October. The society continues to meet with the same degree of success which has attended it since its establishment.

Admiral Bertie Cornelius Cator died on Saturday last, at the Manor Hotel, Buckingham-gate. The deceased Admiral entered the Navy in the spring of 1800, under his uncle, Captain Albemarle Bertie, and, after being considerable active service, retired, in 1856.—Major-General Richard Southgate, R.H., died on the 20th last., after a short illness. He was born April 14, 1790.—Colonel Fielding Browne, C.B., died at his residence, Glenstrie-crescent, Regent's Park, yesterday week, aged seventy-nine.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

The Epochs of Printing. By Ralph Nicholson Wornum, (1 vol. Chapman and Hall.) This excellent work consists of critical and biographical essays in which the rise, progress, decline, and revival of Poetry's sister art, from the earliest days to the present time, are carefully traced, and the lives—as far as any knowledge of them is attainable—of the principal originators, improvers, editors, detectorators, and revivers are sketched with more or less fulness according to the exigencies or the necessities of the case. The productions of living painters, no matter what their nationality may be, are passed over without mention; and the author has, no doubt, herein exercised a wise discretion. Let the names of the living be of painting as a familiar study, and who can therefore speak, if not with authority, at any rate with propriety, upon the subject, estimate the value of Mr. Wornum's criticisms; we sit as a pupil at a master's feet, listen with deference, and are content to be instructed. But we see, nevertheless, competent to express an opinion upon other productions of the fine arts may venture to the learning and diligence which Mr. Wornum exhibits, to the strong sense which he invariably characterises his remarks, to the usefulness of his work as a book of reference, and to the entertainment as well as information to be derived from his biographies. The book, moreover, is enriched by no fewer than forty illustrations, which possess various styles, from the crude Egyptian to the grand perfection of the sixteenth century, and from the days of "Sir David Wilkie, the prince of British genre painters."

The Dean's English. By W. Gilmorton Moss. (1 vol. Hatchard and Co.) The contents of this little volume will be found highly amusing by all to whom the Queen's English is dear without being a delight. It appears that the Dean of Canterbury, not only

In Greek
Is unable to talk,

(as was evident from his translation of Homer), but also in English. The startling fact disclosed itself to Mr. Moon upon reading the Dean's "Plea for the Queen's English," and forthwith the layman proceeded to rebuke the presumptuous churchman who would fain teach others what he himself had not learned. The Dean, it seems, retorted—with long-winded facetiousness—upon the censorious layman that Mr. Moon had "an abnormal elongation of the auricular appendages," which Mr. Moon's correspondents considered equivalent to calling him an ass. The Dean also remarked that he did "not write for idiots;" upon which Mr. Moon "begged to state, quite unnecessarily, in our opinion—for his politeness. Mr. Moon, however, appended to his thanks a hint that the Dean (notwithstanding the politeness) was no gentleman and wanted grammar, and that all did not (as had considerably more) personal abuse was caused—by what? Sing, O Muse! Mr. Moon's grammar, the Dean of Canterbury and Mr. Washington Moon! It was grammar—English grammar, whereby Jack Cade must have been prompted by a "prophetic soul" to the famous utterance, "Is not the word the youth of the realm be by building of grammar schools;" he must have foreseen this strife upon a question of grammar when he ordered the death of the learned layman. Yet we can see no reason for loss of temper on either side. Both the clergyman and the layman might have imitated Professor Masson, who, in a paper upon Colloquial English, good-naturedly remarks that so great is the force of habit, and so powerful the influence of example in language, that he is himself continually falling (or on the point of falling) into the very faults which he is exposing. Licinius Sidus transposes his own aquarium law, and shall teachers be expected never to transgress, not their own, but grammarians' law? Besides, the churchman and the layman are a case (if we may be pardoned for the expression) of pot and kettle. The Dean certainly has made mistakes; but is Mr. Moon quite faultless? Of the following sentence he can only say "Has permit me to remark that whoever they were intended for, &c." (p. 89). Mr. Moon would probably plead haste or printer's carelessness as an excuse; but there are other mistakes in which his sentences, if they were weighed in the balance which he uses for Lord—i.e., they draw Mr. Leech but not horses?" Now, might not Mr. Moon have written, "There are few scholars who draw horses so well as Mr. Leech," he perversely taken to mean "there are few artists who draw horses so well as they draw Mr. Leech?" And this is, no doubt, one of the cases which drew from the Dean the bitter remark that Mr. Moon's criticisms were "the cavils of one not in the enjoyment of common sense." The fact is that the sentence has but one sensible meaning, it is unfair and puerile to accuse the writer of making a second unsensical meaning out of his words. Yet this is what Mr. Moon frequently does. With respect to the expression "it is my mind" (p. 8), we prefer the Dean's reasoning to Mr. Moon's. The question, however, is difficult if it be once allowed that "it is me" is correct. We object also to the restriction which Mr. Moon imposes upon the English language, which will not allow us to supply a singular verb from a preceding plural verb, or to take for granted a substantive verb that is in a preceding sentence; yet both these liberties have been not unommonly taken by writers in the most correct languages, and, in our humble opinion, not only freedom but grace is the result. On the whole, we consider Mr. Moon's book entertaining rather than instructive.

Beauties of Tropical Nature. By W. Dunbar. (1 vol. Robert Hardwicke.) We cannot agree with the author that his "first duty is to tender his grateful thanks to the numerous critics who accorded so favourable a reception to the first edition." The critics give, or are supposed to give, their judgment upon a book without any bias, and an author has no more reason to be grateful for a favourable review than to evoke imprecations for an unfavourable. Tastes and sentiments differ, however, in various cases, and it is by no means certain that a book which displeases one critic may not greatly please another. The author, however, may be considered the critic who happened to be pleased was more deserving of thanks than the equally impartial critic who happened to be displeased. An author may fairly congratulate himself upon writing favourably received a host of critics, but he is not called upon—even if he have a right—to thank them for saying that they did not like his book. It is the risk, however, of receiving in a future edition our share of undeserved thanks, we shall not be guilty of making our voice to the chorus of praise which has been called forth by "The Beauties of Tropical Scenery." The poems are very pleasant and harmonious; there is in the language a luxuriance and a consequent appropriateness of epithet, and the love-songs glow with a warmth not unworthy of the tropics. The elegant frontispiece by Mr. F. Gilbert is deserving an ornament; but the poem in honour of Mdlle. Stella Colas might with advantage have been omitted.

Holiday Papers. By Rev. Thomas Dale, M.A. (1 vol. Robert Hardwicke.) These papers might be called "Recreations of a London Parson," for they were written during, or at the close of, occasional holidays in the midst of heavy pastoral work;" but the author, either forseeing an accession of plagiarism or remembering what he has read, has resisted the temptation. The papers are reprints from popular periodicals; are written in a free and easy, semi-jocose, familiar style; and are sufficiently miscellaneous. We recommend them to have read them all; but the specimens we have perused induce us to declare that they are readable as well as amusing, and nevertheless so light that there is not a headache in the whole volume of them.

Readings in the Arctic Seas. By Henry Commor Morris. (1 vol. Smith, Elder, and Co.) Where is Denver City? is a question which Mr. Morris—no doubt, rightly—supposes very few Englishmen can answer. Howbeit, the events of the last three years have tended to make "Britishers" better acquainted than they were before with American geography; and it is, therefore, not improbable that there are more Englishmen than Mr. Morris imagines whose eyes have become familiar with the map of what was heretofore the United States, who could point out "Fremont's route in 1845," who could even put their finger upon the spot marked "Denver City," and who could say composedly, "There it is, in Colorado." Nevertheless, Colorado has certainly not yet been explored by travelling Englishmen, and the traveller should prick up his ears and snuff adventure or novelty from afar when Mr. Morris secures him "that if any Aimeur in London who is weary of the perfumed airs of Bond-street, and has lost his taste for mourn and stubbion, will cross the plains and pay the Rocky Mountains a visit, he will return with a keener zest for the pleasures of civilised life, and with his "mens sana in corpore sano" all the fresher for what he has seen and experienced." And we can assure those who feel inclined to undertake the expedition not bodily but mentally, not by land and water, but by paper and print, that they will find Mr. Morris a very agreeable companion and guide "across the green prairies of Kansas and the sandy saharas of Nebraska," to the gold-fields of the Rocky Mountains.

Noble Dames of Ancient Story. By J. G. Edgar. (1 vol. James Hogg and Sons.) A melancholy interest belongs to this book in consequence of the premature death, but a short time ago, of its author. He was not unknown as the compiler of interesting works from our English annals for the instruction and recreation of the young; and this collection of sketches, exhibiting the influence of women in certain remarkable epochs of the past, is a work that gives evidence of considerable research, and will be found a pleasant addition to the stock of youthful readers. For what youth does not dote upon those heroines of Froissart whose names are equal to superhuman strength, or of the ladies of Scott and Poetics?

Bell's English Poets. (Griffin and Co.) We have before us two volumes, one containing the poems of Shakspeare, the other a portion of Cowper's works. They are intended, we suppose, as specimens of the edition of "English Poets" issued under the superintendence of Mr. Robert Bell. There is no date upon the titlepage, and we have looked in vain for information as to the number of volumes to make the complete or in course of publication; but we can gather from the specimens before us that the works of each poet have, or are to have, by way of preface, a completely-prepared memoir by Mr. Robert Bell; that the volumes are, or are to be, all neat and handy; and that the price of each volume is, or is to be, very reasonable.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

THE METEORITE OF ORGUEIL has been further analysed by M. Chevreul, who has reported to the Academy of Sciences that its density is equal to 2.56 when determined in a liquid which penetrates it, and to 1.86 in the ordinary case—e.g., in olive oil. Its composition is analogous to the organic part of several species of lignites (carbon, 63.5; hydrogen, 5.38; nitrogen, 10.2). Iron is generally found in meteorites in a state of metallic tenacity in this meteorite it is partly in the form of magnetic oxide. No metallic iron or nickel was found, and only traces of phosphorus and a weak proportion of chromium. Peroxide of iron, 13.224; protoxide of iron, 17.234; silica, 44.471; hygroscopic water, 0.971; and traces of sulphuret of sulphuret, sulphur, alumina, magnesia, lime, soda, potash, ammonia, earthy matters, and combined water.

ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN AUGUST.—Mercury (in Leo and Virgo) and Venus (in Cancer and Leo) are both visible throughout the month. On the 13th the latter will be at 7h. 42m. p.m. in conjunction in right ascension with the Sun—Mars (in Leo and Virgo), as 7h. 32m. a.m.; Saturn (in Virgo), at 8h. 12m. p.m.; and Uranus (in Leo), at 10h. 17m. a.m. Jupiter (in Libra) will set on the 1st at 10h. 16m. p.m., and will be at new Moon on the 2nd, at 2h. 51m. p.m.; the first quarter on the 10th at 7h. 57 p.m.; full Moon on the 17th, at 1h. 59m. p.m.; and last quarter on the 24th, at 9h. 43m. a.m. About the middle of the month the constellations Corvus, Pegasus, Aquarius, and Capricornus will be near the meridian at midnight. Venus will be in conjunction with the Moon on the 30th, at 4h. 38m. a.m.

VITAL FORCE AND CONTRACTILITY.—Dr. Lionel Beale, eminent for his researches on the nervous system, thus concludes an article in the Quarterly Journal of Microscopical Science:—"I think that every cause or organism consists of matter that lives and matter that is formed. The first is the seat of peculiar change, and the power which never occurs in things inanimate. The second manifests phenomena which are, properly considered, physical and chemical. The movements—the composing and the formative, the analytical and synthetical power, of the living matter are due to the operation of a power, or to powers which are not likely to be measured by the work achieved, nor to be altered or converted into other forms of force. It is a power that may be transmitted from parent to particle, or that may cease its manifestation for ever. How it originated we do not know. Contractility is a property of matter in which it always participated from particle to particle, and that it cannot be transferred to particles at a distance. Heat is but one of the conditions under which this wonderful power manifests itself, but not the power itself. Contractility is a property of muscle; contraction and elasticity are properties of fibre; irritability is not a property of bone, or nail, or bone, &c.; but motion, increase, formation, as manifested in germinal matter, are the manifestations of a power that possesses them to particles of matter that do not. Muscle does not transmit the nervous impulse; nor yellow fibre; nor pigment cell; nor bone; nor nail; nor tooth; it is devoid of those characteristics. Hence I distinguish the movements of germinal or living matter from all other forms of movement. I suppose it only I may correctly term them vital movements until some one proves that similar movements occur in matter which is not living."

THE REPTILIFEROUS ROCKS AND FOOTPRINT STRATA OF SCOTLAND.—Professor Harkness, in a paper on this interesting subject, read at a recent meeting of the Geological Society, asserts that the footprint sandstones of Rose-shire constitute the uppermost beds of the carboniferous formation, and that the strata embraced in a line of section from the Nigg to Cromlet Hill-ock, from above the Old Red Sandstone to the summit of the Turbebinic inclusive, are conformable throughout, and are referable to each of the three divisions of the Old Red Sandstone—namely, the conglomerates and yellow sandstones (of a thickness of 1500 ft.) belonging to the Lower Old Red Sandstone; the grey, flaggy sandstones and shales of the middle series, equivalent of the Caithness flags—containing Cephalopæ, Crustaceans, and Acanthodes, and the fossils referable to the Middle Old Red; and, lastly, the upper beds—consisting of conglomerates, and foot-bearing and other sandstones appertaining to the higher members of the system. The foot-bearing sandstones have a thickness of 400 ft., and represent the reptiliferous sandstones of the Elgin area, through which formation they are found to run.

THE PRESERVATION OF COPPER AND IRON IN THE SEA has been made the subject of long research by M. Becquerel, who has published a report to the Academy of Sciences at Paris. The cause of the injury (mechanical, physical, or chemical) influence all the chemical actions and tends to the production of electricity by means of voltaic combinations. After considering the important experiments of Davy and others in regard to copper sheathing, M. Becquerel describes the principles which must be observed in order to determine the amount of electric action required to decompose a determinate weight of water, and to maintain the electric state of the metal in a protected metal; and thus to find the laws on which a system of protection may be based. In order to conduct the experiments, he came to Cherbourg, the Imperial Minister of the Marine placed at M. Becquerel's disposal all the means desired, with the assistance of the hydrographic engineers in the port of Toulon. The result of these experiments show, with regard to copper, that, as on account of the feeble electric power of the thermoelectric liquid which vets it currents producing electro-chemical decomposition, it is not in general necessary to surface so as to prevent oxidation by means of the surface with an electro-motive power equal to that point at which the metal would become insensible to the action of oxygen, and would also have been employed. Laminæ of copper, mixed with iron, and laminæ of iron protected by copper, have similar effects, with the difference that the sphere of chemical activity is less, when the extent depends on the difference between the electro-motive powers of the two metals employed to form the voltaic pile. Therefore, for further information, it is necessary to refer to Comptes Rendus, Vol lix., No. 1. M. Becquerel trusts that the means proposed will be found to be successful in preserving vessels from the action of seawater and from the attachment of marine animals.

THE CAVERN OF BRUNIQUEL (in the department of the Tarn and Garonne) and its organic contents have been described by Professor Owen, in the state in which he found it at his visit in January last, in a paper read to the Royal Society. From his examination of the cave and its contents, The contemporaneity of the human remains with those of the extinct and other animals with which they were associated, together with the fire bone implements, Professor Owen said, was shown by the evidence of the plastic consolidation of the calcified mud in the interstices of the bones, and by the chemical constitution of the human bones corresponding with that of the other animal remains, and by the similarity of physical and chemical state in the surrounding breccia. Among the principal remains of the men of the fossil period described are the following:—The bones were separate from the cranium, with several other parts of the same skeleton, which were so grouped in their position as to indicate that the body had been placed in a crouching posture, and that, after decomposition and dissolution of the soft parts, the bones had yielded to the superincumbent pressure of the accumulating calcareous mud, which is described and compared with different types of the human skull, as to the relative form and quantity of the cranial and facial type, and the capacity to correspond with the Celtic type, though proportionally shorter than in modern Celtic and the varieties exhibited by the Celts of Scandinavia from Kiga, Switzerland; 3rd, jaws and teeth of individuals of different ages. After referring to other small portions of human cranium, Professor Owen described the lower jaw and teeth of an adult and the upper and lower jaws of immature individuals, showing the characters of certain deciduous teeth. The proportions of the molars are not those of the Australian, but of other races, and opposed to those of ancient and modern Europeans. As in most primitive or early races, in which mastication was little helped by the art of cookery or by various and refined kinds of food, the crowns of the molars were worn down beyond the enamel, flat and smooth to the stumps, exposing their central tract of osteodentine of whose any sign of decay. The Professor reserved his notice of the remains of animals killed for food and the flint and bone implements for a future communication.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T. E. LESLIE.—We do not at the moment see that the Queen would have incurred any unnecessary peril by taking the Pawn in question; but she would have been subjected to a needless risk, and, in effecting her escape, must have lost many moves.

H. C. B., Clifton.—Your solution of Problem No. 1064 is correct.

ERRATUM IN GAMBIT.—A misprint occurs in the Gambit published last week, which may be solved by 1. Q to Kt 8th, 2. Kt takes B, 3. Q to Kt 4th (ch), &c. No. 6 also stands of a second solution by 1. Q to K 2nd (ch), 2. Kt to B 3rd, &c. In No. 7 if White play 2. P to K 4th, how can you prevent Black in two more moves?

G. H. G.—Your moves are fairly played, but there is not sufficient interest in either to justify its publication.

L. C. G., of Tynkcheapsky.—"Thermometer at 97½ and a hot wind" are not favourable conditions for the production of a good problem, but we fancy we have been good enough to send on very satisfactory testimony. The first and third have the merit of variety, since they appear to admit of two solutions each; but the second is simply a repetition, for novelty, because it contains a Black Knight and a White Queen on the same squares.

M. P.—Mate cannot be effected in the way you propose. Try this:—1. Q to B 5th (ch), 2. Kt to B 3rd, and then, if 2. Kt takes Kt, 3. P to K 4th, &c. Your other solution is correct.

J. W. P.—Thanks.

J. D.—You should certainly procure a copy of the German "Handbuch" of Bilguer and Von der Lasa.

SOLUTIONS TO PROBLEMS OF NO. 1064 to C. M., Xcoopher, Conrad, L. P. D., Sigma, Violet, Y. M. R. M., W. W., Sutton Coldfield, Rustic, Alpha, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Mrs. Pewsdrop, Chi-Chi, Hoc-Age-Sect, Mary, Ignoramus, Nemo, Sarah, Tyro, Tremaine, Gouraine, Hacker, Velocipede, Docmaga, The Pen, Quidnunc, Delta, Phœnix, J. H. C., Rahere, Wm. Wyld, A. K., Southsea, F. P. R., Ile Bell, Shapley Queen, Mrs. Bell, Mr. Bothwell and Miss Finlay, Cuaco, T. C. M., Argus, Query, W. F. W., C. F. S., G. T. R., Verbena, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Hall's Pupil, Mrs. Hall's Governess, Mrs. Hall's Cook, An Amateur, C. L. D., Mrs. Hall's Housemaid, Mrs. Hall's Nursemaid, Mrs. Hall's Footman, H. T. R., Forgus, H. F. R., Hastrue, P. M. G., F. C. H., Fanny, A. Clark, Hippolar, T. W., Dover, J. D., Jemmy B., Hull, W. H. P., Clyde, C. P. S., P. S., Kildare Cottage, ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE CORPORATION.

Established A.D. 1720, by charter of King George the First, and confirmed by special Acts of Parliament.
Chief Office, Royal Exchange, London; Branch, 29, Pall-mall.

Orderin Wigram, Esq., Governor.
Sir John Henry Pelly, Bart., Sub-Governor.
James Stewart Hodgson, Esq., Deputy-Governor.

DIRECTORS.

Henry Bainbridge, Esq.
Robert Barclay, Esq.
John Gosset Lilley, Esq.
Mark Currie Close, Esq.
Edward James Daniell, Esq.
William Davidson, Esq.
Charles Dixon, Esq.
Alexander Dixon, Esq.
Frederick Joseph Edmanus, Esq.
Charles Edmonstone, Esq.
Riversdale Wm. Grenfell, Esq.
Robert Aucustus Hoare, Esq.
William Hunter, Esq.
Charles Bell Keene, Esq.
John Lubbock, Esq.
William Phillips Price.
Samuel Lee Schutz.
Eric Carrington Smith, Esq.
Charles Thellusson, Esq., M.P.
William Wallace, Esq.
Charles Morrell Young, Esq.

Fire, Life, and Marine Assurances on liberal terms.
Advances of Money without participation in profits.
Division of Profits every five years.
Bonuses of £1,000 have been added on the same Life.
A liberal participation in Profits, with the guarantee of a large invested Capital-Stock, and exemption, under Royal Charter, from the liability of Partnership.
The advantages of modern practice, with the security of Sole and Perpetual Charter, have been tested by the experience of nearly a century and a half.
The Corporation have always allowed the Assured to serve in the Militia, Yeomanry, or Volunteer Corps, within the United Kingdom, free of charge.
A Prospectus and Tables of Rates will be forwarded on application.
ROBERT P. STEELE, Secretary.

The Reversionary Bonus on British Policies has averaged nearly Forty per cent upon the sums assured.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST?—All persons desirous of having a correct copy of their ARMORIAL bearings need submit only a sketch or description to the Heralds' College, when the proper search will be made by the family scan of nearly every name in England, Scotland, and Ireland, or also many hundreds of those families who were for many years settled in America. Extracted from the College of Arms, British Museum, Record Office, old parchment, &c., and painted in their proper heraldic colours, with the name of the Family, Arms, and Crest, plainly written underneath, both public and private. Plain sketch of arms, 3s. 6d.; coloured sketch, 5s.; or the arms, crest, and motto, neatly emblazoned for framing, 12s. The Manual of Heraldry, 400 Engravings, 3s. 6d. Instructions, 2s. Pedigrees deduced, Boundaries of Estates defined, Archives from the Record Office, Ancient Charters (correct), &c. Heralds' Guide, 1s.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S HERALDIC OFFICE for ENGRAVING ARMS on Stone, Steel, and Silver, according to the Laws of Heraldry and Ulster Kings-at-Arms. Illuminating, Crest on Seals or Rings, 7s. 6d.; Book-plate engraved with Arms and Crest, 15s.; Arms Painted, 10s. 6d.; Pedigree Research, Arms, Crests, authority, &c., 2s.; and Directions for the Board of Trade, 2s. Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

CULLETON'S SOLID GOLD SIGNET RINGS, Hall-marked, Engraved with any Crest, &c.; ditto, very handsome, for Arms, Crest, and Motto, 42 15s. The Hall-mark is the only guarantee for pure gold.—T. CULLETON, the Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S PATENT LEVER DESIGNING PRESSES, for stamping paper with Crest, Initial, or Address, are now in use the whole world through.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S VISITING CARDS. Fifty, for Gentlemen, 2s. post-free. Engraving in Copper Plate, 10 new style, 5s. Wedding Cards, 50 each, for Lady and Gentleman, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name printed inside, all complete, 10s. 6d. carriage-paid.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX OF STATIONERY, 25s. Case for stamping Arms, Crest, or Motto, Monogram or Address (as charged for by other houses), if an order is sent for a Ream of the Note, Envelopes to match, all stamped free and carriage-paid for 21s.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S MONOGRAMS AND CRESTS for ALBUMS, just published, all printed in colours:—
2 Shades—The Arms, Crowned, and Monogram of the Queen and all the Royal Family.
3 Shades—The Arms of all the Archbishops and Bishops, and the French Royal Family and Nobility of France.
5 Shades—The Arms of all the Archbishops from the year 1070 to 1862.
7 Shades — The Arms of every College in Oxford and Cambridge.
9 Shades—The Crest and Motives used in the Ships of the Royal Navy.
11 Shades—The Crest and Motives used by her Majesty's Regiments of Household Troops.
13 Shades—The Arms, Crests, and Motives of every Peer and Peeress in the Kingdom.
16 Shades—The Arms, Crests, Coronets, with Monograms of Earls, Barons, Baronets, and British Commoners, many of which are from Original Drawings in the Heralds' College and British Museum, post-free for 16 stamps, or 14 Shades for 6s., post-free.
T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street, W.C.

CULLETON'S PLATES for MAKING LINEN appear like silk enamelled, and never wash out. Initial, 1s. each; Name, 2s. 6d.; Set of Numbers, 2s. 6d.; Crest, 5s., with directions for use for stamps.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

PHOTOGRAPHIC BATHS, TRAYS, BOTTLES, FUNNELS, DIPPING-GLASSES, SENSITIZING DISHES, &c., &c. PATENT ENAMEL, very light, and not liable to break. Price 1s. per square foot. Sold by all Dealers in Photographic Apparatus, and wholesale only of the Inventor—SUTTER'S Enamelled Slate Works and Telegraph Cable Company (Limited), 3 and 5, Bishopsgate-street Within, London; Works, Greenwich, Kent.

OPERA, RACE, AND FIELD GLASSES. The largest and best selection in all CALLAGHAN'S, 324, Regent-street, W. Every glass is guaranteed, and the Field Glasses are recommended as being of precisely made for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales), through of the largest size, weigh but a few ounces.—Sole Agent for the celebrated Solar and Field Glasses made by Voigtländer, Vienna.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, No. 904.—This TOURIST'S PATENTED Field Glass is of extraordinary power, and is slightly more than 6 in. long when closed. Invaluable to sportsmen, &c. The unequalled excellence and cheapness recently introduced by Messrs. Callaghan, of 324, Regent-street, is very good."—Magazine of Campanthes, "Most useful."—Lord Clifden. "Extraordinary power and clearness."—Sir Roger Gilbert. "Astonishingly good."—A country gent. "As Digby Grand, unique as powerful as that for which I paid five guineas."—Major Hall, Lincoln's-inn-fields. "Marvellous." I never before saw a glass so completely answering the recommendation of its maker, not, although I have had many, a glass of such power."—Rev. Mr. Hall, Bucks. "Perfect in every respect."—Sporting Gazette. "Wonderful."—Sporting Times. "We have carefully tried it, and found it fully equal to others which have cost more than four times its price."—Field. "What intending tourist will now start without such an indispensable companion?"—Bell's Life. "Astonishingly powerful."—The Bystander. "Quite unique."—Observer. "A capital glass."—Sporting Review. "Equal to glasses we only to be had from H. SALOMONS, 21, Prince-street, Edinburgh. No agents.

THE PLANET JUPITER, when magnified 250 times with the new 47 TELESCOPE, appears seven times as large as the moon as to the naked eye; and other planets are beautifully proportionately. It will also distinguish the face of a sheep at a distance of a mile and a half. The 47 is a most useful and reliable, and also portable, day and night glass, and instrument is guaranteed, in writing, to perform the whole of the above, and to be equal to the most expensive telescope ever manufactured. It has a 3-in. superior achromatic object-glass, two eyepieces, &c., and packed in case, with sling complete, 42 10s. Carriage-paid. Also, new invisible green spectacles, for reading, sketching, and other purposes, and eight sheets of testimonials from scientific and other gentlemen, including Sir David Brewster, sent free by book-post.—H. and D. SALOMONS, 39, Allsaints-street, Piccadilly. Powerful small pocket Telescopes, opera, race, field, and marine opera glasses.

TWENTY-SHILLING TOURIST and RECONNOITRING TELESCOPE.—SOLOMONS have just completed a new and powerful Telescope, with rack adjustment, suitable for tourists, deer-stalking, and all requirements of ordinary outdoor use. Post-free.—20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

POCKET BAROMETER, COMPASS, and THERMOMETER, all in one. By the use of a watch, for telling the weather, the highest of mountains, direction of winds, and time, and invaluable to travellers, tourists, sportsmen, &c. Price 21s. post-free.—H. and D. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 20, Albemarle-st., Piccadilly.

SPECTACLES.—The Patent Newly-invented TINTED SPECTACLES are patronised by the majority of the nobility, including Victoria Parliament. They give extraordinary relief by day and night to weak, dim, and defective vision.
H. and D. SOLOMONS, 20, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

DEAFNESS.—The SOUND MAGNIFIER and INVISIBLE VOICE CONDUCTOR, for Deafness. It fits like the ear not perceptible, removes ringing noises in the head, and enables deaf persons to hear distinctly in church and in every assemblage.—H. and D. SOLOMONS, 21, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

REVIEW.—WIMBLEDON REVIEW. The Handsome GILT FRAMES, price 5s. each, for this large Picture, given by the "Illustrated London News." FRAME DEPARTMENT, STEREOSCOPIC COMPANY. This is the cheapest frame ever issued.—54, Cheapside, and 110, Regent-street, Portland Place. Established 1854.

MAYALL'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAIT GALLERIES, 224 and 226, Regent-street (corner of Argyll-place). CARTES DE VISITE and highly-finished PHOTOGRAPHS by glass-size taken daily, from 10 to 4.—Established 1851.

THE WIMBLEDON MEETING.—C. F. HANCOCK, 39, Bruton-street, Bond-street, Jeweller to the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, has received Her Majesty's orders to inform the Members of the National Rifle Association that the BADGES for the Meeting of 1864 are now ready for delivery, and may be had only at his Establishment, as above.

THE WIMBLEDON MEETING.—C. F. HANCOCK, 39, Bruton-street, Bond-street, Jeweller to the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales, has received Her Majesty's orders to inform the Members of the National Rifle Association that the BADGES for the Meeting of 1864 are now ready for delivery, and may be had only at his Establishment, as above.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—M. F. DENT, 33, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, Watch, Clock, and Chronometer Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen, 33 and 34, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross (corner of Spring-gardens).

BENSON'S WATCHES.—"The movements are of the finest quality which the art of horology is at present capable of producing."—Illustrated London News, Nov. 5, 1863. Watches, adapted for every clime, climates, and country, from £5 to 2 guineas each.

Benson's London Made Lever Watches.	Gold Cases.		Silver Cases.
	Pocket.	Hunters.	Pocket.	Hunters.
Patent lever, 2-sec'd'd, 4 holes	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Do., four holes	15 15 0	16 16 0	8 8 0	9 9 0
Do., extra, eight jewels	21 0 0	22 10 0	10 10 0	12 12 0
Do., finest lever, jewelled all	26 0 0	28 0 0	12 12 0	14 14 0
Do., eight jewels	31 10 0	33 0 0	15 15 0	17 17 0
Do., chronometer	36 0 0	38 0 0	18 18 0	20 0 0
Benson's Patent Keyless	42 0 0	45 0 0	25 0 0	27 0 0
Foreign watches, warranted	5 5 0	8 8 0	2 10 0	4 0

Benson's Illustrated Pamphlet, containing 100 Engravings, contains a short history of horology with the prices of the movements of every description of watch and how it can be sent to any part of the world, post-free on application.—Benson, Classes 93 and 15, Watch and Clock Maker by special warrant of Appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London. Established 1749.

A. FORRER, HAIR JEWELLER to the QUEEN, 24, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST IN HAIR. BEWDNEY beautifully makes and mounts in fine gold Hair Bracelets, Chains, Brooches, Lockets, Rings, Studs, Sleeve-links, in the same at about one half the usual charge. An elegant collection of fashionable Jewellery constantly on view. Gentlemen's Hair Jewellery assortment of Jet in every variety. An Illustrated Book sent post-free.—BEWDNEY, 31, Oxford-street, W.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S only City Address is 71 and 72, Cornhill.

DESPATCH BOXES.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S new and elegant Registered Despatch Box, with Dispatch-boxes, warranted the following:—

Complete, with rollers, ebonised, very fine, 15in.	Morocco.	Real Russia.	Real Russia, finest Finish.
Ditto, 18inch lock, porcelain plate, &c.	£2 2 0	£4 10 0	£6 10 0
	4 10 0	6 0 0	8 15 0

DRESSING-BAGS.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers, warrant every article sold by them, and exchange the same if not approved.

For Ladies. Containing fourteen useful toilet requisites	French Morocco.	Real Russia.	Finest Hide.
Ditto, with writing materials	£2 15 0	£3 10 0	£4 10 0
	3 0 0	4 0 0	4 5 0

For Gentlemen.

Large size, containing fourteen most useful requisites	Strong Hide.	Real Russia.	Finest Hide.
Ditto, with writing materials	£3 0 0	£4 0 0	£5 0 0
	3 5 0	4 5 0	5 5 0

71 and 72, Cornhill, 67, and 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S only West-end Address, 77 and 78, Oxford-street.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, with silver or plated fittings, in every variety of size and pattern, combining the most desirable, tasteful, and serviceable collection of elegant Novelties for Presents, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and TRAVELLING WRITING CASES, in russia or morocco, of the most approved fittings. Rodrigues' Travelling Bags, Portfolios, and Intensals, at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS, in morocco, Registered Despatch Boxes, Writing Cases, Portage-stamps and Monograms. Portraits of Celebrities, is. 6d. each, at H. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W. Travelling Bags and Dressing Cases.

NO CHARGE MADE for STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Illustrated Price-list post-free. Cards, 1s. per 100. Steel Die, Crown-hill Note, full size, five guineas for 6d. At H. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

A VISITING CARD-PLATE ENGRAVED, and 100 Cards Printed for 2s. 6d. Wedding Cards, Envelopes, Seal Programmes, and Bills of Fare printed and stamped with Crest or Address. At H. RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W.

HAIR DYE.—BATCHELOR'S INSTANTANEOUS COLUMBIAN.—The best in the World, producing in a few minutes perfect Whiskers, Moustache, &c., 3s. 6d., 7s., and 14s. May be had everywhere. Agents—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, 5, Great Marlborough-st.; BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-st.

PIMPLE REMOVER.—All Diseases of the Skin are improved by our dose of ALEX. ROSS'S VEGETABLE PILLS. Sold by all Chemists. Sixpence per box.

ALEX. ROSS'S FACE-POWDER, 1s., or 14 stamps, will remove a blemish or freckle, 2s. or 24 stamps. Eye Colour, warranted not injurious, also great beauty to the eye, 3s. 6d., or 44 stamps. Bloom of Roses, 3s. 6d., or 44 stamps. 248, High Holborn.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET.

CREAM OF LILIES, for beautifying and improving the complexion, and effectually removing freckles, tan, spots, &c. In 4d. per bottle.—NAPOLEON PRICE and CO., 97, Old Bond-street.

NAPOLEON PRICE'S REGISTERED GOLDEN HAIR DYE is the only preparation of nutritious virtues for promoting a luxuriant growth of the human hair, and one of all others to be relied on for the safe production of permanent. 24 Pyramid-st., 97, Old Bond-st., 24, Sackville-st., and 166, Piccadilly.

PIESSE and LUBIN'S RHINGANUM for the HAIR.—Whether for the growth, restoration, or beautifying, it has not its equal. It keeps the hair perfectly free from all moisture, dandruff, humours, and scurfs, and gives glue to the preference, for it nourishes the memory.—Emphatically the surest for warm weather, for hot and depressive climate. A case of six bottles, 10s. 6d.; single samples, 2s.—4, New Bond-st., W.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S POMANDER. PIESSE and LUBIN have produced an exact copy of the Pomander or Scent Casket as worn by Elizabeth suspended from her girdle. It contains the Prophylactic Odours of rare excellence.

These Copies have been made, by permission of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, from the original in the Kensington Museum. Price £2 2s. On view—2, New Bond-street.

FLOWER-STANDS and BASKETS for the Dinner Table or Drawing-room. An elegant assortment in Gilt and all Colours at BIRCH'S, HAMMONDS', Decorators, 72, Baker-street, Portman-square. Vide "London Society."

ORNAMENTS for the MANTELPIECE, &c. Large and Choice Selection, including, among other articles, Groups, Statuettes, Vases, &c., in Parian and English and Foreign Porcelain, Bronze, Ormolu, Alabaster, Ivory, Tortoiseshell, Buhl, Inlaid Tables, Cabinets, Chiffoniers, and Bohemian Glass.
ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Lodgate-hill, E.C. Established 1760.

GARDNER'S LAMPS ARE THE BEST. Moderator and Paraffin Table-lamps, from 3s. 6d. each. Illustrated Catalogues, with Prices, sent free.—GARDNER'S, 453, Strand (four doors from Trafalgar-square), London. Established 1778.

CHANDELIERS, GLASS and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY. Candelabra, Girandoles, Table Glass, &c. Elegant Assortment of Ornamental Articles in Parian, Vases, and other ornamentals.—OLLER, 45, Oxford-street, W.

OLLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS and CANDELABRA. Table Glass, &c. Glass Dinner Services for 6 persons, from £6.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £5.
All articles marked in plain figures.
Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.
Glass, Export, and Furnishing Orders promptly executed.
OLLER, 45, Oxford-street, W. Vide "Times."
Birmingham—Manufactory, Great Charles-street, Broad-street. Established 1807.

GASELIERS in Crystal, Glass, Ormoulu, and Bronze, Table Glass, &c. A large assortment always on view. Every article marked with plain figures.
D. LILLEY and CO., Manufacturers, 30, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

COVERS for FAMILY JARS, or Jars and Covers complete, for Preserves, Pickles, &c. Illustrations and Prices sent free on application.—Fulham-road Wharf, Chelsea, S. Sample cup sent free for four stamps.

EASY-CHAIRS, SOFAS, and COUCHES, in great variety, and of the best approved make. PETER WATT, 242 and SOW'S Manufactory, 31, 32, and 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W. Prize Medal, 1862. Illustrated book post-free.

CARPETS.—Notwithstanding the late advance in the price of Carpets, T. VENABLES and SONS, having a large Stock, are SELLING at the Prices of last year. Kidderminster, Brussels, Tapestry, Damask, and others at old prices. Patterns can be forwarded into the country. Estimates given for Furnishing Country Houses, Offices, Colleges, and Clubs. Every Drapery and Carpets, post-free.—102, 104, and 105, Whitechapel, E.

EVANS'S PRIZE KITCHENER.—This Kitchener obtained a prize at the Exhibition of 1862. It is adapted for the cottage or mansion, from £5 to £30; also Evans's Prize Cooking-stoves, Ranges, Hot-plates, Gas-stoves, Gas-ovens, Gas-boilers, Gas-fires, Gas-cooking Apparatus, Gas-grates, Show-rooms—23 and 24, King William-street, London Bridge; Brass-founders, 1, Bell-yard, Doctors'-commons.

T. LADIES.—GREEN'S TISSUE TYE LEAVES for ornamenting Chimney-glasses, 16 stamps per set of 12 leaves, post-free. Also for Screens, 24 stamps, 6 stamps per packet; six for 40 stamps.—S. PETERS, Tovil, Maidstone.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.—The OCTOBER BREWING can now be had in any part of London, at the finest condition, in Bottle and in Cask, by RINDLATER, HACKER, and SEDGWICK, Sherry Shippers, Cheapside, E.C.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE defies all competition. The highest and most delicious ailment for breakfast. Unadulterated; highly nutritious. Annual consumption, 4,000,000 lbs. Sold in Packets, 1lb. Henriette-street, Covent-garden; and still retail by all respectable houses.

Sold by Grocers, Confectioners, and Druggists.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE CREAMS, a delicious Sweetmeat, constantly growing in favour.
FRY'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE, an Invigorating Beverage, scientifically and NUTRITIOUS PROPERTIES.
Made by J. S. FRY and SONS, Bristol and London.

FRY'S HOMŒOPATHIC COCOA, distinguished for delicacy, solubility, and NUTRITIOUS PROPERTIES.

2280 AGENTS—Chemists, Confectioners, and Others Wanted, for MORTIMER'S PURE TEA, in Packets. It is clean and strong, moderate in price, and wholesome. These advantages secure a large General preference.

BROWN and POLSON'S
PATENT CORN FLOUR
for light suppers, and excellent for Children's Diet.

GOWLAND
PREPARED CORN
for
Puddings, Custards, Blancmanges, &c.
Manufactured and Perfected by
ROBERT GOWLAND and SON,
Purveyors of New York.
It is the original preparation from the farina of maize, established more than twenty years, and is the purest, most useful, and effective the best value to the consumer.
Be sure to observe the name of the inventors, has a fine grain, and is of a pure white.
The Gowngo has the natural golden tinge, and not the chalk white produced by artificial means.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD, Sold in 1lb. and 1/2lb. Canisters, at 1s. and 2s. each.
We prepare the Mustard for the Royal Family.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

LENTREAS PATENT 1863. PRIZE MEDAL 1862.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY is the most valuable preparation for making pure and delicious gruel, and for thickening soups, beef tea, &c. It is easily digested and rich in nutriment.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding, directions for which have been given by Miss C. Pulley, Author of "Cookery for Children." Sold in packets, 6d. each, by all Grocers, Chemists, &c. Wholesale and for export at the works, Mile-end-road.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

TAYLOR BROTHERS' MUSTARD.
WARRANTED GENUINE.
Dr. Hassall, having submitted Mustard to a rigorous microscopical examination and chemical analysis, reports that it contains no trace of adulteration, and is of excellent quality.
TAYLOR BROTHERS, Norwich and London.
See that each Package bears their Trade Mark, the "Prize Ox," and Name in full.
Sold by all Grocers, &c., throughout the Kingdom.
Taylor Brothers, British and Foreign Mustard Works, N.E.

PURITY AND EXCELLENCE OF QUALITY.
COLMAN'S PRIZE-MEDAL MUSTARD
Retains their well-earned supremacy, as the best in quality.
It is the only Mustard which obtained a Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition of 1862.
Sold by Grocers, Oilmen, &c., throughout the World. Purchasers should be cautious to ask for "Colman's" and "Mustard" are the qualities particularly required.
J. and J. COLMAN, Manufacturers to the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
Stores, Carrow, Norwich, London-street, London.

COLMAN'S No. 1 INDIGO BLUE is the best article known for laundry purposes.
J. and J. COLMAN, Norwich and London.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
Awarded Prize Medal, 1862.

CANDLES.—Prize Medal.—Parafine. Adopted by her Majesty's Government for the Military Stations. 7d. and 8d. per lb. FIELD, the original Manufacturers and Inventors, 183, Fore Street, sustains the public against all spurious imitations. Sold by Chandlers, Grocers, Oilmen, &c., and at 23 Stations throughout the Kingdom. Wholesale and for exportation at the Works, Upper Marsh, London, S.; where also may be obtained their celebrated Cocoa-nut Soap Tablets.

FIELDS' CELEBRATED UNITED SERVICE SOAP TABLETS, 6d. and 6d. each, sold by all Chandlers and Grocers throughout the home of J. C. and J. FIELD should ask for Fields', and see that the name is on each Tablet. Wholesale and for exportation at the Works, Upper Marsh, Lambeth, S., where also may be obtained their Prize-medal Parafine Candles.

ESTABLISHED TWENTY YEARS.
NICHOLSON and CO. are Now Selling upwards of 30,000 Yards of Fine Silk, as per following advertisements, from 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 9d. per yard; much under value.
R. Nicholson and Co., 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.
No connection with any other firm.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£3400 WORTH BLACK SILKS, Glacés, Gros Grains, Drap de Lyons, all of the Purest Make and Quality, from 1s. 4½d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
15,030 YARDS FOULARD SILKS EXTRAORDINARY, warranted waterproof, and perfectly pure, in Checks, Stripes, Spots, and Plain, at 1s. 9d. per yard, 27 in. wide. Worth 2s. 6d.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

100 PATTERNS POST-FREE of the NEW CAMLETS, RUBAIX POPLINS, MOHAIRS, and BARRA CLOTHS, in Checks, Stripes, and Plain Colours, from 9½d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

9226 YARDS PLAIN COLOURED GLACÉS. Thirty different Shades, at 1s. 4½d., 1s. 6½d., 1s. 9d., and 2s. 6d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

8230 Yards New CHECKED and STRIPED SILKS, at 1 guinea, 21 in. wide, and 1½ guinea the Dress. Made Autumn Dresses, at 1 guinea the Dress (6 yards).
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

Reversible Brocade Silks, with flowers the same on both sides, woven in Checks, Stripes, and Colours, 1s. 9d. per yard.
A large parcel of last year's Silks, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. a yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 56, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN TO LOOK WELL?—Buy Kitchener's Sweet Arrowroot, from the Sole Useful School Suits, from 12s. 9d. Patterns of the Cloth, with Illustrations of the Suits, post-free. Patterns of Dresses, post-free.—NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Striped Glacés, 12 yards, 21 in. wide, 12s. 9d.
Also Patterns of Rich Silks.
JOHN HAYES and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Striped Glacés, 12 yards, 21 in. wide, 12s. 9d.
JOHN HAYES and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Checked Glacés, 12 yards, 21 in. wide, 12s. 9d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE. New Striped Glacés, 12 yards, 27 in. wide, 15s. 9d.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

GLACÉ ALPACAS and STRIPED LAWNS, for Morning and Seaside wear.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW FRENCH SILKS, at 2s. 6d. the yard, made of bright Italian Silk, with the guarantee for durability of wear, in Checks, Stripes, and Plain Colours, 24 in. wide. Patterns of the same width, for comparison with other makers, sent free. The quantity required, thereby avoiding the annoyance of being supplied with a length that is not sufficient to make a handsome Dress. The Silk Department in rules (including all the richest styles) is not surpassed by any House in London.—JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill, and 1, 2, 3, and 4, Old Change, and 60, Cornhill, Westminster Bridge, S. Send for Patterns.

MARRIAGE TROUSSEAUX and LAYETTES.—CHRISTIAN and RATHBONE respectfully invite attention to their Stock of Ladies' Outfitting, which is unrivalled for excellence of make, with the cheapness and durability of material for which their house has been noted for upwards of 70 years.—Manufactory, 4, Bridge-street, Blackfriars-bridge, S.E.

SEWELL and CO.'S MOIRE ANTIQUES, Splendid in manufacture, celebrated throughout the Kingdom, and pronounced by the Court Journals the Empress Dress, Prize-sheet; and 601 Compton-street, Soho, W.

SEWELL and CO.'S TRAVELLING and WATERPROOF CLOAKS. One Guinea.
Compton House, Prize-sheet; and 601 Compton-street, Soho, W.

WATERPROOF TWEEDS, MELTONS, and a variety of other materials, for Ladies' Jackets, &c., from 1s. 11½d. per yard.
Also a beautiful stock of all kinds of Woollen Goods, for Gentlemen and Boys' wear, at HARVEY and CO.'S, Woollen Warehouse, 111, Holborn-hill, London.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and RIDING JACKETS, Gentlemen's Waterproof and Invisible Capes and Coats, at HARVEY and CO.'S Woollen Warehouse, 111, Holborn-hill, London.

J. R. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury.

GENTLEMEN'S DRESS, of the best HAMILTON and KINTPOYN'S Tailors, 61, Piccadilly, and 76, Regent-street.

SALVEO PEDES.—TENDER FEET.—A sure remedy is ANGUS SLEIGH'S Salveo Pedes. Sold by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Medicine Vendors, in Boxes, 1s. 6d., and bottles, 3s. 6d. each. Wholesale, 13, Little Britain.

SKIN DISEASE.—Dr. HARVEY'S CELEBRATED SULPHUR REMEDY has relieved thousands in all Skin Diseases. It is certain and safe in its effects. In pots, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sole Proprietor, 172, Strand, London. Ladies, Angels—Sunday and 8a.

TEETH AND PAINLESS DENTISTRY. MESSRS. GABRIEL, Dentists to the Royal Family, 33, Sackville-street, Piccadilly (Established 1803), and 149, Strand (opposite Charing-cross Railway Terminus), continue to supply Sets on their Unique System, which, for utility, durability, and success of the system, stands unrivalled. Consultation free. Fees moderate. Hours 10 to 5.

ALL afflicted with WEAK EYES may obtain instant relief by using Dr. WARNER'S EYE-WATER: it strengthens the weakest eyes, removes cold, mist, inflammation, and redness.—Sold in bottles, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., by Sanger, Oxford-street; Prout, 229, Strand; and all Chemists and Patent Medicine Dealers.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion. It is mild aperient for delicate constitutions, and is the best remedy for Children or Infants during Teething.

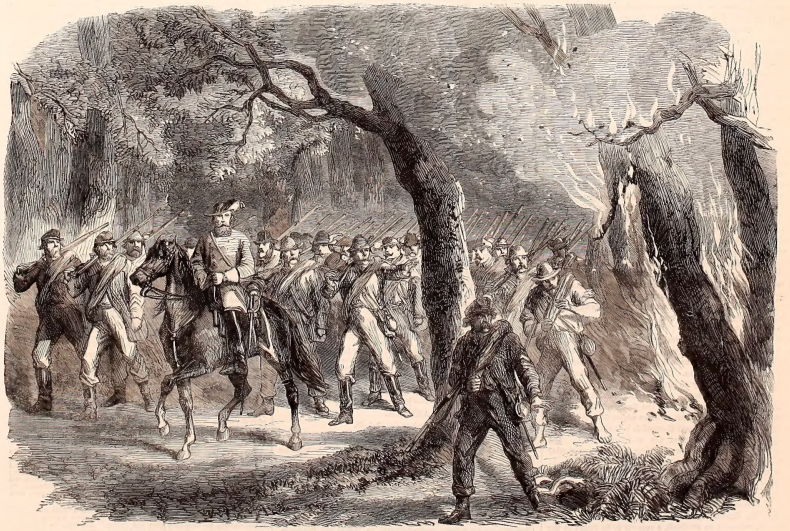
PHYSICIANS' PRESCRIPTIONS promptly and accurately dispensed with Medicines of the best quality, genuine and unadulterated, at moderate charges, by THOMAS MACDONELL, 59, DUNNEBURG and CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, 77, Regent-street.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Furniture, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price given. Ladies and Gentlemen waited on by addressing to Mr. or Mrs. G. HYAM, 52, Rank-street, Regent-street, W.; or Parcels being sent, the utmost value in cash instantly remitted. Established 1804.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, &c. Mr. or Mrs. A. DAVIS, 3, Crawford-st., Baker-st., W., attends Ladies and Gentlemen privately, to purchase Wearing Apparel, Uniforms, Jewellery, Diamonds, Plate, &c.; or Parcels being sent, Post Office orders remitted the same day. Est. 24 years. Terms cash.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1864.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.



No. 1272.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

EMIGRATION TO AMERICA.

WITHIN twenty-four hours of the closing ceremonial of the Session of Parliament, and in a House of Commons consisting of far less than twenty-four hearers, a speech was delivered which ought not to be allowed to pass into immediate oblivion. It contained a solemn warning, founded on facts, addressed to a class of the population of the United Kingdom whose value is acknowledged in the very circumstance of that warning. Lord Edward Howard, when he brought forward the subject of emigration to the Northern States of America, and laid bare its true conditions and incidents as at present existing, seemed almost to have felt a presentiment of the new demand for 500,000 men made by President Lincoln for the prosecution of the war which he conducts on the part of the Federal States, the news of which was within a few miles of this country when the remarkable speech of the noble Lord was spoken. In the brief debate which followed its utterance it was unanimously declared that the most effectual way of attaining the object which Lord Edward Howard had in view would be the giving the utmost publicity to his address; and pointed and distinct appeals were made to those who control or contribute to the newspapers of the day to aid in the dissemination of statements which commend themselves to the serious consideration of those to whom they were specially directed. Compliance with a request so urged, and based on such grounds of acceptation, seems to us a simple duty; and it is with a desire to do what in us lies to spread the information which was laid before Parliament in a spirit of philanthropy worthy of a representative of the people that, after the lapse of some days, we deem it no more than right to revive statements of so much importance.

As the legal representative of the youthful Duke of Norfolk, it has been the duty of Lord Edward Howard personally to become acquainted with the condition of a part of the population of Lancashire which resides in or about the great Howard property in that district. As a member of the Relief Committee at Glossop, which undertook to meet the difficulties and distresses caused by the cotton famine, knowledge of the baneful operation of the so-called emigration to America was forced upon the noble Lord. It was made manifest to him that the labouring population were suffering under a delusion, from which he has done something to awaken them. The plain fact is, that a system is in existence which, under the name of emigration, is nothing more nor less than a base and insidious scheme of recruiting for the Federal army. In the outset let it be said that, in the strict sense of the term, we attach no blame to the Federal Government. There is no evidence of complicity on the part of that Government in the infamous proceedings which have been brought to light. Indeed, it appears that the remonstrances of Lord Lyons on behalf of British subjects who have been kidnapped by false pretences into the Federal army have been attended to by Mr. Seward in an official manner; but, as everyone knows, official action at the seat of Government does not necessarily result in the redress of grievances which are connected with military organisation in a time of war, especially when it is directed towards the discharge of men from a force which loses soldiers by hecatombs and in which the demand for reinforcements is enormously beyond the supply. Still, the Federal authorities fully acknowledge the injustice and the oppression of the practices of the recruiting which is going on, which, in the very nature of things, has fallen into the hands of agents of the vilest and most unscrupulous character. The military commandant of New York, the chief recruiting dépôt, in his reports, has spoken of the circumstances under which men are obtained for service in the field in no measured terms. He says "that almost every imaginable form of outrage and deception has been developed; the outrages practised on recruits are too unjust to be borne, and in many cases too loathsome to be detailed. Many—indeed, most—of these unfortunate men were either deceived or kidnapped, or both, in the most scandalous and inhuman manner in New York city." Doubtless these candid observations apply to men of all nationalities, including Americans; but it is in their application to the men of this country that we especially propose to consider them. It is undeniable that a regular agency of villany has been established in this country, in the north of England and in Ireland particularly, by which men are induced to abandon prospects of steady though laborious maintenance in this country by representations of larger wages and more than corresponding social advantages in America, who, immediately on reaching that land of promise, of freedom, and of comparative wealth, are decoyed, cajoled, threatened, and, as the last resort, drugged, until they find themselves enlisted in the Federal army. They are at once conveyed to the dépôt at Long Island, where they are, under the pretext of undergoing the training which is indispensable to military discipline and the making of a soldier, subjected to cruelties, privations, and outrages which no one has yet ventured to chronicle in writing; and as soon as possible, but not too soon for their sufferings, they are sent on to form parts of those forlorn hopes, composed of the newest arrived recruits, which are recklessly hurled at the fortified strongholds of the enemy, and to whose ranks the survivors of their dead bodies behind which the main bodies may retreat.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: A CORPS OF THE CONFEDERATE ARMY MARCHING BY NIGHT THROUGH BURNING WOODS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 137.

Let it be well understood that every day, by means of the grossest false pretences, married men, the heads of families, are going out to America in the hope of avoiding distress at home, who in a few weeks help to swell the fearful lists of the dead which are reported from time to time from the seat of war about Richmond. According to the statements of Lord Edward Howard—the authenticity of which cannot be denied—men are sought out and offered work as first-rate mechanics, in Canada, at large wages, on undertaking in given to pay their passages out on the condition (the insidiousness of which is to be observed) that such expenses are thereafter to be deducted from their wages; and they find themselves at the end of the voyage landed at New York, where, penniless and friendless, they fall an easy prey to the recruiting shark. Of the numerous devices to bring about this end it is only necessary to mention dragging, which has been before alluded to, the result of which is that the men awake from a stupor and find themselves in the uniform of the Federal army, and in the usual attempts of desertion are completely against them; contrivances to get them into the hands of the police, who, acting in fraudulent unison with the recruiting agents, threaten and cajole them into enlisting; while, in the last extreme, the simple method—borrowed from the practices of the old pelicans carried on by slave-dealers, changing only the type of man whom they deal in, is adopted, and they are compelled by mere physical violence to enlist. So complete is the organisation of the system, that in the vessels of all kinds which run between this country and New York agents pass to and fro regularly, and ingratiate themselves with passengers who have not been entrapped at home but are voluntarily seeking new—and, as they believe, better—fields for their labour; and in the result they land under the auspices of these persons, and are led straight into the pit which gapes for their ingulfment. As a rule, the men are enlisted for the war, and their inquiries after them under their real designations are practically useless; and, even if they should pass unscathed through the perils of a war which is almost one of extermination, nothing can be heard of them until that period, so illusory and so hopeless, shall have arrived when peace is re-established in America. In the event of a man once enlisted attempting to desert, he is shot as a matter of course. The vigorous simplicity of this proceeding is obvious.

But, assuming that an English emigrant escapes from or does not fall into the net of the recruiting agent; that he finds himself on the shores of America under the conditions which attached to him as a working-man seeking employment more remunerative and affording him a prospect of more immediate comforts and greater future prosperity than he could have hoped for at home, how does it really and truly fare with him? Is it the fact that he is in a land where ample work, high wages, and abundance of the necessaries of life are accessible at low prices? The very reverse is the case. In the first place, a labouring man, if he obtain employment, which is anything but a certainty, is paid in dollars—that is, in the notorious green-backs, and he has been led to suppose that a dollar is equivalent to 4s. 4d. of English money. Now, the truth is, that a dollar is worth something less than 1s. 6d., so that a man nominally earning eight or nine dollars a week is receiving in value not more than fifteen or sixteen shillings; and, as several workmen writing to their friends at home have stated, they are doing worse in mere money-getting than they were in England, while the high prices of all sorts of provisions, fuel, and clothing still further depreciate their gains, and they find that they have exchanged, perhaps, a struggle in their own country for positive pauperism in another and a strange land, which is in the agonies of civil war, of revolution, and may be ere long in a state of anarchy.

Such are the prospects of emigration to America at the present moment; and it is well that every effort should be made to bring this knowledge clearly to the minds of those whom it most concerns. This is no case for rhetorical artifice; it is not necessary to dress it up with fanciful picturesque before it is presented for the consideration of the public. There is an eloquence in the facts which will sufficiently speak to the judgments of those whose duty it is (as in cases like that of Lord Edward Howard it is their pleasure) to contribute to the well-being of the working classes. The agency for evil and for wrongdoing in this particular matter is widespread, active, unscrupulous. Why should not some counter-agency be set up to meet and to neutralise the vile operation which is notoriously going on in this country? The law, trammelled by the rules of evidence, is, in the main, powerless to deal even with detected offenders. The Executive Government can only act by means of the law; but there is, as we think, a remedy to be found in the adoption of that great principle of association for philanthropic purposes which, almost peculiar to this country, has so constantly supplemented and aided the law. Even a small association for the dissemination in a readable form of the facts which Lord Edward Howard laid before the House of Commons might do much. Why should it not be tried?

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Emperor has addressed a letter to Marshal Vaillant, dated Vichy, July 31, conceiving the rebuilding of the opera-house on the Hôtel Dieu Hospital. His Majesty says the Opera is already in an unhealthy locality, but the first stone of the Hôtel Dieu has not been laid. Marshal Vaillant is, therefore, instructed to urge the Prefect of the Seine to commence shortly the works of the Hôtel Dieu, as his Majesty, on moral grounds, considers that it is in the highest degree important that a building devoted to pleasure should not be constructed before an asylum for the sick poor.

Preparations for the popular fête of the 15th are going forward in all directions, and the usual amount of poles and scaffolding for fireworks and extemporised theatres is rising into the air.

The King of Spain will take his departure for France on the 14th inst. The Queen, the Princess of Saxe, and the Duke of Montpensier will accompany his Majesty.

Lord Cowley has passed through Paris and proceeded to Vichy on a visit to the Emperor.

The Minister of Marine has awarded a gold medal of the second class to the pilot Mauger, and silver medals to the pilot Gosselin and the apprentice-pilot Doucet, for their conduct in saving the lives of a part of the crew of the Alabama, after the latter vessel was cast off Cherbourg.

In consequence of the demolitions going forward in the most populous parts of Paris, two very unhealthy streets, the Rue du Bon Puits and the Rue Neuve St. Sauveur, are about to disappear. The Rue du Bon Puits owes its name to a public well which existed there in the thirteenth century. It extended formerly to the Rue Clopin, but towards the end of the century the portion between that street and the impasse led to make room for the College of Navarre. The Rue du Murier was called, in the 16th century, Rue Pavée. It was there the German College was established which was destroyed during the riots of the first Revolution. It is proposed likewise to connect the Place Maubert with the Boulevard de Sébastopol by a new street. The above improvements yet accomplished by the Prefect of the Seine. The new street, which is intended to give to the most populous quarters of Paris more in communication, will cause the removal of several of the filthiest streets with which that neighbourhood abounds.

The Court of Cassation has come to a decision of considerable importance to the liberty of the press in France. Some months ago a Paris publisher of the supplies of journals, which, under the name of journals, was pounced upon by the authorities, and condemned by the tribunals for having published political writings without having made the necessary authorisation. The Courts held that the production of a number of copies and their transmission to the various editors constituted a legal publishing. The Court of Cassation has decided that it does not, and has annulled the decrees of the Courts below.

M. Ernest Legouvé, the well-known author, died recently aged sixty-four. He commenced business in 1826, and, of late years, has been the largest purveyor of railway literature in France.

It is announced that the railway from Chambéry to Grenoble is to be opened to the public on the 15th inst. This branch will unite the Paris and Lyons line at Grenoble, and by connecting with the Dauphiné lines with the Victor Emmanuel Railway, and consequently with the Italian lines at Modane, will, it is expected, shorten the distance for travellers proceeding from the south of France to Savoy or Switzerland.

The opening of the shooting season is fixed for the 14th inst. in the first zone; that of the south, which comprises about twenty-five departments, on the 21st. Nothing has yet been said about the Bouches-du-Rhone, Haute-Garonne, Gers, Gironde, Landes, Lot, Lot-et-Garonne, Hautes-Pyrénées, Pyrénées-Orientales, Tarn-et-Garonne, Var, and Vaucluse. Nothing has yet been decided about it does not, and has annulled the decrees of the Courts below.

M. Edmond About, the well-known author, died recently aged sixty-four. He commenced business in 1826, and, of late years, has been the largest purveyor of railway literature in France.

It is announced that the railway from Chambéry to Grenoble is to be opened to the public on the 15th inst. This branch will unite the Paris and Lyons line at Grenoble, and by connecting with the Dauphiné lines with the Victor Emmanuel Railway, and consequently with the Italian lines at Modane, will, it is expected, shorten the distance for travellers proceeding from the south of France to Savoy or Switzerland.

The opening of the shooting season is fixed for the 14th inst. in the first zone; that of the south, which comprises about twenty-five departments, on the 21st. Nothing has yet been said about the Bouches-du-Rhone, Haute-Garonne, Gers, Gironde, Landes, Lot, Lot-et-Garonne, Hautes-Pyrénées, Pyrénées-Orientales, Tarn-et-Garonne, Var, and Vaucluse. Nothing has yet been decided about it does not, and has annulled the decrees of the Courts below.

The decision of the Emperor with reference to the Suez Canal has been published. It accords the concession for ninety millions of francs to the company for the surrender of the stipulations of July, 1856, and for giving up the ownership of the marginal lands about which the dispute arose.

Marshal M'Mahon has been appointed Governor-General of Algeria, in the place of the late Marshal Pelissier.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The Conference at Vienna has conducted its negotiations to a satisfactory issue. Preliminaries of peace and a three months' armistice were signed on Monday, the two German Powers, it is said, threatening instant reopening of active operations if their claims were not acceded to. The conditions are simple, and severe upon Denmark, but not so hard as at one time was reported likely. They are said to be as follow:—Lauenburg to Schleswig, and Holstein and Saxe to be the two great German Powers. The Island of Arro is to remain with Denmark; Alsen, however, and the islands in the North Sea are to go with Schleswig. On account of the Danish sentence in Schleswig, a fortification of the Jutland frontier will take place. During the armistice no troops will be conveyed into Holstein. Schleswig is to remain under the administration of the Federal Diet.

The Sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday week the Prussian representative declared that his Government has no objection to the return of the Federal troops to the fortress of Rendsburg, though he does not consider the occupation of Holstein a sitting of that Federal Diet. The Chamber thereupon passed the following resolution:—"The acceptance of the withdrawal of the Federal troops from Holstein, which has taken place by the abuse of an overwhelming force, is a violation of the rights of the German Confederation and an outrage upon the honour of the German people." The Chamber hereby enters a protest against this act of violence on the part of a German Federal Power."

The Bavarian Government has instructed its representative at Frankfort to propose that the Diet should demand the immediate withdrawal of the Austrian troops from Rendsburg, and the reestablishment of the previous state of things in that town.

The Danish Government has sustained a defeat in the Lower House of the Rigsraad. An address to the King on the present state of affairs, drawn up by the Ministry, was not carried, but was delayed, and then proposed. The Government regarded the proposed address as an embarrassment, and it was moved that the Volksthing should pass to the order of the day. The House, however, rejected the amendment, and voted the address by a majority of sixty to twenty-one.

AMERICA.

We have news from New York to the 23rd ult.

It has been authoritatively, though not officially, announced that Atlanta has been taken by the Federals after a battle fought before the fortifications on the 22nd, which resulted in the Confederates retiring with a loss of 600 killed and 4000 wounded and prisoners. The Confederate General Johnston had been previously superseded by General Hood. The Federals, it was added, had cut all Hood's lines of retreat except that to Macon, and occupied Atlanta. On the other hand, General Forrest, with 10,000 Southerners, was reported to be menacing Sherman, and, again, General J. A. Smith, with a corps of Federals from Memphis, was harassing Forrest. Atlanta is in the centre of the State of Georgia, about 115 miles south of Chattanooga. It is the point of junction of four railways; the railway north, to Chattanooga; the railway south-westward, to Mobile and Pensacola, on the Mexican Gulf; the railway eastward, to Augusta and Charleston; the railway south-eastward, to Macon and to Savannah, on the Atlantic. Atlanta is thus an important strategical point.

Nothing important has occurred at Petersburg. The Confederates are stated to be engaged in an attempt to blockade the James River, with the object of cutting off General Grant's communications by water. Grant is said to have contracted his lines, though still proceeding with the siege of Petersburg, and to have dispatched General Sheridan upon another raid on the railway communication with Richmond.

The Confederates got off from Maryland safely with their booty, and the attempt of the Federals to pursue them has been abandoned, not, however, without having somewhat harassed them, and captured four guns and some stores. The militia called out in the midst of the alarm have been dismissed.

There were rumours when the last mail left of a new Confederate invasion of Maryland, but the first corps of Field Beauregard's Southern force of 5000 men was said to have again crossed the Potomac.

The latest despatches also report the discovery of a conspiracy for the formation of a North-western Confederacy, embracing all the States in the Mississippi Valley. Several prominent citizens of St. Louis, implicated in the affair, had been arrested.

News of a Confederate victory comes from Fort Hudson, on the Mississippi, where the Federal troops under command of General Elliott were attacked and routed with great slaughter. The roads for miles being strewed with dead negroes, horses, and arms.

The bombardment of Fort Sumter, of which we have heard very little recently, has been renewed with increased violence, from thirty to forty shells being fired between Saturday and Monday. The Confederates are reported to have been successful in driving the enemy from John and James Island to Morris Islands.

An attempt at negotiation has been made by some Southern politicians staying at Clifton House, Niagara Falls. Mr. Clement C. Clay and Mr. J. P. Holcomb, semi-official representatives of the Southern Government, communicated to Mr. Horace Greeley that they were willing to proceed to Washington for the discussion with the President of peace propositions, although not accredited by the Confederate Government for that purpose. President Lincoln replied, through Mr. Greeley, by means of a note addressed to "Those whom it may concern," that the Federal Government would receive and meet on liberal terms "any propositions embracing the restoration of peace, the integrity of the Union, and the abandonment of Southern slavery." Messrs. Clay and Holcomb emphatically declined visiting Washington, as London's answer precluding negotiations by pre-arranged conditions. If peace could only be secured by submission to terms of conquest, the generosity of the victor would evidence the restoration of peace.

The Canadian invasion into Maryland seems to have produced considerable effect on the Washington Cabinet, for the President has issued his order for 500,000 men to serve for one year, to be obtained by draught, immediately after the 5th of September next, if not previously obtained by volunteering.

Mr. Fessenden, the new Secretary of the Treasury, had declined the terms required by the New York banks for the proposed loan of fifty million dollars, and determined to offer a popular loan, the interest of which is to be paid in gold.

Gold, upon the announcement of the occupation of Atlanta, declined to 224. The last quotation was 224½ Exchange, 271.

CANADA.

The Hon. Mr. Brown has been re-elected, without opposition, as a member of the Canadian Parliament.

The Quebec Chronicle says:—"We are glad to find that the general tone of the press of the Lower Provinces is favourable to the action taken by the Canadian Government during the recent Fenian-Atlantic crisis, and full of hope as to the result. The opinion of our neighbours on the news valuable because it is unbiassed by any fear. Wholly free from the rancour of past differences, which in some cases had prejudiced the judgment of several Canadian journalists, the views of our Lower Province contemporaries may be freely accepted as those of impartial observers. They look forward in a spirit of liberal and enlightened patriotism for since the petty level of mere provincial politics to the establishment of closer relations between Canada and her sister colonies of British North America—to the formation of such ties as will combine national strength and dignity with internal peace and commercial prosperity. It is to be hoped that these expectations may be realised, and that the present political events may contribute to the general welfare."

The St. John (New Brunswick) Morning News says:—"From the terms of Mr. Brown's remarks it would seem that it is the intention of the Government to send delegates to a conference to be held from the Lower Provinces, which is to meet at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, in a few weeks, and to England, to seek the co-operation of the Imperial Government. The step taken by Mr. Brown in this instance is a bold one, and few will doubt that his abjuration of party alliances is prompted to benefit his country, socially, politically, and otherwise, will be appreciated by intelligent people generally."

The Governor's inquest in the case of Sir Hillier Bridge Gunster has been brought to a conclusion, their verdict being that the accident was owing to the gross carelessness of William Birnie, the engine-driver, and he was committed to take his trial for the offence.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Thames National Regatta will take place on Monday next at Putney for prizes amounting to nearly £300. The programme, though small, contains the names of several living celebrities at the oar and sculls.

The Prince of Wales will inaugurate the statue, erected by voluntary contributions, on the grounds of the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum, Old Kent-road, to the memory of the late Prince Consort, on Monday next. The Prince succeeds his late father as patron of the institution.

Mr. Thomas Peckham, of Sandwich, has invested £3000 in the Three per Cents for the purpose of forming a fund, to be called "Lady Morrieau's Fund," in connection with the Sandwich Infirmary and Asylum, for the welfare of which she has always manifested warm solicitude.

It is proposed to widen the end of Cursitor-street leading into Chancery-lane by pulling down a carriage-way—the only one—to be defrayed equitably by the Metropolitan and Holborn Board of Works and the Public-Houses Company, the latter way established to obtain public offices adjacent.

A minute of the Lords of Committee of Council on Education, drawn up in consequence of the report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, appointed to inquire into the feasibility of establishing night classes at South Kensington to teach drawing to persons who cannot attend established schools of art.

The society of Odd Fellows held high festival, on Tuesday, at the Crystal Palace. It was calculated that about 25,000 persons attended in the course of the day. Early in the day a procession was formed through the grounds, in which men and women joined. A concert, in which several of the leading vocalists now in London took part, was afterwards held, and a variety of outdoor games and amusements concluded the day.

The first girder for the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company's viaduct over Lodgate-hill was fixed on Thursday week. The traffic of Lodgate-hill was suspended for the considerable time on Thursday in consequence of the fall of one of the girders. The girder weighs fourteen tons, and the chain by which it was being hoisted suddenly snapped. Several workmen were seriously injured.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire held its annual meeting at the Institution of Civil Engineers, Great George-street, Westminster, on Thursday last—Lord Ebury presiding. The report stated that during the past year the society had established four more fire-stations. The whole number now amounted to nine, and seven more were required. The subscriptions and donations for the year amounted to £2125, the disbursements to £1844. The report was agreed with the distribution of medals and testimonials and the re-election of the officers for the year.

On Monday last Ministers were, according to ancient custom, entertained at a banquet by the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers. Mr. James Spicer, Prime Warden, presided. Lord Palmerston and Earl Russell were present, as well as Lord Campbell, Viscount Enfield, M.P.; Sir Charles Wood, Bart., M.P.; Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, the Attorney-General, and a large number of other well-known gentlemen. In the course of the evening speeches in reply to toasts were delivered by Lord Palmerston, Earl Russell, Sir C. Wood, and the Lord Mayor.

On Monday, according to ancient custom, a boat-race took place among six young watermen, in the first year after the close of their apprenticeship, for Doggett's Coat and Badge. According to the liberal arrangements, all the six rowers obtained prizes varying in value with their position in the race; but the interest was confined to the two watermen

Coombes and Kilsby, who soon distanced all the other competitors and kept up an exciting race to the end, the former coming in by ten yard's lengths.

Last week the births of 1951 children—1011 boys and 940 girls—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-64 the average number (corrected) was 1859.—Last week 1077 deaths were registered in London. The average number of deaths for the thirtieth week of the previous years, 1854-63, is, with a correction for increase of population, 1092. The mortality of last week was, therefore, very high; for it exceeded the estimated amount by above 300 deaths. The summer heat has produced the effect which always attends it in London. The deaths from diarrhœa were 31, 97, 145 in the three weeks ending July 2, and in the last week they rose to 274. Of the last number all except twenty-one occurred to infants. There were seventy-nine deaths from measles and eighty-seven from scarlatina. A hot, aged three years, died from "sucking hot water from the bottle that feeds it."—A widow died at the age of ninety-seven years.

A general meeting of the committee and members of the Newspaper Press Fund was held last week at the Freemasons' Tavern, Lord Brougham in the chair. From the report read it appeared that the fund is in a flourishing condition, a sum of more than £1300 having been added to the association. Several instances were alluded to of cases of distress which had been relieved by the committee, and the applications for relief which could not be complied with consistently with the rules of the society, as neither the applicants nor their immediate relatives were subscribers to the fund. It was agreed to hold another meeting, on an early day, for the revision of the rules and the enlargement of the operations, such rendered necessary by the extension, in point of numbers, that the association has of late received; but there was a general expression of opinion that the fund should exclusively against any alteration in the fundamental rule that subscribers only shall be entitled to partake in the benefits of the fund.

LAW AND POLICE.—A short time ago Mr. Mulock addressed a threatening letter to Mrs. Chetwynd, the plaintiff in a case which has recently been before the Queen's Bench and Privy Council, requiring her to retract an apologise for his letter under a threat that he would commit him for contempt of Court. Yesterday week Mr. Mulock, having appeared before the learned Judge, but, to be refused to retract, he was fined a sum of £200. The penalty, however, will not be enforced for a week to come, in order to give Mr. Mulock time for reflection.

A church-rate question of some importance was decided on Wednesday in the Court of Arches. The two churchwardens of the parish of Chudleigh, in Devonshire, ordered an assessment to be made for the purpose of repairing the church rates. Subsequently one of the churchwardens withdrew from the suit, and the other applied to the Court to be allowed to proceed with the suit alone. The application was decided that it could not, and the proceedings in the case were therefore quashed.

Charles Frederick Brechnell, a boy, was committed at the last sitting of the Central Criminal Court of the wilful murder of a young woman, named Jane Cozzy, was hanged on Monday morning, in front of Newgate Gaol.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The special Sunday-evening services in the nave of Westminster Abbey for 1864 were brought to a close on Sunday—an immense assemblage, chiefly of working people, for whose benefit the services were mainly designed, being present.

By a local Act, just printed, to substitute fixed instead of fluctuating revenues in certain of the cathedral churches in England, lands and hereditaments may be conveyed to ecclesiastical corporations or to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for money payments.

The Bishop of Peterborough has appointed as his Examining Chaplains the Rev. H. L. Mansel, B.D., Wyndhe Professor of Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy in the University of Oxford, and the Rev. Robinson Duckworth, B.A., Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge.

At a meeting held on Tuesday week at St. Mary's Schools, St. George's-in-the-East, a testimonial, consisting of a handsome silver tea-urn and a purse containing one hundred guineas, was presented to the Rev. W. Allen as a mark of esteem and regard for his services as curate, rendered by him during the lengthened period he has held the incumbency which he has just resigned.

A musical festival took place on Monday in Eton College Chapel, by permission of the provost and fellows, in which about twenty of the principal parish choirs in the neighbourhood of Windsor and Maidenhead, comprising about 160 choristers, took part. At the conclusion of the service, which lasted about a quarter to two o'clock, the clergy and choristers proceeded to the hall and cloisters, where dinner was provided for nearly 200 guests. At the upper table, in the hall, were seated for entry Viscount Sandon, M.P., Gosford, the Provost of Eton, presided, supported by the Bishop of Oxford, the Dean of Windsor, the High Bailiff, the Rev. Dr. Hawtrey, the provost's visitor.—The third annual Festival of Maidaie Parochial Choirs was held at Aspley on the 27th ult., when the twenty parishes in the rural deanery sessions were represented by their respective choirs, numbering 222 voices.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Dioceses: Rev. H. W. Beeden, Rector of Latton-with-Ilry, Wilts, to Cricklade with Leigh.—Rev. Septimus Sargent, Incumbent of Littleton, Worcestershire, to Evesham.—Rev. Edward W. Bowen, Vicar of Cotgrave, Notts, to Gedney.—Rev. Benjamin Hodgson, Perpetual Curate of Farnworth, with the vicarage of Cromwell.—Rev. Geo. Rd. Portman, Rector of Asbury, Berkshire, to Beech Hill.—Rev. Edward Bridges, Rector of Wilmcote, Rev. C. Beale to St. Michael's, Tenterden, Kent; Rev. S. G. Stanley to Ashbourne, Derbyshire; Rev. Wm. Bowden Marsh, Rector of Ewelme, to St. Lawrence, Reading; Rev. Wm. Mayhew, Vicar of Wivelsfield, Sussex, to St. Paul's, Brighton.—Rev. J. C. Medland to the Rectory of St. Martin's, Exeter.—Rev. Rev. J. N. Pocklington to the new church of St. Michael, Holme; Rev. Edward Hall to St. Michael and All Angels, Bradford; Rev. J. Wm. Hill to the new church of St. Saviour, St. George's-square, South Belgravia. Perpetual Curacy: Rev. Alfred Phelps to All Saints, Wanborough.—Rev. C. Hoe, B. A. Partridge to St. Mary's, Stratford-le-Bow; Rev. D. H. Sawyer to Purbrook, Hants.—Rev. Robert Elliott, Head Master of Manchester Grammar School, Brighton, Preston, to be General Preacher in the diocese of Manchester.—Guardian.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—On Thursday week the prizes were distributed to the junior pupils of the University College School, by Mr. Taylor presiding and distributing the rewards. Prizes were given for proficiency in Greek, Greek translation, drawing, mathematics, and the usual number of classes; the ceremony of distributing the books occupied two hours and a half.

The distribution of medals and certificates of honour to the students of the faculty of medicine in University College for the summer term, session 1863-64, took place yesterday week in the botanical theatre of the college—the Dean, Professor Sharpey, M.D., F.R.S., presiding.

The distribution of prizes to the scholars of King's College School who have been recommended at the various examinations for the prize took place yesterday week in the great hall, in presence of Dr. Jelf, principal of the college, Dr. Brewer, Head Master of the school, the professors and masters, and a large number of the relatives and friends of the pupils. The Right Rev. W. R. Hamilton, M.P., delivered the usual address, distributed the rewards, and, on taking the chair for that purpose, was loudly cheered. The Head Master announced the names of the boys who had distinguished in the classical scholar, H. H. Sweeting; mathematics, H. Hosmann; second-class classical, R. E. Curron; mathematics, J. G. Fawcus. Prizes were awarded to H. C. Smith; fourth ditto, G. Cutliffe; fifth ditto, W. E. Gilbertson; sixth ditto, E. S. Jones.

The thirty-second annual distribution of prizes at Stockwell Proprietary Schools in which Kent and Surrey took place yesterday week, in the great hall by the S. B. Simson, and he was also declared the successful competitor in the classical scholarship of the value of £40 per annum, tenable for three years. Exhibitions of £5 each were also awarded for classical and mathematical proficiency.

Wednesday was the commemoration festival at St. Mary's College, Hurstpierpoint. There was a choral celebration of the Holy Communion at 8 a.m. and about 9 o'clock the students walked in procession from the college to the church, chanting the 147th Psalm. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Jeune, and the prizes being distributed by the President, the company adjourned to a magnificent luncheon.

The speech day and distribution of prizes at Rossall School took place, held, took place on Monday. The Rev. C. F. Shepherd, M.A., of Magdalen College, Cambridge, the examiner, gave very satisfactory report of the results of the previous week's examination. The prizes were then distributed to the successful boys by the Rev. J. M. Wilson, D.D., Head Master of King's College School, London.

The annual distribution of prizes at the City of London School took place yesterday week, in the theatre of the institution, in the presence of the Lord Mayor (Alderman Lawrence), several of the aldermen, the School Committee of the Corporation, and many more of the principal citizens. The school, founded in the year 1442, is one of the most middle-class institutions in the land, with the older public schools in the kingdom, under the management of the Rev. R. Hebblethwaite, who has now been master for a half of a century.

Tuesday week was the prize day at Forest School. The prizes were distributed by P. Cazenove, Esq., one of the original trustees at the foundation of the school, in 1834. The committee, Dr. Major and Professor Hall, of King's College, and the Rev. J. T. B. Eden, Fellow of Merton, selected J. Usher Abernethy for the King's College prize. Mr. Cotton drew attention to the school which the Head Master has founded at Enfield in union with Forest School, and which will open on the 11th inst.

The Rev. George French, M.A., late sub-master of St. Saviour's Grammar-school, Southwark, was presented on Wednesday week with a handsome silver tea-service, accompanied by an appropriate address. The resignation of the headmastership, which had been held for eight years and a half by Mr. French, has been caused by his appointment as inspector of schools.

The Rev. W. Trafford, M.A., Fifth Assistant-Master in Durham School, has been appointed head master of the Uffculme Grammar School, Devon.

THE WESLEYAN METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The Conference resumed its sittings yesterday week at Bradford, and decided, after the usual preliminaries, that the Session of 1865 should be held at Birmingham, the chairman stating that accommodation would be provided for 600 ministers, in addition to those living in the district.

The Rev. Samuel R. Hall gave notice of a motion for a renewal a resolution of 1863, empowering the Conference ministers to be appointed to particular circuits.

It was reported that Mr. Hazelhurst, of Runcorn, had presented a new chapel, costing £6000; that John Ferrie, Esq., of Southport, had presented a like gift, costing more than £3000; and Mr. Mosse, of Shields, had also presented a chapel to cost £4000. Besides these, receipts were read in the accounts for their munificent gifts.

The representatives of the Irish Conference (Revs. R. Price, J. M'K'Ay, C. L. Grant) were introduced. The Rev. J. M. M'K'Ay said they had suffered severely from the famine in Ireland, and this he ascribed to emigration. They had lost 800 members during the year and 18,000 in the last twenty years. The numbers now were 20,000 in Ireland, 3000 in Canada, 1000 in the Methodist of society, while in Great Britain there was only one to every 270.

The representatives of the French, Australian, Canadian, and British North American Conferences were introduced, and arrangements were made for preparing answers to the addresses from those Conferences.

The president suggested that a public service should be held on some convenient evening in order that the representatives from the affiliated conferences might an opportunity of delivering addresses in reference to the state of religion in those parts of the world which they represented. The president will give notice hereof, on the same evening, of his important mission to America.

The Conference then proceeded to consider the cases of the ministers on trial, and was engaged at the close of the sitting in considering the case of the candidates for the ministry. There are at present 1,000 candidates in the district meetings.

The adjournment for the consideration of the cases of young men recommended by the district meetings as candidates for the ministry occupied the earlier part of Saturday's proceedings. One hundred and forty-seven candidates of whom sixteen were declined in harmony with the recommendations of the London Examining Committee. Three were expelled from the service in the ministry.

The Conference then proceeded to the inquiry, who have died during the year? Dr. Beaumont, who took the chair, announced that the first name was that of the Rev. John Mason, who was said to have entered the ministry in 1813, in the 19th year of the year of his age. He travelled in Ireland, and in 1827 was appointed to the office of book steward, in which he commanded the highest esteem, and was continued in that office for nine years. He resigned the onerous office on his most useful works. He died, March 1, in the eighty-third year of his age. The next name was that of the Rev. Wm. Bunting, Rev. Dr. Waddy, Dr. Rule, Dr. Jobson, J. H. Jones, Lord, C. Prest, T. Waugh, and the president's own son, the Rev. Thomas Beaumont, who, in 1851, was received into the ministry, 1859. Bedford and Northampton district: William Taylor, Esq., of Bedford district: W. Jones, Esq., in 1811 was appointed to visit the French prisoners in the Medway ships and elsewhere, and died aged eighty-three. Hull district: Robert Day, who entered the ministry, 1815.

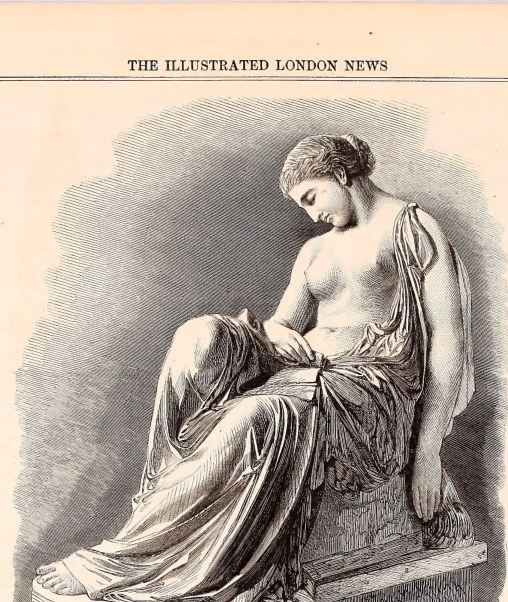
On Monday morning the Conference concluded its inquiries respecting the ministers who had died during the year. The chairman of districts presented memorials of the following:—The Rev. J. C. Pritchard, M.D., Birmingham; Thomas Rogers (not over the silver) surviving minister of the Connexion, who entered the ministry in 1791; J. F. Thornley, Esq., Wesleyan Book Steward; B. B. Mitchell, J. Blackwell, J. S. Jones, T. Bishop, J. Allen, J. C. Watson, Esq., Dr. Alder, Dr. Hannah, Rev. Dr. Osborn, Rector of Bradford, Rev. —.

The Conference then considered the question:—Are there any objections to the sale of any portion of the premises in City-road, now occupied as the Book-room? The ex-president read the Rev. J. G. Wilson's letter of resignation, which was received without comment. The Rev. J. G. Wilson, in his letter, stated that the president referred to certain "audacious" statements which Wesleyan ministers had appeared to have made to the effect that the Rev. J. G. Wilson's recent resignation into the Church of England was due to the fact that he had been rejected by the Conference. The Rev. J. G. Wilson believed a word of it. But if any intended to take the Liberal Methodism, that Conference had repudiated, he (Mr. Wilson) would be glad to know the names of it. (One president's) decrease friend, he seems to have left the Conference. General laughter and prolonged cheering followed, until "Let him go, and welcome." General laughter.

The Rev. J. Scott Lidgett read the statistics for the several districts, which, on the whole, showed totals:—On first membership, 18,080; accredited members, 329,000, being a decrease of 1000 on the year.

The Conference session was chiefly occupied with inquiries respecting the conduct of ministers. A number of complaints were entertained against the ministers of Wesleyan Methodism, and the Rev. Dr. Osborn, Rector of Bradford, stated that two persons who had become separated from the Methodist ministry had established theological colleges for the education of ministers in the Church of England. After the examination of character was concluded the resolutions of the Conference were read, and the Rev. Benjamin Frankland, theological examination by the Rev. Dr. Hannah, of Didsbury College. Dr. Hannah observed that the Rev. Dr. Osborn had stated that the

"THE TASK OF ERINNA."



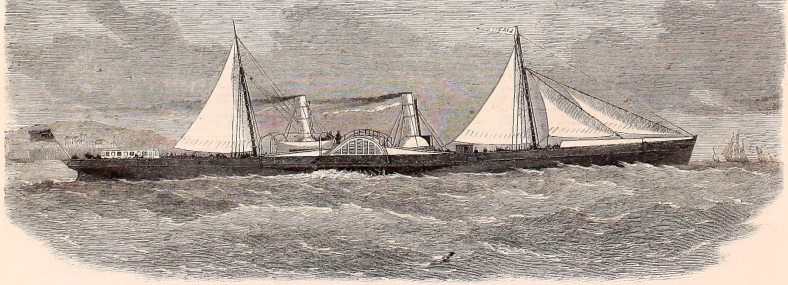
THE story of Erinna has much of a legendary, uncertain character. The strange and romantic interest of the main facts of her life, as commonly recorded, render this almost mythic personage a suitable theme for the poet and artist; but more especially (as we see exemplified by Mr. Leifchild in the fine colossal statue engraved) for that form of art which is the most abstract and ideal. According to a preponderance of probable and concurrent testimony, Erinna was a contemporary of the still more famous Greek poetess, Sappho, 600 B.C. The popular anthologies, in which Erinna is a frequent subject of celebration, represent her to be actually connected with the Lesbian school of Sappho. This, however, seems little consistent with the apparently authentic details of her history. In these she is described as a native of Telos, a small island of the Ægean, and as dying, at the early age of nineteen, a victim to an excited imagination and the restraints imposed upon its indulgence. Instead of being permitted to engage in her favourite pursuits, she was kept closely employed at the spindle and other household avocations. To account, therefore, for the familiar allusions to her among the ancients as a Lesbian or Mitylenæan, we must conclude that her family settled in Mitylene. It would very naturally follow that simple, honest, Dorian parents should guard against the risk of their daughter being drawn into the neighbouring vortex of refined dissipation; for we quite agree with Mr. Mure, in his "Literature of Ancient Greece," in opposition to some recent German and English apologists, that there can be little doubt either of the very free character and habits of the most gifted mistress of erotic verse and her Lesbian circle of female associates, or of the estimation in which they were held by the more strictly decorous classes of Hellenic society. It would be equally natural that, as Mr. Mure remarks, "a maiden of fervid temperament, conscious of her capacity to shine among the most brilliant members of the Sapphic sisterhood and exposed on every side to its seductive attraction, should pine under the disappointment."

The most celebrated work of Erinna was entitled "Elacate;" or, "the Spindle," and appears to have been a metrical complaint, in 300 lines, of the hard destiny which made her a domestic drudge. By the epigrammatists of the late Alexandrian period the poem is described in terms of highest praise, and its author placed, in the art of hexameter composition, on a level with Homer, and as far above Sappho as Sappho was superior to Erinna in lyric song. All that has descended to us, however, associated with the name of Erinna, is two hexameter couplets and four epigrams, three of which are of more or less doubtful antiquity. In one of the fragments of Sappho (XXXII.) there is a passage which has—whether originally intended or not—so much the appearance of a remonstrance placed in the mouth of Erinna against her mother's restraint that it is often associated with this hapless heroine. This passage, which the sculptor has incised in the original Greek on the scroll which Erinna holds in her lap, may be translated thus:—

O mother, dear! No longer the spindle I can turn,
Such fires for my beloved youth in this sad bosom burn!

This passage would, moreover, indicate that unrequited love was the cause of the untimely death of Erinna, as well as of her more mature poetic sister. The left hand of the statue, which, with the arm, hangs nerveless and relaxed, holds, but barely sustains, a distaff, alluding, of course, to Erinna's enforced "task" in spinning. The head hanging on one side, the closed eyes, the expression of faintness, complete the general impression of exhaustion and almost deathly languor.

We have already criticised this statue in our notice of the sculptures in the recently-closed exhibition of the Royal Academy, among which it was by far the most important poetical work. We need only add, therefore, that Mr. Leifchild, who has hitherto been noted chiefly for aiming at the grand style of Michael Angelo, here fairly challenges an estimate that must necessarily be regulated by the severest exigences of classical art. The mere boldness of attempting such a subject on the heroic scale is a remarkable fact in the present state of sculpture as to the patronage of this art; but that the artist has been successful in several essential particulars will be recorded as the most memorable event, as far as we are aware, in the annals of British sculpture for the present year.



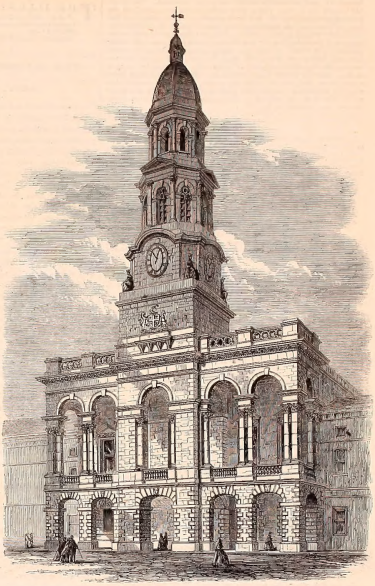
"THE TASK OF ERINNA, THE GREEK POETESS," SCULPTURED BY H. S. LEIFCHILD, FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

THE BLOCKADE-RUNNER LIZZIE.

THIS steamer has been built, in the Clyde, for the purpose of running the blockade of the ports of the Confederate States of America. The vessels most suitable to this hazardous employment are those of light draught and great speed. The building of such vessels has developed a large trade, particularly among the shipbuilders of the Clyde. The Lizzie was launched a few weeks ago, from the building-yard of Messrs. Henderson, Coulborn, and Co., at Renfrew, near Glasgow. She had been built to the order of Mr. W. C. Decley, of Liverpool. When completed, she took on board a select party for a short cruise down the Channel, to test her speed. The result of her performances was far beyond the expectations of her builders and owners; it gave the utmost satisfaction to everyone on board. The speed throughout was twenty-two miles an hour, and that was maintained with the greatest ease. This speed is unprecedented in the experience of steam-navigation; no steamer of whatever size having maintained in open channel a speed equal to that of this little vessel. The principal dimensions of the Lizzie are:—Length, 200 ft.; breadth, 22 ft.; depth, 9 ft: about 500 tons gross tonnage. Her engines are on the builders' patent diagonal oscillating principle, and of 150-horse power, nominal. She has feathering paddle-wheels and vertical tubular boilers. The same builders have several steamers on the stocks, intended for the same trade, and all of them calculated for a high rate of speed. Our Engraving is from a drawing by Mr. Hugh Aird.

NEW TOWNHALL OF ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

WE give a representation of the new Townhall recently built in the metropolis of South Australia. The Albert Tower, which rises in the centre of this edifice, 145 ft. from the ground, is intended to commemorate the late Prince Consort. The façade is adorned with a colonnade, and divided into two portions, one above the other; the lower portion comprising five arches supported upon rusticated piers; and the upper portion consisting of a like number of openings springing from double Corinthian columns, surmounted by a cornice and pierced parapet. To the left of the entrance-hall are the rooms designed for the telegraph department; and to the right, the Exchange, and the grand staircase leading into the hall above. The main passage in the centre leads to the Council-chamber and the Corporation offices. The hall above is a magnificent compartment, measuring 107 ft. in length, 66 ft. in width, and 43 ft. in height. The sides are divided into eight divisions by Corinthian columns, pierced for windows in each bay. The end facing the entrance has an archway for the proposed city organ, while the other end is occupied by a gallery, 68 ft. by 27 ft., making by so much an addition to the spacious chamber. The ceiling is of an ornate design. The architects of the whole building are Messrs. Wright and Woods, of Adelaide; the contractors, Messrs. English and Brown. The total cost is about £20,000. Our Engraving is made from a photograph sent us by Mr. F. A. Crawford, manager of the Adelaide Photographic Company's establishment.



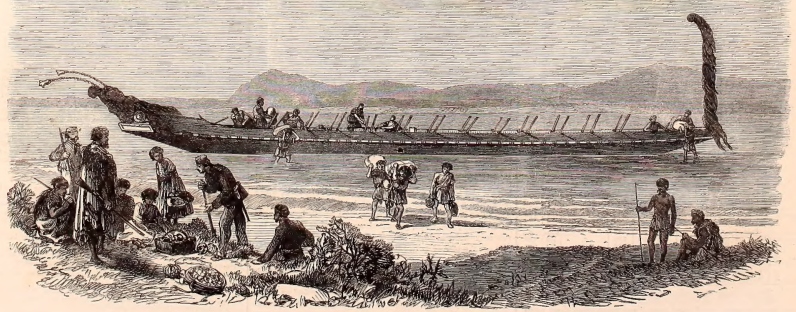
NEW BLOCKADE-RUNNER LIZZIE, BUILT IN THE CLYDE.

ST. JOHN'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, SOUTH PARADE, BATH.

ST JOHN'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH AT BATH.

We have engraved a view of the handsome Church of St. John the Evangelist, lately built by the Roman Catholics at Bath. It is situated in an open space of ground on the South Parade, having a new street at the west end in a line with Duke-street. The design includes a tower and spire, upwards of 200 ft. high, and it is especially remarkable for the multitude of gables. Taking the north side, we have first the gable of the baptistery, next the gable of the porch, then the three gabled bays of the north aisle, and then the large gable of the transept, with its magnificent circular window. Beyond this are two gables on the side of the Lady Chapel, and over them the gabled windows of the chancel. The west front has the tower in the centre, with the baptistery and chapel of St. Benedict at the sides. The west entrance is surmounted by the crocketed gable exhibiting some beautiful carvings in the spandrel, prominent among which is the eagle, emblematic of St. John, holding a scroll on which is carved "In principio erat verbum." Over this door is a fine window of five lights, with beautiful and graceful tracery. The roof of the chancel is defined externally by a rich cresting of iron, painted and partly gilt, terminating with a large foliated cross at the point of the spire roof. The plan of the church consists of nave, with north and south aisles and transepts, chancel and side chapels, western tower, and baptistery. The nave and aisles together measure 75 ft. by 60 ft. wide; the former is separated from the latter by an arcade of moulded arches, resting on fourteen pillars of polished Devonshire marble, with elaborately carved capitals of Ancaster stone, each capital being a study of natural foliage slightly conventionalised—among which are the holly with buds, the primrose and ferns, the vine and wheat, the passion-flower, the figleaf and fruit, the rose, shamrock, and thistle, and the blackberry. In the spandrils between the arches are carved, in alto-relievo, demi figures of angels in circular panels, playing upon musical instruments. Over these is a lofty clerestory of eight three-light windows of simple tracery, giving ample light and cheerfulness to the interior. The chancel is lighted by stained glass windows. The altar is of marble and alabaster, by Mr. Earp, and a very rich work of sculpture. The architect of the building is Mr. C. F. Hansom, of Clifton, Bristol; the contractors are Messrs. Bladwell and Ambrose. This church is reckoned one of the finest of those which the Roman Catholics have erected in England during the last few years.

NEW TOWNHALL OF ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.



MAORI WAR-CANOE AT TAURANGA, NEW ZEALAND.

We are indebted to Lieutenant Robley, of the 68th Regiment, now stationed at Tauranga, New Zealand, for the sketch of a Maori war-canoe, which forms one of our Illustrations. The natives of the shores of the Bay of Plenty were not all hostile to the British settlement, and the camp of Tauranga was often visited by large parties of these people, bringing potatoes, fish, or wild peaches, for the purpose of trade. The canoe here represented was one belonging to Maungatapu, a village of the Ngatihi tribe. It was made of the totara, or pine, with a length of sixty or seventy feet, and a breadth of about four feet, painted with red ochre and oil. This canoe was paddled by fifty men.

THE WAR IN AMERICA.—NIGHT MARCH THROUGH BURNING WOODS.

THE Engraving on our front page is from a sketch by our Special Artist and Correspondent with the army of General Lee, in Virginia. Its subject is thus explained by a short extract from his letter:—

"Stokes's division was one of those which were sent across the James River to meet Grant on his approach to Petersburg. Its march formed the most picturesque scene I have ever witnessed. The woods had caught fire in many places from shells thrown into them, and the bright flames leapt up the tall trees, casting a ruddy glare upon the faces of those careless warriors as they passed under the fir-branches, which were dropping flakes of fire. Now and then an old shell would explode in the undergrowth; but this was looked upon as an enlivening incident, with which the men were rather pleased. The woods about Bottom's Bridge are filled with dead Federals, whom their humane commander, General Grant, has left unburied. Perhaps the burning of the timber in which these corpses lie will save Richmond from a pestilence they would otherwise create. For miles outside the works of Richmond you meet with such fearful traces of the slaughter which the Federals suffered in their unsuccessful efforts to break through the Confederate lines."

MAORI WAR-CANOE AT TAURANGA, NEW ZEALAND.

BIRTHS.

On the 29th ult., at 122, George-street, Edinburgh, Lady Macpherson Grant, of a daughter.

At the Vicarage, Stexford, Lincolnshire, the wife of the Rev. Richard Yerbury, of a daughter.

On the 3rd inst., at Langham Hall, Oakham, the wife of Edward George Dukes, Esq., of a son.

At the Admiralty, Lady Hermione Graham, of a son.

On the 31st inst., at No. 36, Portland-place, Lady Cecilia Bingham, of a son.

At Chester-square, Lady Frances Bushby, of a son.

At Fircharrough, Suffolk, Lady Frances Petiward, of a daughter.

At 104 Charlton, Kent, the Hon. Lady Stopford, of a son.

At Eaton-square, the Hon. Mrs. Trevanion, of a daughter.

At Hamilton-place, Lady Augusta Freemantle, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 2nd inst., at Carlton-hill Chapel, by the Rev. Dr. Roberts, William, second son of James Guthrie, Esq., of Belfast, to Philippa, eldest daughter of the late Alexander Grant Fowler, Esq., of Upper Hamilton-terrace, St. John's-wood. No cards.

On the 30th ult., by special license, at Castle Bellingham, Louth, by the Rev. R. P. M'Clintock and Rev. H. Sekhall Sir Victor Alexander, of Undercastle Park, Bart., Fermanagh, to Alice Sophia, daughter of Sir Alan E. Bellingham, of Castle Bellingham, Bart.

On the 30th ult., at St. Peter's Church, by the Rev. Cornwallis Maude, Vicar of Frenshem, Suffolk, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Augustus Robinson, fourth surviving son of James R. Maude, Esq., of St. Leonard's-on-Sea, place, Regent's Park, to Eliza, younger daughter of Thomas Gill, Esq., of Bedford-square, Russell-square.

On the 29th of June, at St. Thomas's, Orchard-street, London, by the Rev. Joseph Hembrow, M.A., Vicar of Bridgwater, Captain William de la Poer Beresford, 38th Regiment, second son of the late Lieutenant-General Sir Joseph Beresford, G.C.B., Inspector-General of Fortifications, to Charlotte, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Henry Tomkinson, of Rosethenek, Cheshire.

On the 28th ult., at Kilsby, Northamptonshire, by the Rev. C. Gilbey, Vicar, assisted by the Rev. A. Kempson, Henry W. Williams, physician and surgeon, of Guildhorough, to Katherine, youngest daughter of R. H. Cowley, Esq., of Kilsby. No cards.

On the 2nd inst., at Christchurch, Lancaster-gate, by the Rev. Daniel Moore, M.A., Incumbent of Combe Chapel and Golden Lectures, assisted by the Rev. F. S. May, George Faulkner Wilkinson, Esq., Military Train, and late 68th Light Infantry, youngest son of the late Inspector-General Wilkinson, of Hertling, Lincolnshire, to Elizabeth Mary, younger daughter of Robert Clarke, Esq., of 23, Cleveland-square, Hyde-park.

On the 2nd inst., at Ariany House, Kinross-shire, by the Rev. Wm. Reid, of Kings Kinross, Tyle, assisted by the Rev. Walter Lindsay, of Orwell, John Stewart, Esq., Edinburgh, to Catharine Low, elder daughter of the late David Thomson, of Cokie, and Auchtyle, in the county of Perth, N.B.

At St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, the Rev. F. Berg, son of the late Sir J. Boyd, Bart., to Katharine Mary, daughter of H. W. Beaumont, Esq., and late Lady K. F. Beaumont.

At St. Peter's, Pimlico, E. J. D. Paul, Esq., of Hamilton-place, Piccadilly, to Mary Georgiana, daughter of the late Colonel H. V. Brooke, and grandaughter of the late General Sir Charles Asgill.

At East Bridgeford, C. Ashburnham, Captain 60th Royal Rifles, son of the late Sir J. Ashburnham, Bart., of Ashburnham Park, Sussex, to Georgiana, daughter of the late Captain G. B. Martin, C.B., R.N., of East Bridgford, Nottinghamshire.

At St. Helens, the Rev. G. B. Pennell, B.A., Vicar of St. Paul's, to Emma Clara, daughter of Admiral Sir C. Rowley, K.C.B., Governor of St. Helena.

At Farnham, W. W. Willson, M.A., Curate of St. Matthew's, Denmark-hill, to Winnie, daughter of the Right Rev. M. A. S. Alexander, D.D., late Lord Bishop of Jerusalem.

DEATHS.

On the 25th ult., at his residence, at Eton, F. W. H. Silvertop, Esq., Hungerford, youngest son of the late Nicholas Clotsworth Silvertop, Esq., in his 73rd year of his age.

In Connaught-place, Hyde Park, Lady Harriet Barbara, daughter of the seventh Earl of Scarborough, and widow of J. L. Blenkiron, Esq.

At Bradney, near Bridgnorth, Vice-Admiral Wright, aged 89.

In the Abbey, Lieutenant-General Sir Wm. Brereton, K.C.B., K.H., Royal Artillery.

In Dover-street, Robert, son of the late Sir Nicholas Colthurst, Bart., aged 34.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

Now ready,

THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK
for 1865,
containing Twelve Original Designs illustrative of the Months, numerous Engravings selected from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Tables of Stamps, Days, and Licenses, Eclipses, Remarkable Days, Anniversaries, Calculations, and a great variety of useful and interesting information. The trade supplied by W. M. CLARKE, Wine-street-lane, Paternoster-row; and G. Vickers, Angel-court (172), Strand, London.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUG. 13.

SUNDAY, Aug. 7.—Eleventh Sunday after Trinity. The French Chamber of Deputies declare the Throne vacant: Louis Philippe accepts the Crown and the Charter, 1830.

MONDAY, 8.—Death of Pope Alexander VI. (the infamous Roderic Borgia), 1503. Estevia, Jew, admitted to the British Parliament, 1858.

Anchusay, 1811.

TUESDAY, 9.—Jewish Fast (in memory of the destruction of the Temple). The important Ashburton Treaty (defining the limits of Canada, &c.) concluded at Washington, 1842. The Austrian General Haynau defeated by the Sardinians at Temesvar, 1849.

WEDNESDAY, 10.—Mercury Stationary (about 23°). The Royal Observatory, Greenwich, founded, 1675. Moon's first quarter, 5h. 57m. p.m.

THURSDAY, 11.—Half-quarter day. Durham Cathedral founded, 1093.

FRIDAY, 12.—Battle of Cunnersdorf; Frederick the Great (at first victorious) defeated by the Russians under Soltikoff and Laudohn, 1759. Sir Walter Raleigh executed, 1618.

SATURDAY, 13.—Battle of Almenara, Spain, 1710. Battle of Saragossa, 1809. Stephenson, railway engineer, died, 1848.

SATURDAY.—A great earthquake in England, 1863; in Scotland, 1816. The French fleet defeated off Malaga by Sir George Rooke, 1704.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 13, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m	M. A. h m h m
7 41	8 13	8 45	9 16	9 48	10 20	10 53

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 29′ 4″ N.; Long. 0° 19′ 47″ W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETERS		WIND.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32° Fah.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Minimum at 3 A.M.	Minimum at 39·2 in.	General Direction	Movement in Miles in the Day.	Miles in the Hour.
July	Inches.	°	°		°	°		Miles.	Inches
27	29·722	64·0	47·9	67	54	47·6	S.	334	·000
28	29·822	60·1	52·7	84	7	50·5	SSW.	314	·000
29	30·067	60·5	46·6	68	42	37·1	WNW. WSW. W.	171	·000
30	29·158	65·5	59·2	83	9	55·6	SW. SSW.	297	·000
31	29·1	67·1	57·1	74	53	48·6	S.	330	·000
Aug. 1	29·026	62·6	41·2	50	5	54·2	NW.	272	·000
2	29·112	59·5	49·1	72	6	49·2	WNW. SW.	172	·000

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	29·855	29·824	30·165	30·199	30·059	30·118
Temperature of Air	66·2°	68·9°	69·9°	66·2°	64·4°	63·8°	63·9°
Temperature of Evaporation	57·8°	58·6°	57·7°	61·0°	57·2°	57·0°	57·0°
Direction of Wind	s.	SSW.	WSW.	SW.	SW.	SSW.	WSW.

NOW READY,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
Vol. 44, JANUARY to JUNE, 1864. Cloth, gilt, 18s.; Sewed, 15s.
Covers for binding same .. .. 2s. 6d.
Reading Cases .. .. 2s. 6d.
Portfolios, to hold a Half-year's Numbers.. .. .. 4s. 6d.
Office: 198, Strand.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1864.

THOUGH we did not attach much importance to the reports which have reached us in reference to an alleged attempt on the part of certain gentlemen in America to prepare a basis for hostile operations, the mere hint that such a thing was possible afforded lively satisfaction in England. Possibly, the majority of Americans may hesitate to believe this, in the present state of the public mind in North and South; but hereafter, when peace shall have been made, justice will be done to the English by such of our Transatlantic friends as may consult the columns of this Journal, which we may fairly assume to represent the feelings of the best classes in this country. We have never ceased to deprecate the cruel internecine war, and we have all along urged that it might be ended without detriment to the honour and character of the belligerents. The statement that Mr. Greeley, Mr. Saunders, and others were to meet at Niagara Falls and endeavour to devise some plan for terminating the fearful struggle was listened to with pleasure, even by those who did not believe that those envoys were precisely the persons best qualified to shape out a course of policy involving such enormous questions. The acceptance which the rumour met in America showed that peace was no longer among the impossibilities.

This "conference" has been as great a failure as another which is fresh in the English memory. Details are not of much consequence; but it would appear that the war party in the North is very desirous to discredit and repudiate the effort. It is sought to cast ridicule upon the scheme. We see no reason for this. It can never be ridiculous to try to stop the effusion of blood, to save the lives of the young men who fall by the hands of those who were but the other day their fellow citizens. And, so far as we are informed, there was nothing in the antecedents nor in the conduct of those who were concerned to justify such a sneer. It is much to be regretted that the tone of the American press generally is below the great occasion that should call the best pens into existence for the common good. Personality, persiflage, swagger, are all easy enough; but the public "guide, philosopher, and friend" should spurn the weapons which the vulgar can use. We have had to protest more than once against our American brethren of the press; but we cannot help feeling that they have not risen to the work before them, and have been too ready to be mere repeaters of the idle and violent talk of the masses. Many of them have yet to learn the grave responsibility attaching to those > Whose echoes roll from soul to soul,

> And live for ever and for ever.

Did the American press and the American pulpit assert themselves more much would be accomplished in a short space of time; and though we do not address these words to fanatics, we believe that there are numerous influential men in the churches and connected with the newspapers who will receive in the spirit in which it is offered this reminder of how much is in their hands.

In England an incident involving a failure often produces the most fortunate results. An inadequate effort in a given direction turns men's minds in that direction, if it can do no more; and at a happy juncture more able men step forth, adopt the principle, and carry it out. Even in political commentary matters this process is very frequently witnessed, and the failure of weak men brings forth the energies of the strong. It would be good news in the two worlds did we hear that the end of the Niagara conference was but the beginning of a negotiation which would lead to what should now prevent it? It is the custom to answer all British suggestions with the somewhat supercilious remark that we "do not understand America." This is an idle phrase. What is there in America or in American affairs that an active, living, moving, progressive people, akin to Americans, speaking their language and reading their literature, should not be able to comprehend. And when that comprehension is quickened by an earnest desire for the welfare of the West, we must really be allowed to characterise the allegation of non-understanding as a conventional impertinence. There is nearly as much ignorance among our uninformed classes upon foreign affairs as there is among the same class over the water; but we have failed to perceive any mystery which cannot be solved by those who are honestly desirous to discover the truth. We believe that our journalists understand American matters as well as the journalists of America; and we are sure—we say it without vaunt—that those matters are more gravely and befittingly discussed here than there. The real reason why we are charged with a want of comprehension of the case lies in the fact that there is a strong disposition in the West to go on blindly and take the chances—a state of mind, of course, which indisposes most persons to make or to receive definite logic. Fight first and talk afterwards, is a maxim which has its occasional value; but, in the present circumstances of America, the rule may be deemed universal for toleration. Let us see whether it is not the turn of talk, and whether the fighting may not be dispensed with.

One thing is abundantly clear. The question of peace or war is in the hands of the North. The South asks to be let alone. In this fact surely the haughty Northerners may find an ample homage to their pride. It is for them to say whether the sword shall be sheathed or not. They are the arbiters of the situation. This they are bound to consider. Then comes the question of honour; and although the Federals affect to be too philosophical to admit that this consideration is at the bottom of the war, and though they pretend to rest the struggle upon certain principles, we firmly believe that they have too much of the Anglo-Saxon in them to permit them to forget the idea of national honour. They would like victory because it is victory, and they need not endeavour to be better or wiser than their Old-World forefathers. But there are such things as reason and moderation. There is such a thing as knowing how to accept a situation with honour and good grace. We have had to do so occasionally, and never more notably than when George III. recognised the Independence of certain provinces. The nation would have liked to subjugate those provinces, but it was evident that Destiny had ordained matters another way. Therefore we consoled ourselves, as the Northerners may well do, with the recollection that we had done, not our utmost, but more than enough for our character; and we smote hands with those who thenceforth became our friends, and whose friendship we are not ashamed (even amid certain foolish taunts and menaces) to say that we have ever valued. What need prevent the Northern States from following the example of England? Will they ignore their points of honour higher than we do? Surely, what England has done the North may do without shame!

If the best class in America would rise to the work—would put down the war party and with it protract the strife while there is a dollar to be gained by the one, and will take the matter into their own hands, beginning at the basis of satisfied honour—we do not see why we should not, ere long, receive news of a new conference, and, instead of such disappointing tidings as have just arrived, we should not learn with hearty satisfaction that North and South had arranged a peace. May we soon have to record such a consummation.

THE COURT.

The Queen, with the junior members of the Royal family, continues at Osborne House, in the enjoyment of excellent health.

On Wednesday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louise, walked and drove in the grounds adjacent to Osborne. The Prince and Princess of Leiningen dined with her Majesty. The Judge-Advocate-General had an audience of the Queen. The Chancellor of the Exchequer arrived at Osborne from London, and had an audience of her Majesty.

On Thursday week the Queen held a Council, which was attended by Earl Granville, Viscount Palmerston, Sir George Grey, and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. Mr. Arthur Hegge was sworn of the Council. At the Council, Parliament was ordered to be prorogued from Friday, the 29th inst., to Thursday, the 11th of October next. Earl Granville and Viscount Palmerston had audiences of the Queen. Later in the day her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, Princess Louise, Viscount Palmerston, Sir George Grey, and the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, and attended by the Countess Dowager of Morley, Lady Ely, the Hon. Mrs. Brand, Baroness de Graney, Major-General Seymour, Colonel Sir T. M. Biddulph, and Captain von Westerweller, landed the latter gentleman upon the Royal Sovereign, lying off Osborne. The Queen embarked in the Royal yacht Fury, at Osborne pier, at six o'clock, and, the yacht having been hailed alongside the Royal Sovereign, her Majesty proceed on board and was received by Captain Sherard Osborn and Captain C. Coles, who was in charge of the Turret-ship. Captain Coles explained to her Majesty the construction and arrangement of the turrets and other parts of the ship, of which her Majesty expressed great admiration. Her Majesty, after inspecting the Royal Sovereign, cruised in the Fairy towards Ryde before returning to Osborne. The Ministers returned to London.

Yesterday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse and Princess Louise, drove in the neighbourhood of Osborne. The Dean of Westminster and Lady Augusta Stanley arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of dining with her Majesty.

On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, and attended by Major-General Seymour, drove out in a carriage and four. The Right Hon. C. P. Villiers arrived at Osborne, and had an audience of her Majesty.

On Sunday the Duke and Princess Louisa attended Divine service at Whippingham Church. The Dean of Westminster and the Rev. G. Prothero officiated.

On Thursday Prince Leopold laid the foundation-stone of a new infirmary at Bishop's Waltham, in Hampshire.

The Queen, with the Royal family, takes daily walks and drives in the vicinity of Osborne.

Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey and Lieutenant-Colonel Du Plat have succeeded Major-General Seymour and Colonel the Hon. A. Hardinge as Equerries in Waiting.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince Albert Victor, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Grosvenor and Captain Grey, arrived at Osborne Cottage, Osborne, yesterday week, from Goodwood House.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess attended Divine service in Whippingham Church.

On Monday the Prince, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse, the Prince of Leiningen, and the James Clarke, and attended by Major-General Seymour, Lieutenant-General Knollys, Captain Grey, and Captain von Westerweller, proceeded in the Royal yacht to the Royal Victoria Hospital, at Netley. His Royal Highness was received upon landing by Major-General Lord William Paulet, C.B., colonel Wilbraham, and the officers connected with the hospital. The ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of a cross in memory of the officers of the Army Medical Department who lost their lives in the Crimean War was performed by the Prince. After the ceremonial, the Prince was conducted through the establishment and inspected the various wards. Upon leaving the hospital his Royal Highness proceed to the officers' mess-house and partook of luncheon. The Prince shortly after rejoined the Princess Fairy amid the enthusiastic cheers of the spectators, and returned to Osborne.

The Prince and Princess daily ride and drives in the neighbourhood of Osborne; and on Tuesday and Wednesday last, accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Leiningen, they cruised in the Fairy and witnessed some of the matches in the Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge arrived at Gloucester House, Park-lane, on Saturday last from visiting the Queen at Osborne, and the Duke and Duchess of Richmond at Goodwood Park, Sussex.

Their Serene Highnesses the Prince and Princess Edward of Saxe-Weimar returned to town on Saturday last from Richmond, Goodwood.

His Excellency the Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne left the French Embassy on Saturday last for Paris.

His Excellency the Prussian Ambassador and Countess Bernstorff left Carlton House-terrace on Saturday last for St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

Count and Countess de Flahault have arrived at Coventry House, Piccadilly, from Germany.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch and Lady Victoria Scott arrived at their house in Belgrave-square on Saturday last from visiting the Duke and Duchess of Richmond at Goodwood Park.

The Duke and Duchess of Northumberland left town on Wednesday for Sion House, Isleworth.

The Duke and Duchess of Manchester have left town for Kimbolton Castle, Huntingdonshire.

The Duke and Duchess of Argyll have left their villa at Campden Hill, Kensington, for Inveraray Castle, Argyllshire, for the autumn.

The Duke and Duchess of Athole are expected home early in November from North America, where the noble Duke is doing duty with the 1st battalion of the 60th Rifles Brigade in Canada.

The Duchess (Emily) of Beaufort and Lord and Lady Lansdowne have left town for the Isle of Wight.

The Marquis of Abercorn left town on Tuesday for Beaudesert, Staffordshire. The Marchioness, with the Earl and Countess of Mount-Edgcumbe, has gone to Cheltenham Wells.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Northampton left town on Saturday last for Great Malvern.

Earl and Countess Russell left Pembroke Lodge on Wednesday on a visit to Lord Harry Vane.

The Earl and Countess of Clarendon and Lady Emily Villiers have arrived at Wiesbaden from Paris.

The Earl and Countess of Derby have left St. James's-square for Knowsley Park, near Prescot, Lancashire, for the autumn.

Lord and Lady Stanley of Alderley left Dover-street on Saturday last for Germany.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer left town on Wednesday for Hawarden Castle, Chester.

The Right Hon. the Speaker and Lady Charlotte Denison left town on Tuesday for Bournemouth.

The Dean of Worcester left Rochampton on Monday for the Deanery, Worcester.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.

The marriage of Lieutenant-Colonel J. F. Crichton-Stuart, M.P., eldest son and heir of the late Lord James Stuart, with Miss Gertrude Seymour, second daughter of Sir Hamilton and the Hon. Lady Seymour, was solemnised on Thursday week at St. James's Church, Piccadilly.

A marriage is arranged between Miss Rowley, the eldest daughter of Colonel the Hon. Richard T. Rowley, M.P., and Mrs. Rowley, and Captain Hamilton, late of the 2nd Life Guards. Captain John Christie is about to be married to Miss Ellen Falconer, only daughter of Mr. Christie Falconer.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Andrew Mortimer Drummond, Esq., banker, of Charing-cross, and of Denham, Bucks, was proved under £70,000 personalty. The executors nominated were his partner, Andrew Robert Drummond, Esq., and his grandson, nephew, George Andrew Drummond, Esq. The will bears date Feb. 13, 1862, and he died on June 1 this year. His wife, Emily Drummond, survives, and one unmarried daughter, Georgiana. To this seven daughters he has made a provision that will, together with their respective portions under the settlement, make up for each the sum of £40,000, and to his son £13,000 beyond all other interests under the will.

The will of Vice-Admiral Sir Astley Paushawe, K.C.B., was proved in the London Court on the 21st ult. The gallant Admiral died at his residence, Lower-terrace, Regent's Park, on the 14th of last month at Plymouth, having executed his will at Malta in 1858, and a codicil in 1861 at Stone Hall, Plymouth. These documents are entirely in his own handwriting, and he appointed being his daughter, Miss Eliza Freshfield; his two sons, Charles Kaye and Henry Kay Freshfield, Esqrs., and Arthur Lancaster, Esq., the testator of the testator's eldest granddaughter). The personalty was sworn under £120,000. The testator, who died at the age of 77, entered the navy as a child to his father, at Gray's Inn, in 1842; was formerly solicitor to the Board of Inland Revenue; was Master of the Rolls, Ireland, which office he retained by Royal permission; was M.P. for Fintrym and Falmouth, 1830-2, 1835-41, and 1852-7, and for Dublin, 1865-2. He was married in 1817 to Miss Kay, daughter of his grandson, William Dawes Freshfield, eldest son of his deceased son, James William Freshfield, to all his personal estate and effects, for his own use, to his two sons and executors all his other freehold property. To his two daughters he leaves an annuity of £1400, and out of it £100 to be paid to each for pin money. The residue of his property is to be divided into five parts between his two sons, two daughters, and the children of his eldest deceased son. The testator had presented to him two silver waiters—one by the Irish barristers' Conservative Club, and the Hon. Artillery Company's case are to be held by his daughters for life, and then to pass to his grandson, William Dawes Freshfield, Esq., as heirlooms.

According to the Austrian Gazette, Leipsic, for 80,000 inhabitants, has fourteen public schools, containing in all about 10,414 pupils; and eleven private schools, with 169 teachers and 913 scholars.

By the King of Prussia's order the customary prayers for the safe delivery of the Crown Princess will be solemnly offered up throughout Prussia from and after the 14th inst.

During her Majesty's absence from Windsor nearly one hundred workpeople have been employed at the castle in re-decorating and re-gilding the Queen's private apartments and the grand staircase, and also making five additional rooms in Henry III.'s Tower.

King George of Greece, during his late tour through his kingdom, rejoiced, on his arrival at Mesolonghi in three years' time. His Majesty was shocked at its dilapidated condition, and gave orders for the immediate repair of the poet's last residence.

Letters from Corfu of the 26th ult. state that, in consequence of the new organisation of the Ionian Isles, the various departments of each of the seven islands are for the future to correspond only with the respective Ministries of the Hellenic kingdom. The newly-elected deputies had also attended the preceding day at Athens.

Advices from Tunis announce that, in consequence of a reduction of taxation, an unprecedented degree of loyalty has moved towards the Government and the insurgents. Fourteen of the principal tribes have already given in their submission. Ben Ghadahem, the chief of the revolt, has been permitted to leave the Regency. The Bey is said to be enrolling fresh troops, principally Europeans.

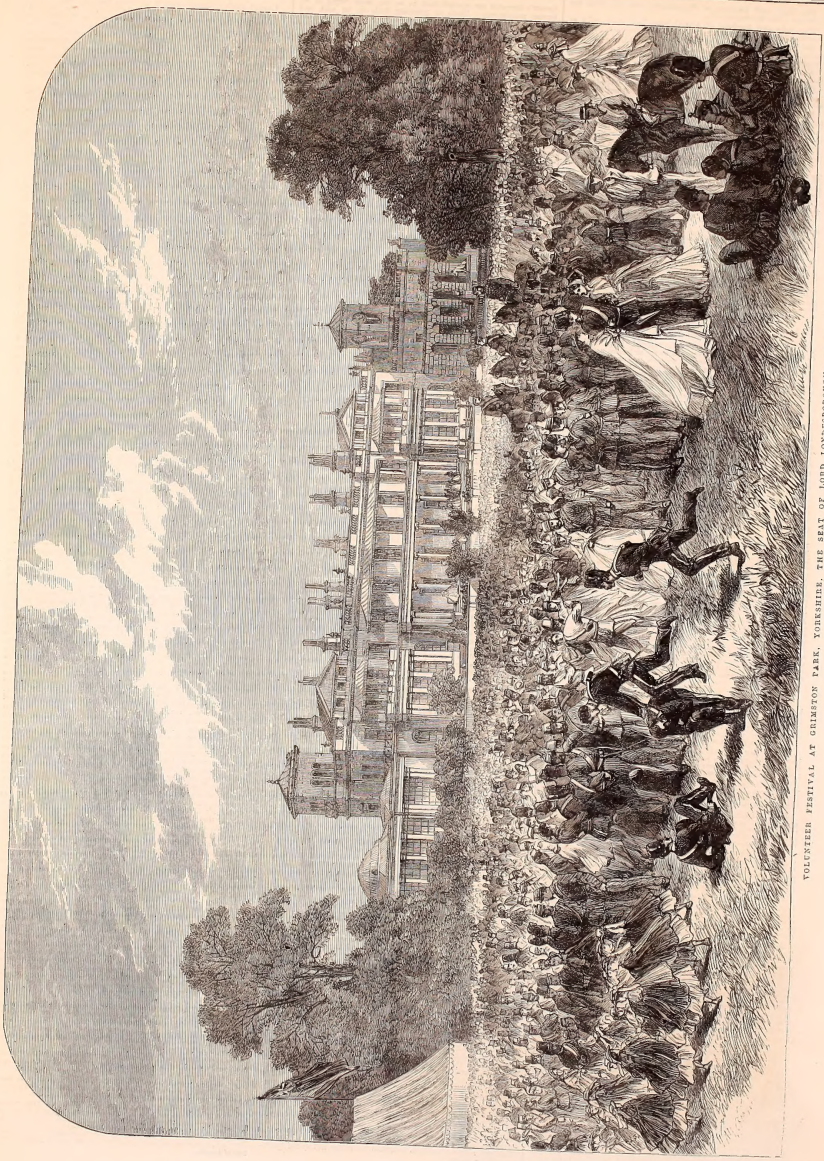
The great work of boring a tunnel through Mount Cenis has been recently inspected by a commission specially charged with the duty, accompanied by the French engineers employed on the undertaking, and a report made on the subject. It is calculated that ten years more of continuous labour is requisite before the communications between the two sides can be advanced so as to unite the territories of France and Italy.

A cricket-match between Eton and Harrow was played at the Trent-bridge ground, Nottingham, on Thursday and Friday, last week, Surrey winning, with one wicket to spare. Nottinghamshire beat Kent by 81 and Surrey, 127 and 63.—Middlesex played the Marylebone Club and Ground, on Monday and Tuesday, on the Middlesex ground, Lord's, and won by an unlooked affair could hardly be imagined, the county winning in one innings, with 232 runs over. Middlesex 411; Marylebone, 111 and 68.—At the Oval, Surrey ground, Kennington-oval, on Wednesday, the match between Surrey and Yorkshire was brought to a close, the former winning by sixty runs. Surrey scored 143 and 137; Yorkshire, 100 and 140.—The match between All England and Hampshire was brought to a close on Friday, at Harrogate winning, with five wickets to fall.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh displayed a princely hospitality at Goodwood House during last week, on the occasion of the annual race-meeting. The Prince and Princess of Wales were also present, and the Duke and Duchess by staying at Goodwood House two nights. The following distinguished company formed the "party" which had assembled to meet their Royal Highnesses at dinner:—The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort and Lady Victoria and Lady Margaret Somerset, the Marquis of Abercorn, the Earl and Countess of Chesterfield, the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Westmoreland, Earl and Countess Percy, the Earl of Stafford, Viscount Canterbury, Viscount Hinchinbrook, Lord Bingham, Lord and Lady Alex. Gordon Lennox, Lord Dunkellin, Lord Henry Gordon Lennox, Colonel the Hon. James Macdonald, Admiral the Hon. Henry Rous, Colonel Teesr, Colonel Keppel, Colonel Greville, Mr. Charles Greville, Sir Fitzroy, Mr. Fitzroy, General Peel, Sir Robert Brownrigg, Sir Fred. Johnstone, Mr. Fred. Captain Saville, and others. The Duke of Cambridge was in base arrived on Wednesday, but was, by command of the Queen, invited to Osborne, and did not join the party till Thursday evening. Both on Wednesday and Thursday nights there was a carpet dance, a relief few being invited to join the company after dinner. The Prince and Princess of Wales left on Friday to pass a week at Osborne Cottage, before going to Scotland for the autumn. Many of the guests left on Friday, but the whole of the company did not quit the decal residence till Saturday.

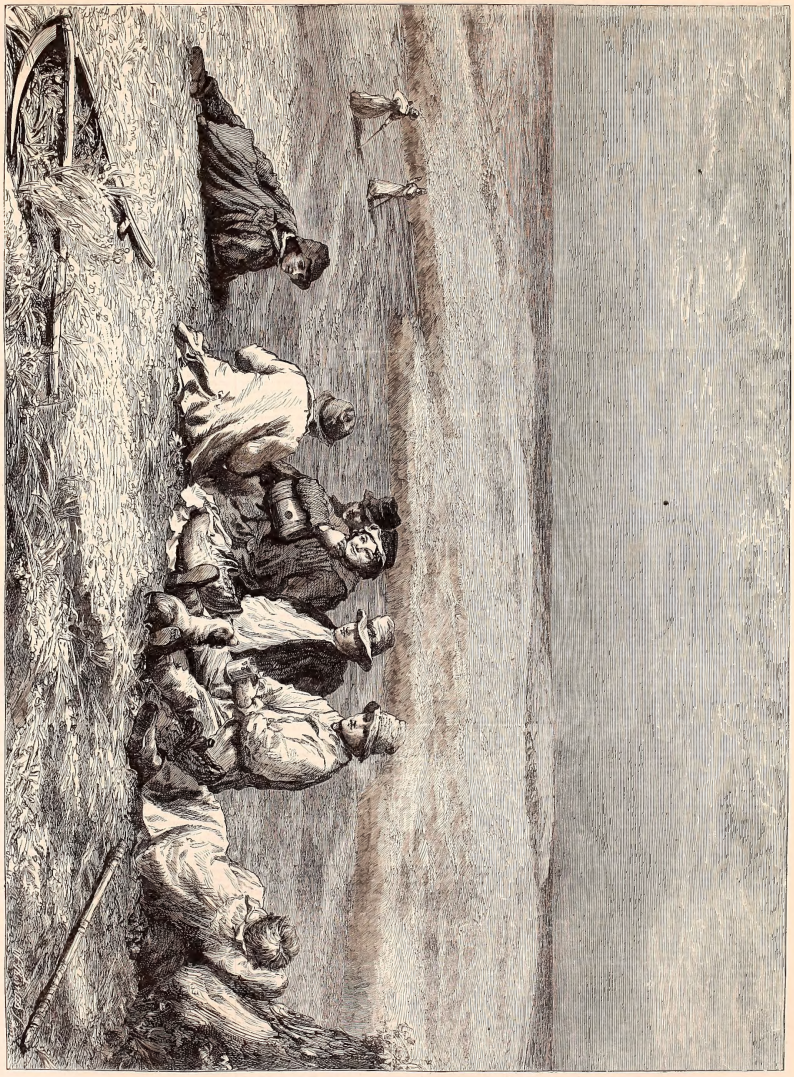
ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S Speeches are always liable to be the most empty of all human productions. There is generally little to be said, and the many authors of these pieces are greatly troubled in finding out the most grammatical way of "how not to say it." This year they have succeeded to admiration in accordance with custom, to a nicety. Nothing could be more empty than the little political exercise which we heard at the close of last week. It had no idea put forth even one remark from our French friends. Denmark and her troubles are dismissed in a sentence, and the great war in America, which has as yet produced the most crop of any event both in this country and across the Atlantic, fares no better. The "scare" in Washington and New York seems, however, to have produced a better state of mind in the North; and the difficulties of Mr. President, the unwillingness of the merchants to come forward with a new loan, the evident reluctance of the Northern citizens to recruit a wasted and an exhausted army, and the rumoured resignation of Mr. Stanton, are all items which, combined, give us hope that the days of a not very distant peace. Mr. Horace Greeley and the Peace Democrats will, it seems, now-a-day which either take away [illegible] even Mr. Bennett's organ, the New York Herald, writes of the war as hopelessly as our newspapers have any time these two years. The North is slowly but surely making up its mind to let the "wayward sisters depart in peace" and the wayward sisters have only to hold their own a little longer, to defeat Grant and get an end to the last attempt to take Richmond, and to wait the sure revulsion of public feeling, to obtain their own terms. It is to be hoped that fair play will be extended to the new English press show a firmness and faith in the great Republic which its own papers do not exhibit; and we constantly see placards of Federal successes to-day which either fade away into nothing, or, like those brilliant sunny bubbles as in magic lantern, suddenly change all the glorious and horrent splendour and colour.



A new phase of politics has lately made its appearance, and has been so far accepted that until, as some people whisper he is to do, Mr. Bernard will be elected member for Salisbury. Foreign Politics, Affairs, it will be our future rule. We are no longer to meddle and muddle in European politics, we are to concentrate all our care on colonies, which latter, we are told, are quite ripe to drop off from us. We are already to be free from the pain chimney of governing and enlarging our trade; Manchester is to rule supreme; and those tributaries of the people, Mr. John Bright and Mr. Richard Cobden, are to be, as it were, the Solomon joint-counsellors upon a brotherly union—two Kings of Brentford sitting on one throne—both smelling at the one nosegay—both swearing to Christian principles with the nettle danger. Is it possible that England will accept this quiet part? If she does accept it, will she keep to it long? Perhaps the very worst part of it is that it is a repeal of Canning, and a general or merely local attack upon our most valuable allies, is to destroy the whole of the Holy Alliance. Whether we are not going to strike again. It is sometimes well to resort to the maxims of Machiavelli, and to strike at once, and we remember that Sir Andrew Agnecheek and Bob Acres were both egged on to duelling and ferocious expression by the belief that their antagonists were easy of conquest. Perhaps the most remarkable feature of this Saturnian reign is to commence in these happy islands we shall soon be hearing only of peace and quietness, and of Europeans into engine-boilers, much to the delight of those kind friends who look to profit by our misfortunes.

The Conservatives after the last defeat, are determined to reorganise their forces, and find a great deal of fault with their "whip," and with the too cool way in which their generals were led. They have gained much by the late beating," said one; "we were always bragging about it as unbeatable, and now that we have got a real fight we see towards success in this matter is to know the extent of your deficiencies." Had they not, if they wish to attract the sympathies of the men, begin to cut themselves off from the "wayward sisters' band" which is so noisy and much less melodious than that music?



It would seem that the sympathies of the Queen and the Royal family are Prussian in their sympathies over here, but that one at least, or, indeed, that natural, is entirely so in Berlin. It is well to find a perfect accord between the sovereign and people. The wife generally holds even more strongly than the part of Queen Consort, than that of Queen Regnant, as she has expressed. "As the husband, so the wife" is, sings Mr. Tennyson, a motto for a Queen. The Princess Royal of Prussia, daughter of her who, it will be remembered, as a pupil of Edward Corbould, painted a dead Grenadier for the Crimean Patriotic Fund, will exhibit at Berlin four cartoons representing the principal incidents of the Prussian troops at the taking of Düppel and the slaughter of the brave but obstinate Danes who defended it. We do not think the Princess had found some other subjects for her pencil. No doubt, the artistic feeling of the Princess Royal is inherited from the English name and fame are both at a discount; but the notice jars a tender chord in English breasts.

Whether Prussia needs blessing," the House of Lords, is presumed to be weak and to require fresh blood, or whether Lord Palmerston is about to take a trip to Berlin, we cannot say at the hand—a more likely case—we know not, but six new peerages are created on a certain. Lady Palmerston will, it is stated, become Viscountess Melbourne in her own right, with remainder to her second son, the Hon. W. Cowper. Sir C. Wood, the Hon. Wentworth Beaumont, and Mr. Baines, of Leeds, are the other peerages. The Marquis of Westminster will be made a Duke. Possibly this measure will be accompanied by the usual of her pulpits, "tame" the Lords to the Prime Minister's liking.

The season of the theatres is, with one or two exceptions, over, and we have to look forward to the autumn. The great rival of Mr. Phelps in the character of Hamlet, that French rival Mr. Vezin, has left us, and Mr. Phelps remains alone in his glory and gained so little, is, it is understood, unwilling to open the Lyceum again; and Mr. Fechter, the utterly French play, with real emotion, epigrammatic dialogue, and consummate upholstery, will be disappointed when they find the Lyceum closed. Mr. and Mrs. Wigan have, it is understood, left the Lyceum Gallery for the Haymarket, and to produce thereat pieces like "Still Waters," and others, in which Mrs. Wigan excels. Mr. Wigan will have the best-placed theatre in London, and one that, if well conducted, will make a fortune for its lessee. Mr. Henry Leslie has left the Lyceum for the Haymarket company that we have had since Mr. Macready's day. Messrs. Phelps, Brownrigg, Henry Neville, Emery, Farren, and Miss Kate Terry are in the company, as well as Miss Fanell, Mrs. Herman Vezin (C. Young), and Mrs. Henry Marston. "Cymbeline" will be the new upholsterer

VOLUNTEER FESTIVAL AT GRIMSTON PARK, YORKSHIRE, THE SEAT OF LORD LONDESBOROUGH.—SEE PAGE 145.

"HAYMAKERS," BY J. LINNELL, SEN., FROM THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—SEE PAGE 135.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THE last faint shadow of the Parliamentary dissolving view has at length disappeared, and it is only fair to say that seldom has a view dissolved so slowly and lingeringly. For the three days before the last of the sittings of the Lower House, nobody could tell when the prorogation would take place. Members of easy temperament, like Lord Naas; of dreamy temperament, like Mr. Kinglake; and of nervous temperament, like Mr. Hennessy, went on making their arrangements for set debates with a simplicity and an appearance of hope of fruition as complete as if they were dealing with the first days of February. Nay, the Government contributed not a little to the illusion that Sessional time was a matter of no consequence, by having on only early stages at least one of the most important bills of the year before them, and which they did not seem inclined to hurry on, but they actually set down in the notices motions for leave to bring in bills which, on the face of them, would take a month to pass through one house. In the Lords, although orders of the day were hurried through every evening at that clippingpace which is characteristic of our hereditary legislators when they give themselves up honestly to the duty of registering the decrees of the Commons, yet the judicial business—the appeals, which are generally brought to a conclusion ten days before the house is shut up—was carried on with calm indifference, and judgments in certain cases were set down for Saturday in a manner that showed great leisurely. In fact, everything seemed to portend that the Session would creep into August; and there were whispers that Ministers did not care, as they had engagements, and some business too, that would keep them in town for another week, and they did not mind early sittings; and such early sittings would enable them to be in time for late dinners, which, somehow or the other, it seemed to have suddenly occurred to certain folk ought to be given to them.

Accordingly, with a resolute band of forty members or so for a quorum, the Commons met on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at two o'clock, and the Government announced as well that they had left Naas hanging about on the two first of those days, waiting to bring on the question of our policy with Japan, with which he had commenced self in the previous few days. They played him like a fish, beautifully. There was Mr. Layard always in his place, with a bundle of papers and blue-books, and then Lord Palmerston would come in, looking full of matter—he never encumbers himself with documents—and would sit with an air of attention opposite to Lord Naas, who would rise to go and on the first Opposition bench, which was mostly empty, and apparently went about seeking some ex-colleague who would take a place there, and who would at last find a bottle-holder for him, and so save him the trial of not having any one to whom he could turn—after the manner of Parliamentary Lords—to be the recipient in acknowledgment of an appreciative cheer, when he made one of those unmeaning points with his arm he was, of course, ready for the thunderbolts of stern facts darted upon it by the Attorney-General for Ireland. Mr. Hennessy, for the most time, probably in his first Parliamentary career, looked a trifle—it was but a trifle—crestfallen; but his wounded in the course of the day, and he was not long in finding out that there was absent to carry on the offensive directly after forcing on a division, when a calculation of members in the House and in its precincts told him that he would be in a direct way to victory if there were not forty members to be had, and that the sitting must die of inanition. Therefore, he suffered his motion to be negatived, and as soon as the next business arrived, made he would his sisters and the appointment by at once, and in the most pointed manner, moving that the House be counted, which operation, as it was then known that divisions were also as agreeable because they are in the nature of unexpected pleasures. All the next day, from noon till dewy eve, Lord Naas watched and waited, but in vain; for some reason or other, which does not need to be chronicled, he could not get into the grooves, and at last he disappeared in the Commissioners' apartments behind the Speaker's chair and was seen no more, although his motion lingered on the paper until the very last moment of the Session.

On the Thursday a remarkable occurrence took place. It was in the afternoon, and there were certainly not more than five or twelve members present, and the Government was represented only by Mr. Layard, when Lord Edward Howard, who had placed on the paper a motion, very modest in its terms, with regard to engagements in America, rose, and in that simple but earnest manner which belongs to him, and which gives every one who hears him the impression that they are listening to an honest man of kindly feelings and warm sympathies, delivered a statement of facts the relation of which kept the small audience present, as it would have kept a larger one, breathless to the whole time he was speaking. His disclosure of the system of kidnapping Englishmen and Irishmen, carried on in the United Army, and his irresistible statements of the disappointments and sufferings of emigrants who, escaping the perilous decrees of strings who have learned that the school of the slave-trade. attempt to utilise their labour in what they believe to be a new and more honourable field than their own country, produced, there can be no doubt, so much conviction into the minds of those that heard this Parliamentary speech, that Mr. Layard declared that he would ready for the evil would be the dissemination of that address amongst those whom it most concerned; and Mr. Fermand, in his impulsive way, asked if the Government would print and circulate it as the form of a pamphlet. Lord Edward himself made an earnest appeal to the agents of the "ordinary channels" of publication, and to the ear of the public in the most unquestionable shape that their art could mould. For the first time, perhaps, in the annals of Parliament the Reporters' Gallery was disregarded, the Speaker being for the time ignored.

Just about this time there came glad tidings, borne upon the wings of those invisible spirits who haunt the regions of rumour, that the prorogation was positively fixed for the next day (Friday), and that the Lord Chancellor and the Speaker would be in communication about the day, whether it should be Saturday or not, the latter having prevailed, and the great legal functionary had drawn in the judgments of the House of Lords and signified the time at their delivery by the day to meet the exigency to which he had yielded.

There were rumours of great efforts and pressure to sweep up all the shreds and kayings into that tidy-basket of the last week of the Session—namely, the Royal Commission for the Queen Majesty's assent to certain measures passed by both Houses of Parliament. On the fated morning the law Lords met early and dishonoured themselves of their judgments in two appeal cases, then proceeded, with appropriate calmness and leisure, to continue the arguments in a part-heard matter. It was soon found, however, that, unless they hurried, by one o'clock was given to it, could not be concluded; and the Lord Chancellor, in his most measured and sarcastic tones, stated in effect that his engagements had been over-taken to suffer the delay and the vacation, which a sense of public duty would have induced him to sacrifice, and therefore the matter must suffer the delay and expense of waiting until next year. He also announced that the hurry and confusion which had necessarily accompanied the effort to vent the arrival of the Royal Commission at the house until an unusually late hour, and so he retired to a dignified repose until the advent of that hour. Although, with reference to this circumstance, the Commons did not meet until two o'clock, they had before them a full hour and a half; and, of course, pen, ink-well, sand-dredger, and other implements of writing were ready to hand. Mr. Kinglake, rousing for some reason or other, from the torpor in which he is always dependent, rose, erected his chin, which is his mode of displaying oratorical action, and dropped out a series of neat sentences as if they were too precious to be poured out, but were, so to say, the distillation of his sagacious thoughts about Mexican affairs, of which he seemed to speak as Coleridge wrote of the realms of Kubla Khan, and caused a like influence. Still he does contrive to make interesting what he says, and did so then. But, as the excitement he caused was not greater than that which would have arisen from the disjointed chat which would have ensued if the House had to wait in formal silence for the coming of Black Rod, he was by so much a temporary benefactor to those assembled. Not the less, because he enabled Lord Palmerston to present himself with what may be called his prorogation day manner upon him. On these occasions—and this time he especially did so—the noble Lord puts on a wonderful air of freshness, his countenance beams, and his whole demeanour is intended to indicate that he has just come from the country, and from him no chance is that he has made arrangements which will enable him during the vacation to exercise his lungs, expand his chest, and keep his muscles in such a state that a long back read February next will not find the prime minister six months of Premier's work. All this and more he developed splendidly in his late speech, which was, appropriately enough, "the" last speech in the Commons of the Session; for, by a happy if not pre-arranged coincidence, just as he concluded came the solemn rap of the cast-iron-looking messenger of the Lords, who orders the Lower House to come quickly and early to attend the Peers immediately, as if he were only waiting for the Commons to make their bow. Then, of course, there would incur if their obedience was not prompt. In truth, the Commons of persons who have seen works of this kind in Rome, Venice, Ravenna, Montreale, Munich, and elsewhere on the Continent. In richness and force, if not in florid and luminous effect, the vitrified colours and gilding of the mosaic will well sustain comparison with fresco, while, in the words of Vasari, it is "the only painting for eternity."

We have on a former occasion remarked that Wren designed that the mosaics should be the first masterpiece should be filled with mosaics. Public opinion, or, we might add, Parliamentary prejudice, has, however, retarded the execution of decorations of any kind. Some ninety years ago, when Sir Joshua Reynolds was engaged with other of his contemporaries, to paint subjects on the walls of St. Paul's gratuitously, the liberal offer was declined by Bishop Terrick, the Bishop of London of that day, because it would open the door to Popery! It is only of quite recent years that paintings have, except in very rare instances, been admitted into English churches. Even the frescoes by the late Mr. Dyce, in the Church of All Saints, Margaret-street, being the most important examples. It was reserved for Mr. Penn, R.A., with the express approval of the Dean and Chapter, and the Archbishop of Canterbury himself, to be the first to call in the committee on the proposed decorations), is, then, a significant sign of the times, and one of noteworthy promise in relation to the future of British art, seeing that it gives the highest encouragement to the introduction of painting for the embellishment of churches generally. For our part, we think the Dean and Chapter, and the Commissioners (the architect is master to the cathedral), worthy of all honour for having endeavoured to remove the reproach of our unfinished metropolitan cathedral; and it would be a discredit to the country and even to the age, if, as hitherto, all their efforts were to fail solely for want of funds. Yet, from having witnessed the enormous difficulties in the completion of the under-taking, and the great risk of failure without sufficient professional guidance, we have from the commencement of the undertaking refused to us a disposition towards a precipitate choice of artists and applicants for foreign aid. But more especially we asked that, before any final decision, publicity should be given to every proposal, and that due public opinion might be consulted in regard to that for the realisation of which a public subscription is solicited.

It would seem that a different course has been taken in regard to these decorations since our original remarks, of some eighteen months ago. Mr. Stevens, who has been entrusted with the original cartoon for the apse mosaic, has received a direct commission, and his design for the spandril mosaic in the west bay of the north transept, in the provisional model of the choir, with the proposed decorations executed to scale, is also to be seen in the temporary exhibition. We confess therefrom that the designs are only conditionally accepted, and still under consideration, for if it were otherwise the preparation of a model would be a needless expenditure. We should, however, to have seen this completed, we cannot refrain from saying that had the preparatory cartoon been published to the artist public in general, for the use of that kind—though, by-the-way, for this very reason, too many precautions to ensure success cannot be taken. Mr. Stevens's cartoon is fully as well qualified to design a mural decoration as to execute a piece of sculpture. It is true that he has very evidently studied Michael Angelo; in fact, the style and the "motif" of the present design of Isaiah are plainly derived from the Prophets and Sibyls of the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. There is, nevertheless, a nervousness in the working out of the primary conception. Instead of representing Isaiah as having written his prophecies on scrolls, which are being carried off and perused by mannikin gnomi—so, for instance, in Michael Angelo's Delphic Sibyl—Mr. Stevens makes the Prophet's own angels that they are heavenly messengers bearing the Divine revelations to the prophet. It may be remarked here that the displayed wings of these angels compose, with admirable skill, the triangular space of the spandril, though the device will impose the alternative for subsequent designs for the decoration of either a monumental representation of the same device, or else a diversity that can scarcely be rendered harmonious. According what appears the obvious meaning of the design, we shall understand that the figure of Isaiah has not been arbitrarily violently almost, to scrutinise some Divine communication inscribed on the tablet held by the angel to his left, which, unfortunately of awful import, is full of mystery. The angel bending over the prophet holds up the tablet to the distinguished land, as if to enjoin silence to his companion on the other side of Isaiah, or to restrain him from discovering the further revelation which is supposed to be contained in the closed tablet held in the hand of the angel to the outward that with which he is so intently preoccupied. This is, no doubt, a very appropriate conception, but it has been carried out at the expense of one of the cardinal laws of composition in monumental art. The mind of Isaiah, which should be the principal attention and the great centre of interest, which should have been kept perfectly distinct and clear from accessories, is bowed so low and thrust so far aside, close to the tablet at which he is trying to peep, that the head, which, only, we might almost say, by seeking for it that we can detach it quite clearly from the two angels' heads which it is in close proximity to and in contact. We first see the two angels; then, in the space of gold ground, where we naturally look for the head of Isaiah, there is an unpleasant hiatus followed by the arm of the second angel's profile. Some confusion arises, also, from either the seat of the throne not having been made visible or the arms thereof not being clear. The consequence is that the figure seems somewhat disjointed, an effect which exaggerates the lengthy proportion. In many paintings representative of an actual scene, the lopping off of limbs, drapery, &c., at the boundaries is, of course, inevitable, though to be avoided as much as possible; but in a design which is a conventional ground (as this gold one) the design should be strictly monumental and complete in itself, and not suggestive of continuation, and, as a rule, parts excised by the boundary-line. This was the objection, we understand, to Mr. Leighton's competitive design; by-the-way, however, not much in accordance with the rest of the composition. In Mr. Stevens's design there is also a certain want of largeness, simplicity, and distinctness of colour as well as form, though it has many of the qualities which we have been expected from any English artist, remembering their want of experience.

These cartoons are also in an invidious spirit; but, from a tolerably extensive acquaintance with the best mural paintings on the Continent, and from the novelty of the subject, we have reason to feel absolutely certain that, unless these decorations are carefully watched and every shortcoming noted as it arises for future guidance, much of the scheme may be grievously disappointing. We have plenty of artists competent to the work, but they should be required to make a few preliminary essays. And we may be permitted to submit to the Dean and Chapter that the plan intended to have been followed in the proposed decorations under the direction of Reynolds is not unworthy of imitation. It was intended that the pictures, to be painted gratuitously, by Sir Joshua himself, West, Barry, Cipriani, Angelica Kauffman, &c., should be "seen, examined, and approved by the Academy before they were offered to the Dean and Chapter; and the Dean and Chapter might then give directions for alterations and amendments, and receive or refuse them, as they thought them worthy or unworthy of the places for which they were designed."

FINE ARTS.

THE MOSAIC IN ST. PAUL'S.

THE first of the mosaic pictures with which it is proposed to decorate the metropolitan cathedral, as funds from public subscription become available, has been uncovered. It fills one of the eight spandrils of the arches under the drum of the dome. The design, which comprises three figures—the Apostle Paul between two angels—by Mr. Edward Stevens, the sculptor who has been so long engaged on (at least we presume so, as he was the successful competitor and received the commission) the National Wellington Monument for the same cathedral, and who has been recently elected an Associate of the Royal Academy. The cartoon has been executed by Venetian workmen, under the superintendence of Dr. Salviati, to whom is due the revival of the ancient manufacture at Murano, and who is also now engaged preparing the mosaic-work for the memorial chapel to the late Prince Consort at Windsor. The cost of the mosaic is estimated at £700, which includes any remuneration paid for the design. Of the superior advantages of mosaic for mural decoration, especially when placed at large spaces removed to a considerable distance from the eye, there can be little doubt in the mind of persons who have seen works of this kind in Rome, Venice, Ravenna, Monreale, Munich, and elsewhere on the Continent. In richness and force, if not in florid and luminous effect, the vitrified colours and gilding of the mosaic will well sustain comparison with fresco, while, in the words of Vasari, it is "the only painting for eternity."

We have on a former occasion remarked that Wren designed that the interior of his great masterpiece should be filled with mosaics. Public opinion, or, we might add, Parliamentary prejudice, has, however, retarded the execution of decorations of any kind. Some ninety years ago, when Sir Joshua Reynolds was engaged with other of his contemporaries, to paint subjects on the walls of St. Paul's gratuitously, the liberal offer was declined by Bishop Terrick, the Bishop of London of that day, because it would open the door to Popery! It is only of quite recent years that paintings have, except in very rare instances, been admitted into English churches. Even the frescoes by the late Mr. Dyce, in the Church of All Saints, Margaret-street, being the most important examples. It was reserved for Mr. Penn, R.A., with the express approval of the Dean and Chapter, and the Archbishop of Canterbury himself, to be the first to call in the committee on the proposed decorations), is, then, a significant sign of the times, and one of noteworthy promise in relation to the future of British art, seeing that it gives the highest encouragement to the introduction of painting for the embellishment of churches generally. For our part, we think the Dean and Chapter, and the Commissioners (the architect is master to the cathedral), worthy of all honour for having endeavoured to remove the reproach of our unfinished metropolitan cathedral; and it would be a discredit to the country and even to the age, if, as hitherto, all their efforts were to fail solely for want of funds. Yet, from having witnessed the enormous difficulties in the completion of the undertaking, and the great risk of failure without sufficient professional guidance, we have from the commencement of the undertaking refused to us a disposition towards a precipitate choice of artists and applicants for foreign aid. But more especially we asked that, before any final decision, publicity should be given to every proposal, and that due public opinion might be consulted in regard to that for the realisation of which a public subscription is solicited.

It would seem that a different course has been taken in regard to these decorations since our original remarks, of some eighteen months ago. Mr. Stevens, who has been entrusted with the original cartoon for the apse mosaic, has received a direct commission, and his design for the spandril mosaic in the west bay of the north transept, in the provisional model of the choir, with the proposed decorations executed to scale, is also to be seen in the temporary exhibition. We confess therefrom that the designs are only conditionally accepted, and still under consideration, for if it were otherwise the preparation of a model would be a needless expenditure. We should, however, to have seen this completed, we cannot refrain from saying that had the preparatory cartoon been published to the artist public in general, for the use of that kind—though, by-the-way, for this very reason, too many precautions to ensure success cannot be taken. Mr. Stevens's cartoon is fully as well qualified to design a mural decoration as to execute a piece of sculpture. It is true that he has very evidently studied Michael Angelo; in fact, the style and the "motif" of the present design of Isaiah are plainly derived from the Prophets and Sibyls of the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. There is, nevertheless, a nervousness in the working out of the primary conception. Instead of representing Isaiah as having written his prophecies on scrolls, which are being carried off and perused by mannikin gnomi—so, for instance, in Michael Angelo's Delphic Sibyl—Mr. Stevens makes the Prophet's own angels that they are heavenly messengers bearing the Divine revelations to the prophet. It may be remarked here that the displayed wings of these angels compose, with admirable skill, the triangular space of the spandril, though the device will impose the alternative for subsequent designs for the decoration of either a monumental representation of the same device, or else a diversity that can scarcely be rendered harmonious. According what appears the obvious meaning of the design, we shall understand that the figure of Isaiah has not been arbitrarily violently almost, to scrutinise some Divine communication inscribed on the tablet held by the angel to his left, which, unfortunately of awful import, is full of mystery. The angel bending over the prophet holds up the tablet to the distinguished land, as if to enjoin silence to his companion on the other side of Isaiah, or to restrain him from discovering the further revelation which is supposed to be contained in the closed tablet held in the hand of the angel to the outward that with which he is so intently preoccupied. This is, no doubt, a very appropriate conception, but it has been carried out at the expense of one of the cardinal laws of composition in monumental art. The mind of Isaiah, which should be the principal attention and the great centre of interest, which should have been kept perfectly distinct and clear from accessories, is bowed so low and thrust so far aside, close to the tablet at which he is trying to peep, that the head, which, only, we might almost say, by seeking for it that we can detach it quite clearly from the two angels' heads which it is in close proximity to and in contact. We first see the two angels; then, in the space of gold ground, where we naturally look for the head of Isaiah, there is an unpleasant hiatus followed by the arm of the second angel's profile. Some confusion arises, also, from either the seat of the throne not having been made visible or the arms thereof not being clear. The consequence is that the figure seems somewhat disjointed, an effect which exaggerates the lengthy proportion. In many paintings representative of an actual scene, the lopping off of limbs, drapery, &c., at the boundaries is, of course, inevitable, though to be avoided as much as possible; but in a design which is a conventional ground (as this gold one) the design should be strictly monumental and complete in itself, and not suggestive of continuation, and, as a rule, parts excised by the boundary-line. This was the objection, we understand, to Mr. Leighton's competitive design; by-the-way, however, not much in accordance with the rest of the composition. In Mr. Stevens's design there is also a certain want of largeness, simplicity, and distinctness of colour as well as form, though it has many of the qualities which we have been expected from any English artist, remembering their want of experience.

These cartoons are also in an invidious spirit; but, from a tolerably extensive acquaintance with the best mural paintings on the Continent, and from the novelty of the subject, we have reason to feel absolutely certain that, unless these decorations are carefully watched and every shortcoming noted as it arises for future guidance, much of the scheme may be grievously disappointing. We have plenty of artists competent to the work, but they should be required to make a few preliminary essays. And we may be permitted to submit to the Dean and Chapter that the plan intended to have been followed in the proposed decorations under the direction of Reynolds is not unworthy of imitation. It was intended that the pictures, to be painted gratuitously, by Sir Joshua himself, West, Barry, Cipriani, Angelica Kauffman, &c., should be "seen, examined, and approved by the Academy before they were offered to the Dean and Chapter; and the Dean and Chapter might then give directions for alterations and amendments, and receive or refuse them, as they thought them worthy or unworthy of the places for which they were designed."

The number of Acts of Parliament passed in the late Session was 127 public and 229 local. Last year there were 125 public and 236 local.

At two o'clock in the morning of the 14th ult. an earthquake was felt at Kilbeuch, a Wallachian port on the Danube, opposite Silistria, and a hurricane and deluge of rain prevailed for two hours afterwards. Two buildings suffered greatly by the earthquake, and the church, the hospital, and a large school were reduced to ruins. A vessel lying in the port was broken up, and others were considerably injured.

Among the few art-souvenirs of the Crimean campaign, by far the most touching, and not the least memorable for artistic merit, are two pictures by the late Mr. Lourd, a young artist who died just as he had given these earnests of a distinguished career. The pictures have been admirably engraved, and recently published by Messrs. Moore, M'Queen, and Co. One of them is entitled, "A Welcome Arrival," and represents a party of officers in a hut, the walls of which are covered with engravings of home-scenes from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, unpacking the contents of chests, consisting of warm knitted clothing, creature comforts, and a few more sentimental objects, such as letters and photographs. In the other, entitled "Nearing Home," we see an emaciated young officer, lying at length in a sledge drawn by a deer, tended by his wife; the sailors and passengers decry the white cliffs of England, and a land-bird has alighted on the deck, yet whether the invalid will ever reach an "earthly" home appears doubtful, so weak and deathly wan does the poor fellow seem.

The host of the Princess of Wales, by Mr. Marshall Wood, engraved in our last Number, has been well photographed by Messrs. M'Lean and Rose, of the Haymarket, as well as the portrait of Mr. Sharp, the same sculptor, in the late exhibition of the Royal Academy.

THE FARM.

For the next few weeks we must change the venue to Scotland. There was an extraordinarily good show of black-polled cattle in every class at the Royal Northern Show, for Aberdeenshire, Kincardineshire, Banffshire, and Morayshire, at Aberdeen, last week at Aberdeen. Mr. M'Combie was very successful with his cows and heifers, but not with his bulls. By his victories last year he secured the black-polled cup, which requires to be won three times in succession, and he now began a new winning series with a five-year-old cow, Daisy. Forth, who did not appear at all shaken by his sea trip to and from Newcastle, won the shorthorn cup, which Mr. Campbell had carried so long and so well with Scots and Highlands; the latter of whom was first in the extra stock class. The great interest, however, of the day concentrated on the cup contended for by Mr. Stephen's, of Conglass, three-year-old polled bullock; Mr. Moir's, of Tarty, three-year-old cross-bred steer; and Mr. Adam's, of Rauna, two-year-old cross-bred steer, was found to be the (getting for 42 gs.), were left in the test. Each of the judges, Messrs. Collie, Longmore, and T. Swan, took a separate beast. Mr. Moir, after a considerable discussion, Mr. Moir's was put out, and the polled bullock carried the day against its cross-bred opponent. It was the first time this prize has been won by a pure-bred bullock, and the decision was not a little disappointing to Mr. Moir and his friends, as he only needed one more victory to secure the silver cup to hang himself and his beats for ever.

The Highland Society have held a very successful meeting at Stirling this week. The prizes amounted to £1148, exclusive of medals, and 262 cattle, 181 horses, 614 sheep, and 60 pigs, in all 1117 beasts were entered. As compared with the Royal English, the implement show was very small, and, in fact, the society had no stress on it. A silver medal was awarded to a drill-plough by Mr. Cockburn, of Edinburgh, and seven implements, &c., were recommended for trial. The showground was selected in Stirling Park, and the tents were pitched under Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi, and the Ochill hills—made up a beautiful background. The nationality of the whole scene was increased by a band of merry thirty pipers. Among the shorthorns there were only a few English entries, as they were engaged nearer home at the Yorkshire show. Two shorthorn bulls, Forth and Wanderer, were sent as old Highland Society winners to claim the gold medium medal, and so was Fat Maude in the Angus class, but Forth and Wanderer drew out side by side for the same honours five of his crack cows, two of them thirteen and fourteen years of age, and with hardly a trace of time about them. Mr. Cochrane's Scandinavian bull was there on the same errand for the Galloways; Golly Hill and Premium for Ayrshire; Mr. Malcolm's Dunmore and Mr. Gordon's Lord Lynedoch cows of 1861-3 (one of them Mr. M'Claren's celebrated Perth winner), and Sir Walter Scott as the King of the Clydesdales once more. These sixteen alone would have made a grand show.

The contest in a grand class of old shorthorn bulls was reduced at last to Van Tromp, Ecosse, Duke of Tyne, and Wanderer, and it is to be over they finished, after a very close contest. Mr. Stirling's Royal Northern '11th did not come, and was much missed by the Scots and Newcastle lauriats, instead of giving so much age away, as he must have done, to the cracks in this class. In the two-year-old bull class Mr. Douglas carried the day with his solid Duke of Hamilton 3rd of Kin, which most deservedly beat the loose-made Baron Crossley, the first in this class at Newcastle. In the next class for bulls "calved" Prince Edin also went down before a small and decidedly neat one of the Duke of Buccleuch's, and this decision was thought as excellent as the Baron Crossley one was as Newcastle. The cow class for the cows, in which Messrs. Mitchell's Mistletoe was first, with Third Duchess of Lancaster, a highly-commended Royal Cow, appearing next from a very nice roan of Mr. Barclay's, Strephon, third, and Princess of Aldershaw commended, and Fifth Queen of Scots, Mr. Scott mentioned—was also hard to understand. An Irish heifer was beaten by a neat, level, and substantial Queen of Beauty, second at Newcastle, and belonging to Mr. Lennox, of Kilmardinny Bridge, thus making the second victory for English shorthorns that day; rather a poor offset for the Irishmen's victory in the morning. Messrs. Mitchell's Bluebell and Eagle's Plume walked in decidedly ahead of everything for the yearling-heifer class. Mr. Douglas's Duke as at Newcastle, with his much younger "Princess." It was a fine show of shorthorns, and out of the ninety-five very few were absent. Mr. Alexander Patterson, of Milltown; Mr. Goodfellow, of Mosshall; Mr. Walker, of Mosbleiton; and a comparatively new exhibitor, Mr. Leslie, of the Tho'ens, near Aberdeen, were among the leading Angus winners; but in the cow and young heifer classes "Tillyfour" was unapproachable, sweeping the first with three cows—Daisy, Fairy, and Kevely—and having first and second with the two last, with the wondrous Kate of Aberdeen and another good one, Jilt of Aberdeen, Lord Seaforth had an excellent three-year-old heifer, and two nice ones, and only beaten after a stout resistance from one of the judges for first place. Lord Kinnaird took the first with Queen Augusta, and shorthorns as well. The Galloways we have seen much better, and the Duke of Buccleuch carried the first prize with cows; but in the bulls, especially, this part of the show was below par. Ayrshire cows there was nothing to touch the Duke of Hamilton, whose prize winners were purchased by the late Duke from Mr. Lauriston, and the present factor; but in the heifer classes, Sir Graham Montgomery and Mr. Parker just went in ahead of his Grace. There were some rare oxen, cows, and two-year-old heifers among the Highlanders; but the coat is not right at this time of the year, which takes off sadly from their general style. The Clydesdales made a great show, which was quite a treat after the short commons of Newcastle. Lord Clyde, who always takes a first-class command when he commands into Society's yard, carried off the head prize for old sires with Victor, from the Stranraer district, second, and Lord Lyon, third. Mr. Orchard and Mr. Buchanan headed the mare-and-foal class with a very good one; but the Duke of Hamilton's mare, which won the first prize in this class at Kelso, was only second in the class for mares by Mr. Stirling's Sir Kerr, Peggy—a perfect model of the breed. Mr. Stirling (who was, we regret to say, unable to use his health in Canada) had five very grand mares (Jess, Fancy, Peggy, Duchess, and Polly), all which had been selected with great judgment by his factor, Mr. Young, from the first breeders' stables in Scotland. As if to prove that Newcastle luck was the mare should be "the better horse" of the meeting, there was also Mr. Park's first-prize Perth mare (which has, we believe, never been beaten but once) among the entries in the extra class. The Duke of Hamilton was head in the next two classes, and his Graces took altogether four fruits, three seconds, and four thirds in this and the Ayrshire department of the show.

In the Border Leicesters the two Messrs. Simpson bore off, as at Newcastle, the greater part of the prizes; and Mr. Purvis, of Burdiott, who generally stands second to Lord Polwarth in the averages at the Kelso ram sale in September, came out well with his ewes. We have seen the Clevicts stronger as a lot. Mr. Brydon had three firsts and a second for tups, dinmonts, lambs, and ewes; but in this breed, as well as the blackfaces, which were generally good, the new habit of exhibiting ewes with their lambs placed the former at a real disadvantage, and not with no favour. Mr. Scot Skirving pretty nearly swept the Southdown classes; but the burning of Mr. Lyall's lot of fourteen in the train at Forfar paved the way for him, and he had no opposition to speak of. Gloucestershire asserted its Cotswold charter in the person of Mr. Beale Brown; and Mr. C. W. Hamilton, from Ireland, destroyed the first-prize hopes of Mr. Gibson, of Woolnett, in both classes for "Shrops."

Mr. Ferguson Blair beat two of the Carlhead hoars with one of the old sort; and Mr. Cochrane, of Easterhill (who is quite the Waimana of Scotland), Mr. Wainman, and Mr. Philp (who has the Carlhead blood), were the leading winners. Mr. Sadler, of Norton Malna, had one of the most popular pigs of the show, an improved Essex, who came second in the small sows, but looked quite big enough for his class. Altogether the show was as well as it was large, and the Newcastle decisions were very much knocked about. The Messrs. Findlay also took two prizes with their Clydesdales, and Mr. Ferguson Blair was of course quite the leading spirit of the poultry show. The weather was fine and the attendance very large. About 500 dined on Tuesday night in the Corn Exchange, under the presidency of the Duke of Argyll, who delivered a very admirable address on the state of agriculture and agricultural science. His Grace was not tied by any conventionalities; and, after referring to the timely visit of the Lord Privy Seal and Mr. Pusey to the conference in the Lords, where he alone raised his voice for the free importation of corn, he commented with as much freedom on the effects of free trade as if he were "holding forth" from the counter of the firm of Robert Walpole." In the show-field, Mr. Hall Maxwell, to whose administrative tact the society owes so much, had his services as ably and admirably as ever, although he was rather bound in for space.

Next year the meeting is to be held at Inverness, the province, so to speak, of the northern Highlands, while the Royal English betakes itself to Plymouth.

At the Wells Lincoln Agricultural Show, last week, the bull MacTurk, the property of Mr. R. Betts, Holbeck Hall, near Horncastle, was awarded a prize of £20 for the best animal, and also took the first prize of £20 for Northampton the month (value £20) for the best bull of any age or class, open to all England.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE last two days of Goodwood—which has no clerk of the course and no saddling paddock (two facts which seem to have only just forced themselves on to the racing writers)—were productive of some very close finishes. The handicap Stakes fell to the lot of a horse who won the Derby, was coughing, and fairly cut down by Baragah, who was backed freely to win at 20 to 1 for the St. Leger. People seemed wholly to forget the Northampton running when they made Lord Zetland such a much heavier favourite than Thunder, whose owner, Mr. Lupin, had not been at Goodwood since 1857. And St. Vincent scratched Lord Clifden and backed Little Stag, and, after all, ran second with Mr. Merry, whose name was not even mentioned in the ring. The Ranger broke down, and, of course, his jockey said he was "pulled" over. The system of cold and comfort which the silken fraternity are always administering to owners in such cases. Scaltilla was amiss, and Queen Bertha far below her form; and, in fact, the Stewards' Cup, which Mr. Merry's colt Knight of Snowdon ran kindly in the Racing Stakes, always memorable as the one which Mr. Merry's colt Knight of the Star Vase formerly had his Findon Stakes' position with Zambesi, in the Molecomb, and killed off all the others for Baltimore, Lord Clifden, Gay Hermit and Farewell won both their races by a head, and a day of fine finishes has seldom been seen in this pack. The ring had 16 to 1 against Lord Clifden, 6 to 1 against it in the Chesterfield Cup, and backed the field well forward when he struck into the heels of something before him, and, of course, the favourite was not in the race when he came to grief. The fall and the hoofs of the horses behind him. Nothing but ill luck has attended the three "ribbons" last year, and one hardly dare hope that Lord Clifden can win the Goodwood Cup. Anything may happen. For a wonder, Callue Ou did not appear for the Queen's Plate, and her Liverpool victory, therefore, left the Cambridgeshire mare in the field against that weary course. The Nursery Stakes was won by the top weight, Marlorina, by Mr. Merry's Knight of the Star Vase, and Mr. Bird Athol's van met, we hear, with a slight accident on its way to the station; but the chestnut was not injured, and barely 3 to 1 was obtainable about him for the Leger. Lord Zetland's Gay Hermit is hardly so much fancied. Everything betokens a very spirited St. Leger week. Doncaster has a most influential general meeting at Middleboro' for the £25 members' cup. It was awarded, after a hard contest, to Mr. Merry's Knight of the Star Vase, by the Scottish division of the Jockey Club, by a majority of one. Mr. Merry has been very fortunate in his Goodwood Cup selection, and Mr. Bird Athol's son of Sprig of Shillelah bids fair to be a sort of Derby-day hero. To-day, he does not run, and the Chesterfield Cup Sportsman by Aberdeny were next, and commended; and First Whip, who never looked better, won another prize, in which the scratchings were also unusually large and select.

About £450 has been collected for the widow and family of the late Sam Hobbs, the huntsman of the Suffolk hounds.

BRIGHTON RACES.—TUESDAY.

Bristol Plate.—The Poet, 1; Jane Shore, 2; Sportsman, 3.
Second Year of the Twelfth Brighton Biennial Stakes.—Fille de l'Air, 1, Pet Fox, 2.
Southdown Stakes.—Doublet, 1. Confusion, 2. Prince Leo Boo, 3.
Brighton Stakes.—Lytham, 1. Volupina, 2. Augusta Bounin, 3.
Marine Plate.—Lytham, 1. Volupina, 2. Gunner, 3.
Brighton Nursery Stakes.—Mischief, 1. Mitchell, 2. Belle of Kara, 3.

WEDNESDAY.

Pavilion Stakes.—Durham, 1. Dearfoot, 2. Xuvullo, 3.
Stanmer Stakes.—Lady Coleen, 1. Mr. Merry, 2.
Ovingdean Plate.—Antidote, 1. Lytham, 2. Deception, 3.
Brighton Cup.—Lytham, 1. Volupina, 2.
First Year of Thirteenth Brighton Biennial Stakes.—Mandarin walked over.
Second Year of Thirteenth Brighton Biennial Stakes.—Fille de l'Air, 1. Pet Fox, 2.
Southdown Stakes—Doublet, 1. Confusion, 2. Prince Leo Boo, 3.
Brighton Stakes.—Lytham, 1. Volupina, 2. Augusta Bounin, 3.
Marine Plate.—Lytham, 1. Volupina, 2. Gunner, 3.
Brighton Nursery Stakes.—Mischief, 1. Mitchell, 2. Belle of Kara, 3.

THURSDAY.

Fifth Biennial Stakes.—Durham, 1. Olivia, 2.
Sussex Stakes.—Deception, 1. Trumpa, 2. Deception, 2.
£100 Plate.—Nukehuva, 1. Anti-Macassar, 2.
Brighton Stakes.—Deception, 1. Nukehuva, 2. Trumpa, 3.
Sixth Biennial Stakes.—Le Mandarin, 1. Lithuna, 2. Surrey, 3.
Ditch Plate.—Overstone, 1. The Tyke, 2.
£50 Plate.—Overstone, 1. The Tyke, 2.
Ladies' Purse.—Deception, 1. Nukehuva, 2. Buckbound, 3.
Sweepstakes of 5 sovs.—Antidote, 1. The Usher, 2.

The Royal Yacht Squadron Regatta began at Cowes on Tuesday with the race for the Prince of Wales's cup, a time race for cutters belonging to the Royal Yacht Squadron only. Five vessels were entered for the race, but the Vanguard, Mr. Forrester, declined to start. The course was from Cowes to the Warner light vessel, thence to the Nab light vessel, and several minutes to spare. The prize for Wednesday was a cup of 100 sovs., with a second prize of 25 sovs., sailed for by cutters of forty tons and upwards belonging to any yacht club. The following were the entries for this prize: the Volante, Arrow, Sea Queen, Alarm, Phosphorus, Martha, Mosquito, Lady Evelyn, Sea Nymph, and Vanguard (opponents); but the race, having been completed within the prescribed time was null, and must be sailed again. In the evening the annual dinner of the squadron took place at the castle, under the presidency of the Earl of Wilton. The programme for the remainder of the week was—On Thursday, her Majesty's cup. A handicap for schooners and yachts belonging to the Royal Yacht Squadron. There was a grand display of fireworks on the Esplanade in the evening, and fireworks were also discharged from the yachts lying in the Roads, and afterwards there was an illuminations of the fleet. On Friday evening the Royal Yacht Squadron ball was held at the Castle.

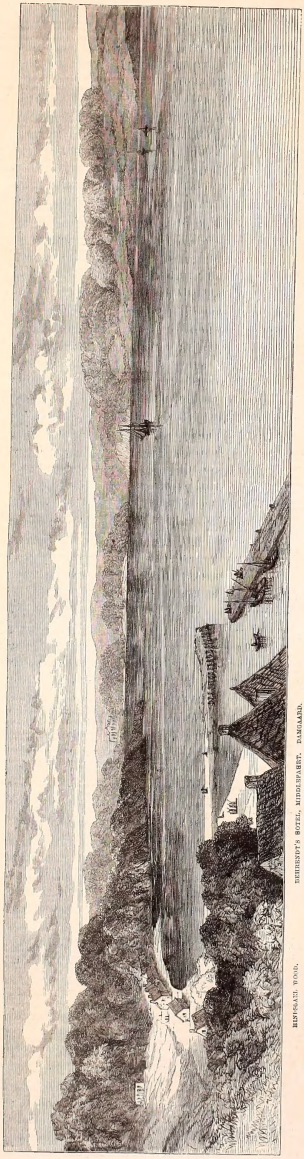
MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

THE transactions in all National Securities have been on a very limited scale, and prices have ruled lower than in the previous week. The leading agent for Consols, for the account for next week, is 2, and for the opposite account, 90¼. The supply of stock in the hands of the jobbers has rather increased.

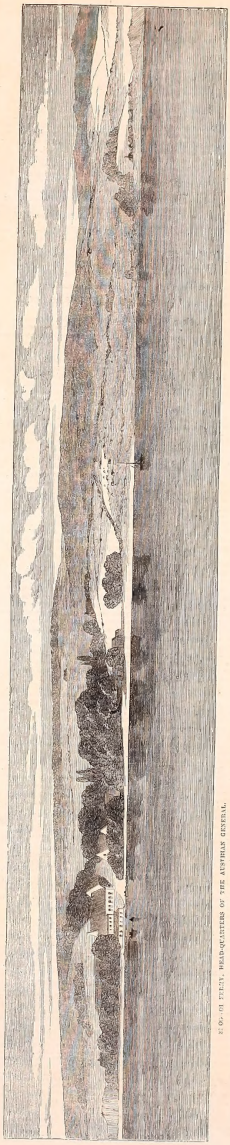
There has been a fair demand for money both at the Bank of England and in Lombard-street, and the quotations are scarcely changed.

In the Stock Exchange money has maintained very full rates.



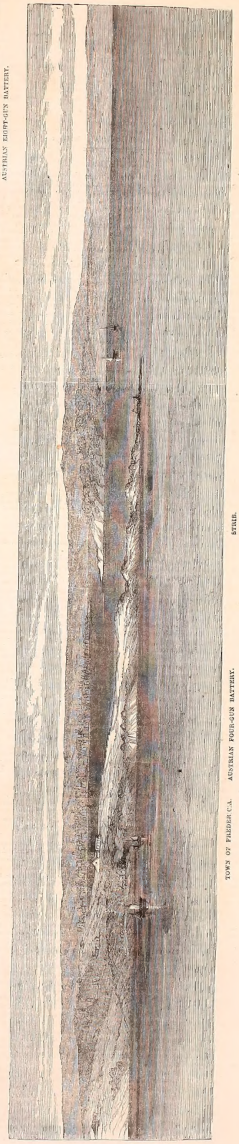
The Bank of England has received a further supply of capital but rather increased, but that is to some extent accounted for by the Exchequer Bills.

The movements of the produce metals have been trifling, and the demand for Mexican dollars is therefore, at 99¾, quiet.



The Council for India have disposed of £300,000 in bills on the various Presidencies, at an average rate of 1s. 11 15-16d. per rupee, and applications were limited.

The Bank of England, the Bank of Ireland, the Scotch Banks, the Colonial Banks, Private, and India Paper per Cent Stock will be transferable without the dividend due on the 10th of October next.



On Monday, Consols, for Money, were done at 89¾ 90; Bills, for Account, 90 to 90¼; Reduced, 89¾ 90; New Three per Cents, 89¾ 90; Long Annuities, 1885, 3 3-16; Bank Stock, 7 Div. 1864, 7 Div. 1865, 7 Div. 1866, 7 Div. 1867, 7 Div. 1868, 7 Div. 1869, 7 Div. 1870, 7 Div. 1871, 7 Div. 1872, 7 Div. 1873, 7 Div. 1874, 7 Div. 1875, 7 Div. 1876, 7 Div.

HEISSKAER, WOOD. BRUNSWICK'S MOUND, MIDDELFARRET. HAMLAGARD.

STAFF OF FIELD-MARSHAL COUNT WRANGEL, HEADQUARTERS OF THE AUSTRIAN GENERAL. AUSTRIAN EIGHT-GUN BATTERY.

TOWN OF FREDERICIA. AUSTRIAN FOUR-GUN BATTERY. STORE.

THE WAR IN DENMARK: THE LITTLE BELT AND SHORE OF JUTLAND, VIEWED FROM THE ISLAND OF FUNEN.

SCENES IN JAPAN, BY OUR OWN ARTIST.

series of Illustrations on another page, may therefore be regarded as the natural limit of the invasion. We are indebted to a correspondent, lately staying at the village of Middelfahrt, in Funen, for the sketches from which our Engravings are made. The point of view whence they are taken is the top of Middelfahrt Church, near the left-hand corner in the foreground of the landscape shown in the first Engraving of our series. From this point, looking towards the west, directly over the roof of Behrendt's Hotel, we see the little harbour for fishing-boats, with its pier; and more to the left, along the bend of the shore, we see a row of small neatly-kept cottages, with their little stone steps leading down to the water. We are hereby reminded of those views of Cornish fishing villages with which Mr. Hook, R.A., has often entertained us. The beautiful wood which overhangs the water and flanks the corn on this side is part of the fine old estate of Hindsgavl, which belongs to the noble family of Föss. Beyond this may be distinguished the little pier of Kiaugbero, opposite to Snoghoi, for which place it is a ferry station. Further on, a succession of sandy mounds planted with fir-trees closes in the view, until the eye rests on the shores of Jutland. The large house in the distance is Damgaard, a mansion belonging to the Thygesen family. Continuing the panorama towards the north, our second Engraving reaches Snoghoi, the head-quarters of an Austrian division. It is from this village that messengers with flags of truce are daily coming across; and here, exactly opposite to Middelfahrt, the Austrians have an eight-gun battery, and, a little more to the right, one of four guns. Just beyond this is Fredericia, shown in our third Engraving. It may be termed the extreme left of the Austrian and Prussian position. On the point of land just opposite to it is the village of Stub, which lies about five English miles from Middelfahrt. The average breadth of the Little Belt at all the points named is about 1000 yards. The Funen shore consists of a long range of low, round hills, sloping down to the sea, the highest of them being scarcely a hundred feet above the water-level. Here and there grows a wood of beech-trees; or the low thatched cottages of the peasantry cluster around the great farmhouse or guard, with its spacious quadrangle of stalls and barns; or we come in sight of the square white tower of the parish church, which usually stands alone on the top of a hill. On the Jutland side is the town of Fredericia, whose citadel thrusts itself forward on a promontory which overlooks the Isle of Funen, the Belt, and the open sea; a long line of red-tiled roofs stretches up from the water's edge to the crest of the low cliffs beyond; several windmills, factory chimneys, and tall poplars, rising above this line.

JAPANESE SOLDIERS FENCING.

SCENES IN JAPAN.

Two fresh Illustrations of Japanese life and manners are engraved from the sketches of our Special Artist at Yokohama. One of them represents a couple of soldiers practising their fencing exercise. Their faces are protected by iron masks, their hands and arms by long gauntlets, and their bodies by thick breastplates of woven bamboo. They jump about with great activity, and deal each other the most tremendous blows, now and then uttering an awful yell, which might, in a real combat, fill the heart with dismay. These men, while fencing, never lose their temper, and when they have done the bout, they salute each other politely, and thank each other for the hard knocks given and received.

Our second Illustration shows an officer of high rank, with his servants and retainers, travelling in pomp along the Tokaido, or "Great Eastern Sea Road," which is the highway between Yeddo and Miako. This personage, it seems, tired of sitting in his norimon, or sedan chair, has preferred a little walking. Behind him is the spear-bearer, whose steel is not liked by the Japanese, and even the carpenters put a cover upon their edged tools and saws when their work is over. Behind the spear-bearer come the servants, and then the bearers of the norimon, followed by the armour and full-dress boxes, without which no officer of rank travels; then come the luggage-trunks and a stand upon which various articles may rest. The heavy luggage is carried by packhorses, which may either precede or follow their master.

JAPANESE OFFICER TRAVELLING ON THE TOKAIDO.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, JULY 29.

BANKRUPTS.

W. ROBERTSON, Cricklade-street, Strand, merchant.—W. FULLER, Lower Charlton, coal merchant.—J. WRIGHT, Ripley, Surrey, newsagent.—F. G. HICKS, Portchester-terrace, Camberwell New-road, builder.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—S. PACE, Tunstall, Pottery, Staffordshire, ironmonger.—T. SPOONER, Wormegay, Norfolk, farmer.—S. MARSHALL, Horley-street, Battersea, general merchant.—C. SIMMONS, Richmond, Surrey, plumber.—J. M'CULLOUGH, Bridge-street, Southwark-bridge, Surrey, engineer.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. E. WRAITH, Sheffield, wool-dealer.—E. B. GARTY, late Portland-terrace, Brixton-road, commission agent.—F. CAMPEN, Craven-street, Strand, artist and engraver.—J. HUDSON, Bowman's-place, Holloway, tea-dealer.—J. A. WITTER, Smith-street, St. Pancras, builder.—J. BRADLEY, Lower Broughton, Lancashire, and Bury, Lancashire, tailor.—Richard-joshua Ashton, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, and Glossop-dale, Warwickshire, wine-merchant.—W. PEARCE, Broadwick, Soho, and Hampstead, carpenter.—W. B. TEARCK, Norwich, ironmonger.—J. D. SALMON, Colchester, brewer.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. ASHTON, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, and Manchester, cotton-waste dealer.—J. ASCHER, South Shoebury, flour dealer in cattle.—W. HIND, Bilston, Staffordshire, grocer.—W. BOOKER, Manchester, tailor.—W. WILKINSON, Old Kent-road, Surrey, builder.—W. GILLINGS, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. YATES, Hatherlow, Cheshire, cotton-spinner.—J. TAYLOR, Ballchapel, Lancashire, tailor.—E. KENRICK, Birmingham, ironmonger.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—R. PHILLIPS, Cheltenham, baker.—J. PENNINGTON, Ashton-under-Lyne, cotton-spinner.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

E. WEBB, Aberdeen, baker.—A. LAING, Forres, Elginshire, ironmonger.—J. MACDOUGALL, Inverness, ship-owner.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2.

BANKRUPTS.

A. BASTEN, Hampden-terrace, Tooting, Surrey, merchant's clerk.—J. REICHEL, Wellington-street, Victoria Docks, Essex, merchant.—J. TREHEARNE, Cross-lane, City, watchmaker.—J. BUTLER, Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, builder.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—S. LOVEJOY, Lime-street, City, ironmonger.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—W. S. PAGE, Old-street, St. Luke's, cheesemonger.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant.—J. HOLLAND, Bishopsgate-street Within, wine merchant

HOWARD and SONS' SILVER-FIR FURNITURE, manufactured by steam. Every description of very superior Cabinetwork in a moderate price.—Warehouses, 26 and 27, Berners-street, Oxford-street. Designs and Estimates free.

DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE En suite, covered in the rich Imperial Tapestry, as much admired and patronised by the Empress of the French. The suite consists of a sofa to match, a very handsome walnut-oval centre table, a sofa table to match, a pair of pretty jardinières, a large size chiffonnier in richly gilt frame, and a pair of handsome cabinets, with a luxurious Cheapside lounge, and elegant lady's chair in the Louis XIV. style. The above are of the best quality, and to be sold for the very moderate sum of £50. May be seen, on View at the BEDSTEAD FURNISHING COMPANY, 12, Sloane-street, Belgrave-square.

COVERS for FAMILY JARS, or Jars and Cruets complete, for Preserves, Pickles, &c. Illustrations and prices sent FREE. Patent Rounded, Patent-real Wharf, Lambeth, S. Sample cap sent free for four stamps.

BATHS for all DOMESTIC PURPOSES. An exclusive and complete stock. The best manufactures on the lowest prices. BRAND AND CO.'S PAMPHLET on BATHS and BATHING, containing 100 Illustrations, the cost of Baths, Lavatories, Pumps, Hot and Cold Water Apparatus, Shampooing, Nursery, and every description of Bath for family use. Shower Baths of improved construction. Patent Gas Rings, simple, effective, and economical. Estimates given for fitting up Bath-rooms. DEANE and CO., 46, King William-street, London Bridge.

SLACKS' FENDERS and FIREIRONS, Every New Design always on Show.
Black Fenders, 5s. and 6s. 6d.
Steel Fenders, 10s. to 30s.
Bright Steel and Ormolu, 45s. to 120s.
Fire-irons, 1s. 6d. to 30s. the set.
Japanning Iron, 10s. 6d. to 40s.
Improved Cauldrons, 4s. 6d. to 30s.
Illustrations, the set of 150, 1s. 7s. Postage.
Catalogues, containing 350 Engravings and Prices, gratis, or sent by Post for Two Stamps.—SLACK, 336, Strand.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.
WILCOX and SON, 3 and 4, Goodge-street; and 65 and 66, Berners-street, Oxford-street. Every description of Carpet, Oil-cloth, Matting, and Rug, at the lowest prices, for every style of decoration.

TO LADIES.—GREEN-TISANE IVY LEAVES, for ornamenting Chimney-glasses. 16 stamps per set of 72 leaves. Sold by all Perfumers. 24 yards 30 stamps. H. PETERS, Perfumer, Maidstone.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.—THE OCTOBER BREWINGS of the above Ales are being SUPPLIED in Bottle and Cask, to Retailers and Consumers, by GUDGEON, BLACKIE, and CO., 39, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. Recommended by the Analytical Sanitary Commission "for making Bread without Yeast, and for Pastry. Sold everywhere.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE defies competition. The most delicious, nutritious, and valuable article for breakfast. Unadulterated; highly nutritious. Annual consumption exceeds 4,000,000 lbs. Sold in Packets, Boxes, Tablets, Cocoa-essence, and sold retail by all respectable houses.

TAYLOR BROTHERS'S "PERFECTION" CURRY POWDER, WARRANTED GENUINE.
Dr. Hassall, having subjected this Mixture to a rigorous microscopical examination and chemical analysis, reports that it contains the purest ingredients of good quality, and of great PURITY, FUNGENCY, and DELICATE FLAVOUR.
See that each Bottle bears the Name of "TAYLOR BROTHERS, Price 6s," and Trade Mark, "Dr. Hassall's Report."
Sold by all Grocers, &c., throughout the Kingdom,
Taylor Brothers, Soho-square and Westbourne-street, London, N.E.

THE ONLY PRIZE MEDAL, 1862, awarded to any of the English Manufacturers of ARTICULATE AND COCOA, was obtained by
J. S. FRY AND SONS, Bristol and London.

FRY'S ICELAND MOSS COCOA.
A combination of Cocoa with Iceland Moss. Very Strengthening and Nutritious for Invalids, and agreeable to the most Delicate Stomachs.
FRY AND SONS, GENERAL CONFECTIONERS.

2280 AGENTS—Chemists, Confectioners, or Booksellers—if HONNIMAN'S PURE TEA, in Packets, 1s. is not now selling in their respective districts, send for wholesale. Three advantages for the Tea genuine and pure.

PURITY AND EXCELLENCE OF QUALITY.
COLMAN'S PRIZE-MEDAL MUSTARD has been awarded each, the Bull's Head, on each package. It is the only Mustard which obtained the Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition, 1862.
For domestic purposes nothing flour can be produced. Their "Prize Medal" Flours are the qualities particularly recommended.
Retailed in every town throughout the United Kingdom.
J. and J. COLMAN, 26, Cornhill, London.

COLMAN'S STARCH obtained Prize Medals,
International Exhibition, 1851, 1862.
Report—"Superior Quality, with large Production."

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH, used in the Royal Laundry.

PATENT CAZELINE OIL.—A pure, transparent Oil, adapted to burn in the Camline Lamps, or in any pure fluid or hydro-carbon lamp; gives a much brilliant light. Sold by all Oilmen.
Wholesale from CARSELL, SMITH, and CO.,
95, Fleetstreet-street, London.

SALVEO PEDES.—TENDER FEET.—A cure now in ANNIE CHURCH'S Salveo Pedes. Sold by Chemists, Paving Medicine Vendors, and Shoemakers. Sent free for 8s. 6d., and 36 stamps, to the sole Wholesale, 15, Little Britain.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and is a mild aperient for delicate constitutions.—13, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

PHYSICIANS' PRESCRIPTIONS promptly and accurately dispensed with Medicines of the purest quality, prepared according to the directions of the Pharmacopœia Britannica, by DUNNEFORD and CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, 172, New Bond-street, London.

MORSONS' PEPSINE WINE is a perfectly palatable form for administering this popular remedy. Manufactories, 31, Southampton-row, and Son, 20, and 46, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W.C., to be sold by at 2s., 3s., and 10s. each. Pepsine Lozenges, 1s. and 2s. 6d. each, and 10s. per box.

DR. DE JONGH'S
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL,
prescribed as the most effectual remedy for CONSUMPTION, GENERAL DEBILITY, and INFANTILE WEAKNESS.
Pronounced by the highest authorities to be
THE ONLY GENUINE COD-LIVER OIL invariably pure, uniformly excellent.
PALATABLE AND EASILY TAKEN.
Sold ONLY in capsuled IMPERIAL Half Pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; Double Quarts, 18s.
Sole Consignees,
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, LONDON, W.C.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN PLASTER, Etc., is a speedy, CERTAIN and PAINLESS REMEDY for CORNS, &c. Sent by post 14 stamps. Observe the trade mark, H. Y.—7, Shaftesbury-place, Leeds.

SKIN DISEASE.—Dr. HARVEY'S CHAMELEON POMADE is a most valuable Preparation in all Skin Diseases. It is certain and safe in its effects. In pots, at 2s. 6d. and 5s. 6d. each, post-free. Prepared only by J. H. THOMAS, Boston. London Agents—Barclay and Son.

TO MOTHERS and INVALIDS.—ELAM'S ABDOMINAL SUPPORTERS. Directions for self-measure sent by post, free. Elam's Improved Elastic Stockings, Knee-Caps, Ankle-Jackets, Belts, &c. Illustrated Catalogues sent free. 276, Oxford-street.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—"The movements are of the most quality which the art of horology is at perfect, capable of producing."—Illustrated London News, Nov. 8, 1862.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—Adapted for every clime, climate, and country. Whitewell and retail from 20 guineas to 75 guineas each.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—Chronometer, duplex, horizontal, vertical, repeating, centre-beat, keyless, astronomical, reversible, chronograph, blind centre, London, pre-eminently the best watch-maker in any part of the world.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—London-made lever—gold from £10 10s.; silver from £5 5s.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON'S WATCHES.—Swiss watches of guaranteed quality—gold from £5 5s.; silver from £2 12s. 6d. 33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON'S ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, free by post for three stamps, contains a short history of horology, with 100 Illustrations of the movements of watches, and will assist a watch and have it sent safe by post.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

BENSON, JAMES WILLIAM, Watch and Clock Maker by special appointment to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Pride medal and honourable mention, cluses Exhibition, 1862. Established 1749.—33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London.

M. F. DENT, 33 and 34, Cockspur-street, S.W., Clerking-cross, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker to the Queen and to the Royal Family.
H. F. Dent, 33 and 34, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, London.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. HATCH, Practical Watch and Chronometer Maker, many years resident by special appointment to his late Majesty George IV., to the Royal Family, and to the Court of Russia, 59, Cornhill, corner of Bank-buildings, and 16, Sackville-street, Piccadilly. Watches, £2 2s. to £12 12s. High-class Timepieces, 7s. 6d. Clocks, striking hours and half hours, £2 2s. Every description of Clock, Watch, Watch-maker, 188, Regent-street, W. (from the Strand and Coventry-street). Established 1790. Every watch skilfully timed and warranted.

GOLD CHAINS and PINS
Of the best quality, and every variety of GOLD CHAINS 18s. to 30 gs.; Gentlemen's Albert Chains, £1. to £8 8s.; Gold Guard Chains, £2 2s. to £10 10s.; Gold Pins, 1s. to £1 1s.; Gold Watches, and Keyless Horizontal, £5 5s., and 20s.; Gold Hunting, £6 6s. to £20 20s. Silver Watches, £2 2s. to £10 10s. Every Watch skilfully timed and warranted. Benson, 33 and 34, Ludgate-hill, London. Established 1749.

THE PRETTIEST GIFT FOR A LADY is one of JONES'S LEVER WATCHES, at £11 11s.; for a Gentleman, £10 10s. Jones, 338, High Holborn, 18, Regent-street, 63, Cheapside, Manufactory, 346, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

HAT DEWFONT beautifully makes and mounts in fine gold Hair Bracelets, Chains, Brooches, Rings, &c., and will return you the same at about one half the usual charge. An elegant collection of the new patterns constantly on view. Gentlemen's Hair Jewellery a specialité. Illustrated Book sent post-free. 3, Leicester-square, London.

A. FORRER, HAIR JEWELLER to the QUEEN, 24, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—G. HOOPER, Artist in Hair, Gold Gold Lockets for Hair from 8s. each; Hair-rings, 2s. 6d. each; Hair Bracelets, 10s. 6d. each. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—213, Regent-street, London.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S Manufactory, 67 and 68, King William-street, London-bridge.

DESPATCH BOXES.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers, warrant every article sold by them, and guarantee perfect security.

Containing	Size	Price
Containing fourteen most useful toilet articles	Morocco, 12 in.	Morocco, £3 15 0
Ditto, with writing materials	Morocco, 13 in.	Morocco, £4 4 0

For Gentlemen.

Large size, containing thirteen most useful articles	Waterproof, 15 in.	Waterproof, £3 15 0
Ditto, with writing materials	Russia, 15 in.	Russia, £5 5 0

77, and 78, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; and 77 and 79, Oxford-street.

OBSERVE!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO.'S Manufactory, 67 and 68, King William-street, London-bridge.

DIMPLE REMOVER.—All Diseases of the Skin are removed by our dies of ALEX. ROSS'S VEGETABLE BALSAM. Its effects are instantaneous. Sold by all Chemists. Price 3s. 9d.; post, for 60 stamps.—240, High Holborn, London.

ALEX. ROSS'S FACE-POWDER, in., or 14 stamps. Six Colour, warranted not injurious, adds great beauty to the Skin. Sold by all Chemists. Price 3s. 9d.; post, for 60 stamps.—240, High Holborn, London.

CREAM OF LILIES, for beautifying and improving the complexion, and effectually removing freckles, sunburns, &c. In bottles, 2s. 6d.—ROBERTSON PRICE and CO., 37, Old Bond-street.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET. The finest Perfume now.

THE SUMMER SUN and DUST.—Ladies will find the application of ROWLAND'S KALYDOR both grateful and refreshing, removing cutaneous eruptions, freckles, tan, and discolorations, preserving complexion, producing delicate clearness, and rendering the skin soft, clear, and blooming. Price 4s. 6d., and 8s. 6d. per bottle. Ask for ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, and beware of spurious and pernicious imitations. 20, Hatton-garden, London.

PIESSE and LUBIN'S HUNGARY WATER, peraphernalia, including herborizing. "I am not surprised to learn (says Humboldt) that orders, clergymen, lecturers, authors, and artists, use Eau de Cologne to refresh the brain, and assist the digestive organs."—2, Vigo-street, Regent-street, London.

A sort of tea bottles, 16s. 6d.; single sample, 2s.—2, New Bond-st., W.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S POMANDER, PERFUME and Sachet Powder are the most lasting of all perfumes. Pomander or Scent Casket as worn by Elizabeth suspended from the girdle, 5s. Handkerchief Sachet Powder, 1s. 6d. per packet. 24, New Bond-street.

These Copies have been made, by permission of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, from the original Pictures, by command of the Kensington Museum. Price 12 in. On vider—2, New Bond-street.

AFTER SEA-BATHING, USE RIMMEL'S ALCALINE LOTION, for preventing the Skin from being injured by the Sea-Water. Price 1s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers.—RIMMEL, 96, Strand; and 24, Cornhill.

ANTICUMOUS FLUID for producing the most luxuriant growth of the beard and whiskers in a few weeks. Sold by the sole proprietor, H. Pitcairn Cox, 37, Old Bond-st., 36, 6d., 5s., 7s., and 10s.

IF YOU WANT COMFORT, WEAR LEATH'S RIGHT AND LEFT SOCKS
309 and 363, High Holborn London.

GENTLEMEN'S DRESS, of the best description, at moderate charges, at HAMILTON and KEMPTON'S, Tailors, 307, Strand (opposite Exeter Hall).

KING and CO., SILKMERCERS, &c., 243, Regent-street, beg to announce that they made their new autumn purchases before the great rise in the price of Silk goods, and are therefore enabled to offer them at a considerable saving. They have also bought several large lots of last year's Silks, which are quite equal in designs and colours to any now goods, which they intend clearing off during August, at about half the annual prices. Patterns sent post-free to all parts of the world.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

KING and CO., SKIRT DEPARTMENT.
A large variety of Paris-made Dresses for Travelling and the Seaside, from £1 4s. each.
Impressions of the Fashions, and patterns of the materials sent post-free.
King and Co., Regent-street, London.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 1.—WATERPROOF FOULARDS, in 7/8, 9/4, and 10/4 widths, usually sold at 3s. 9d. per yard, for 2s. 6d.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 2.—RICH CORDED SILKS, in 9/4, per yard, worth 3s.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 3.—RICH CORDED SILKS, Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 4.—RICH PLAIN SILKS, 9/4 wide, per yard, worth 3s. 9d.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 5.—RICH CHECKED'S PLAID SILKS, 9/4 wide, per yard, worth 3s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S SILKS.
LOT 6.—RICH CHÉNÉ SILKS, 9/4 wide, per yard, worth 3s. 6d.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LOT 7.—MOIRE ANTIQUES, 9/4, 6d. per yard, worth 3s. 9d.
Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., Regent-street.

LOT 8.—BLACK SILKS.
A large Lot of very Serviceable Qualities, 9/4 wide, per yard, 2s. 3d. Patterns sent post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

SILKS and SUMMER STOCK, AT QUALITY AND PRICE LIMITS.
GRANT and GASK
are SELLING the WHOLE of their SUMMER and FANCY STOCK at greatly reduced prices, in order to effect the immediate clearance sale prior to the close of the season, beg to state that the greater portion of the Goods are Manufactured at Grenadines, Berbery, Organdie Muslins, Light Barèges, Mantles &c., will positively be SOLD at less than half the usual prices.
Some GREAT BARGAINS in Rich Glacé Silks, Checked Poplins, &c., the cut lengths of Silks being marked at about half their former prices.
Patterns and Drawings of Lace Robes, Silk and Grenadine Shawls, Black Silks, Foulards, Muslins, Barèges, Mantles, &c., at a proportionate reduction, sent free.
In the MOURNING DEPARTMENT are several very cheap Lots of the very richest Black Silks of LYON GLACÉ, strongly recommended to wear, which will be sold in connection with the above sale at half the usual prices.
GRANT and GASK, 211, 213, 215, 217, Oxford-street, W.
Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, Orchard-street, Portman-square.
Nos. 58, 59, 60, 61, Oxford-street; 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street, London.

PATTERNS FREE.—SILKS FREE.
9326 yards RICH CORDED SILKS, of GLACÉS. Thirty different Shades, at 1s. 4½d., 2s. 6½d., 3s. 6½d., 4s. 6½d., 5s. 6½d., 6s. 6½d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

8280 yards RICH CORDED and STRIPED SILKS, at 1 guinea, 31 to 36, and 14 guinea the Dress. Moire Antiques, at 2½ gs., 3 gs., and 3½ gs. the Dress, wide width,
Reversible Brocade Silks, in the same the same on both sides, woven on a new principle, all Colours, 3s. 6½d. yard.
A large parcel of Black Silks, at 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 6d. a yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS FREE.
£3400 WORTH BLACK SILKS, Glacés, Gros Grains, Drap de Lyons, all of the Celebrated Make "Nicholson's Dress Silks," at 2s. 6d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS FREE.
15,030 YARDS FOULARD SILKS of EXTRAORDINARY WIDTH, warranted waterproof, and perfectly unchangeable. Beautiful plain colours, 9d. to 1s. 6d. per yard, 24 inches wide; 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard, 36 inches wide.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN to WEAR GOOD BLACK SILK STOCKINGS?
Buy Mr. Useful School Suits, from its 9d. Patterns of the Cloths, Silks, and Trimmings, and Directions for Self-Measurement, sent free.—Mr. Useful, 534, Oxford-street, W. Patterns and Price-list free.

GREAT SALE OF SILKS.
Discontinue of Partnership of NICHOLSON and AMOTT.
SALE OF THEIR ENTIRE STOCK of SILKS, at 20,000.
Black Glacé Silks, during the season £7 7s. 6d., may now be had for £3 3s.
Rich Black Brocade Silks, usually sold at 5 guineas, worth £1 10s. the Dress, are reduced to 1 guinea.
Rich Black Glacé Corded and the new Gros d'Italie, originally £2 10s., are all marked £1 1s. 9d.
Rich Coloured Glacé Silks, from 3 to 4 guineas, reduced to 1 guinea.
A parcel of last year's patterns in Fancy Silks, good in quality, originally 3s., have all been marked 1s. 9d. per yard.
A very superior lot of Plain, Checked, and Striped Glacé Silks, usually sold at 4 guineas, are now 1 guinea the Dress.
Rich Moire Antiques, in every wide French Glacé and Moire Silks will be sold at 1s. 11d. per yard, not to make at least 2s. 6d.
Rich Moire Antiques, in every wide French Glacé and Moire Silks will be sold at 1s. 11d. per yard, not to make at least 2s. 6d.
Rich Moire Antiques, in every Shade, at 2 guineas.
400 Dress Lengths of Rich Lyons Fancy Silks, usually sold at 4 guineas, at one guinea.
Patterns sent post-free.
AMOTT and COMPANY, Crystal Warehouse
Lace Manufacturers and Silk Mercers,
41 and 42, St. Paul's-churchyard.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
Now Ready, and sent post-free.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
Also Ready, and sent post-free.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Checked Glacés, 12/6 each,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

NEW SILKS.—PATTERNS FREE.
New Striped Glacés, 12/6 each,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

GLACÉ-ALPACAS and STRIPED LAWNS, for Morning Dresses wear.
Patterns free.
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 9, Ludgate-hill.

SCOTT ADIE, by special Appointment to her Majesty and H.R.H., the Princess of Wales, has on view the largest and most varied stock of Shawls, Scarfs, Mantles, and Jackets, and useful shapes, suited for all seasons and climates; Lyons Poplins, Glacé Silks, Barèges, Grenadines, Organdies, and Irish Poplins, &c.; Boys' Highland Suits in all the clans made to order.—12, Regent-street (entrance, corner of Vigo-street).

SEWELL and CO.'S MOIRE ANTIQUES, Splendid silk's manufacture, acknowledged throughout the kingdom as the Full Dress, in all Colours.
Compton House, Frith-street; and 504 Compton-street, Soho, W.

SEWELL and CO.'S TRAVELLING and WATERPROOF CLOAKS, One Guinea.
Compton House, Frith-street; and 504 Compton-street, Soho, W.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and RIDING-JACKETS, Gooderham's Overcoats and Invernesse Capes, Travelling Shawls, Rugs, and Waterproof Sheets.
J. and W. PHILLIPS, 67, High-street, Shrewsbury.

NEW CHÉNÉ SILKS, £2 9s. 6d. the Dress, 14 yards.
Rich Glacés, in 45 new colours, £2 9s. 6d. Full Dress.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

A PURCHASE OF
20,750 METRES OF FRENCH ORLEANS.
Last Lot—5000 Metres Wool and Silk) 12s. 6d. Full Dress.
Lot 5—5000 Metres (Wool and Silk) 10s. 6d. Full Dress.
Lot 6—5000 Metres (Rich Brocade, all silk) 15s. 6d. "
The above are all this season's manufacture, are perfect novelties, and may be relied upon as genuine bargains, as the manufacturer was purchased by the Paris market at less than half their value. A large assortment of Patterns sent free on application.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

MOZAMBIQUE BAREGE, 9s. 9d. to 10s. 6d. the Entire Full Dress.
Soft-colours and Stripes.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

ALL LAST YEAR'S FRENCH ORGANDIE MUSLINS, in Spots, Stripes, Bouquets, and many of the richest, now selling at reduced prices.
PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

WATERPROOF and TRAVELLING CLOAKS.
The Largest Selection of Waterproof Tweeds, Coverings, &c.
Illustrations, with prices and patterns of material, sent free.
THOS. HOLMES, 193, 194, 195, Oxford-street.

DURING AUGUST
PETER ROBINSON will offer for Sale the Stock of ALGERINE BERNOUSES of a Paris manufacturer, consisting of White Brocaded Tissue with Gold Lines, and White Ground with Stripes of Satin, both in white and the most fashionable colours. These beautiful Garments, usually priced at 12 to 3 Guineas, will be sold at One Guinea each. Patterns sent free, with instructions for self-measurement for Bashmakin wear.
103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

WASHING GRENADINES (Pure Silks), Also, Richly-worked Robes, from 21s. to 3 guineas.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

FAMILY MOURNING.
Families about to adopt Mourning Apparel will find
PETER ROBINSON'S
the most economical and convenient.
The largest and best Assortment of articles ever ready made-up suited for immediate wear; also, the most extensive stock of goods kept in Mourning only, and at the most moderate prices that are consistent with good quality.
Dressmakers and French Milliners of known reputation are employed in the work-rooms.
Orders by note or telegram from any part, however distant, will at all times be executed with the same care and attention as if the parties were present in person.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, and 256, 258, and 260, Regent-street, London.

BLACK SILKS.—IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Being determined to make the present a leading place in the silk markets, PETER ROBINSON would respectfully call the attention of the Ladies to his very large Stock of the best description of Black Silks, purchased before the advance, and which he is now selling at the old prices. Also, a rich satin Brocaded Silk, from 1s. 6d. to fifteen per cent.
He would particularly recommend as to notice the Rich Cord Silk, at 2s. 11d. per yard, wide width.
The Full Dress, at from 2½ to 3½ guineas.
Surveillance Silk, at 2s. 11d. per yard, wide width.
The Full Dress, at from 2½ to 3½ guineas.
Rich Corded Silks, at from £2 19s. for 14 yards.
Very Rich Brocade Silks, at from 2½ to 3½ guineas.
Patterns free.—Peter Robinson, Mourning Warehouse,
103 to 108, Oxford-street, London.

FORD'S JACKETS, 42, Oxford-st., London, W.
Silk Jackets, 1½ gs. Velvet Jackets, 2½ gs.
Cashmere or Cloth Jackets, 10s. 6d. to 42s.
Velvet Jackets, 2½ gs. to 9 guineas.

FORD'S SILK MANTLES, 25s. to 6 guineas.
Specially Reduced.
Waterproof Cloth Mantles, 10s. 6d. each.
Sensible Jackets, warranted to resist the heat and spray, 10s. 6d.
Dust and Travelling Cloaks, 10s. 6d. to 30s.

FORD'S RIDING HABITS, of superior make, 3 to 5 guineas, Gentlemen's Riding Coats and Trousers, cheapest leather and cloth, 10s.
Thos. Ford, Habit-maker, 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

SCHLUSSELBURG CRINOLINES, 4s. 6d., 5s., 5s. 6d., and 6s.
"Wears well."—Queen Newspaper Journal.
"Very elastic."—Court Circular.
E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

GEMMA, or JEWELLED JUPONS, 9s. 6d., 12s. 6d., and 15s. 6d.
"A very pretty invention."—Court Circular.
E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

PUFFED HORSEHAIR JUPONS, 7s. 6d. and 10s. 6d.
"Absolutely perfect."—Queen.
E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

ONDINA, or WAVED JUPONS, 5s. 6d. and 7s. 6d.
"The dress falls in graceful folds."—Morning Post.
Illustrations post free.—E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

CRINOLINE IN OUR PARKS AND PROMENADES. This curious antique illustrated work sent post-free for 6 stamps.—Dalee and Hyde, 174, 176, 178, 180, 182, 184, 186, 188, 190, 192, 194.—E. PHILPOTT, 37, Piccadilly.

WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, Travelling Shawls, Rugs, Plaids, Waterproof Sheets, Hats and Linsey Woolseys for Ladies' Travelling and Seaside Dresses.
Illustrations post-free.
The Scotch Warehouse.
J. and W. PHILLIPS, 67, High-street, Shrewsbury.

THE NEW VELVET CORONETS for Ladies' Dresses, in all Colours, 2s. 6d. each.
Illustrations, with measures, 2s. 3d., post-free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, and 33, Beaumont Streets first price.

THE NEW WAISTBAND RIBBONS and SASHES, 1 inch wide, 3s. per yard. Illustrations post-free.
Beautiful Sonic Bonnets, 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 21s. 6d., 31 post-free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

GLOVES.—The Very Best Paris Kid Gloves, 5½ Buttons, 2s. 11d. per pair. Fully guaranteed sewn. Ladies' 3s. 9d.; Gentlemen's, 3s. 3d. Illustrations post-free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, 33, Beaumont Streets.

BLACK SILKS and COLOURED SILKS.
Rich Black Silks, bright, wide, and durable, from 1 yd. Patterns free.—BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, and 33, Beaumont Streets first price.

CLOSE OF THE SEASON.
JAMES SPENCE and CO. are now offering during the present month the remainder of their SUMMER STOCK AT A GREAT REDUCTION in PRICE, in order to make room for early importation. Patterns free.
Silk Mantles, Shawls,
Embroidered and Plain Muslin Dresses, from 14s. 6d.
French Printed Muslins, Barèges, Grenadines, and Organdies.
Ribbons, Gloves, Hosiery, Parasols, Fans, and Fancy Goods.
James Spence and Co., will commence on Monday next the Sale to clear a large stock of Autumn Goods, comprising all the latest Novelties in Silk Mantles, Shawls, Dresses, and Costumes.
James Spence and Co., Wholesale and Retail Silkmercers, Drapers, &c.
77 and 78, St. Paul's Churchyard, E.C.

INDIA SHAWLS.—FARMER and ROGERS, a special attraction to their magnificent century of CASHMERE SHAWLS, including every description manufactured in India, and the most extensive assortment of Shawls, Dresses, and Fancy Articles in the Kingdom. Patterns sent to any part of the country and beyond Brighton the Princess of Wales, 171, 173, 175, 177, Regent-street.

SHIRTS.—Morning and Evening Shirts of every description, fitting with precision and ease, at moderate prices. Every kind of Gentlemen's Underclothing kept in stock or made to order.—CARTER and WATERS, 90, Regent-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

D'ALBERT'S LA BELLE CATHERINE WALTZ. On Airs from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 4s. Solo or Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD QUADRILLES. Two sets of Quadrilles on favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera. Price of each set, 4s. Duets, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S GALOP FROM L'ETOILE DU NORD. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

MEYERBEER'S L'ETOILE DU NORD. The Vocal Score, with Italian and English words, and Pianoforte Accompaniment. Price 18s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CALLCOTT'S L'ETOILE DU NORD.—All the favourite Airs from Meyerbeer's Opera, arranged for the Pianoforte, in brilliant, grim in each; Slide, as Duets, 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

D'ALBERT'S POLKA MAZURKA, or VALSE-MAZURKA from "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS'S SCENE MILITAIRE, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord," arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.—CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA PRIÈRE DE CATHERINE and Barcarolle, from "L'Etoile du Nord," beautifully arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LA MARCHE SACRÉE, or Peter the Great's March, from Meyerbeer's "L'Etoile du Nord." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FANTASIA BRILLIANT. For the Pianoforte. On favourite airs from Meyerbeer's grand Opera "L'Etoile du Nord." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIECES ON GOUNOD'S FAUST.
ASCHER'S PENSÉE DRAMATIQUE SUR FAUST. Opera 56. On GOUNOD.
Four to Piano, Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BENEDICT'S FAUST.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia on favourite melodies from Gounod's celebrated and popular Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
THE JOCKEY'S GALOP. By A. F. GODFREY. Just out. One of the best Galops ever published, finely beautifully illustrated with portraits (in colours) of Voyageur, Iroquois, Bend d'Argent, Wells, Cartouche, and Challenger. From photographs by Mr. Cundall. Price 4s. Solo or Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Princes and Princess of Wales. Just published. Price 4s. Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new set of Lancers, composed on all the popular melodies of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s. Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s. Net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG, by HUGUENIN'S NEW SONG.
FIGLIA D'ERINA. Romanza. Composed by Benedict and sung by Sig. Giuglini with the greatest possible success. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE VALLEY (LE VALLON). New Song. Composed by Gounod and sung by Mdme. Sainton-Dolby and Mr. Santley. Price, with English and French words, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP.—Mr. SANTLEY'S Popular Song, written by R. S. Faris, and composed by Sigmor Randegger. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TELL STARE AND STONE. New Song. Written by CHARLES OSBORNE; composed by G. A. MACFARREN. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG, by Miss C. M. E. OLIVER.
"When first I met my love."
"Tis now the merry March-time:
Leaves have come, leaves have gone,
Since she bade farewell to me."
To be had of all Musicsellers in town and country. Price 2s. 6d.

NEW SONG.—"HOME ONCE MORE." Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. Sent for fifteen stamps. This charming song, composer of the popular song, "Good-bye at the door," will be equally popular with that decided favourite, as it is both pleasing and effective.—DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-st.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for Piano. By R. L. HIME. Played by Master Willie Pape before the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House. "One of the most exquisite romances we have ever heard."—Review. Sent for 18 stamps.—DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, by STEPHEN GLOVER, for the Piano, one of the best of Glover's celebrated marches. Sent for 18 stamps.
DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and Co. respectfully call attention to their extensive and unique stock in Europe, about two thirds the price of the much advertised Pollych pianos. Can be had for three months on trial. Sale. One in the window marked with price; plain words cheaper.
27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in fine walnut cases, 20 to 26 guineas, warranted seven years. Illustrations sent free. Some observe the address.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S GRAND COTTAGE, seven octaves, new registered check action, 20 to 26 guineas. These instruments are beautiful in tone, quality of tone, and change in design. Warranted.—211, Regent-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S INDIAN PIANOFORTES, made expressly to resist damp, heat, and insects. Invaluable for ship-board.
Shipped in limited cases, for 28 guineas.—101, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES AND HARMONIUMS. OETZMANN and PLUMB have all descriptions for Hire, Purchase, or Exchange, from the cheapest to the most costly. Instruments of moderate prices by installments if desired. Old Pianos taken in exchange. Repairs and tunings by experienced workmen.—101, Regent-street, the only address.

NEW MUSIC.

MEYERBEER'S ETOILE DU NORD. Favourite Airs. Three Books. Solos, 3s.; Duets, 4s. W. H. CALLCOTT.
Rêve Militaire. Brinley Richards ... ... 3s. 6d.
Prières de Catherine. ... ... 3s. 6d.
Reminiscences of the Opera. By F. De Vos ... ... 3s. 6d.
Première Fantaisie. By Rémi Farrenyr ... ... 3s. 6d.
Valse. ... ... 3s. 6d.
Valse. F. Bargmüller ... ... 3s. 6d.
Overture. ... ... Solo, 4s.; Duet, 5s.
Complete Opera for Pianoforte. E. F. Rimbault ... (net) 6s. 6d.
First and Second Set of Quadrilles. O. d'Albert ... (each) 3s. 6d.
Galop. ... ... 3s. 6d.
Polka. ... ... 3s. 6d.
L'Etoile du Nord Polka. Lamare ... ... 3s. 6d.
Tarentelle. Michel ... ... 3s. 6d.
" Polka Mazurka. C. d'Albert ... ... 3s. 6d.
" Valse. C. d'Albert ... ... 3s. 6d.
" Galop. D'Albert ... ... 3s. 6d.
Redowa. Lecocq ... ... 3s. 6d.
Also all the Dance Music, Full Band, Italian and English Words.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

GOUNOD'S LA REINE DE SABA. Opera complete. Pianoforte Solo, 8vo, cloth ... 15s. net.
Ditto ditto for Pianoforte ... ... 7s. 6d.
Marche, Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.; by W. H. Callcott.
Marche, Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.; by W. H. Callcott.
Waltz, Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.; by W. H. Callcott.
March, Solo and Duet; by T. W. Saunders ... ... 3s.
Duos, Solo, 3s.; Duet, 4s.; by C. Gounod.
Valse, by F. Bargmüller, 3s. 6d. ... ... 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

RÊVE FAVARGER'S STRADELLA, 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

RÊVE FAVARGER'S MASANIELLO, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

JACQUES BLUMENTHAL. Tarn' Jour Chasse Quadrilles. Solo, 4s.; Duet, 5s.
La Scuola de l'Armonia, Chanson Napolitaine ... 3s. 6d.
Angela: Prière Arabe ... ... 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOUNOD.—QUATRE ROMANCES SANS PAROLES.
No. 1. La Provençale ... ... No. 3. Le Soir.
" 2. Le Balancelle ... ... " 4. Le Matin.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

NEW VOCAL DUETS.—THE FALL OF THE LEAF. Composed by G. A. MACFARREN. 4s. OVER THE SILVERY LAKE. (Soprano and Contralto.) W. V. WALLACE. 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

DANISH NATIONAL SONG (Den lappe Landsdeel), with English words by H. P. LAWES. 3s. Arranged for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s. 6d. Harmonised by J. L. HATTON. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

PRETTY COLETTE. Ballad, written and adapted to a popular French Air, by HENRY FARNIE. "A charming ballad."—Vide Graphic. Sent for 18 stamps. Arranged for Pianoforte by Arnold de Fas. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

J. BLUMENTHAL.—A Pleasanty. (Song by Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington) ... 3s. 6d.
Farfalle, (as an encore song by Mdlle. Farfar). In F and G ... ... 3s. 6d.
Thoughts of thee (Song by Madame Sainton-Dolby). In B flat and C ... ... 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage stamps.—CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

PERSONAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO ORDERS.

COOTE'S TUILERIES QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INNOCENCE VALSE. Price 4s. "This simple and beautiful Valse has become quite the rage of the season."—Queen.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PLAYED BY COMMAND.
COOTE'S PRINCE OF WALES'S LIFE GUARDS VALSE. 4s. With a capital Portrait in Colours of his Royal Highness.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE FAVORITE GALOP IS
COOTE'S PRINCE IMPERIAL GALOP. Price 3s. Extensively played at the balls.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET EVER COMPOSED.
COOTE'S POLLY PERKINS QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Songs, "Isabella," "Fatherwards," "Sweetheart," and "Polly Perkins's Parlour," &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

PERFORMED AT THE STATE BALL.
COOTE'S HUMMING-BIRD VALSE. 4s. Considered the best set of Valses by this popular Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Queen," "Sweetheart," "My Pretty Page," "Se Saviy in de Morning," "The Cure," and other popular Airs. Any of the above compositions sent post-free for 24 stamps. Always reletanded.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, on "Kathleen O'More," "Tommy Moore's Melodies," "Kate Kearney," "Savourneen Deelish," Solo or Duet, 4s. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CHAPMAN'S DÉBUTANTE VALSE. Illustrated. Price 4s. One of the best airs of the season.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHRISTY SONG. 3s. 6d.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD. Sung by Miss Leigh by Command.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COME WHERE THE MOONBEAMS LINGER. By FRED. BUCKLEY. Price 3s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.
THE NIGHT IS CALM AND CLOUDLESS. By G. A. MACFARREN. Price 4s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

POLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON. Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS OF MR. TOOLE'S NEW SONG.
A NOBBLE TALE: or, The Suicidal Family. Price 3s. Encored five times nightly in "The Area Belle," Criterion Theatre.—HOPWOOD and CREW.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by LACHENAL. Full Compass, with all the latest Improvements, warranted. Prices from 3 guineas. Sent in case, free. Two guineas, with case, lock and key, 8s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

EWER and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY. British and Foreign.
Subscription, Country.
Prospectuses gratis.
97, Regent-street, London.

MENDELSSOHN'S ATHALIE.
Just ready.
A new cheap Edition for Voice and Piano. 4s.
London: EWER and Co., 97, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
"The music of 'Mirella' is as good as that of 'Faust;' perhaps in some respects better."—Daily News.
"M. Gounod has given to the world another genuine and charming work."—Standard.
"In the music of 'Mirella' he surely makes his way with the public as that of 'Faust.'"—Standard.
"A capital opera. No living man could write anything for the stage comparable to it."—Athenæum.
"We thank Mr. Carvalho for giving us an opportunity of hearing the last work of a musician only now in the greatest living operatic composer."—Saturday Review.
The whole of the music may be had of every Musicseller in the United Kingdom.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, "MIRELLA." The principal songs of the principal artists are the following:—
MIRELLE TITTENS.—"Non mutis il mio." 3s.
MIRELLE (Madame Trebelli-Bettini).—"Anima mia." 3s. 6d.
MIRELLE CAPELLI.—Follet Romance (Shakespeare). 3s. 6d.
BIGNON GIUGLINI.—Ah si ti prieghi mai, 3s. 6d.
MR. SANTLEY.—"Let me wander not unseen." 3s. 6d.
THE SAVOYARD MELODY.—Ah, destin! come i 3s. 6d.
THE QUEEN'S WALTZ. Arranged by Charles Coote, 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA "MIRELLA." Solos for Pianoforte.
The Favourite Airs by W. H. Callcott, in three books ... each, 4s.
Kuhe's Fantasia ... ... 4s.
Mme. Oury's Fantasie Brillante ... ... 4s.
Fantasia (on Airs from Mirella, in Selection of Airs) ... ... 4s.
Brinley Richards' Chœur de Magnonvelles (the opening Chorus) 3s.
Brinley Richards' Serenade ... ... 3s.
Kettere's Fantasia, transcription ... ... 4s.
Lamare's Valse ... ... 4s.
Lamare Mazurka ... ... 4s.
Ferber Fantasia Mirella ... ... 4s.
Rimbault's Mirella Waltz Quadrilles ... ... 4s.
Brissac's Chanson de Magali ... ... 4s.
Coote's Mirella Quadrilles ... ... each, 4s.
Coote's Mirella Waltzes ... ... 4s.
Coote's Mirella Waltzes ... ... 4s.
Victor Collins's Mirella Valse ... ... 4s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE SAVOYARD MELODY in English, Italian, and French. 3s. 6d.; in English, "Far from his Mountains." 3s. 6d.; for the Pianoforte, by Brinley Richards, 3s.; for Harmonium (easy), 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

MIRELLA.—THE OPENING CHORUS ... "One of the most original and fascinating Choruses ever penned."—Daily Telegraph) is published as a Vocal Duet, 3s.; also as a Song, 3s. 6d.; and as a Solo for Pianoforte by Brinley Richards, 3s.; and arranged easily for the Piano by Newtonian, 1s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

THE OVERTURE to MIRELLA is published for the Pianoforte, solo and duet, arranged by the Author. Scores to be had of Boosey and Co., Holles-street. Full Orchestra.—Daily News. "Pretty, light, and essentially pastoral."—The Times. ... ... 4s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S MIRELLA. The Vocal Score, with Italian and English words, Solos and Duets, in 9 books, 3s. and 4s. each. Arranged by W. H. Callcott.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA QUADRILLES, on Gounod's new Opera, splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 3s. 6d.; Septett, 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

COOTE'S MIRELLA WALTZES on Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 3s. 6d.; Septett, 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

FORBES' CAPERA. Chanson Napolitaine, for the Pianoforte. A most fascinating little piece. By the Author of "Bagatelle in Ten." Price 3s. To be had everywhere.
BOOSEY and Co., Holles-street.

PIANOS FOR HIRE.—CARRIAGE-FREE, with option of Purchase. Convenient terms, any period. The largest assortment in London, from 15 guineas.
PEAKEY HOUSE, 104, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate-street, E.C.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, WOOD, and Co. make special arrangements with those desirous of purchasing Pianofortes on the THREE YEARS' SYSTEM, and may be known on application at the Gallery, 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, THREE-STRING OBLIQUE PIANOFORTE. Price 65 guineas in Rose-wood and 70 in Walnut. In introducing this instrument promiscuously to the musical profession, Cramer and Co. may be permitted to observe that it is alike remarkable as regards power and quality of tone, and for the elegance of its design, as for the ease of its being and the simplicity of its construction. The tone may be forced by the powerful finger of the artist, or drawn out by the most inexperienced hand. Its touch is elastic, the case there is no heaviness, and in the other the exceedingly vocal qualities come with the greatest facility. The compass is seven octaves, from the lowest A to the top note above, and the three strings are on the principle of the Semi-Grand. The springing is complete, there being three bars to each note. Cramer and Co. guarantee the soundness of these instruments for any reasonable length of time, and forward them to any part of the country, carriage free, on the receipt of a post-office order for the cost.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ENGLISH PIANETTE. Cramer and Co. have much pleasure in introducing this capital small Instrument. It has all the regularity of the best Pianoforte—check action, solid metal frame, &c.—but in this case is of polished oak or pitch pine. In practising in this Pianoforte the fingers of the player will not disturb the occupants of the next room, and the tone is so sweet that it is very suitable for a lady's boudoir. Price 35 guineas in walnut, 38 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument has not the common or single action, but the double or repeating action, and that the compass is from the lowest A to the highest C.

GREAT SALE of PIANOFORTES at the Gallery, 207 and 209, Regent-street.—J. B. CRAMER, ADDISON, and CREAK have the whole of their STOCK of PIANOFORTES now being removed from the season's hire. The Pianofortes comprise Cramer's, Broadwood's, Collard's, and other first-class makers, and are principally cottage pianofortes. Many of them are quite equal to new. Every pianoforte is warranted, and may be had on the easiest terms for the time where required. Cramer and Co. have also a number of the fine wheel pianofortes by Cramer, Broadwood, and Collard, by the same makers. They consist of grands, semi-grands, oblique-grands, and cottages of all the different descriptions. The present catalogues are now ready, and may be had on application. Instruments for the country will be packed free of charge.—Cramer, Addison, and Creak, 207 and 209, Regent-street, London.

PIANOFORTES, NEW, by Broadwood, Collard, or Erard, for SALE or HIRE, at CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE RENOVATION.—CRAMER and Co. repair and renovate pianofortes of all descriptions sent by years of constant practice. Cramer and Co. guarantee that, if they undertake the renovation of a pianoforte, the tone, touch, and repetition of force, and in every respect needs perfect satisfaction. Cramer and Co., give estimates of cost.—Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

SECONDHAND GRAND PIANOFORTES by BROADWOOD.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND SEMI-GRAND PIANOFORTES by Collard and Collard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND OBLIQUE GRAND PIANOFORTES by Erard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by Broadwood.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by Collard.—At CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND COTTAGE PIANOFORTES by CHAPPELL and CO., at their Establishment, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the only Pianino to which the Prize Medal was awarded).—A very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass check action, trichord throughout, and possessing a fine quality of tone. Yachts, Rosewood, &c. Warranted to keep in tune, and to be the best and cheapest Pianoforte, with check action, and all the latest improvements.
Price, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 25 and 26 guineas. A great variety kept.—CHAPPELL and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To ensure perfection in pure English workmanship in the Pianoforte, CHAPPELL and Co. think it would be found the most perfectly satisfactory Instrument, at its moderate price, if the whole of the case—the single documents as the sheets makers', and therefore especially adapted to the country for which it is made—were entirely made in England, and from the timber of the country in which it is to be used. Also, similar in every respect to other instruments at 35 guineas, price 33 guineas; in walnut, 40 guineas.
Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE.—Price 45 guineas in rosewood; or in walnut, 45 guineas. This instrument has three strings and the full-sized compass of seven octaves, and is made with every possible improvement, and is the best Pianoforte that can be produced in any climate. The workmanship is of the best description; the tone is equal, full, and rich, and the power is equal to that of a Broadwood Grand. The touch is elastic, and the repetition very rapid. No Pianoforte can be more perfect in every respect.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street. Second-hand, and (if desired) exchanged within six months of the purchase.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. The best Pianofortes of every description, including all the recent kinds by these celebrated makers, may be hired also by the year (and hired with option of purchase) at the new Show-rooms of CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany or plain walnut, the best English pianoforte ever produced at the price, in tone, touch, and all the latest improvements. Moore, Chappell strongly recommend this pianoforte to the notice of their pianoforte at or about the same price, whether new or second-hand.
50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, in rosewood, a new Oblique Piano, with the best check action, 3 strings, the great compass of seven octaves, and trichord throughout. Price 35 guineas. This pianoforte has a lower price than any other oblique pianoforte. The same instrument with two strings, 30 guineas.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRES DRAWING-ROOM MODEL PIANOFORTES, the best that were ever made for 60 guineas; other varieties at 25 and 35 guineas. Illustrated Catalogues sent free.—ALEXANDRE and SON, 3, Conduit-street, Regent-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with five octaves, two footboards, and is of such excellent quality of tone as to be unequalled by any to all other cheap Harmoniums. Descriptive lists on application to ALEXANDRE and SON, 3, Conduit-st. and Co., 9, Pall-Mall, S.W.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, nearly (if not quite) as good as new, at greatly reduced prices.—ALEXANDRE and SON, 3, Conduit-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION MODEL HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, 13 stops, a rank of pedals, and knee-swell, highly finished, touched by the hand of the Master in such exact, 39 guineas. A large assortment may be always seen at CHAPPELL and Co.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES.—Caution.—The public are respectfully cautioned against buying Pianos bearing the name of Allen's or Allen, as there is no firm of that name, and have been since the year 1868, the only MAKERS of that name, CHAS. ALLEN and ALLISON and SON, 104, Finsbury-pavement, Moorgate-street.
Retail Agents—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, W.

BOOSEY and SON'S (from Messrs. BOOSEY), THREE-GUINEA COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, in Rosewood or Walnut, from 20 to 60 guineas. Illustrated Lists free.—295, Regent-street, W.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPÔT for the Sale of NICOLE'S celebrated Musical Instruments is REMOVED from 11 and 12, Cornhill, to 56, Cheapside, where a large assortment of the sizes from Geneva has arrived. Lists of Tunes and Prices gratis and postage-free.

WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, WATCHMAKERS, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London (opposite the Bank). Facsimile Signatures of each Watch. Watches with the latest improvements and maintaining power to continue going while wound up. Chronometers, Repeaters, and Chronographs.

Patent Lever Watch, jewelled in rubies, compensation balance, jewelled in rubies and capped ...	£4 14 6
Ditto, jewelled in rubies and capped	6 6 0
Ditto, the finest quality, jewelled in six holes	8 8 0

SOLID SILVER KEYLESS LEVER FOR LADIES.

Patent Lever Watch, jewelled in rubies	11 11 0
Ditto, with visible escapement, jewelled in rubies	12 12 0
Ditto, with very strong case, and jewelled in four holes ...	14 14 0

SOLID SILVER KEYLESS LEVER FOR GENTLEMEN.

Patent Lever Watches, jewelled, compact dial, and seconds ...	12 12 0
Ditto, with visible escapement	14 14 0
Ditto, jewelled in rubies, and gold balance	16 16 0

Gold Watches in Hunting Cases, £3 3s. extra.
List of prices of Watches sent free by post on application.

FLOWER-STANDS and BASKETS for the Dinner Table or Drawing-room. An elegant assortment in Gold and Silver Plate, at MAPPIN and WEBB'S, Prosvenors, 18, Baker-street, Portman-square. Vide "London Society."

MARBLE CHIMNEYPIECES.—EVANS, SONS, and COMPTON invite intending purchasers to visit their extensive Stock of the above, as well as of Stoves, Grates, and Fenders, which are kept in great variety, and of moderate and approximate cost.—Nos. 42 and 94, King William-street, London Bridge.

GARDNER'S £2 2s. DINNER-SERVICES, complete, best quality. Illustrated Catalogue post-free.—GARDNER'S Manufactory, 453 and 454, Strand, Charing-cross. (4 doors from Northumberland-street.)

OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and LUSTRES, for Gas and Candles. Table Glass, &c. Glass Dishes for Presents. Glass Fittings for Bathrooms.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £7.
OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, London.
Ornamental Glass, English and Foreign, suitable for presents.
Rock Crystal, Cut Glass, Table Glass, Chandeliers, &c.
Show Rooms, 45, Oxford-street, and Broadway, Birmingham.—Manufactory and Show-rooms, Broad-street, Birmingham.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY, Candelabra, Moderator Lamps, in Bronze, Ormolu, and Silver. Table Glass, Glass Fittings, Vases, and other ornaments.—OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W.

EASY-CHAIRS, SOFAS, and COUCHES, of best quality, handsomely made, re-stuffed, and re-covered, at JOHN and SON'S Manufactory, 31, 32, and 34, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W. Also Easy-chairs, Couches, and Invalid Chairs for Sale or Hire.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.

The Parquet Couch	3½ guineas.
The Prince of Wales Couch	5½ "
The Parquet Chair	2½ "
The Easiest Chair	3½ "
The Vienna Easy-Chair	3½ "

Extensive Victorian-court-road.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.
Families who study economy in their furnishings and elegance should visit this establishment before buying their furniture, where they will find more taste, novelty, and variety in the ten-roomed House furnished complete in twenty-four hours. An illustrated priced Catalogue sent post-free on application.
Tottenham, 145, Tottenham-court-road.
The next house, although in the same block, is not connected.

CARPETS.—Notwithstanding the late advance in the price of Cotton, T. VENABLES and SONS, having one of the largest Stocks in the Kingdom, are enabled to continue selling Turkey, Brussels, Tapestry, and others at old prices. Patterns can be forwarded into the country. Estimates given for Furnishing throughout Houses or Hotels. Catalogues of General Drapery and Carpets, post-free.—64, 65, 66, and 68, Whitecross-st. E.

GOODWOOD RACES.

THE CUPS.

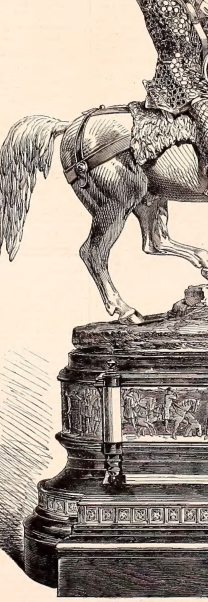
GOODWOOD has long been celebrated for the beauty of its cups as well as of its scenery, and this year it has been again true to its charter.

The Goodwood Cup, which was won by M. Lupin's Dollar, bastard, East Lancashire, The Ranger, Hollyfox, Stradella, Queen Bertha, Glendusk, Little Stag, Lord Zetland, and Esperance, presents an equestrian silver statuette of William the Conqueror on a full base, with basreliefs taken from the Bayeux tapestry, and representing Harold's oath to William, the Battle of Hastings, and the death of Harold. The figure of the Conqueror has been very effectively modelled by Mr. W. F. Spencer, and the work has been executed by Messrs. Garrard, of the Haymarket.

The Chesterfield Cup is a group in cuvolieri representing a knight rescuing a lady from a dragon. The subject is taken from Spenser's "Faerie Queen," and the horse and the figure of the woman clinging to her preserver have been admirably managed by Mr. H. Armstead, to whom the work of modelling was intrusted by Mr. Henry Emanuel, of Rond-street. It was won very easily by Mr. Whittaker's King of Utopia, against whom at 6 to 1 was obtainable in a field of twenty-five.

DOLLAR, THE WINNER OF THE GOODWOOD CUP.

It is now four-and-twenty years since Robinson on the Duke of Orleans's Beggarman broke the spell for Frenchmen at Goodwood and defeated the redoubtable Lanercost. Since then our French neighbours have always made a great point of winning this race, and Jouvence, Iuroncino, Monarque, and Dollar have been their successful champions. Dollar appeared twice in the Cup Stakes for a two-year-old, and was beaten by Armagnac and Saccharometer. He did not run in England at all during 1863, and had been almost forgotten when, with 7 st. 9 lb. on his back, and 25 to 1 against him, he made short work of a field of seventeen for the Northamptonshire Stakes in the spring. For the Worcestershire Stakes he was second to Exchequer, who received a year and 61b. In the Goodwood Cup he carried 8 st., and won cleverly by half a length. He was bred in France, and is by the expatriated Flying Dutchman from Payment; and Kitchener, who was on him at Northampton, rode him again last Thursday with all that skill and care which his French masters can appreciate so well.



THE LADIES' LAWN AT GOODWOOD.

The beautiful scenery of Goodwood Park, and the gay spectacle of its company of visitors at the annual races, have more than once been illustrated in the pages of our Journal. We present on this occasion a View of the Ladies' Lawn, to the right of the Grand Stand, as it appeared on the Cup Day, with a large number of elegantly-dressed women seated on its grassy terrace, in the agreeable shade of the neighbouring trees. The Prince and Princess of Wales were accommodated with a private box at the western end of the Grand Stand.

VOLUNTEER FESTIVAL AT GRIMSTON PARK, YORKSHIRE.

WE give an Illustration of the festivities which took place at Grimston Park, in Yorkshire, on Friday, the 22nd ult., when Lord Londesborough, who is the Colonel or Lieutenant-Colonel of three local corps of volunteers, entertained them with his usual hospitality after a grand field-day or review near his house. Grimston Hall, in the neighbourhood of Tadcaster, is pleasantly situated at the entrance of the picturesque and famous valley of Wharfedale. It stands in a park of undulating ground, which slopes down to the River Wharfe. The house is an elegant mansion, rebuilt in the Italian style from the designs of Mr. Decimus Burton, the architect, in 1848. The south front is especially admired for the graceful lightness of its aspect, as will be the sketch we have engraved. The delightful gardens are adorned with groups of sculpture, marble statues, and vases, as well as with an endless variety of flowers, shrubs, and trees—one of which is a stately sycamore, the largest tree in that part of the country, overshadowing the monument erected on the grave of a favourite dog. Another notable ornament of these pleasure-grounds is the temple, or shrine, containing the bust of Napoleon, by Canova, which is approached through the Emperor's Walk, a secluded alley of dark yew-trees, with the busts of the twelve Cæsars ranged on each side. The observatory, a lofty tower in the highest part of the demesne, commands a panoramic view beyond one hundred miles in circumference, including on one side the city of York, with its Minster towers, the battlefield of Marston Moor, and, close at hand, the battle-field of Towton, still marked by its "patch of wild white rose," where the bloody contest of York and Lancaster was decided four centuries ago. The interior of Grimston Hall is no less rich in beautiful and interesting objects. The armory is one of the finest private collections of that kind: helmets, shields, and suits of mail, halberds, battleaxes, lances, and swords, cuirasses, and guns of curious antique device, forming a series of most valuable illustrations of the history of warfare from mediæval art. There are some good portraits and other pictures in the different apartments, and the yellow drawing-room has a set of furniture, made entirely of ivory, gold, and satin, which belonged to Warren Hastings when Governor-General of India. In connection with Grimston Park it may be observed that the church, restored by the present Lord Londesborough in memory of his late father, is worthy of being inspected for its architectural features, rich wood-carving, and stained-glass windows; Mr. George Shaw, of Sedbergh, being the architect whom his Lordship has employed there. Such is Grimston, one of the noblest of the many palaces of the north of England. Its owner, besides being a liberal patron of the volunteer movement, hoists the flag of Vice-Admiral of Yorkshire as commander of his yacht the Albertine, whose victory in the last match of the Royal Yacht Club was recorded the other day in our Journal.

We have now to relate the proceedings of the volunteer meeting at Grimston, which was the second occasion of his Lordship's entertaining the assembled members of the corps in this place. Last year they were reviewed in a part of Grimston Park directly opposite the mansion. This time they met in a piece of ground near the Ulleskelf Railway station, where there is a large meadow, bounded on one side by a small river with a high bank, and on the side nearest Grimston by a gently-rising piece of ground and a deep watercourse, now dry. A rough young fir-tree, firmly planted in the soil and surmounted by a union jack, marked the saluting-point. The volunteers were conveyed from their muster-places by special trains, and were all assembled by about noon, when, after partaking of some refreshments, the line was formed, and all was in readiness for the reception of the inspecting officer, Colonel Harman, and the Colonel, Lord Londesborough. On the ground were the Hull Artillery Volunteers (244), under Lieutenant-Colonel Brocschoot and Major Sprate; the Hull Rifles (347), under Colonel Pease and Major Bannister; the Scarborough Artillery (53), under Captain Layne; the 1st West York Rifle Volunteers, including companies from York, Harrogate, Selby, Knaresborough, Ripon, and Tadcaster, about 600 in all, under the command of Major Harrison. There were also two guns and their attendant artillerists from Scarborough, giving a grand total of 1223 men.

THE GOODWOOD CUP.

Lord Londesborough, wearing his uniform as Colonel of the artillery corps, and mounted on a charger, rode up as soon as the troops were in position, accompanied by Colonel Harman, Captain Thompson, East York Militia, who acted as Major of Brigade; and Major Saltmarshe, Aide-de-Camp to Colonel Harman. Lady Londesborough, with her mother, the Dowager Duchess of Beaufort, the Hon. Mrs. Walsh, and the Hon. Mrs. Egerton, came in an open carriage, accompanied by a few visitors staying at Grimston. Soon afterwards the evolutions and movements began. Colonel Harman availed himself of the occasion to inspect one of the corps, but was soon satisfied as to their efficiency. The sham fight commenced with an attempt to take a position on a hill. This was defended by four long brass guns, brought from Lord Londesborough's yacht and planted in a commanding position, whence they poured volleys on the attacking party; but the gallant defenders eventually fell back, and then, with their fors, commenced a very orderly movement to Grimston Hall. A tempting and plentiful repast had been laid out for them in the riding-school, which had been lengthened for this purpose by an additional building and most tastefully decorated with pieces of sculpture and other works of art, vases of flowers, and trophies of the chase, including stags' heads from the Scottish moors and a few eagles shot by Lord Londesborough in Egypt. These were perched on the branches of some trees partly included within the temporary edifice, and had a very picturesque effect. A 600-gallon butt of potent Grimston ale, surmounted by the head of an ox, with a hop-bine and wheatsheaves, was flanked by a pipe of port wine and a pipe of sherry, which were crowned with pots of vines in full bearing. The raised floor or dais, in the centre of the room, was occupied by a circular table, on which and on the buffets were displayed many pieces of silver plate, cups, salvers, and vases, won by Lord Londesborough at Cowes, in the Thames, or on the racing-field. Above this table was a banner embroidered with the arms of his family and those of the house of Beaufort. The arrangements for this really magnificent scene had been devised and executed by Mr. Griffiths, his Lordship's steward. The number of guests was about fifteen hundred. On the right of Lord Londesborough sat Mrs. C. Lane Fox, on the left the Dowager Duchess of Beaufort; on Lady Londesborough's right hand was Colonel Pease and on the left Colonel Harman. Around the table were Captain and Lady Emily Walsh, Captain and Mrs. Egerton, Mr. C. Sykes, and many of the volunteer officers who had done duty during the day. Silence having been proclaimed by the beat of gong, grace was sung by the girls of the school maintained by Lady Londesborough, and then the volunteers did ample justice to the good cheer provided for them. The health of the Queen was drunk with loyal acclamations, and followed by that of the Prince and Princess of Wales. The toast of "The Army, Navy, and Volunteers" was responded to by Colonel Harman, Captain Laye, and Lieutenant-Colonel Pease. The last-named gentleman then proposed the health of Lord Londesborough; Major Harrison proposed that of Lady Londesborough; and Major Bannister paid the same compliment to her Ladyship's mother, the Dowager Duchess of Beaufort. His Lordship, in returning thanks, said that he was proud of being connected with three such regiments of Yorkshire volunteers; and he could assure them that Lady Londesborough had a great claim to their attachment for the manner in which she cared for the volunteer movement. She had given a beautiful silver cup to be shot for by the rifle battalions, and the prize would have been of greater value had this it was found to be impossible to include the artillerymen in the competition, and therefore her Ladyship had divided the prize, giving half the equivalent in value to the artillery. He only trusted that he and his wife might be as well beloved in that county as the Duchess of Beaufort and her family were in Gloucestershire.

The volunteers soon afterwards left the riding-school; but, previous to their departure, indulged in dancing in the park, where tea and coffee were supplied. Soon after seven all had left Grimston, after having given three hearty cheers for its noble owner and his lady.

On the Tuesday following Lord Londesborough feasted his tenantry to the number of 2400, gathered from the districts of Tadcaster, Selby, York, Hull, Whitby, and Scarborough, where his large estates are situated. An abundance of good fare and a variety of amusements were provided for this numerous party.

THE MAGAZINES.

BY far the most remarkable paper in the Cornhill, or indeed in the magazine literature of the month, is Mr. Arnold's persuasion on "The Literary Influence of Academies." Those who are acquainted with the tendencies of Mr. Arnold's thought will not be surprised to find him looking to the French Academy with a sort of admiring despair, and an almost pathetic regret that English literature should never have been subjected to the salutary regulation of a similar institution. He seems not to apprehend that this is, in fact, tantamount to wishing that Englishmen were Frenchmen. It is possible to impose a standard of taste upon Frenchmen by external authority. They require an antiseptic continually before their eyes; and are positively discontented if it does not interfere with all their political and social, and municipal relations. An Englishman is impatient of control, and derides all attempts to dictate to him. No doubt the French cast of mind has its advantages; and Mr. Arnold is quite right in calling attention to the high standard of accomplete literary work in France; but it is not for the encouragement of this sort of thing that literature exists. Mr. Arnold is well aware that French literature, so admirable in the production of light ware for general use, is lamentably deficient in originality—in greatness of any sort. When, for example, he celebrates the great influence of the French philosophers of the last century, he should remember that, with the exception of Rousseau, they produced no works of abiding value, and that all their ideas were borrowed from England. We do not accuse the Academy of having stunted the vigour of the French mind; but we do think that the limited range of its influence and the existence of the other spring from the same innate tendencies; and that one of the chief causes which have rendered England a commercial, a conquering, and a multiplying nation, will account for the exuberance and defiant originality of her literature. We fully concur with all that Mr. Arnold says of the exquisite propriety and urbanity of French men of letters; but, in the dearth of invention and imagination, these excellent qualities remind us of the old saying that the French can be the best of cooks if they only had meat. "Wives and Daughters" is the first instalment of a Maxwellian is hardly so good as usual, though it has its strong points. Mr. Kingsley contributes a fine piece of word-painting and an evident sense of pleasure in authorship, with which it is hard not to sympathise. "A Son of the Soil" is above the usual level this month. "South Shining Churches" is a very interesting paper, containing the fruits of much investigation on the spot. Mr. Leslie has written well on the question of the Irish Church, and on recruiting for the army. "A Gossip about Lochfyne" is entertaining. The number concludes with a very amusing account of the Social Science meeting, attributed to Punch. Here, it appears, would probably have gained the Queen's prize if he had not "been so foolish as to take soda-water and brandy instead of claret and brandy" that forenoon along with his ham-sandwich."

Blackwood has rather less than its average merit in the very sensible review of the Public Schools Report as it relates to Rugby and Harrow. Mr. Lewes's Aristotle is analysed, and Victor Hugo's grotesque work on Shakespeare censured with just but not undiscriminating severity. "Cornelius O'Dowd" is tolerably amusing, and "The Chronicles of Carlingford" maintain their polished and equable merit, but "Tony Butler" rather flags. "The Vote of Censure" is a lame attempt to conceal great disappointment at an unexpected failure. Mr. Story contributes two pretty little poems.

Fraser contains one paper of singular beauty and interest—those reminiscences of Emerson and his social circle—which we have already cleft in attributing to Mr. M. D. Conway. It is a charming picture of a society perfectly frank, pure, and unaffected; of a friendly intimacy based on a community of sympathies and untroubled by those wretched jealousies ordinarily so fatal to the peace of philosophic and literary coteries. It seemed from the first a happy canon that the centre of New England thought should be located at Concord, and there are many not merely fanciful advantages in the spot which is set over America's nearest approximation to the groves of the Academy. Secluded amid woods and lakes, Emerson's friends enjoy whatever advantages flow from intercourse with Nature, while Boston is near enough for the collision of new ideas and the stimulus of the busy world. We are indebted to Mr. Conway for a delightful description of Emerson floating in his skiff on Lake Walden; of the negroes welcoming Theodore Parker with prayerful tears as he passed along their poor dwellings in Boston; of Hawthorne escaped from the party assembled to do him honour to a remote room, and there discovered reading Miss Edgeworth's "Moral Stories;" of startling Agassiz with the theory that tigers and snakes were created by man "before he appeared in the present form." There is nothing of the same character in the magazine, though an equally pleasant spirit pervades the review of Emerson's "Letters and Social Aims," in which all the charm of style has agreed to love and enjoy. "Elizabethan Gardening" is a valuable essay on the subject, which we hope will have some influence in preventing old favourites from going out of cultivation, and repressing the too prevalent practice of aiming at violent contrasts of colour. We wish, however, that the author were not so interested in everything, good and bad, in Elizabethan gardening. A. K. H. B.'s contribution is one of his best; and "A Pilgrimage to Compostella" is very interesting, though not quite a readable available scene. The contemporary ballad on the murder of Darnley is a great curiosity, and, if readily procurable, is to be found about the streets, a most singular idea of the taste of the Queen of Scots' subjects in ballad-poetry. It is ludicrously pathetic and affecting, and stands as an indication of popular feeling towards the supposed murderess.

The Dublin University seems to rely principally on its lance of novels, two of which are clever, and one, entitled "Ellen Middleton," without extravagance. "Margaret Wolfington" and the "Grand Tour" are another pair of papers on "Irish Manners," giving much information respecting past generations. "Hibernian Demonology" contains some capital fairy stories. The printing of quotations from foreign languages in this magazine continues to excite our respectful amazement.

There is nothing to lift the New Monthly above its usual mediocrity; but Bentley rejoices in a pleasant farcical tale of travel by Mr. Dudley Costello, and an amusing letter with the latest gossip from Washington. Temple Bar's trio of tales go on briskly, and certainly the readers of them cannot complain of a want of interest or incident. The miscellaneous papers are good, especially Mr. Sala's sketch from Hamburg. The St. James's Magazine commences with a story by Miss Braddon, for, after the manner of the day, it contains "Adventures in Algeria" is an amusing paper; "Adventures of a Queen's Messenger," an instructive one. London Society, Good Words, The Cornhill Magazine, and Macmillan's Magazine are all endeavouring to pursue their peculiar paths with consistency, and may all be recommended as pleasant companions for a railway journey or a country walk.

Our Mutual Friend in this month is composed of two very different elements. For the whole of a long chapter Mr. Dickens is in "society," where, as usual, he is awkward and ill at ease. Many good satirical hits are made, but only with a disagreeable consciousness that everything is forced. Removed to the river-side, Mr. Dickens is himself again. The scene in which a "Bird-fancier" comes to sell a "bird" "to earn five or ten thousand pounds by the sweat of his brow" is full of humour, and displays miraculous powers of observation. The watch for the supposed murderer is also excellent—but pray why Lizzie—wildly, grimly, grotesquely poetical. The interest of the story is certainly on the increase.

OUR COINAGE.—A return to the House of Commons, issued on Monday, gives an account of all the gold, silver, and copper coin of the realm, coined at the Mint, for each year from the 1st of January, 1854, to the end of 1863. During the ten years the total value of sovereigns coined was £ 47,625,514, and of half-sovereigns, 12,958,270, the total real cost or value of which, estimated by the cost of the bullion employed in the Mint, was £ 4,749,; and, deducting the value of the bullion, £ 1,; the total real cost or value of the sovereigns and half-sovereigns, 1,; the total real cost or value of the gold coin, 1,; the total real cost or value of the silver coin, 1,; the total real cost or value of the bronze coin, 1,; the total real cost or value of the whole coinage, 1,; the total real cost or value of the whole coinage, 1,; the total real cost or value of the whole coinage

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE.

12th Lancers: Cornet J. M. Brackenbury to be Lieutenant.

13th Foot: Lieut. A. C. Young to be Captain. 18th Foot: Lieut. P. A. Balmer to be Adjutant, with the rank of Lieutenant.

Royal Engineers: Lieut.-Col. H. W. B. Bell to be Colonel; Capt. A. Cowper to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Second Capt. W. W. Goodfellow and Second Capt. and Brevet Major W. J. Stanton to be Captains; Lieut. J. Deane to be Second Captain; Lieut. C. Mitchell to be Adjutant.

60th Foot: Under Lieut. H. J. M. Hoskins to be Ensign. 11th: Col. H. L. Brett to be Ensign. 12th: Capt. H. B. Carey to be Major. 18th: Ensign Hon. C. Bruce to be Lieutenant. 34th: Lieut. H. Shaw to be Captain; Ensign W. H. Herbert to be Lieutenant; Ensign C. Hamilton to be Lieutenant. 35th: Lieut. J. Hall to be Captain; Ensign J. Wilson to be Lieutenant. 36th: Lieut. H. Hall to be Captain; Ensign F. Wrinch to be Lieutenant. 37th: Lieut. C. Cunningham to be Captain; Ensign W. Major, H. R. White, and Capt. A. C. Smith to be Majors; Lieut. F. G. Loraine to be Captain; Ensign the Hon. C. Dutton to be Lieutenant; Cadet J. L. Rose to be Ensign. 38th: Cadet H. Bell to be Ensign. 39th: Lieut. A. Lewis to be Captain; Ensign C. Hall to be Lieutenant; Cadet J. Lewis to be Ensign. 40th: Ensign W. P. Blyth to be Captain; Ensign H. W. Thompson to be Lieutenant. 41st: Ensign A. Longden to be Lieutenant. 42nd: Garland to be Lieutenants; Ensign T. C. Sillar, D. J. Brett, R. Collins-Spiart, F. C. Barnes, H. Macpherson, and Cadet J. Cameron to be Ensigns. 43rd: Ensign H. Jervis to be G.V. Carter to be Captain; Ensign C. Hamilton to be Lieutenant. 44th: Ensign F. Walters to be Lieutenant. 45th: Ensign H. Nightingale to be Lieutenant. 54th: Ensign F. Walters to be Lieutenant. Ensign R. Whitmore to be Lieutenant. 54th: Cadet C. Hall to be Ensign. 56th: Ensign E. C. Elliston to be Ensign. 58th: Cadet C. Hall to be Ensign. 59th: Ensign C. Hamilton to be Lieutenant. 60th: Cadet H. C. Hall to be Ensign. 61st: Ensign C. Hamilton to be Lieutenant. 63rd: Ensign C. Hamilton to be Lieutenant. 64th: Ensign C. G. Keenan to be Lieutenant. Cadet H. C. Hall to be Ensign. 65th: Ensign J. W. Johnstone, M.B., to be Surgeon Major. 67th: Ensign W. H. Hancock to be Captain. 69th: Ensign G. D. La Touche to be Lieutenant; Cadet A. W. H. Hancock to be Ensign.

Royal Regiment: Ensign A. Annesley to be Lieutenant. 1st Dragoons: Cornet C. H. Jones to be Lieutenant. 2nd: Lieut. J. D'Oyly Lawton to be Lieutenant. 3rd: Ensign A. C. Atkinson to be Lieutenant. 4th: Lieut. J. Herbert to be Lieutenant.

BREVET.—Lieut.-Col. P. M. N. Grey, C.B., half pay, late 5th Dragoon Guards, to be Colonel in the Army. Lieut.-Col. Hon. A. Gordon, C.B., 92nd Foot, and Capt. J. Fanning to have the honorary rank of Major. Lieut. J. Bowen to have the honorary rank of Captain; Assistant-Commissary-General D. Magrath to have the honorary rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. Commissariat Clerk Sergeant-Major H. Fox to be Quartermaster. Sir R. W. Gardiner, G.C.B., Colonel-Commandant Royal Artillery, on June 29, and Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. Campbell, K.C.B., Colonel 72nd Foot, on July 1, to be Generals in the Army. Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. Campbell to be Colonel-Commandant Royal Artillery, vice Gardiner, deceased. Lieut.-Col. W. Hall to be Major-Generals; Majors A. Woodwell, W. Douglas, and J. Maxwell to be Lieutenant-Colonels; Capt. J. Ward, R.N., J. Mundell, and W. F. Barnett to be Majors.

ADMIRALTY.

Commanders J. W. Donald and J. Tuckey to be Retired Captains; Mr. T. Green and Mr. J. Hall to be Commanders; Lieut. and Navigating Sub-Lieut. T. Jones and Mr. W. J. Ayre to be Acting Engineers in the Royal Navy; Engineers F. D. Wilkinson, R. Hall, J. Hamilton, H. R. Wardlaw, and W. B. Wright to be Captains; Lieuts. J. W. James, T. S. Goold, A. Hall, and T. H. Boyce, H. P. Bayley, H. E. Facey, A. G. Wright, C. A. G. Hopkins, and A. Wing to be Commanders.

Earl De Grey, the Secretary of State for War, left Carlton-gardens on Tuesday for Milford Haven, on a visit to the garrison of Pembroke Heathers now in progress on the western coast.

The Artillery good-service pension vacant by the death of General Sir Robert W. Gardiner, C.B., has been conferred on Major-General Henry Palliser.

The iron-cased turret-ship Royal Sovereign, Captain Sherard Osborn, C.B., arrived in Portsmouth harbour on Saturday last from her short voyage outside the Isle of Wight, on her trial trip, and will be docked immediately after the visit of her Majesty to the ship on Thursday week.

The Duke of Somerset, with Lord Clarence Paget and other members of the Board of Admiralty, left the Admiralty at Pembroke Dockyard and Milford Haven, on their annual tour of inspection. From Milford Haven the Duke and other Commissioners will proceed to Holyhead and, after their visit to Ireland, they will call at Holyhead to inspect the harbour works.

The second battalion of the Coldstream Guards, under the command of Colonel Stopford, C.B., marched to the Bricklayers' Arms on Tuesday morning from a month's duty at Aldershott; and on the same day the third battalion of Scots-Fusilier Guards marched into the Tower. The Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, left their quarters at the new barracks at Chelsea for the camp at Aldershott, where they will do duty for a month "under canvas."

The Duke of Cambridge, accompanied by the Inspector-General of Cavalry and a brilliant staff, proceeded to Aldershott camp on Monday for the purpose of making an inspection of troops. The regiments on the ground were the 1st Life Guards, Royal Horse Guards (Blue), and Royal Horse Guards (Colonel Viscount Gough), and the 12th (Prince of Wales's Royal) Lancers (Colonel G. St. Lockwood). On Tuesday morning their together a vast number of persons, who witnessed the evolutions of the troops with much satisfaction.

In consequence of the misunderstanding which has arisen with respect to the extra leave of absence from time since the return of the corporal punishment in the Army and the classification of soldiers in the first and second class, a general order has been issued from the Horse Guards, and communicated at Chatham Garrison, for general information, in which the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief directs that no soldier convicted of habitual drunkenness shall be degraded to the second class, and, if again convicted within twelve months, shall suffer corporal punishment.

A general regimental order of the Royal Artillery, promulgated last Saturday, states that the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, in conjunction with the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for War in Council, has directed that an officer of whatever grade who may in future be promoted to a vacancy or is brought up not belonging to the branch of service to which he originally belonged, in consequence of an officer in the rank above him having before his promotion been permitted to exchange into the old Royal Artillery to the late Indian Artillery, or vice versâ, shall belong to the brigade in which the vacancy actually occurs, and not to the brigade to which he would have fallen had no exchange been sanctioned. With a view, however, to lessen as much as possible the hardship which this regulation may may, on promotion, be thus compelled against their inclination to join a brigade not belonging to their own branch, his Royal Highness has directed to direct that no exchange shall be permitted when an officer stands within ten of the top of the list of the rank to which he may hold.

On Wednesday week the two squadrons of the 15th Hussars continued at Piershill were inspected by Lieut.-General Lord Paramore Portobello Sands. There was a large attendance of spectators. After the usual inspection of arms and accoutrements, the regiment marched past in quarters and marched past in single file. The other movements included changing by squadrons to the right and retiring by squadrons, charging in line, and the pursuing practice. The great movement of the review was the charge in line, when the whole line of horsemen in full gallop passed over in about a quarter of a mile. This spectacle was in the highest degree imposing. The pursuing practice was also obviously display of skill and horsemanship, the wheeling in troops and squadrons was executed with most wonderful rapidity and regularity. The review was at the end of the ground, which is the best place for many years, and as the conclusion Major-General Laurence informed Colonel Fitzgerald that he should have the satisfaction of giving the most favourable report of the drill and manœuvring of the Hussars under his command.

The new iron-clad frigate Ocean, 35, made her final contractor's trial of her engines at Plymouth on Thursday week. She left her moorings off Mount View at about half-past eight, and got back to Hamoaze returning in the evening. Everything was reported satisfactory, her engines working well. The Ocean will be docked on the 8th inst. to complete her bottom, pities and placed in the first division of the steam reserve. She is armed and manned. This fine vessel was launched on the 4th of last month at Pembroke Dockyard, on the 23rd of August, 1860, for a second-rate line-of-battle ship of that period, and designed to carry ninety guns of the heaviest calibre. But by the subsequent and rapid advance of the age of iron-sailing came a decree to alter her to a first-class iron-cased screw steam frigate of the largest class and tonnage. The Ocean was accordingly taken in hand by Mr. Edye, Master Shipwright, while building was suspended. She had at that time advanced to completion in frame after her original design, and was laid down on the 4th of June, 1861. After remaining some time in that unfinished state, she was again taken in hand on the 12th of June, 1863, to be converted into a first-class frigate. Her ends were then taken down and reconstructed, and she was generally altered in design to receive armour plates and machinery of the most modern construction by March, 1863, and launched on the 19th of that month. She was then taken round to Keyham Steam-yard, where her plates were put on, and her machinery of nearly been finished completed. Unlike the Warrior, she is most efficiently protected against the effects of shot all round, her armour-plates being continued over both stem and stern.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.

The Duke of Cambridge, who continues to support to the Volunteers at the review at Wimbledon, has reached the age of fifty-six. Battalion movements and reviews have been abandoned, the attendance of Volunteers on duty has been rendered with success and with good effect when corps are put practically to the test. Whether the Volunteers will be called out in case of war is not a particularly anxious to their attention; the country is not apprehensive of invasion, and the Volunteers numbers to form a force large enough, and many of them served so late that the second division was only formed just before the Crimean campaign, from the lateness of the hour, to commence the marching pass. Both these inconveniences must be sacrificed, I think, to the same cause—the difficulty experienced by the members of the several corps in leaving their ordinary avocations in time to enable them to reach the ground at the hour specified, and the impossibility of many members of the corps coming out at all. These drawbacks would, I think, be obviated if attendance at the larger gatherings of volunteers by the respective corps were confined to three or four in the course of the season. In that case I cannot but think that the members of corps would be enabled to give themselves or to obtain a whole holiday from their ordinary avocations. A larger and more useful field-day could then be attempted; corps would turn out strong, greatly adding to their appearance on parade and to the efficiency of their drill, as it must be evident to all who are conversant with military operations that larger companies and stronger battalions always drill and manœuvre with greater effect and advantage than small bodies of men.

On Saturday last the 64th Middlesex (London and Westminster), under command of Sir J. V. Shelley, M.P., to the number of about 300, marched to Hyde Park for inspection by Colonel Erskine, Deputy Inspector of Volunteers, and subsequently to Wimbledon, where for several months, they were complimented by the inspecting officer, who stated he should make a favourable report to the War Office on the efficiency of the regiment.

The annual inspection of the members of the Victoria corps by Colonel Morris, C.B., took place on Wednesday week, on the grounds adjoining the Crystal Palace, when about 250 men were present, the regiment about 500 men. It was under the command of the Duke of Wellington, Major-Commandant, Captain Rawlinson, Rumbold, Lamert, Dr. Lankester, and other officers. The volunteers having been put through a variety of movements, marched past in companies, and in excellent manner. The inspection was briefly addressed them. He said, although he had seen other corps go through the movements with more precision, he had never seen a finer body of men, or one who was most satisfactory.

A meeting was held at Bruce Castle Park, Tottenham, on Saturday, in aid of the funds of the 33rd Middlesex. The weather being fine, there was a large and fashionable assembly. Among the many interesting events were prizes to the value of £20 contested for by members of any volunteer corps.

Earl Grosvenor, Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the Queen's (Westminster), has caused a memorandum to be addressed to the officers commanding companies, calling their attention to the necessity of uniformity in their clothing, and also inviting them to keep their hair cut in accordance with regulation.

The 4th Tower Hamlets, which formerly formed an administrative battalion with the 1st Tower Hamlets, but which has been raised in ranks as to be entitled to a separate staff, and it is now made a distinct battalion, under Lieutenant-Colonel De La Lire. A fine band of music has been purchased for the use of the corps by the honorary colonel, Sir Henry De Worms, M.P. The Tower Hamlets, under Lieutenant-Colonel Money, has also lately had large additions.

The Finsbury Rifle Corps (39th Middlesex) was lately inspected in the Regent's Park, by Colonel Morris, who complimented in the manner in which the regiment, which is commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Egerton, performed the various evolutions.

The prize competition of the 9th (West) Middlesex Rifles, which opened on Thursday week, was brought to a conclusion on Saturday last. The chief winners of the battalion prizes were Sergeant Garner, Private Wilson, Private Bennett, Sergeant Pope, Corporal Hall, Private Hall, Sergeant Turner; Sergeant Grey won the officers' and sergeants' prize of £5, and Sergeant Hall the non-commissioned officers' prize of £3, the second and the first prize of £10, given by the same firm. Lieutenant Marriner, Private White, and Private Rose were also winners of the larger competitions.

The inspection of the 1st Middlesex Engineer Volunteers took place on the 30th ult., in the Regent's Park, by Colonel Wyndham and Colonel Erskine. It consisted first of the trial of some new small infantry pontoon boats, which were launched in the lake under the direction of the inventor, Captain Fowke, R.E. The trial of these took place, in fact, with the Admiralty cutters' crews, who showed off their skill and their efficiency. The earthworks were next inspected, and these consisted of a redoubt and a communication trench, with a line of rifle pits and a series of rifle-pits on a neighbouring eminence. The battery (which was completed with gabions and fascines) was then attacked, and captured in a sap by a sunken roadway, over which, as a medium of communication, the sappers had thrown a bridge. Subsequently, a mine was sprung, which, besides those engaged on the works, occupied in tracing batteries, making gabions, fascines, &c., the regiment was employed in working the field telegraph. After the inspection, the officers of the corps entertained Colonel Wyndham and Colonel Erskine at luncheon.

The second (Art Students) company of the 1st Middlesex Engineers held its annual competition for prizes on Saturday. The result of the competition was as follows:—Lance-Corporal Campbell, the officers' and non-commissioned officers' challenge prize, value £5, given by the company; Private Bennett, the company's prize, value £3, given by Sapper Brown; Private Bennett, the company's prize, value £2, given by Sapper Crosbie.

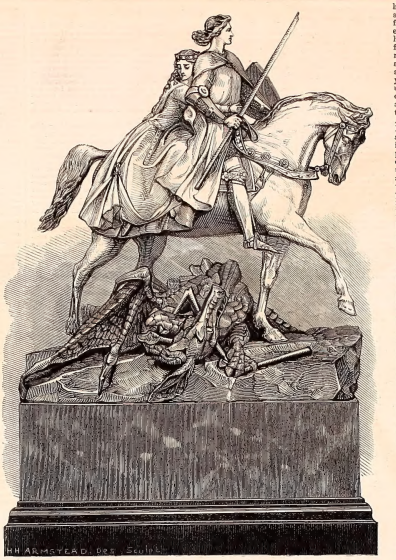
The fourth annual inspection of the 2nd Middlesex Artillery Volunteers (Tower Hamlets) took place in the Regent's Park on Saturday evening, under Colonel Hammond, R.A. The corps having been marched into position, the inspecting officer minutely examined them and were re-formed into line. A detachment, under Sergeant-Major Pearson, was then ordered to the front, and, having marched to the front, mounted on the battery were manned and worked. The corps having been again marched into line, the inspecting officer addressed the commandant briefly addressed by Colonel Hammond, who expressed the pleasure he felt at the excellent manner in which the regiment had performed its duties, and at their great general efficiency in the more important points of artillery drill.

The annual inspection of the 1st Kent Royal Administrative battalion of volunteer rifles, comprising the corps at Woolwich, Greenwich, Deptford, Lewisham, Eltham, and Bexley, was held in Greenwich, Deptford, Lewisham, Eltham, and Bexley, was held in Greenwich Park on Saturday last, in the park of Sir F. M. Wilson, Bart., Old Charlton.

At the recent competition of the Eton College Rifles for the silver challenge medals and marksmen's badges, which came off in Windsor Park, the following were the successful competitors:—Cadet Hall, the challenge medal, Captain R. Pigeon; Mr. Arkwright's challenge medal, Private C. Pigeon; Mr. Arkwright's challenge medal, Private C. Pigeon; marksmen's badges—Lieutenant Wilson, 11; Corporal Thompson, 7; and Lieutenant Hall, 6.

On Saturday an encampment formed by the 1st Norfolk Administrative battalion of Volunteers in Gunton Park, the seat of Colonel Upcher, M.P., commenced. The corps had formed on Wednesday afternoon, so that the volunteers were three days under canvas. The Norfolk Light Horse, under the command of Captain J. Hay Gurney, accompanied the battalion, and the combined force numbered about 700 men. The troops on Wednesday evening. The chief event of the afternoon was the contest for the prize given by the Colonel, which was won by Sergeant Suffield, the troops marched past about four o'clock, and afterwards engaged in manœuvres. On Thursday the manœuvres were continued, and the chief feature in the manœuvres was the manner in which they had conquered the enemy. The enemy was represented by the Norwich corps, under the command of Colonel Lord Suffield, who was "supported" by Lady Suffield and a party of friends. The attack was made by the Norfolk Light Horse, Lord and Lady Suffield and the assembled troops and visitors adjourned to the park, where they were entertained by the band of the 1st Norfolk Light Horse. The concert with performances by the band of the 1st Norfolk Light Horse. The concert with performances by the band of the 1st Norfolk Light Horse. The concert with performances

GOODWOOD RACES.

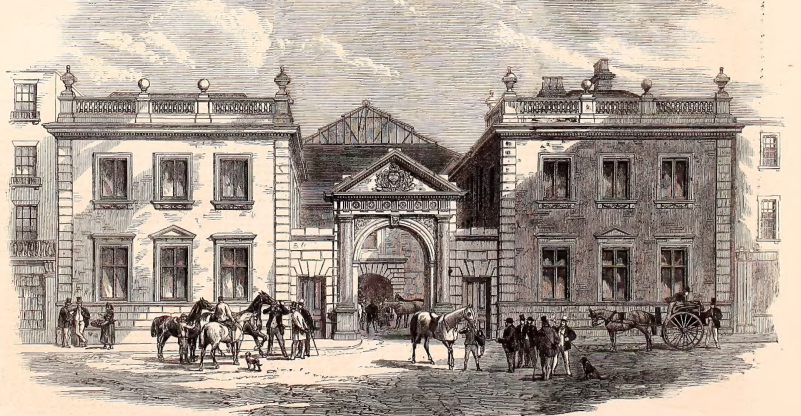


M. LUPIN'S "DOLLAR," WINNER OF THE GOODWOOD CUP.—SEE PAGE 149.

THE LADIES' LAWN AT GOODWOOD.—SEE PAGE 149.

THE NEW "TATTERSALL'S" ON KNIGHTSBRIDGE-GREEN.

We have engraved a View of the façade of the new building erected for the use of the subscribers to Tattersall's. It stands on the west side of Knightsbridge-green, near the top of Sloane-street, and, with the spacious yards behind it, occupies nearly two acres of ground. The front displays a central gateway, with pedimental beautifully carved, and two side entrances; the wings consist of two square blocks of yellow brick with Portland stone dressings, pierced with six windows on the two floors, and surmounted by stone parapets with ball terminals. The left-hand block is dedicated to the subscribers; the right to the secretary's offices, business departments, harness-rooms, and the private dwellings of the superintendents. Although the entrance presents a comparatively narrow face, the space within gradually enlarges through a depth of 300 ft. to more than double the width of the façade. The subscription-room is a saloon of elegant proportions, 60 ft. by 30 ft., with a clear height of 26 ft. 6 in. It is lighted by day by two large domes 18 ft. high, covered with lunette lights, each formed of one large piece of glass. A third dome is in the centre of the ceiling, in which an enormous sun burner is placed to illuminate the whole by night. These domes are bordered by a beautiful guilloche pattern, and enriched with coloured devices. The walls are decorated in the same pattern. The spacious floor is paved, in a tasteful geometric pattern, with ornamental tiles in harmony with the decorations of the ceiling. A raised dais, about 6 in. in height, surrounds this apartment. It is skirted and edged with marble. Upon this dais commodious seats will be placed. Under each of the two extreme domes a large octagon slab of marble supports the desks used for recording wagers or writing letters. At the south-west corner is an area of about 70 ft. by 40 ft. for open-air betting, with a telegraph office. The grand or central entrance leads through a tall iron gateway, over a truncated for heavy traffic, into the principal public yard, 108 ft. long by 60 ft. wide, appropriated to sales by auction. In the centre of this area will be found the old and familiar temple of the other premises at Hyde Park-corner, covering the aqueduct with its fox and the bust of George IV. when in early life; and in the north-west corner, the well-known pulpit of the auctioneer. The whole yard is covered by a gigantic roof of Hartley's patent glass, 150 ft. in length, 102 ft. in breadth, and 60 ft. high. It is supported by iron girders, and constructed to admit or exclude the external air at pleasure, and thus obtain the greatest amount of ventilation. Surrounding and opening into this inclosure are some of the stables, of which there are in all ninety-eight stalls and twenty loose boxes. Behind the north and west portions of the inner row of stalls is a wide roadway, upon the side of which are some of the loose boxes (intended for entire horses and mares with their foals), the dimensions of which are remarkable, being 12 ft. by 14 ft. in size. These are lighted by a ventilating louvre top, to which all foul air is at once carried, without retardation, by the peculiar construction of the sloping roof. Above the inner square of stables, and equally beneath the protection of the glass roof, is a gallery running the entire length of the oblong area, for the repository of carriages. Under a portion of this gallery the tramway is terminated by a turn-table, upon which the carriages rest and are raised to the upper level by hydraulic machinery, as in the new large hotels. The architect of the whole building is Mr. Charles Freeman, of Lincoln's Inn; the builders are Messrs. Holland and Hannen, of Belvedere-road.



GOODWOOD RACES: THE CHESTERFIELD CUP.—SEE PAGE 149.

"HAYMAKERS."

JOHN LINNELL is one of a race of representative painters who are of late being rapidly removed from among us—men many of whom we hardly sufficiently appreciate till they are insensible alike to our esteem or neglect. We know few artists—few, certainly, out of his own family—who, when the elder Linnell lays down his pencil, are likely to take his place. Let us hope, however, the day is still far distant when the painter of such a broad and masterly landscape as we have engraved on page 141 shall be lost to us. Nevertheless, in speaking of an artist who has more than completed threescore years and ten, and who commenced his artistic life under Varley, one of the fathers of English water-colour painting, and with the late William Hunt among other pupils who have gone before, our thoughts naturally take a retrospective tendency. And to what a quantity of noble work by John Linnell can we revert in memory! And, during this artist's lifetime, through what curious fluctuations in public estimation has that department of painting passed in which he is now pre-eminent! At the outset of Linnell's career, landscape-painting was universally despised in England. During the earlier and greater part of his professional life he himself was compelled to gain subsistence by painting chiefly portraits and miniatures, and by engraving. It is recorded that Linnell thought himself fortunate to make £100 a year, even when painting those early landscapes, which are now the gems of rich collections, and which are prized by many even more than those later works, for each of which the artist has received £1000 and upwards. The genius of Turner, and after him a host of landscape-painters in oil and water colours—those who practised in the latter medium perhaps even more than the former—gave, however, a new development to public taste. The rage for travelling which arose after the last great European wars; the poetry of the Lakists, and, lastly, Mr. Ruskin's eloquent descriptions of natural scenery, have contributed to the same result.

We need hardly say that the landscape we have engraved is distinguished by characteristics of mature power which are never found in the works of a very young artist. As with all painters who have risen to eminence, Linnell's early landscapes are remarkable for careful realisation. All the details evince a keen eye and patient hand, informed and directed by an intellect thirsting to accumulate a larger number of distinct objective truths. Gradually there come a more general grasp, a more educated harmony, and with these the firm and confident execution of manhood. And then, as age creeps on and the hand begins to tire, mental and subjective qualities become more and more predominant; the grand generalisations of a large and wise experience, the broad and simple statement of the most artful rather than actual, or, as we should perhaps say, accidental elements of the scene; and yet, with all the real breadth and apparent simplicity, more is indicated than the most painful minuteness can express. Taking, for example, this recently-painted picture of the "Haymakers," we hesitate not to say, unpretending as is the subject, that none of the highest truths of landscape art will be found exemplified in it, if only the student brings that spirit of philosophic appreciativeness—if we may be permitted such expression—the desirability of which we have endeavoured to hint in the preceding remarks. It may interest the reader to hear that the sketch for this picture was made as long back as 1830, only two or three hundred yards north of the house in Porchester-terrace, Bayswater, now occupied by Mr. Silvy, the well-known photographer—a house built by Mr. Linnell in 1829, and where the artist's studio still exists, though somewhat altered.

It has been observed that the placing of this picture "on the line" to the Academy exhibition which has just closed is an almost unique instance of such recognition of this distinguished artist on the part of the Academicians, and is the more remarkable in a year when the landscape-painters seem to have been more than usually slighted. It is well known that Mr. Linnell has not—at all events for the last twenty years—gone out of his way to solicit (for it amounted to this) the Academic place of honour. But that such an artist was any age made an R.A. has been one of the strongest reasons why the rule, now happily set aside, which made such a written application necessary should be abrogated.

THE NEW "TATTERSALL'S" AT KNIGHTSBRIDGE-GREEN.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

LADY HARRIET LODGE-ELLERTON.

Lady Henrietta Barbara, or, as more usually called, Lady Harriet, Lodge-Ellerton, whose premature departure occurred at her town house, 6, Connaught-place, Hyde Park, on the 30th ult., was the third and youngest daughter, and eventual co-heir, of the Right Hon. and Rev. John, seventh Earl of Scarborough and Principal of Brasenose College, Oxford, sister of John, eighth Earl, and cousin of Richard George, present and ninth and proud Earl of Scarborough. Her Ladyship was born, July 15, 1796, and was married, June 4, 1818, to the Rev. Frederick Manners Sutton, second son of Captain John Manners Sutton, and great-grandson of John, third Duke of Rutland, K.G. The Rev. Frederick Manners Sutton died Aug. 20, 1839, leaving, by his marriage with her Ladyship, two sons—namely, John Henry Manners Sutton, Esq., of Kelham, Notts, and the Rev. George Manners Sutton, of Haltonthorpe in 1863, and the Rev. William Manners Sutton, and a daughter, Harriet Georgiana, married, in 1842, to the Hon. Arthur Murray Aynsley. Lady Harriet Manners Sutton was married, secondly, Aug. 24, 1847, to John Lodge, Esq., of Bradford, in the county of Carnarvon, and was widowed by Royal license, in 1858, the additional surname of Ellerton. Mr. Lodge-Ellerton is a poet and translator of considerable merit, and author of Adam Lodge, Esq., M.A., the distinguished translator in verse of Schiller's "Ballads and Songs of Many Countries" poetry. By his second marriage, Lady Harriet Lodge-Ellerton leaves no issue.

EDWARD DEVITT, ESQ., M.P.

Edward Devitt, Esq., of Devitt's Court, in the city of Exeter, who died at Ilsomb, Ilsomb, near Exmouth, on the 20th ult., after a long illness, was the elder son of Edward Devitt, Esq., of Stock, by his wife Anne Adams, daughter of John Kensington, Esq., and was brother of John Devitt, Esq., of Exeter and Devonshire. He was born in 1797, and was married, in 1824, to Anne Hall. He was first returned to Parliament for the city of Exeter in December, 1832, and honoured with the confidence and support of the Liberal party in all their numerous to the striking off of their supporters from the register. He was himself a Liberal Churchman, and was a constant supporter of every cause his first election until his death. Mr. Devitt, though of late comparatively quiet in the House of Commons, has been a most energetic, and laborious member. He was frequently selected as Chairman of Committees on private business of the greatest importance, and his valuable services were so much appreciated as they were sought after by all parties. Mr. Devitt was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Devonshire, and Vice-Chairman of the South Australian Banking and Land Company. He married, in 1824, Anne, daughter of George Frederick Hall, Esq., who died in 1854, leaves issue.

MR. SERJEANT MEREWETHER.

Henry Ailworth Merewether, of Castle Field, Wilts, senior Serjeant-at-Law, with a patent of precedence, and Recorder of Sudbury, in the county of Suffolk, was born in 1790, and was called to the Bar by the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple, May 21, 1819, and went the Oxford Circuit. He died on Wednesday last, himself by his writings in connection with the law and history of municipal boroughs. He became a Serjeant-at-Law in 1858, by the ordinary mode of Precedence. He was also a Doctor of Civil Law. Serjeant Merewether published, in 1835, the Address to the Electors of Sudbury, entitled "Municipal Assistance Constitution of England," which was much noted at the time. The Inner Temple also held the office of Steward of Manors, and Deputy Steward General to Queen Adelaide. He formerly practised extensively before Parliamentary Committees, but for the last few years had a professional income of about £5000 a year. He was elected Town Clerk of the city of London in June, 1841, when he was in full practice at the Bar, and thus relinquished his practice at the Bar in order to devote himself exclusively to the duties of that office, which he discharged ably and efficiently. He was greatly esteemed and respected by the Corporation. He retired from the town clerkship in 1849, when in his seventy-first year, and, in consideration of the abolition of his valuable services, granted him a pension of £1000 a year. Mr. Serjeant Merewether married, in 1824, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Ailworth, an eldest son. Henry Ailworth Merewether, Esq., of Bowden Hill, near Chippenham, Wilts, Q.C., Recorder of Sudbury, and M.P. for that borough. Serjeant Merewether died at his seat, Castle Field, near Calne, Wilts, on the 28th ult.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR WILLIAM BRERETON, K.C.B.

Lieutenant-General Sir William Brereton, of the Royal Artillery, K.C.B., K.H., who died on the 27th ult., at his residence, Albany Villas, near to Hove, in Sussex, was the eldest and only male issue of Brereton, of Brereton Hall, in Cheshire, and was of that branch which has for centuries been of such high military eminence. Sir William Brereton's father, Major Brereton, also was present at the battle of Culloden, and younger brother of the late Accountant-General Brereton, and of Colonel Brereton, of the county of Kildare, whose devoted energy in brave and self-sacrificing conduct gained him the Victoria Cross, and who was severely wounded in the Crimean campaign. Sir William, however, was the only son of Major Brereton who survived infancy, and was educated at the Royal Military College, and obtained a commission as Second Lieutenant in May, 1813, a service prior to the Peninsular campaign, and one of the distinguished service from the early part of the Peninsular War up to the termination of hostilities, in 1814. He was present at the battle of Waterloo, on December, 1803, to June, 1815, and was present at the defence of Cadiz and of Isla Majorada, when he was wounded, and was also present at the battle of Tarifa. He acted in the batteries at the siege of San Sebastian, and shared in the actions of Barossa, Vulmar Sea, Vittoria, the Pyrenees, the battle of Nivelle, Nivenne, Quatre Bras, and Waterloo, where he was severely wounded, He became Captain in 1826, and in 1837 was appointed Major, and in 1851 Lieutenant-Colonel in 1843. He had a division as second in command of the expedition to the Baltic under Major-General Sir Charles Napier, and at the Baltic Fleets, the Gunten river, those of stakes barriers, and of the city of Cronstadt, when 829 pieces of ordnance fell into the hands of the victors. At the end of the war with Russia, Brereton proceeded to the East and took part in the campaign, having on board the Vulcan steamer, under the command of his relative, Vice-Admiral Sir James W. D. Dundas, during the naval action of the bombardment with the Sebastopol squadron, and the 17th October, 1854, he directed the rockets fired against the forts and city of Sebastopol. He for a time was Commandant of the 4th Division of the Royal Horse Artillery. He was, in 1858, made a C.B., having in the year previously been made a K.H. He was, in 1861, by the late Lord Herbert of Lea, appointed to the responsible post of Inspector of Artillery, and in 1862 was made a K.C.B., in recognition of his services on the improvement of artillery. He had the silver medal, with clasp, for Egypt, and the Crimean medal and clasp for Sebastopol. He was in the enjoyment of a pension for distinguished services, and he was appointed Colonel-Commandant of a brigade of Royal Artillery. He became Major-General on the 16th of December, 1851, and a Lieutenant-General on the 22nd of July, 1864, just five days prior to his decease.

VICE-ADMIRAL BRASIER.

Vice-Admiral James Brasier, R.N., who died at his residence, Bradney, near Bridgwater, on the 24th ult., in the sixty-third year of his age, entered the Royal Navy, in 1799, under the auspices of his maternal relative Lord St. Vincent, with Collingwood on board the Excellent, and was present in the action in which he served at the Battle of Copenhagen, 1801, and also commanded a boat at the capture of an armed brig and two gun-boats on the Texel. He joined the Pique, 36, Captains Cumberland and Hodgson Bloe, and witnessed the capture of the Ceres and Copt Hornby, Dr. Dodgin, and Captain Bloe had unsuccessful attack on Curaçoa. After further service, he was made Acting Sub-Lieutenant, for his conduct as a detachment of boats, in the Basque Roads, with, in the Island of Cuba. Brasier took part in the reduction of Guadaloupe, in 1810. He was at the reduction of Genoa, in 1814. He accompanied command the Vernon, 50, flag-ship of Sir George Cockburn, in the West Indies, from 1834 until his promotion to post rank in 1837, he then Catalonia, 123, bearing the flag of his old officer and friend Sir Josias Rowley, in the Mediterranean, since which he has resided at Bridgwater. Vice-Admiral Brasier married, first, 1828, Catherine, only surviving daughter of the late John Macaskill, Esq., of Bridgwater, Somerset, and, secondly, 1843, Mary Elizabeth, youngest daughter of the late Rev. Henry Barrow, Vicar of Atcham, in the county of Salop. He was promoted to Vice-Admiral on the Retired List, 1st May, 1857, and to that of Vice-Admiral on the same list in November last.

In the chapel of the Palazzo del Potesta at Florence there is an old portrait supposed to represent Dante, and to have been painted by Giotto, his contemporary. The Italian Minister of Public Instruction having appointed two distinguished Hersell, M.M. Milanesi and Pinaccini, to select the most genuine portrait of Dante for the purpose of having it executed on the medal which is to be struck in honour of the poet, they, after minute examination, have declared the above-mentioned portrait to be the work of Taddeo Gaddi, Giotto's pupil, and therefore not a contemporary of Dante. They have likewise denied the authenticity of all the other portraits of Dante existing at Florence except two—the outlined in an old MS. of the Riccardi Library and the other in the cathedral of Florence.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

THE NEXT TRANSIT OF VENUS (DEC. 6, 1882).—In the last Number of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society will be found a paper relating to this interesting event by the Astronomer Royal, Mr. G. B. Airy, illustrated by diagrams, pointing out the spots where ingress and egress are observed, and the best methods of effecting them. In the parts of the earth which the duration of transit would be shortest, he shows that the seashore of the United States of America is very favourable, and that the southern coast will have the advantage of a higher sun at egress. Bermuda is also another good position. For this part of the earth it would appear that the duration of transit will be longest the chute is more limited; and a point between Sabrina Land and Upside Bay, Graham Land, in lat. 66° 30' S., long. 63° W., would be the most favourable spot for observation. In conclusion, he expresses his opinion that a reexamination should be made of the points under consideration, and that it should not be long deferred.

HUMAN REMAINS have been again discovered near Abbeville by M. Boucher de Perthes, and specimens forwarded by him to M. De Quatrefages have been submitted to the Paris Academy of Sciences. The latter communicated a paper containing his remarks thereon, which he characterises as more than a year; and he now states that he has collected specimens of the flint implements, and of the bones of the animals of the drift period, and other remains of the human race, which fully recognise the great importance of these discoveries, and, while leaving to geologists to determine the age of the strata in which these relics have been found, he thinks that all the circumstances the existence of man anterior to historic times, and that, from the flints now under consideration, we may be compelled. In the Comptes Rendus, Vol. lix. No. 3, will be found details of the mode of the discoveries of these bones. In June and July last, given by MM. Degray and Berteux, in letters to M. Quatrefages.

DISLOCATIONS OF THE EARTH'S CRUST of various kinds, such as encrustation or depression, are considered by Mr. Hull in a recent number of the "Elements of Chemical and Physical Geology" (of which a new edition has just been published by Messrs. Longman and Co.). Metamorphism of carbonic acid are of universal occurrence, and originate at great depths, for the layers of rock which contain fossil remains of the lowest formations exist at such great and inaccessible depths are chiefly silicious, like the oldest of the Primary formations, as the Old Red Sandstone and the Coal Measures. These silicates are decomposed by carbonic acid according to the surface, the decomposition being facilitated by the presence of moisture which exists in the interior of the earth. The products are silicate of alumina and certain carbonates, which, with silicate of alumina, form argillaceous and other silicious substances, not only an increase of matter, but also an increase of volume, carbonic acid, diphosphuretted hydrogen, and other gases, are the source of specific gravity. On the other hand, if the latter be decreased, the volume must be increased, and this is the case more than the weight. This is the case when silicates are decomposed by carbonic acid. The specific gravity of the protrusion of volcanic matter from the interior of the earth through fissures of rock masses; adding that, where silicates are absent, as in the south of Sweden, there is no trace of any such progression. In the first portion will be found in No. 73 of the Journal of the Geological Society, from which the foregoing notes have been taken.

MOTIONS OF BENZOIC ACID ON WATER.—In the Chemical News, Mr. Tomlinson, now so eminent for his researches on the figures formed on the surface of water by the motions of liquids, has a paper on this subject, and gives the following extract. The original is Latin, abstracted from his friend, Dr. Faraday, and is, I think, worthy of translation. He says:—"I had scarcely made up my mind as to the nature of the phenomena when I met bold enough to put a piece of camphor upon water, and, without saying a word, I had the same volatility as camphor, would display similar effects. When this piece of benzoic acid was placed on the water, it commenced, the glittering feathery little crystals of benzoin, when thrown on the surface of water, striking, and then moving with a rotatory motion, like the fragments of camphor. Indeed, this rushing to and fro, and the rotatory motion, are more striking than in the case of camphor, and continue for a much longer period of time." Mr. Tomlinson describes the following new method of performing this experiment:—"Put a piece of benzoic acid, the size of a pea, into a drop of oil of bitter almonds be exposed to the air in a watchglass they will, in the course of about half an hour, be changed into crystals of benzoic acid. One or two of these flakes, placed on the surface of clean water in a clean glass, will exhibit the phenomena described above. The oil of bitter almonds of which produces the motion. In a shallow glass vessel, 4 in. in diameter, the motions will continue for hours and hours, and even days, for then, the adhesion of the surface is satisfied by being completely covered with a very thin film, the motions cease, a removal of the crystals by a drop of water and to a clean vessel of water. The flake should be removed on the end of a clean platinum spatula, and not with the finger; and, on touching the surface of the water with this, the fragment will dart off from it and commence a new series of rotatory movements. The crystals will always set in motion, whether they sink and down the capillary curve of the water, as if seeking to leap out of the vessel. As they approach the edge of the vessel, they dart off in the opposite direction, and at once will suddenly stop, throw off one or two small flakes, which will then commence new movements. In all these eccentric wanderings, until the adhesion of the surface is again satisfied, the fragments of benzoic acid preserve the same rotatory motion as before. Although in these motions there is much that is common to camphor, there is the most striking difference between the two, for the one is agitated, trembling, zigzag motions and rapid rotations, as if upon a fixed vertical axis.

A GRADUAL RISING OF THE COAST OF CHILI has been remarked. The phenomenon has been observed in various parts of the provinces of Arauco and Concepcion, has communicated his observations to the Academy of Sciences, at Paris. France, and Chili, are subject, although not very striking, appear to indicate that a movement is taking place on the coast of the latter country which is not unworthy of notice. In about half a century the depth of the best-known ports has diminished, and the fragments of rock and earth which fall from the cliffs, instead of being de to deposits, during the flow, brought down by the current. The coast is composed of tertiary formations, belonging to the Andes, and consists of great many cavities formed by lithophagous (stone-consuming) mollusks. These are, in a great measure, filled with sea-water, which is left behind at 6 or 10 metres. These which occupy the superior part are of a much more recent origin, and are filled with water at the time of high-tide only. There had been a very much longer time exposed to the action of the atmosphere, and they are filled with fresh water, which is derived from the condensing the work of those still inhabiting these seas, for if the elevation had been more rapid, the animals would have perished before they could construct those still formed under the sea. The elevation of the sands with banks of shells, and the presence of the remains of the Royal Shell-fish, are evidences. They reappear, indeed, in all the little creeks of this coast, and the level of the sea-water, which is constantly rising, has not yet reached the roots of the mollusks once to appear. It is also remarked that the shell-banks do not lie more than 2 or 3 metres above the level of the sea, and that they are of deeper concentric coats. The strata of ancient transport were, on the contrary, of great elevation. The coast-transport extends to the height of above 100 metres, while the quaternary strata have attained to only ten metres. The gradual rising of the continent, which, in a few years, will alter the opening of the volcanic craters of the Andes, to which the sea-water has now free access.

STARS THAT HAVE CHANGED THEIR COLOURS.—Some additions to the catalogue of these stars are given by Mr. Jacob, from the observation of Hencshell, Donati, Herschel, Schmidt, and others. Including the new ones, there are now 41 stars which have undoubtedly undergone this latitude, seven, according to these evidences, have changed their colour since the time of Herschel. Among the six stars of the first magnitude in the northern hemisphere, Sirius, Procyon, and Vega are white; Capella and Arcturus nearly all of these changes have been sudden, transpiring in a few years, or even months, and not by slow degrees, as might have been supposed. Some are white; all are either red, yellow, green, or blue. Why they have changed, and what is the cause of the change, are questions. Any change in the colours of stars could not be accounted for by any prevailing theory of the constitution of the universe, although it is not inconsistent with the constitution to the sun, and the sun has been encircled with a theory which explains the variability of the sun; secondly, a fiery luminous envelope; thirdly, another transparent envelope; fourthly, another fiery luminous envelope; and, fifthly, a transparent envelope surrounding all the others. Among such a number of imaginary things, there seems to be no room to imagine how changes of colour could occur. Hence the invention of a change of colour in a star has been regarded as anomalous, as an inconsistent fact, having no relation to any popular theories and no appropriate place in the ordinary systems. Hence observations on the colours and on the changes of colours have not been stimulated, but rather repressed, by this complex theory of the sun." The progress of what is termed solar and stellar chemistry will, no doubt, revive the attention of philosophers to the above-mentioned phenomena.

REMAINS OF THE CENTRAL PLAIN OF IRELAND.—We select some notes on this subject from the new Geological Magazine (edited by Professor T. Rupert Jones and Mr. H. Woodward, from which much good work may be reasonably expected, and which well deserves support, if the first number may be taken as a specimen). An esker is defined as a ridge, or rarely, a mound of sand or gravel, heaped up by the action of water, and derived from masses of the same material in close proximity to it. These masses, though they occur elsewhere, are most abundant in Ireland, where they have received the name of "esker;" they are analogous to the sandbanks, harbour-bars, shoals, &c., now in process of formation through the antagonistic action of tides and currents causing the accumulation of bottom material at particular points. In a paper read at a meeting of the Dublin Geological Society, Mr. G. H. Kinahan follows the example of Mr. Scrby, and attempts to determine the mode of formation of these eskers from certain physical evidence. His paper is important chiefly on account of its containing a proposed nomenclature for the various kinds which we consider to be wrong saying that it is nearly parallel to that of the coral reefs proposed many years ago by Mr. Darwin. We thus have ridge-eskers, barrier-eskers, and shoal-eskers as parallel terms to those of fringing-reefs, barrier-reefs, and atolls; but the distinction of the latter named terms in each series is less evident than that of the others, and partakes more of the nature of antagonism than of isolation. Mr. Kinahan thus describes these classes:—"The fringing-eskers occur fringing high ground; the barrier-eskers stretch from one high ground to another, or run out to sea from the land; the shoal-eskers are those which have been so called as they seem to be similar to shoals and shifting banks of sand."

COAL-TAR COLOURS.—Dr. Hofmann has again reported to the Academy of Sciences at Paris the results of his researches in this valuable and interesting branch of chemistry. We select a few points. Rosaniline, subjected to the action of iodine, compounds are irregular decomposition. Ammonia is disengaged, and a quantity of basic liquids (46 or 58 per cent) produced by distillation, and a mass of green resin remains in the retort. The liquid product contains aniline-ethyl resemblies (the aniline-violet of commerce), and aniline-methyl, or its isolidine, however, is in the indigenous manner. No difficulty is experienced in separating from the liquid product an appreciable quantity of ethyl-aniline. The green resin left in the retort yields a violet obtained by means of the iodate of ethyl and the red of aniline cannot be doubted. Dr. Hofmann's latest observation, however, indicates an analogous relation between the blue and red of aniline, we have a right to suspect, among the products of the distillation of the green resin, the base of rosaniline; the presence of phenylisolidine (i.e., diphenylaniline), a substance which has hitherto eluded all the efforts of the chemist to obtain. Dr. Hofmann, in his paper in the Comptes Rendus (Vol. lviii., No. 25), describes the experiments which he believes have led to the discovery of this base. The new coal-tar purple he describes as possessing a peculiar reaction, to which, while giving rise to its production, he attributes the name of the new coloured matter, proposed, at the same time, the easy recognition of a new base. In contact with concentrated nitric acid, diphenylamine gives a splendid and persistent violet changed by means of the iodate of ethyl and the red of aniline cannot be doubted. Dr. Hofmann, in his paper in the Comptes Rendus

COLUMN FOR THE CURIOUS.

A FLOWER SHOW has just been held in the "Lamb and Flag Ragged School," in the somewhat dingy purlieus of Clerkenwell, which is just now suffering from sundry demolitions of dwellings. Still, Clerkenwell is an old spot for gardens and greenery; and, though the covering over of the New River breakneck has deprived our eyes of that formal stream, we have green turf in its place. In this and the adjoining parish, Islington, mulberry and fig trees, relics of old gardens, are not rare. But the Lamb and Flag scholars have reared autumn flowers in courts, and alleys which have scarcely breathing-places—a success which reminds us of one of Charles Dickens's most charming pages about flowers grown at a garret-window. The Clerkenwell children, doubtless, like the humanising influence of plants and window-gardens, though they be limited to a single flower-pot. We learn in the Builder that among the most curious objects at the late show in Clerkenwell were six bunches of large black grapes, grown without artificial heat in Clerkenwell, by Mr. George Cox. They harvest and feast them as was taken from a vine a century old, formerly growing in a garden in Rosoman-street, which, says the Clerkenwell News, was probably a cutting from one of the old vineyards which once abounded in this neighbourhood. By-the-way, Mr. London, who wrote so largely upon gardening, first showed his taste for that art in the little garden which his father had given him when a child. One of his earliest efforts was in recommending the lighter trees, as the Oriental plane, the sycamore, the almond, laburnum, whitebeam, as now generally cultivated, and add greatly to the beauty of the London squares; indeed, Londoners owe more to London than they are commonly aware of.

M. Godard's "Great Fire Balloon" (as it has been improperly termed) appears to be a success by the ascent on Thursday week, when ludicrous it was to hear one of a crowd of gazers describe it as a "giddy balloon," and another stoutly assert that it had a railway-carriage affixed to its car! It is, if we mistake, some six and twenty years since a Montgolfier or Smoke Balloon, of gigantic proportions, succeeded, or rather attempted to ascend, from the Surrey Zoological Gardens, May 24, 1838. This balloon was the height of the York Column, and its circumference nearly half that of the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. It was filled from the same kind of chopped straw, burnt in a furnace which dropped through an aperture in the lower part of the car. It could be fully inflated by the ascending power of the furnace in eight minutes. Experimentally, the balloon had ascended in Essex; but on the night it was announced to ascend from the Surrey Gardens, the furnace becoming red-hot, the car twice took fire. The vexation of the crowd then became uncontrollable, and the balloon was cut and torn to pieces. By-the-way, there is no disappointment which makes King Mob so furious as a balloon failure; the many-headed sentence is very hard upon those who fail of experimental philosophy.

Before we leave the subject of the most wonderful sale of the late Mr. Daniel's library and Shakspeare collection, we point attention to a few lots of more popular anecdotic interest than more money value :—

83. A copy of seventy Black-Letter Ballads, printed between 1559 and 1597; a most marvellous and curtailed collection, in the finest possible condition, and of the highest interest. Some of them being presumed to be unique and hitherto unknown; ending with "Franklin's Farewell to the World, with his Confession and Repentance," dated 1631, "printed and published for Henry Gosson;" this ballad, the last of the series, refers to James Franklin, who was executed for his share in the murder of Thomas Overbury; H. Gosson was a celebrated ballad-printer in the reign of James I.; the whole contained in little volume.—[One of the collection a descriptive catalogue appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, vol. xxix.]

Next is an illustrated copy of one of Mr. Daniel's own works, which he appeared to have illustrated with great care :—

465. "Merrie England in the Olden Time," profusely illustrated by the author himself, comprising among the singularly curious and interesting matters the Christmas-eve carol-singing, caroling customs, and the Yule-log, by R. Cruikshank and others, made for this copy only. Forty-nine drawings by Hartley and other well-known artists, illustrating the quaint old customs of ancient and modern prints from rare works or of singular curiosity. The humour of Rowlandson, Gillray, Cruikshank, Heath, and Phiz, in the Christmas merriments and frolics at the May games; affording interesting reminiscences on the Londoners' holiday customs; loud in the praises and memory of our ancestors, their doings from the time of Chaucer to a period within the recollection of many inhabitants of the present day, morocco extra, by Charles Lewis—£110.

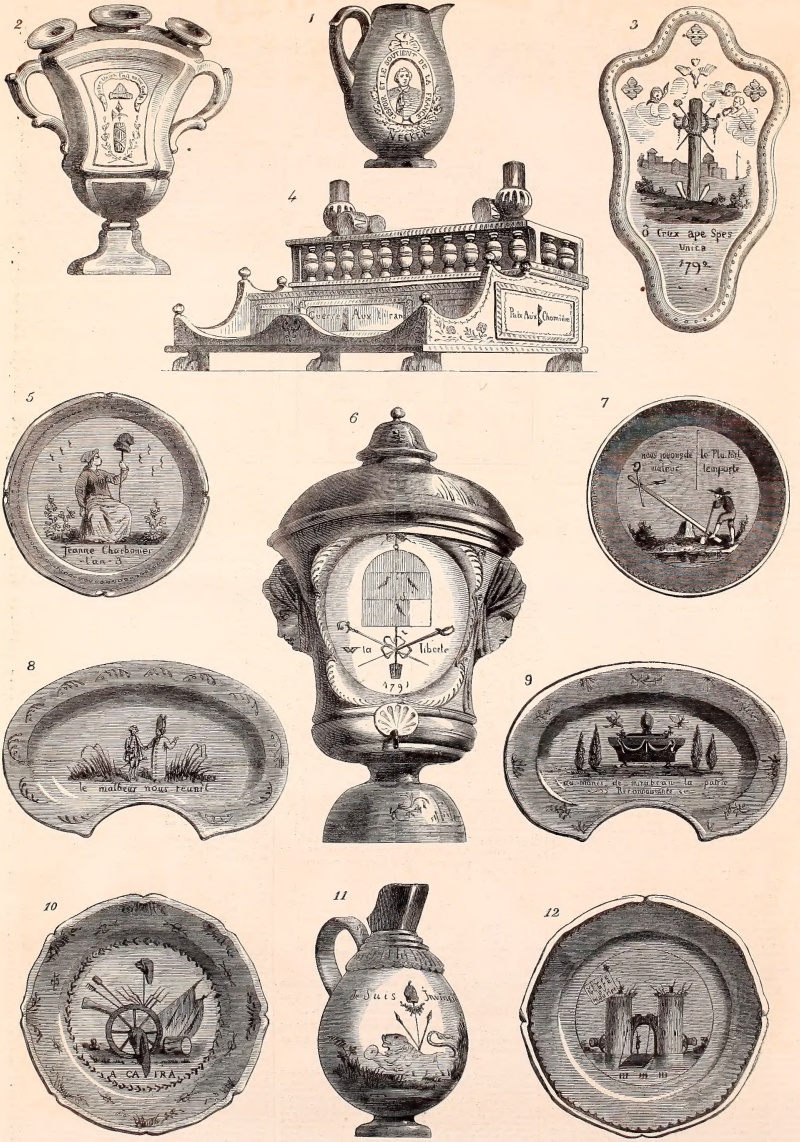
The next lot cleverly illustrates the age of the English Roscius :—

680. "Garrick and his Contemporaries:" a thick quarto volume, bound in russia extra, containing, among other illustrations of high interest, a portrait of David Garrick, an original and highly finished pencil drawing by Zoffany; Henderson, Elrington and Mrs. Mattocks, in the Spanish Friar; drawing of Garrick in the character of Sir Harcourt Rebus; drawing of the theatre in Goodman's-fields, by Capon; original manuscript portraits of Johnstone and Quick, and other celebrated actors; Dodd in the character of Sir Jacob Dredger, a whole-length drawing by J. G., for Edwards' White, and are to be sold at the sign of the Grasshopper, in the little north door of Pauls, 1588. Unique. A very beautiful copy of one of the most curious books in the whole range of old English poetry. Some manuscript notes, which is as fresh as when it first issued from the press, was marked in the "Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica" ad lib., whereon it was purchased by Mr. J. M. Hice, at whose sale, in 1834, it passed into the present collection. It was one of the gems of the day's sale.—£40 10s.

More wonderful still, as regards price, is the copy of Shakspeare's Sonnets, one of only two perfect copies known with the same imprint, which only contains Lintrell our shilling, and was bought in by Mr. Daniel, said, to an American for 215 guineas! Separate plays of Shakspeare, original editions produced more than 300 guineas each. The "first folio," bought for Miss Burdett Coutts at 682 guineas, has been already noted. The report of the sale in the Times has brought this commendation respecting the British Museum collection of Shakspeare's plays :—"They are for the most part from the collection of David Garrick; and it is generally understood that the collection of manuscript pamphlets—for such they are in form—from the trustees of the Bridwell Library, was received in the Gentleman's Magazine about the period, exchanged Alleyne's collection of stage plays for what they thought, no doubt, were church-warden's phrase, sound divinity—viz., some encyclopædias of the period, and a collection of voyages and travels, then modern. This fact gives a threefold value to the British Museum collection, as besides Shakspeare's plays, the collection exchanged comprised several acting copies of older dramatists belonging to Alleyne's time and acted by him in performance."

On Saturday Mr. Daniel's original drawings, engraved portraits, and curious examples of art and virtù, were sold. Among the portraits were Reberdin, Macklin, and Kenrick Smith; the very rare portrait of George Harris as Cardinal Wolsey; Miss Nossa, painted and engraved by Bernard Lens, exceedingly rare; and Garrick, as spoke of in Hayne's epilogue, mounted on an ass. Among the oil-paintings were an old Book of Shakspeare, brought at the sale of Mr. Garrick's effects, at old Canonbury Tower, and a whole-length of Napoleon I., taken from life by Barlow while on board the Bellerophon; but these and some other half-dozen portraits brought only twenty-seven guineas. Among the curiosities was an octagonal casket, with conical lid, surmounted by the bust of Shakspeare, and the lid inscribed "The famed mulberry-tree, with vine-leaves and grapes within ornamented arches, formerly in the possession of Garrick. With this relic was allotted Garrick's cane, snakeskin, gold-mounted, presented by Garrick to King the actor, and which he used as a stage dress cane in Lord Ogleby, &c. King gave this cane to John Bannister, who gave it to John Pritt Harley, at the sale of whose effects, in 1868, it was purchased by Mr. Daniel. A crucifix in hard wood, exquisitely carved, it was said, by Cellini, and the plinth by Gibbons, brought thirty guineas; and the double cup, in silver, from the Strawberry Hill Collection, and engraved in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Aug. 3, 1861, was sold for £60. One of the most interesting of the drawings was "The Abbotsford Family," by Sir David Wilkie, R.A., sold for £30 10s.

CHESS.



TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A SPANISH AMATEUR.—Both are clever in design; the second, indeed, is peculiarly happy in the variation of the mates. We shall be glad to receive a few more of the same beginning. 1. B to Q sq. If that can be selected, the position would be one of the best published for many a day.

NOTICE.—In the position sent to us the Black Queen is described as on K's 4th, which places the White King in check. You, no doubt, intended the Black Queen to stand on Q's 4th, and have corrected the error accordingly. Kt to Q B 3rd, if Black play P to Q 4th, is another move. Mr. Abercrombie, Bath, issues, in this country, a challenge to Mr. W. E. GERA.—The former letter of which you speak never reached us; the present shall be answered immediately.

D. C. L.—The subject requires consideration. Let it stand over for a week or two.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1065.—Correct solutions received from Mr. Bell, Rugby; Rev. J. Abbott, Ashby-de-la-Zouch; Rev. C. Pemberton, Leamington; Rev. J. Owen, Aberystwith; Rev. J. Wayte, Cambridge; Rev. J. Hall, Carlisle; Rev. J. Crake, Alnwick; Rev. T. C. Outlaw, Hull; Rev. J. Hunter, Lanark; Rev. J. Mitchell, Aberdeen; Rev. J. Hirst, Huddersfield; Rev. J. Wood, Kirkleatham; Rev. J. Hussey, Bridgnorth; Rev. J. Hobday, Ludlow; Rev. J. Hampden, Norwich; Rev. J. Bloxam, Rugby; Rev. J. Bowie, Glasgow; Rev. J. Bullock, Ramsgate; Rev. J. Bramley, Leeds; Rev. J. Bramley, jun., Leeds; Rev. J. Fussell, Mells

SPECIMENS OF M. CHAMPFLEURY'S COLLECTION OF POTTERY, ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1864.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1273.—VOL. XLV. SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE SETTLEMENT OF THE DANISH QUESTION.

So far as Denmark is concerned, the vexed Schleswig-Holstein question has received its solution. It is well understood that in the recent diplomatic Conference in London, when the principle of the dismemberment of a kingdom territorially small enough on the map of Europe was accepted even by the representatives of England, the Danish Plenipotentiaries strenuously objected to every proposition having for its object that result. It has been suggested that this course, which partook somewhat of obstinacy, has tended to deprive Denmark of some of the sympathy which had hitherto been largely extended towards her during the unequal struggle which she maintained with the German Powers. At least the representatives of that kingdom learnt one lesson in the Conference which they have faithfully conveyed to their Sovereign, and that he has acted upon it is palpable in the events of the last few days. It was clear that all hope of preserving that which has been almost sarcastically called the integrity of the kingdom of Denmark was hopeless; and that, as even the annexation of that country to Prussia, should M. de Bismarck in his high policy choose to decree it, would not avail to bring about active interference on the part of the Powers signitaries to the Treaty of 1852, a cession of territory by Denmark was inevitable. The mode in which this result was attained was curious. The Ministry of King Christian, which had so bravely asserted the rights of their country, was designated as Liberal in its politics, and, apart from all other considerations, was in its essence offensive to the notions of M. de Bismarck. This body was accordingly replaced by what is called a Conservative Ministry, which, bearing that character with it, was permitted to come between the wind and the nobility of the high and mighty ruler of the King of Prussia. From him, practically—for it is only reasonable to suppose that in these last negotiations Prussia continued to keep the lead which she has taken from Austria in the Dano-German affair—they have accepted terms much worse than might have been gained for Denmark in the Conference but for her own refusal of them; the only consolation in the matter probably being that whatever has now been done has been the direct act of Denmark, and there is no one for whose lukewarm assistance she might be expected hereafter to display a disproportioned gratitude.

We are told that the German Powers take to themselves no little credit for the mildness of the terms which they have conceded to Denmark, that Power having gone into the negotiations at Vienna just concluded merely to hear the dictates of Austria and Prussia. It is absolutely a fact that in the treaty which deprives King Christian of such a portion of his dominions as reduces him territorially to a dwarf amongst the Sovereigns of Europe the word "equivalent" is to be found. Having obtained Schleswig-Holstein and Lauenburg—"the Duchies," in the full sense of that term—and simplifying (a pretty phrase) the question of boundary which has thus arisen by taking that portion of Jutland which lies "convenient" to Schleswig, the high dispensing Powers consent that for this an equivalent portion of Schleswig—comprising, in addition to the island of Arroe, the territories connecting the district of Ribe with the remainder of Jutland—shall be detached from the duchy of Schleswig and incorporated with the kingdom of Denmark. The advantage of this article of the treaty to Denmark is, that it will enable her to keep up her naval position, and, so far, to preserve one of her national characteristics. It is also to be noted with favour that Denmark Proper is not to be called upon to pay her invaders any of the expenses of the war; but the inhabitants of the duchies, who may be supposed now to have reached the consummation of their wishes in having become German in nationality, will probably be disagreeably surprised to learn that they are to discharge the little bill which has been incurred in the fulfilment of their alleged desires. Besides this, these provinces are to undergo the penalty, call it by whatever other name you may, of a military occupation by the forces of their deliverers for six months, which looks very much as if an actual possession were taken by a mortgagee until payment of the charge due to him is duly remitted. This, however, is not all the contribution which will be levied on the newly-freed duchies, whose situation will be such, for a time, that the citizens who have been such ardent aspirants after a change of rule will scarcely be able to perceive the virtue and the value of the alteration which has been brought about in their destinies. As the public debts contracted upon special account, whether of the kingdom of Denmark or of the duchies, will remain exclusively a charge of each of those countries, and debts contracted on account of the Danish monarchy will be levied on the newly-freed duchies, whose situation will be such, for a time, that the citizens who have been such the citizens for the defence of Harrisburg, the State capital. All the negroes in Baltimore had, it is stated, been armed by the Federal authorities.

LADY PALMERSTON CUTTING THE FIRST TURF OF THE EAST AND WEST JUNCTION RAILWAY AT TOWCESTER, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Secretary Fessenden has opened a subscription for a loan of 200,000,000 dols. in Treasury notes, bearing 7 3-tenths per cent interest in "greenbacks," and convertible at the end of three years into bonds bearing six per cent interest, payable in gold.

Gold at New York on 30th was 254½.

A board of naval officers had decided that the men rescued from the Alabama by the Deerhound were prisoners of war, and the Washington Government had approved the decision.

CANADA.

The election for North Ontario closed on the 27th ult., Mr. M'Dougall, the provincial secretary, being defeated by a majority of 100 votes.

INDIA.

On the 15th ult. the Viceroy held a durbar at Simla, at which he addressed the assembled chiefs in their own tongue, "with great fluency and vigour," commending them for their loyalty towards the Imperial Government, and urging upon them the duty of extending to their dependents and ryots the same beneficence of rule which they themselves experienced, and encouraging the spread of education among their families and people.

Cholera was extremely prevalent in the large stations of the central provinces; but, fortunately, at Bombay there was a considerable abatement of the epidemic.

The King of Ava has granted a perpetual concession for railways, telegraphs, and collieries in Burmah.

A desperate engagement took place near Bameean, Cabool, on the 8th of June, between the Ameer's troops and those of his brother, Afzul Khan, in which the latter were utterly defeated, with loss of guns, ammunition, and all their camp equipage.

THE WESLEYAN METHODIST CONFERENCE.

THIS ecclesiastical assembly is usually convened in the provincial boulevard in order to finish its annual session this week.

On Tuesday week the question of appointing a minister to visit the Sunday schools of the Connexion came up, and a resolution to this effect was agreed to, the Rev. John Unlow being chosen. Another resolution of importance, recommending the setting apart of a second minister as assistant secretary for the Missionary Committee, was then submitted, and a committee appointed to consider the whole question of chapel affairs and to report to the next Conference was carried by a majority. The next question in order was that of changes in circuits, divisions, and additional appointments. The secretary stated that there were applications for fifty-two additional ministers. The applications were discussed in the order of districts and circuits, till the time for adjournment came.

On Friday merely four hours were devoted to a patient hearing of the cases arranged under the above question. The reports of the different districts, the missionary ministers, and many others not to be divided, so that the labours of resident ministers may be concentrated. The session was closed by the Conference to many cases of this sort indicate a growing desire for such a modification of the itinerancy as is consistent with the due maintenance of ministerial efficiency. The stationing committee then retired, and the addresses of condolence and replies to them were read. After reading a letter from the Rev. P. M'Owan moved, and Dr. Rule seconded, a resolution on the subject of the circulation of public documents in the Navy.

The attendance on Saturday was unusually large. After the reading of the journal, the reports of two more district committees were taken up and brought up. A discussion ensued, in which the Revs. Dr. Waddy, Dr. Osborn, C. Prest, J. Lomas, W. Arthur, G. Scott, J. Rattenbury, W. Shaw, and Dr. Jobson took part, and the reports were substantially adopted. The resolutions of the Missionary Committee of Review were read by the Rev. W. Shaw, and were received with unanimity. The annual pastoral address of the Conference to the Methodist societies was read by the Rev. Dr. Jobson. In it the address was understood to have been prepared. It referred to the more salient facts in the history of the year, and went to the extreme verge of the Methodist Church. The success of the jubilee movement, the progress of schools and schools, the spiritual prosperity of the Connexion, the Sabbath schools, with a view to promote their more successful working. These and other facts were gratefully recognised. The Rev. W. Reed, the Rev. Rev. Dr. Rule moved, and Dr. Rule seconded, a resolution on the subject of the circulation of public documents in the Navy.

The attendance on Saturday was unusually large. After the reading of the journal, the reports of two more district committees were taken up and brought up. A discussion ensued, in which the Revs. Dr. Waddy, Dr. Osborn, C. Prest, J. Lomas, W. Arthur, G. Scott, J. Rattenbury, W. Shaw, and Dr. Jobson took part, and the reports were substantially adopted. The resolutions of the Missionary Committee of Review were read by the Rev. W. Shaw, and were received with unanimity. The annual pastoral address of the Conference to the Methodist societies was read by the Rev. Dr. Jobson. In it the address was understood to have been prepared. It referred to the more salient facts in the history of the year, and went to the extreme verge of the Methodist Church. The success of the jubilee movement, the progress of schools and schools, the spiritual prosperity of the Connexion, Sabbath schools, with a view to promote their more successful working. These and other facts were gratefully recognised. The Rev. W. Reed, the Rev. Rev. Dr. Rule moved, and Dr. Rule seconded, a resolution on the subject of the circulation of public documents in the Navy.

The proceedings of Monday were of a purely denominational character. A letter was read from the secretary of the Manchester Auxiliary Bible Society stating that he was now engaged in the preparation of a work on the Bible Society's history, and the Gospels for one penny. He commended these facts to the meeting's consideration. The president then proposed a resolution which was commended it to the best support of ministers. A report was read as to the erection of Long-road Chapel, Ashford. The debt had been considerably lessened securing the freehold of this property. It has been paid over £1278 5s. 3d., and £600 paid off the interest on the debt, leaving a balance of £1032 19s. 6d. towards the renovation of the chapel. It was stated that this renovation will be so effected as to maintain all the old characteristics of this venerable building. The school-room report was then read by the Rev. John Darnell, and commented by the Conference. It was agreed that the educational allowance to minister-students should be raised from £5 5s. to £10 per annum. The report of the education fund was also read, after which the Rev. John Scott urged the Conference to adopt the resolution submitted. The venerable Thomas Jackson urged the regular meeting of children, from eight to twelve years of age, in each congregation. The report of the book committee was then presented by the Rev. John Kirk, after which various votes of thanks were passed.

On Tuesday Dr. Wolsey brought up the resolutions of the Committee of Review of Children's Hymns, which were adopted. The secretary read to the Conference stated that it would be impracticable to meet all the applications for additional ministers, and suggested that in future circuits should not be preferred for a year. Some incidental remarks were made as to the necessity for more liberal support of the theological institutions of the country, and already considerably in advance, and would be much more so when the alterations likely to be made by the action of the Conference should be carried out.

The reports of nearly all the connexional committees relating to the various institutions and funds have been received and adopted. And these are, on the whole, a very prosperous state of things. The report of the Book Committee indicated that the circulation of the various authorised periodicals and standard works of the community had been encouraging during the year. There has been a conversation in reference to the recent attacks upon Methodism—the Watchman and Methodist Recorder newspapers and the London Quarterly Review. The last-named was the Wesleyan Mouthpiece. Resolutions, formed by a number of enterprising ministers and laymen in Methodism, and their circulation had generally increased during the year. The Stationing Committee have finished the revision for the ministerial appointments.

Dr. Livingstone is at present staying at Limefield House, West Calder, the residence of his early friend and associate, Mr. James Young.

Mr. Linnell's picture of "The Haymakers," an Engraving of which we published last week, has been purchased by the Directors of the Fine-Arts Gallery, 24, Cornhill.

We have received a beautifully executed view of the volunteer camp at Lulworth Cove, Dorsetshire, printed direct from the photographic negative by Appleton's high-class lake-surfaced process at the Photographic Institute of Dorchester, which was noticed in our Journal some months ago. The advantages of a permanent photographic record of the encampment scenery will be appreciated by those who have found the test of the ordinary photographic paper so fade away in a few days.

The Goodwood Cup and the Chesterfield Cup, won at Goodwood Races, were the subjects of two of the illustrations in our last Number. Mr. Edward Cox, the manufacturer by Messrs. Elkington, of Portsmouth, was a silver-gilt vase, in the Renaissance style, with groups in bas-relief, on the one side representing Prospero, Miranda, and Ariel, in the first set of Shakspeare's "Tempest;" and on the other side Prospero driving the sea-nymphs and Tritons, in the first scene of Act V. The cup has two side handles being adorned with figures from the same play.

James Rogers from British Columbia has had this colony, like other parts of Northern America, was suffering severely from drought. At that time there was a great number of rowdies at the Chinese and Indians. A number of persons both in British Columbia and Vancouver Island had volunteered to be sworn in constables, in order to be enabled to obtain justice.

M. Godard has written a letter in which he gives an account of the catastrophe that happened to his huge Montgolfier balloon on the 3rd inst. He says:—"Nothing happened in the course of my voyage to presage the accident which occurred to me at descent. When about to fall from the earth I consider it a correct of air to whirl that it might be compared to a water-spout in its way. Suddenly I felt the balloon violently agitated by a long experience, my balloon, after running a number of yards with bounding speed, struck against a tree and was torn to pieces. It was a great loss to me; but I console myself by thinking that the English gentleman I had on board with me suffered no personal injury. As for myself, I hope to re-establish my health, so as to make my ascent at Paris at the national fête of the 15th inst. I shall also neglect nothing to resume my aerostat at Cremorne, which will henceforth have a scientific object."

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegram has been received through Mr. Reuter's office:—

AMERICA.—New York, Aug. 1.—On the 30th ult. General Grant blew up a Confederate fort at Petersburg. He then assaulted and carried a line of Confederate intrenchments. An entire regiment was destroyed, together with the fort. The battle was still progressing on Saturday at noon.

COUNTRY NEWS.

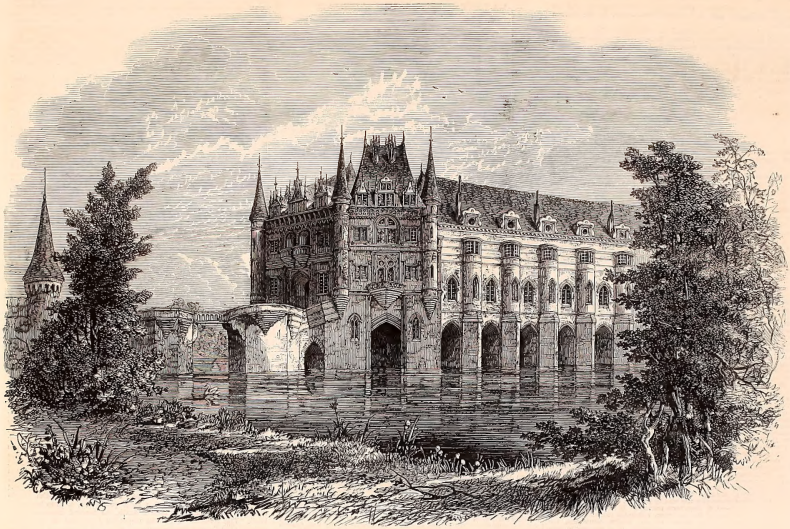
The erection of the granite pedestal for the bronze equestrian statue of the late Prince Consort at Halifax has been begun.

The Queen has approved of Mr. William Watson Harvey as Consul at Cork for the Republic of Liberia.

On Thursday week the foundation-stone of the Masonic Lodge about to be erected in conjunction with Clarendon Hotel, Oxford, for the Apollo University of Freemasons, was laid with the usual Masonic rites.

An explosion occurred at a gunpowder manufactory in the neighbourhood of Leatherhead yesterday week, killing two men and damaging property to a considerable amount.

The spire and portions of the interior of the Church of St. Peter, at Cowley, Oxfordshire, were burned on Tuesday night. The carelessness of some workmen who were repairing the spire was the source of the mischief.



The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert has been re-fitted for the Scotch trip, and the Wye, have been handed over to the Messrs. Laird, who will complete her for sea with all dispatch. The ships are each to be armed with four 300-pounder guns.

Prince Jerome, Princess Murat, Count Ferra Pisani, and other members of the Imperial family were present on Sunday last, and proceeded in the steamer Vivid to Bowling, whence they intended to proceed to Loch Lomond. From thence through the Caledonian Canal to Inverness.

The Bromsgrove board of guardians have presented their chairman, the Right Hon. Lord Lyttelton, with a portrait of his noble relative, to be placed in the room of his long services as chairman of the union. The portrait, which is a very faithful one, is from the able pencil of the Scotch artist, Mr. Watson Gordon, and is painted at a cost of 400 guineas.

A terrible accident is reported from Bolton, at a manufactory in which a large number of persons are employed. An immense boiler, containing 2000 gallons of this tar, by some choking of the pipes which should have run off the tar, exploded, and scattered the burning contents. Three men in attendance were burnt to death, and several others were severely injured.

At the Liverpool Assizes, on Wednesday, the two young men, Brice and Bowen, who made a murderous attack upon Dr. Rowe at Liverpool Exhibition, on the 20th of May, were sentenced to imprisonment, the former two or three months ago, were sentenced to imprisonment, the former two or three months ago, were sentenced to imprisonment, the former two or three months ago oratory, retains the funereal emblems affixed at her death—the white crosses on a black ground—which are displayed in the chapel also. In the comfortable-looking banqueting-hall, of finely-carved old oak, in the splendid dancing-saloon, and in the armoury, are many curious and interesting objects. The woods, the park, the pleasure-grounds, and gardens are very fine. There is a spacious building dedicated by the late proprietor to the rearing of silkworms. The avenue from the château to the park entrance is about one third of a mile, or half a mile, in length. It leads immediately to the village of Chenonceaux, which is only remarkable for being the birthplace of the late M. de Bretonean, a physician not only of Parisian but of European celebrity. Our Engraving is from a sketch by Mr. Campion, of Tenby.

CHATEAU OF CHENONCEAUX, TOURAINE, FORMERLY INHABITED BY CATHERINE DE MEDICIS AND MARY STUART.

NEW CHURCH OF ST. PETER, ON THE SITE OF VAUXHALL GARDENS.
SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

BROMLEY COLLEGE, KENT, ESTABLISHED FOR THE WIDOWS OF CLERGYMEN: THE CHAPEL.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

TARRADALE VIADUCT, ON THE MELBOURNE AND SANDHURST RAILWAY, AUSTRALIA.

THE TARRADALE VIADUCT OF THE MELBOURNE AND SANDHURST RAILWAY.

THE province of Victoria, as the richest and most populous of our Australian colonies, has lately shown its determination to be the most completely furnished with means of internal communication. It began some years ago with a short suburban line to the watering-place of St. Kilda, by the seaside; then came a railway from Geelong to Ballarat, and one to connect Melbourne with Geelong, upon the western shore of Port Phillip. These were of much less importance than the great northern line from Melbourne to Sandhurst, by way of Castlemaine, which is eventually to be carried on to the Murrumbidgee River, and to provide for safe and cheap conveyance between Victoria and New South Wales. The town of Castlemaine, at the foot of Mount Alexander, is already a place of great commercial importance. Its site is well chosen for access to the northern and western gold-fields, as well as to the fertile agricultural plains of the Loddon and the Avoca, which lie behind it. Sandhurst, at the entrance of the Bendigo gold-field, is about twenty-six miles further on, through a picturesque country of grassy meadows and well-wooded hills. The Tarradale Viaduct which is the subject of our present Illustration, is reached before arriving at Cæticamine from the south. It is in the neighbourhood of some very rich quarts reefs, which have been worked so profitably that the road side station of Tarradale has rapidly grown into a town. Our Engraving is from a photograph by Messrs. Morris and Co., of Elizabeth-street, Melbourne, who have also supplied us with excellent photographic views of the Jackson's Creek Viaduct, the Harcourt Station, the Woolend Station, and other localities on the same line. The Tarradale Viaduct is about 600 ft. in length and 100 ft. high. Its construction differs in no respect from that of many similar works in Great Britain.

THE POST OFFICE OF AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND: ARRIVAL OF THE "HOME" MAILS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE POST OFFICE AT AUCKLAND.—ARRIVAL OF THE HOME MAILS.

A CORRESPONDENT at Auckland, New Zealand, from whose sketch our Engraving of this scene is made, writes the following explanation of it:—"The mail-steamer from Sydney comes here once a month, bringing letters and papers from England. She usually arrives about the 18th or 20th, and her coming is the signal for a dense crowd to assemble at the Post Office, in Princes-street. For three days after the mail comes in the Post Office is completely besieged. There is here no post delivery every hour as in London; people have to come and fetch their own letters. Some persons, on receiving their letters, open them and read them on the spot. They cannot read them amidst the crowd, but they stand a little apart, under the verandah, or they sit down on the kerbstone to peruse the eagerly-expected message. Then they meet and see with his back towards you, and with the muslin round his hat, is not, as you might imagine, a postman, for here no such officials exist. He is a gentleman who has ridden into town for his letters, and what looks like a post-bag, suspended from his shoulders, is a haversack, which is a common article of personal equipment in New Zealand. The Post Office, as you may observe, is a long, low building, roofed with shingles or wooden tiles. Two natives, who have got no letters from England, are lounging off to the left."

BIRTHS.

On June 2, at Shanghai, the wife of William Waller, Esq., of a daughter.
On the 5th inst., at Bleak House, Kilburn, the wife of Captain J. D. Wake, of a daughter.
On the 15th ult., at Bayrout, the wife of George Jackson Eldridge, Esq., H.B.M.'s Consul-General in Syria, of a son.
At Grosvenor-crescent, Lady Frances Baillie, of a son.
At Chalvedbury, Herts, the wife of Sir C. L. Young, Bart., of a son.
At Cumberland-terrace, Regent's Park, Lady John Manners, of a son.
At Lossiemouth-lodge, Mrs. Gordon Lennox, of a daughter.
At Queenstown, Lady Swinburne, of a daughter.
At Kemp Town, Brighton, the wife of Sir Charles Jackson, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 8th inst., at Christ Church, Herne Bay, Kent, by the Rev. W. L. Rich-Sight and the Rev. R. Gray, Incumbent, Richard Gray, Esq., Surgeon of Hong-Kong, China, son of the late James E. Rooney, Esq., of Dumcrara, to Helen Isabella, youngest daughter of George Hogarth, Esq.
On Wednesday, the 20th ult., at the residence of the bride's father, by the Rev. Alexander Stewart Early, Thomas Aston Frost Hughes, second son of Thomas Hughes, of Bilston, Staffordshire, to Mary Emma, youngest daughter of Wells Hudson, Esq., Liverpool, and formerly, New York.
On the 9th inst., at Trinity Church, Tulse-hill, by the Rev. Canon Champneys, John D. Allcroft, Esq., of Dunkeswell, to Mary Jewell, elder daughter of the late John Blundell, Esq., of Timsbury Manor, Hants.
At Brompton, Herts, the Rev. A. Brocking, Vicar of Ingatestone, Alfred Frances, daughter of the Hon. F. D. Ryder.
At Shenstone, Herts, on the 4th inst., Edward Esq., of Weldon, Cornwall, to Blanche Lucy, daughter of the late General A. Bacon and Lady C. Bacon.
On June 18, at St. George's Cathedral, Madras, Margaret Mary, eldest daughter of T. J. Knight, Esq., Q.C., late her Majesty's Attorney-General for the Island of Tasmania, to Lieut. William Henry Lyon, second son of Francis Hartwell Renshaw, Esq., agent and manager of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company, and formerly of her Majesty's Corps of the Bombay Rifles, Chairman of the Land Board, in the Island of Tasmania.
On the 4th inst., at Bishopwearmouth, by the Rev. F. Porter, Vicar of Teddington, Yorkshire, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. W. Gordon, M.A., Rector of Bishopwearmouth, Alexander Gordon, Esq., of 29, St. James's-terrace, Fall-mall, London, to Annie Blenkinsop, eldest daughter of Ludwig Esq., of High Barnes, in the county of Durham.

DEATHS.

On the 8th inst., at Dovedale-villas, Essex, Edward Charleton, the infant son of Richard Mennea, Esq.
On Sunday last, the 7th inst., at Teddington-grove, Kent, the Rev. Henry Jon-Scolington, aged 66.
On the 15th inst., at 12, Lyndhurst Villas, Peckham, Surrey, Miss Ellis Gerald, the beloved and only daughter of Richard and Sarah Ghuster, aged 24 years. Friends will please accept this intimation.
On the 2rd inst., at Hornsey, dearly beloved and deeply regretted, Rosa, the only surviving daughter of Robert Longbottom, Adam Meadow Hall, of Wardsor-street, St. James's, aged 10 years and 8 months.
At Pinley Manor, Salop, Mary Ann Hughes, wife of Mr. Corbet, Esq., of Sundorne Castle, Salop, and sister of Viscount Hill.
At Kensington, Catherine Elizabeth, relict of the late Right Hon. Sir John Sinclair, Bart.
On the 9th inst., at Stanley Hall, Stonehouse, Gloucester shire, the residence of his friend, Captain Curryglenane, John Charles Campbell, Esq., M.D., late 4th Bengal, youngest son of the late Dr. Campbell, of Ballochyle, N.B., aged 31 years.
On the 7th inst., at Abbey Lands, near Stafford, George William Moore, Esq., only son of William Moore, Esq., of Wychnin Lodge, near Stafford, in the 35th year of his age.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 20.

SUNDAY, Aug. 14.—Twelfth Sunday after Trinity. Incorporation of King's College, London, by Charter, 1829.
MONDAY.—Napoleon I. born, 1769. Flashing taken (in the unfortunate Walcheren Expedition), 1809.
TUESDAY.—Battle of Camden. Lord Cornwallis defeats the Americans under Gates, 1780. Commencement of the trial of Queen Caroline, 1820. Victory of the French and Sardinians over the Austrians at the Tchernaya, 1855.
WEDNESDAY, 17.—Death of the poet John Gower, 1408. Cromwell defeats the Royalists under Langdale, at Preston, 1648. Full moon, 1h. 36m. p.m.
THURSDAY.—The French entered in Lucerne by capitulation, 1798. Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria, born, 1830.
FRIDAY, 19.—Death of the Emperor Augustus, at Nola, 14; of Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, philosopher, 1814; of Robert Bloomfield, rural poet, 1823.
SATURDAY, 20.—St Bernard, Abbot of Clairvaux, died, 1153. Peter the Great takes Azoff, 1704. The Emperor Charles Albert accepts the crown, 1831.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 20, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
10 41	11 22	0 12	0 56	1 42	2 31	3 24
11 0	11 42	0 32	1 16	2 2	2 51	3 44

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE LAW OBSERVATORY OF THE RECTORY, GOLDSWORTH.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 16′ 47″ W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

JULY.	DAILY MEANS OF					THERMOMETER.		WIND.
	Barometer Corrected and reduced to 32° Fahr.	Temperature of Evaporation.	Temperature of Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Maximum in the Shade.	Minimum in the Shade.	General Direction.	Horizontal Motion in Miles.	Rain in Inches.
	Inches.	°	°			°	°		Miles.	Inches
5	29·099	62·6	60·5	·86	2	82·2	73·7	NE. NNW.	114	·040
6	29·075	60·1	54·1	·74	2	82·3	70·3	NW. NNW.	194	·000
7	30·101	74·5	69·5	·75	2	84·9	64·3	S. SW.	208	·000
8	29·949	68·8	62·3	·69	3	88·9	77·8	SW. S. WNW.	144	·040
9	...	...	...	...	...	89·8	77·7	...	199	·000
10	29·761	67·9	55·1	·57	1	69·6	77·0	W. WSW.	...	·000
11	29·803	61·7	58·7	·93	10	64·6	60·9	ENE.WSW. W.	...	·215

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	30·231	30·046	30·141	30·058	29·958	29·835	29·879
Temperature of Air	62·6°	60·8°	71·5°	62·6°	65·6°	75·7°	59·8°
Temperature of Evaporation	52·9°	52·8°	62·2°	59·9°	56·1°	61·1°	55·1°
Direction of Wind	S.	S.W.	S.	S.W.	W.	W.	W.

NOW READY,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,

Vol. 44, JANUARY to JUNE, 1864. Cloth, gilt, 18s.; Bound, 21s.
Covers for binding same ... ... 2s. 6d.
Reading Cases ... ... 2s. 6d.
Portfolios, to hold a Half-year's Numbers... ... 4s. 6d.
Office: 198, Strand.

Now ready,

THE ILLUSTRATED PENNY ALMANACK

for 1865,

containing Twelve Original Designs emblematic of the Months, numerous Engravings selected from the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, Tables of Eclipses, a good Diamond Paper, Remarkable Events, Postage Regulations, and a great variety of useful and interesting information. The trade supplied by Messrs. Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row; and G. Vickers, Angel-court (172), Strand, London.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1864.

PLATO held that no law should be without a preamble setting forth the reasons for the enactment. Bacon considered that no law should contain anything of the kind. Where two such minds have been busy we are sure that strong reasoning has been used on each side. But, as Lord St. Albans had the advantage of the experience of many centuries of civilisation, and had a far wider sphere open to him than had the Greek, it is reasonable to assume that the balance of argument was in favour of the later writer. Against this commonplace and self-evident view of the case we may, however, fairly set a plea derived from our estimate of the wonderful knowledge which Plato had of human nature; and, if we do not feel disposed to sweep by the board of even such a master, we should be presumptuous and unthankful to neglect his suggestions. There is a subject in connection with which the doctrine of Plato may afford matter for consideration, not of an unpractical character.

The occurrence of the periods at which the Judges of the land go out into the provinces to deliver the gaols brings strange revelations to light. We do not mean in regard to mere crime and fraud. It is, indeed, remarked by those who are compelled to pay close attention to Assize proceedings that they present but little novelty, and when they attract much general attention, this is due rather to the peculiar skill of the advocates or to the brilliant writing of journalists who, in time of political dearth, work up criminal details with so much adroitness. We do not find, and we rejoice not to find, that the increased complication of social interests has produced any proportionate increase in the variety of offences. Human nature, of course, has still its frantic outbreaks, and will have to the end of time. Revenge, hatred, jealousy, will always prompt the darkest crimes; sheer brutality will cause those deeds which are most revolting; while greed of gain will scarcely fail to number its thousand victims. The despairing creature brings his miserable existence to a violent end; and there are—we fear there will always be—many cases in which mere folly leads unbalanced intellects to hurry, foolish, out of the world. We need not touch upon the acts of irresponsibility, as they are beside the argument. The records of our criminal trials present few new offences whose source we should seek in the intensified struggle for life; and the fact is, to a certain extent, consoling to those who have to read what is sad, that increased civilisation, in accelerating all effort, and certainly making harder the life it adorns, is not the corrupting agent which certain moralists would make us believe. We do not think that two or three special offences which have been much noticed of late years are traceable to this cause, though we cannot see reason for regarding their prevalence as accidental rather than as the result of any new impulses. They demand sharp and instant remedy, but are not in the system.

The stranger revelations to which we refer arise not in regard to the mere crimes which come before the Courts, but in regard to the state of society upon which the sudden and piercing light of a judicial investigation is thrown. If you can withdraw your attention for a time from the chances of a deeply interesting game which is being played out in an Assize Court, the stake being the life and liberty of a man or woman in the dock—and the players being the subtlest intellects that can be brought by love of reward and of reputation to exert themselves to the utmost, and over whom a calm, conscientious umpire is watching, keen and passionless—look at the witnesses, irrespective of the prisoner. Listen to their words, note their feelings and beliefs, and regard them as the representatives of myriads. You will find yourself in a new field of thought, which may not be so exciting as the intellectual game before you, but which assuredly involves far more important questions than the fate of the one or two pale, nervous, eager creatures beside the gaoler in that pew. These witnesses (we speak especially of the lower class of the population, which, of course, supplies eighteen-twentieths of the subjects of judicial investigation) are unconsciously betraying other witness than the true or false story which they have come to utter upon oath. They, all unaware, are testifying to you that a vast class of the people have no morals at all; that the morals of another large class are conventions and prejudices; and, in fact, that the most abject ignorance is the characteristic of tens of thousands of your fellow-subjects. Sometimes their avowals are so brutal as to excite indignation, and even the Judge himself will thunder down a stern rebuke. But, as a rule, it is not anger but pity that will predominate in your heart after an assize week. You will silently heap together such a mass of evidence that the masses are utterly untaught as regards all but superficial and mechanical matters (in which you will learn that great excellence is often obtained) as will teach you a lesson, and it will be one of compassion. Did space permit, we could enumerate a hundred proofs, afforded during any assize, that a huge mass of English people live and die without having ever had the practical morals of life forced home upon their minds in a way calculated to produce result in action. We do not speak of theological instruction. It is given, thank God, very largely, and to glorious purpose; but there are myriads by whom it passes like the idle wind, and myriads whom it never reaches at all, and these two classes, especially the second, are chiefly represented in the crowd around the legal gladiators.

Now, is there nothing in Plato's creed to convey a suggestion that may bring forth good fruit? We do not say that the laws should be prefaced by arguments to show their reasonableness. But is it beyond belief that, when the sentence of the law is pronounced, something in the way of sermon, preached from that text, might avail? We do not for a moment desire to hear the Judges making exhortations. But when we consider an almost superstitious awe of a Judge is one of the few reverences that exist in the heart of the uncultivated man, and when we know that hard, bad men, who scoff at the priest and mock the schoolmaster, receive the admonition or maxim from the Judge with a singular submissiveness, and treasure it (as an attendee of rough character knows) as a household word, we cannot but think that good might be done did the Judges make a practice, when occasion served, of giving our benighted subjects a few words of "moral" from the case they have heard. There is no fear of contempt and men of the world, like the English Judges, should be betrayed into garrulity or sentimentality. They would hit hard, and hit home; and we must respectfully tender them our counsel to consider whether much after-labour might not be spared to the British Bench if it occasionally condescended to teach as well as to judge. For the pedant who will object that teaching is not the business of such men we have no civil answer, and the Bench will have nothing but contempt.

THE COURT.

THE Queen, with the junior members of the Royal family, continue at Osborne House, in the Isle of Wight, until Wednesday next.

On Wednesday week her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Louis of Hesse, and attended by Lieutenant-Colonel Du Plat, drove out from Osborne to Cowes. Earl Granville arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of dining with her Majesty.

On Thursday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, walked and drove in the grounds of Osborne. Prince Leopold, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse and Earl Granville, and attended by Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, Mr. Ruff, and Captain von Westerweller, went to Bishop's Waltham, and laid the foundation-stone of the Roman Catholic church. His Royal Highness crossed in the Fairy to Southampton, and proceeded by the 1.30 train to Bishop's Waltham. The Prince was received at the station by the Bishop of the diocese, the Dean of Winchester, Father Ryder, Mayor of the Manors of Winchester, Portsmouth, and Southampton, and the chairman and principal officers of the infirmary, who conducted his Royal Highness to the ceremonial platform. After the usual ceremony the Prince drove to the Clay Works and thence, through the town, to the grounds of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Winchester, where his Royal Highness partook of luncheon, and afterwards returned by special train to Southampton. The Prince and Prince Louis of Hesse embarked in the Fairy for Cowes, and rejoined members of the Royal family on board the Elfin, and witnessed the regatta.

Yesterday week the Queen, accompanied by the Princess of Wales and Princess Louis of Hesse, drove out in an open carriage and four and visited the Princess of Leiningen at Cowes. Upon her Majesty's return, the carriage was conveyed across the Medina by the steamferry. The Princess of Leiningen dined with her Majesty.

On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, Prince William of Prussia, and the Princess of Leiningen, attended by the Hon. Florence Seymour, Baroness Dobeneck, Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, and Lieutenant-Colonel Du Plat, embarked in the Royal yacht Victoria and cruised towards Spithead. Her Majesty returned to Osborne at eight o'clock. Princess Helena took a drive. The Right Hon. Sir G. Grey, Bart., M.P., had the honour of an audience of the Queen. This was the twentieth anniversary of the birthday of Prince Alfred. The day was celebrated at Windsor with the customary honours.

On Sunday the Queen and Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse attended Divine service performed at Osborne by the Rev. G. Prothero. Princess Helena drove out twice.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse, walked and drove in the grounds adjacent to Osborne. Mr. A. Helps arrived at Osborne and had the honour of dining with her Majesty.

The Queen takes daily walks and drives in the neighbourhood of Osborne and occasionally enjoys a cruise in the Fairy in the Solent. The Court will leave Osborne on the 28th or 29th inst. en route for the Highlands. The Queen has graciously expressed her intention of visiting Balmoral on the memorial occasion of the Prince Consort's birth. Inch, Perth, on her route to Balmoral. The Court is expected to reside in Scotland about two months.

The Queen has graciously forwarded to Captain Cowper P. Coles, R.N., through Captain Prince of Leiningen, R.N., a beautifully executed sketch of the Captain's new turret ship, Prince Consort, accompanying the statuette Prince Leiningen says the Queen desires him to express her Majesty's warmest pleasure at having received as her visit to the Royal Sovereign, fitted on Captain Coles's principle, in which the Prince Consort felt a deep interest. Her Majesty wished Captain Coles to accept the statuette of the Prince as a souvenir of her visit to the Royal Sovereign.

Mr. Edward Engelheart has had the honour of sittings for miniature portraits from the Princess of Wales and Prince Albert Victor of Wales, Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse, Princess Alice of Hesse, Princess Beatrice, and Princess Alberta of Leiningen.

Viscountess Jocelyn has succeeded the Countess (Dowager) of Mount-Edgcumbe as Lady in Waiting to the Queen. The Hon. Florence Seymour has arrived at Osborne as Maid of Honour in Waiting.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

On Thursday week the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by Princess Louis of Hesse and Prince William of Prussia, embarked from Osborne in the Elfin and had a cruise in the Solent to witness the Cowes Regatta.

Yesterday week the Prince, accompanied by Prince Louis of Hesse and attended by Major Teesdale and Captain von Westerweller, embarked on board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, and proceeded to Torbay. His Royal Highness arrived in Torbay at four o'clock, and landed at the Victoria Parade, Torquay. The Prince proceeded immediately in a carriage to the residence of the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia. In the evening his Royal Highness drove to Mendfoot Beach, whence a boat took the Prince to the yacht.

On Saturday morning the Victoria and Albert weighed anchor and steamed off towards Dartmouth. The yacht afterwards returned to Torbay and anchored near the Great Rock, off Meadfoot, where some lines had been laid down the night before, at the request of the Prince, in order that he might witness the deep-sea fishing of Torbay. The boats were hoisted out, and the Prince in his barge watched the operation of hauling in the fish. Several conger were taken, amongst them a monster. The fish were then taken on board, and, the Prince having returned to the yacht, the Victoria and Albert steamed away to the eastward. The Princess, accompanied by Princess Louis of Heese, cruised in the Bisa, and met the Prince upon his return from Torquay in her Victoria and Albert.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess attended Divine service at Osborne House.

On Monday the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and attended by the Hon. Mrs. Stonor and Major Teesdale, left Osborne Cottage for Marlborough House. Their Royal Highnesses left Trinity Wharf, East Cowes, at two o'clock, in the Fairy, and steamed off to the Southampton Docks. The Prince and Princess travelled, via the South-Western Railway, in a saloon carriage attached to the ordinary train leaving Southampton at three o'clock, and arrived at the Waterloo Station shortly after six, proceeding at once to Marlborough House.

On Tuesday the Prince, attended by the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe, Lieutenant-General Knollys, and Major Teesdale, went to the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum, near the Old Kent-road, and inaugurated the statue of the Prince Consort recently erected in the grounds of the asylum, of which his Royal Highness was patron. The Duke of Cambridge visited the Prince at Marlborough House.

On Wednesday the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor, left Marlborough House, en route for Abergeldie Castle, N.B., where their Royal Highnesses are expected to remain about two months, and thence proceed to Sandringham House.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Alary returned to Cambridge Cottage, Kew, on Saturday last, from Cobham, near Southampton.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge left Gloucester House on Thursday on a Continental tour.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke de Nemours, Count d'Eu, and Princesses Marguerite and Blanche d'Orleans have returned to Claremont from a short tour in Ireland.

His Excellency the Spanish Minister and Mdme. Comyn have left the Spanish Legation for Tunbridge Wells.

The Duke of Wellington has arrived at Carlogie, his shooting-box in the Highlands.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland have left Trentham and Lilleshall for Dunrobin Castle, N.B.

The Duchess of Somerset and Lady Gwendoline St. Maur have left the Admiralty for Bowood Park, Bath.

The Duke of Leinster has arrived at his seat in Ireland.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Westminster and Lady Theodora Grosvenor have left Grosvenor House for Holcombe House, Dorset.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Hertford have left their residence in Charles-street, St. James's, for Curraghmore Park, Ireland.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Lansdowne have arrived at the family estates in Ireland.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Lothian have arrived at Newcastle Abbey from Mentmore, near Tring.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde have left town en route for Homburg.

Earl and Countess Russell have left Pembroke Lodge, Richmond, for Woburn Abbey, Beds.

The Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury and Ladies Victoria and Constance Ashley have left for Continental tours.

The Earl and Countess of Chesterfield have left Grosvenor-street for Bretby Park, near Burton-on-Trent.

